A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 6 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Scientific Works.

Three Introductory Lectures on the Science of Thought. By F. Max Müller. 1. The Simplicity of Language; 2. The Identity of Language and Thought; and 3. The Simplicity of Thought. With an appendix which contains a correspondence on "Thought Without Words," between F. Max Müller and Francis Galton, the duke of Argyll, George J. Romanes, and others. Neatly bound in cloth. Price, 75c.

Three Lectures on the Science of Language. By Prof. F. Max Müller. The Oxford University Extension Lectures. With a supplement, "My Predecessors," an essay on the genesis of "The Science of Thought" 112 pages; cloth. Price, 75c.

The Psychology of Attention. By Th. Ribot, professor of Comparative and Experimental Psychology at the College de France, and editor of the Revue Philosophique. Authorized translation. Treating of the following topics: 1. Spontaneous, or Natural, Attention.—a. Emotional states; b. Physical manifestations; c. Surprise. 2. Voluntary, or Artificial, Attention.—a. Its mechanism; b. Inhibition; c. The feeling of effort. 3. The Morbid States of Attention.—a. Distraction; b. Hypochondria; c. Fixed ideas and ecstasy; d. Idiotcy; e. Attention in sleep and hypnosis. Cloth, 75c.

Fundamental Problems. The Method of Philosophy as a Systematic Arrangement of Knowledge. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.

The Psychic Life of Micro-Organisms. A Study in Experimental Psychology. By Alfred Binet. Translation from the French with the sanction of the author. Treating of the following subjects: 1. The Psychology of the Cell—Introductory. 2. The Structural and Psychological Character of Proto-Organisms: Motory and Sensory Organs. 3. The Psychology of Nutrition: Holophytic, Saprophytic, and Animal Nutrition; Predatory Habits of Certain Animals. 4. Colonies of Unicellular Organisms. 5. Fecundation of Proto-Organisms. 6. Fecundation of Higher Animals and Plants. 7. The Physiological Function of the Nucleus. 8. Correspondence between Alfred Binet and Ch. Richet (professor of physiology in the Faculty of Medicine at Paris) respecting cellular psychology. 10mo, 135 pages; cloth, 75c; paper, 50c.

Wheelbarrow Articles and Discussions on the Labor Question, Including the Controversy with Mr. Lyman F. Gage on the Ethics of the Board of Trade; and also the Controversy with Mr. Hugh O. Pontecost, and others, on the Single Tax Question. Elegant cloth binding, portrait of the author, and autograph letter. Price, $1.

The Idea of God. By Dr. Paul Carus. Being a disquisition on the development of the idea of God in human thought and history; discussing: 1. The Nature of Ideas. 2. The Etymology of the Word God. 3. God an Abstract Idea. 4. The Conceptions of God (Polytheism, Monotheism, Pantheism, Theism, and Atheism). 5. Definitions of the Idea of God. 6. Entheism, the Monistic Conception of God. Price, 15c.

Epitomes of Three Sciences. 1. Comparative Philology: The Study of Sanscrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg, of the University of Kiel.—a. Sanscrit Research; b. From Jones to Lassen; c. The Discovery of the Veda; d. The Interpretation of the Veda; e. The History of the Vedic Epoch. 2. Experimental Psychology. By Prof. Joseph Jastrow, of the University of Wisconsin.—a. Aspects of Modern Psychology; b. Psychology in Germany; c. Psychology in France and Italy; d. Psychology in Great Britain and the United States. 3. Old Testament History: or, The Rise of the people of Israel. By Prof. C. H. Cornall, of the University of Königsberg.—a. The Traditions of the People of Israel; b. The Migrations of the Tribes of Israel; c. The Conquest of Palestine and the Kingdom of Israel. With special introductions by Professors Oldenberg and Cornall, and prefatory remarks by the editor of the Open Court. Elegant cloth binding. Price, 75c.

The Ethical Problem. By Dr. Paul Carus. Three Lectures, delivered before the Society for Ethical Culture of Chicago at the invitation of the Board of Trustees: 1. Ethics, a Science; 2. The Data of Ethics; 3. The Theories of Ethics. 112 pages, cloth. Price, 50c.

On Double Consciousness. Experimental Psychological Studies. By Alfred Binet. Table of contents: 1. Introductory; Experimental Psychology in France. 2. Proof of Double Consciousness in Hysterical Individuals. 3. The Relations between the Two Consciousnesses of Hysterical Individuals. 4. The Hysterical Eye. 5. Mechanism or Subconsciousness? 6. The Graphic Method and the Doubling of Consciousness. 7. The Intensity of Subconscious States. 8. The Role of Suggestion in Phenomena of Double Consciousness. 9. Double Consciousness in Health. 93 pages, paper. Price, 50c.

The Lost Manuscript. A Novel. By Gustave Freytag. A handsome, elegantly bound edition of this famous and popular German romance. The author writes as a motto for the American edition: "A noble human life does not end on earth with death. It continues in the minds and deeds of friends, as well as in the thoughts and the activity of the nation." In two octavo volumes; boxed. Price, $4.

Diseases of Personality. By Th. Ribot. Authorized translation. Treating of the following subjects: 1. Nature of Personality and consciousness. 2. Organic Disorders. 3. Emotional Disorders. 4. Intellectual Troubles. 5. Dissolution of the Personality. Cloth, 75c.

The Soul of Man. An Investigation of the Facts of Physiological and Experimental Psychology. By Dr. Paul Carus. With 152 Illustrative Cuts and Diagrams. Price $3, paper 48c. Printed on extra fine paper, handsomely bound in cloth. The subject-matter of the work is divided into the following sections: 1. The Philosophical Problem of Mind. 2. The Rise of Organic Life. 3. Physiological Facts of Brain-Activity. 4. The Immortality of the Race and the Data of Propagation. 5. The Investigations of Experimental Psychology. 6. The Ethical and Religious Aspects of Soul-Life. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. 40 cents.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure. By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol. 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:
Force and Matter. The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology).
Immortality of Matter. Nature (Teleology).
Immortality of Force. Man.
Infinity of Matter. Brain and Mind.
Value of Matter. Thought.
Motion. Consciousness.
Form. Seat of the Soul.
Immutability of Natural Innate Ideas.
Laws. The Idea of God.
Universality of Natural Personal Continuance.
Laws. Vital Force.
The Heavens. The Soul of Brutes.
Periods of the Creation Free Will.
of the Earth. Morality.
Original Generation. Concluding Observations.
Secular Generation. tions.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents.

Address this office.

Gems of Thought.

Good kings are slaves, and their people are free.—Queen Marie of France.

No part of man's nature is formed with a useless or sinister intent. In no respect can he be wholly bad, but the worst passions have their root in the best.—Thoreau.

A GREAT man throws pearls before swine, and the swine are sometimes changed to men. If the great had always kept their pearls, vast multitudes would be barbarians now.—Ingersoll.

If the Protestant Reformers condemned celibacy, if they opened the doors of the convents, it was to change human society itself into convents. Sports and plays were forbidden among them. Geneva, for a hundred years, did not allow a musical instrument within its borders. They proscribed auricular confession, but they wished public penitence; and so it was established in Switzerland, Scotland, Geneva.—Voltaire.

INCREASED means of conquering the material obstacles which Nature and life place in our way; the growth of culture and knowledge, combined with enhanced success in contending against ignorance and superstition; the lessening of the evils that flesh is heir to; the abolition of war, of poverty, of every method of men taking undue advantage of one another, and the substitution of the principle of universal human love and universal peace among nations for the ruinous struggle for existence—these and many more that are interwoven with them should be the aims and objects of man's aspiration in the future.—Büchner.

"Oh, the ingratitude," actually said a priest of the Spanish-American land-robbars, "the ingratitude of the wretches who grudge us the territories of their base earthly kindreds and forget that our gospel offers them a passport to the glorious kingdom of heaven!" "The ingratitude!" repeats the modern pharisee, "the base ingratitude of those factory children who grudge me the privileges of my position, and clamor for an increase of wages to gratify their worldly desires. Consumption? Hunger? Frost? should not the rich promises of the gospel compensate such temporal inconveniences, and have I not founded a Sabbath-school to save them from the lusts of their unregenerate souls?"—Felix Oswald.

We stand in reality but on the threshold of civilization. Far from shewing any indications of having come to an end, the tendency to improvement seems latterly to have proceeded with augmented impetus and accelerated rapidity. . . . There are many things which are not as yet dreamed of in our philosophy; many discoveries which will immortalize those who make them and confer upon the human race advantages which, as yet, perhaps, we are not in a condition to appreciate. We may still say with our great countryman, Sir Isaac Newton, that we have been but like children, playing on the sea-shore, and picking up here and there a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than ordinary, while the great ocean of truth lies all undiscovered before us. Thus, then, the most sanguine hopes for the future are justified by the whole experience of the past.—Lubbock.

PROFESSOR PEARSON is of opinion that an instruction in scientific method might be very generally imparted, and that its effect on the mind of the ensuing generation would be marked. He considers, very rightly, that a scientific frame of mind is an essential of good citizenship, seeing that it is that frame of mind alone which leads a man to look beyond proximate phenomena, and above all to put aside personal bias. It is the peculiarity, as he well observes, of scientific method that, when once it has become a habit of mind, that mind converts all facts whatsoever into science. Good intentions are not enough to make a good citizen; a man may with the best of intentions, and even at great self-sacrifice, set himself in direct opposition to the best interests of the state. The trouble in such a case is that the man lacks knowledge, and like an ignorant physician, either diagnosticates badly the evils he would remedy, or, if his diagnoses chance to be right—which is very unlikely—applies the wrong cure. Professor Pearson does not pretend that as yet science can pronounce definitively and certain judgments upon all social questions; but he properly maintains that science should, as far as possible, be our guide to-day, and that it alone will ever lead us into a perfect comprehension of our social duties. We are, therefore, in full accord with him when he formulates what he calls the first claim of science in the following words: "Modern science, as training the mind to an exact and impartial analysis of facts, is an education especially fitted to promote sound citizenship."—Professor Youmans.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's

ARGUMENT

IN THE

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.

WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.

Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER.

10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not included in the New Testament.

Price, $1

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, 75 cents

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLLOT.

Price, $2

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, 20 cents.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.
Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Free Thought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Idea of God. 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theology.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.
6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During American Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. Svo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Port. Pap., 50c.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS,
HISTORY,
STATISTICS,
AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
1 The Church Robbing the People.
1 Thanksgiving.
1 Sabbath Laws.
1 Children and the Church.
1 Woman and the Church.
1 The Church and Thomas Paine.
1 Studies in Natural History.
1 The Bible and Science.
1 The Clergy and Their Flocks.
1 Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
1 The Atonement Scheme.
1 The Lord and His Works.
1 Prayer.
1 The Creeds.
1 Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
5 Missionaries.
1 The Lord's Instruments.
25 Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1 The Church and Slavery.
2 Priests and Politics.
4 Ireland and the Church.
2 Church's Idea of Civilization.
1 The Uses of the Cross.
4 Unkind Reflections on the Church.
9 Persecutions of the Church.
12 Some Allegories.
3 Heaven.
6 Hell.
7 Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

POPE'S AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By
G. W. FOOBE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Voltaire, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
Price, 25 cents.
Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture. Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE
Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake..... 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization..... 25
Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller..... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall..... 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndal's Belfast Inaugural and Portrait..... 25
13 Essays on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
18 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh..... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake..... 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts..... 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts..... 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts..... 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake..... 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts..... 5
33 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H..... 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts..... 10
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts..... 5
44 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake..... 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake..... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Father. Holyoake..... 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H..... 10
15 Lucicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H..... 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz..... 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO.,
65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

LITTLE FREETHINKER.

Friends, please try our LITTLE FREETHINKER, the only paper published for the young free from superstition, 10 cents a year. I will send it and Foot's Health Monthly for 50 cents; or it and "Little Lessons" for 75 cents; or it and THE TRUTH SEEKER for $3. Address
ELMINA D. SLENKER, Snowville, Va.
3t20

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL.

Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	{ Oxidized, 10 ounces per doz., }	each $2.50
" "	{ Oxidized, 14 ounces per doz., }	" 3.00
" "	{ Oxidized, gilt bowl, 10 ounces per doz., }	" 3.00
" "	{ Oxidized, sectional gilt, 10 ounces per doz., }	" 3.50
Orange "	{ Oxidized, plain bowl, 10 ounces per doz., }	" 2.75
Sugar "	{ " gilt, " satin, " gilt }	" 3.25 " 3.00 " 3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Bages, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer. (If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST,
For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,

Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

To Argue the STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABLETS.

News of the Week.

THE Presbyterian assembly opened at Washington, D. C., on the 18th, will take up the Briggs case again.

AN Italian has been arrested at Beyreuth, Turkey, for blaspheming Mohammedanism. The Italian consul is protesting.

THE Italian government, hearing that the priests are about to incite their parishioners against it, is preparing a bill to punish all the clergy caught meddling in politics.

WHEN the Exposition art buildings are fully stocked and opened a great outcry will arise. Every country has sent a good supply of nude pictures, and there are bodies of organized indignationists from interior points who are going to see about it.

THE London Daily Chronicle, speaking of the Russo-American extradition treaty, says: "Mr. Cleveland has made the American government the watchdog of Russian absolutism, as forty years ago it was the slave-catcher for Southern planters."

A DROUGHT having long afflicted Great Britain, Cardinal Vaughan has come to the rescue by directing that the prayer for rain, Ad petendam pluviam, be inserted in the mass every Sunday till it is answered, when a Te Deum is to be said without further notice.

THE decision of the United States Supreme Court last Monday on the Chinese exclusion act was that it is constitutional, and unregistered Chinamen must go. Justices Fuller, Field, and Brewer dissented. Justice Field denounced as despotic and dangerous the power claimed to deport friendly aliens in time of peace. China will no doubt retaliate.

At Easton, Pa., Rev. James McGeeveran, of St. Bernard's Catholic church, created a sensation in his congregation by administering at the services severe rebukes to some of the young women of the church who were receiving attentions from young men beyond the pale of the denomination. He warned these girls to refuse attentions from these young men or suffer excommunication.

UNDER the law to take effect July 1st in South Carolina, a majority of the freehold voters of a community must sign the application of anyone to be a state dispenser of liquor, and the applicant must be a teetotaler. As Charleston's population of 65,000 contains 1,519 freehold voters, 760 must sign an application. The present liquor-dealers desire to persuade these persons not to sign.

ALMY, the murderer of Christie Warden, awaiting execution in the Concord, N. H., jail, has received a book from Congressman Morse, of Massachusetts. The book relates the intercourse between a condemned murderer named Hersey and one pious Dr. Nehemiah Adams, under whose counsels the murderer before death "gave pleasing evidence of repentance and conversion." Morse wrote: "In this little book the plan of salvation is made very plain. Like this man Hersey, by repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ you may exchange a prison cell in Concord, N. H., for a home in heaven, because Jesus Christ died for sinners."

CARLYLE HARRIS, the wife-poisoner, executed in New York, was asked by his mother if the report that he had scoffed at religion was true. "No, mother," said he, "it is a downright falsehood. I never scoffed at religion in all my life, and should be unlikely to do so now." The prison chaplain says: "He accepted the broad fundamental principles of religion, such as the existence of a God." The Catholic priest Van Rensselaer had this conversation with a reporter: "Yes, it is true," said the father, "Carl died in the faith of our mother church." "Was he baptized?" "Yes, I baptized him conditionally, he having previously been baptized in the Episcopal faith." "And you confessed him?" "Yes. I received his confession and granted him absolution." "But he spent his last hour praying with an Episcopal clergyman." "Which assuredly was good for his soul, for he was praying to the God we all worship." "When did you first learn that Harris wished to be received into the Catholic church?" "I think it was shortly after he was sentenced. His mother came to me and told me that Carl would like to see me. I called upon him in the Tombs, and the boy then assured me that he had come to the conclusion that the Roman Catholic faith was the only true faith and the only one in which he could find true repose. I talked to him then and afterward, long and earnestly, and the more I knew the lad the more convinced I became that he was sincere in his professions, and that he longed for that peace which the church alone can give."

"Yet hear the word of the Lord, O Zedekiah, king of Judah: Thus saith the Lord of thee. Thou shalt not die by the sword. But thou shalt die in peace." etc. etc.

— Jere. xxxiv. 4, 5. —

"And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes: + + + Then he put out the eyes of Zedekiah; and + + + bound him in chains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison till the day of his death." — Jere. Lii. 10, 11. —

THE KIND OF PEACE THE LORD PROMISED ZEDEKIAH.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.

Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER,

EAGLE BRAND.

— THE BEST —

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO., Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.

13t18

AGENTS WANTED.

We want agents to sell our rare Mexican Cactus and Coins; will send three different kinds of samples for $1, and one coin with each order.

Address: TEXAS CACTUS COMPANY, H. G. STILLWELL, Manager, 208 San Antonio St., El Paso, Texas.

4t17

WIZARDS MAGIC PURSE.

The most bewildering illusion discovered in this century! A very strong purse of the finest dressed kid strongly sewed and beautifully embroidered. (Regular goods of equal quality sell for 50c. to 75c.) Comprises 3 pockets, which we GUARANTEE none can open in 3 hours without knowing the secret. It has baffled all experts in puzzle-dom. A great novelty, a wonderful mystery and a useful article, all in one. Your money and secrets are safe inside this purse! Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Sample with secret in sealed envelope post paid with Catalogue of 1000 useful articles, 25c; 3 for 60c; 6 for $1.00, $1.80 Doz. R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 Cortlandt st., N. Y. Steew19

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price. - - - - - 10 cents.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 24 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 21. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 27, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE ATTITUDE OF RELIGION TOWARD HUMAN LIBERTY.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

By WATSON HESTON.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor.
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice.
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.
Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, . . . $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution."

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.
Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
For sale at THIS OFFICE.
Price, $1.50.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Quoted from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE!

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the prop. r offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The

Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price 25 cents.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for 15 cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

For $7.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and the "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times" ($5.00), by D. M. Bennett. In two volumes. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 21. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 27, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - - MAY 27, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

"Open Sundays!"

Among the pictures that our readers will recollect seeing in these pages, one represents what may seem a peculiar thing—the business outfit, or trade apparatus, of a craftsman of a certain kind, open and in full operation on Sundays, without the slightest offense to the class who so sharply enforce the Sabbath law against every other kind of laborer. "Open Sundays!" is the title that we have inscribed underneath it, and the business establishment which is in full blast is a preacher's mouth.

It would be excellent if people, casting from their eyes the spectacles of custom which have so long perverted their view, would but recognize the clear fact that there is one trade in the land which with hardihood pursues the work by which it compasses its bread and butter, its roast beef and pudding, on that day whereupon all other callings are compelled to remain in idleness. Let the people recognize, too, that the very reason why the other callings are compelled to idleness is that this one calling has corruptly secured the aid of the government to suppress them, in order that it may have a monopoly of the day and engross all the spendings of the people thereon to its own pocketbooks. How monstrous a violation would this appear to the people, could they but once get to see it in a new and unbiased light, of the principle of "Equal rights to all, special privilege to none!" Unparalleled outrage would it seem. Flagrant usurpation! Abuse detestable and intolerable!

The view of the matter which we have presented above was, we are pleased to note, expressed by the counsel in a late law-case in Maryland. At Chesterton, in that state, the case of the State against J. W. Judefind, who was convicted for working on Sunday before Justice Wilkins some time ago, came up in the circuit court on appeal. Mr. Judefind belongs to the Seventh Day Adventists, who observe Saturday and not Sunday as the weekly holy day. To the various constitutional objections to the statute which were advanced by Mr. Ringgold, counsel for the state made no reply. The Rev. Mr. Roe, one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution, was asked by Mr. Ringgold, one of the defendant counsel, whether he was not carrying on his own regular work, by which he earns his bread and butter, when he was driving to a meeting and passed Mr. Judefind's place on the Sunday on which he said he saw Mr. Judefind carrying on his regular work and earning his bread and butter. After some hesitation, Mr. Roe admitted that he was engaged in his regular occupation by which he earns his living, but went on to say that his duties were religious, but he was interrupted by Mr. Ringgold, who told him that if he would confine himself to facts, the court could be depended upon to do whatever considering might be necessary. Among other objections Mr. Ringgold made to the law was that he observed with regret that not only the preachers but the magistrates and constables of Kent county were in the habit of working on Sunday, as it appeared from the records in the case before the court that the warrant was issued and served on Sunday. The court took the papers and reserved decision.

Let people, we again and again ask, take a clear and unclouded view of this point. Consideration of the Sunday question does not, as they have heretofore imagined, call for any reasonings sentimental, or of a special ethical character, or of any kind differing from those involved in any every-day question of business and of civil equity. The plain fact is only that, in obedience to the law of selfishness by which each trade strives for especial advantage and undue prerogative, that one trade the clerical has won the privilege of monopoly of one day in the week to the exclusion of other trades. Through influence given it over rulers by means of its supposed power in a supernatural future, one trade has selfishly, unjustly, and corruptly obtained laws that it, and it alone, shall fatten its lazy sides and adorn its luxurious homes by being, while all rival attractions are shut, open Sundays.

One of Christianity's Anti-Natural Teachings.

That Christ's teachings were essentially anti-natural, adverse to the proper and necessary propensities of nature, is a fact that was impressed on British people a few days ago by a law-suit at Newcastle, England. This suit was brought by a wife against her husband for the maintenance of herself and her child. The husband belongs to a religious order styled the Rayburn Pilgrims. Celibacy is one of the cardinal rules of the order, and the husband in this case justified his desertion in a letter to his wife, in which he said:

"You already know it is my aim to conform my life to the teaching and example of Christ, and my convictions are such that I feel called of God to live a life of purity for him. Our living together as husband and wife would be a violation of these convictions and in direct disobedience to the will of God. Therefore I cannot, under any circumstances, consent that we should live together again as aforementioned, but am perfectly willing, and always have been, to live as brother and sister, provided you allow me religious freedom and liberty of conscience toward God and myself.

"This course you have persistently refused to accept. Hence I have no alternative but to pursue the course I have hitherto adopted."

After the case had been settled by an order for the husband to pay $3 weekly, Judge Seymour expressed to him, at considerable length, the "detestation and contempt" in which he held him. We have to say that this detestation and contempt is equally merited by every genuine Christian. For everyone who attempts to institute an actual and uncompromising conformity of society to Christian principles, essays to bring about a state in which all shall be like this one husband. The early Christians, the founders of the church, interpreted Christ's teachings to enjoin absolute abstinence from sexual intercourse. This abstinence was made the chief text of the "unworldliness" by which the Novatians, the Marcionites, and the self-mutilating Origenes hoped to reach heaven. Strict seclusion from the opposite sex was the custom. Castration was the usual penalty of violation of the vow to observe this sequestration. This mutilation was also often practiced to avert even the awakening of the instinct. Society-shunning, especially women-shunning, hermits or anchorites sprang up everywhere. This anti-natural notion has continued to the present day in the Catholic doctrines of the superior worthiness of the life of monks and nuns, and the celibacy of the clergy.

Christ implies superior merit in extinction of the sexual instinct by his allusions to "eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake," and to the saints "who neither marry nor are given in marriage," as well as by the example of his personal asceticism. Paul distinctly enunciates that marriage is only a less evil, a compromise with the passions of the unregenerate, which perfect virtue should forbear to gratify. "It is," he says, "good for a man not to touch a woman; nevertheless, to avoid . . .," etc.

The preposterous and insulting Christian doctrine that we are considering was advanced by Cardinal Manning in his discussion with Colonel Ingersoll. Nothing on the subject better than the latter's reply will ever be written. It was, in part: "The cardinal takes the ground that celibacy is far better than marriage—holier than a sacrament—that marriage is not the highest state, but that 'the state of virginity unto death is the highest condition of man and woman.' . . . The church taught the uncleanness of marriage, and insisted that all children were conceived in sin. This church pretended to have been founded by one who offered a reward in this world, and eternal joy in the next, to husbands who would forsake their wives and children and follow him. Did this tend to the elevation of woman? Did this detestable doctrine 'create the purity and peace of domestic life?' Is it true that a monk is purer than a good and noble father?—that a nun is holier than a loving mother?"

"Is there anything deeper and stronger than a mother's love? Is there anything purer, holier, than a mother holding her dimpled babe against her billowed breast?"

"The good man is useful, the best man is the most useful. Those who fill the nights with barren prayers and holy hunger, torture themselves for their own good and not for the benefit of others. They are earning eternal glory for themselves—they do not fast for their fellow-men—their selfishness is equalled only by their foolishness. Compare the monk in his selfish cell, counting beads and saying prayers for the purpose of saving his barren soul, with a husband and father sitting by his fireside with wife and children. Compare the nun with the mother and her babe.

"Celibacy is the essence of vulgarity. It tries to put a stain upon motherhood, upon marriage, upon love—that is to say, upon all that is holiest in the human heart. Take love from the world, and there is nothing left worth living for. The church has treated this great, this sublime, this unspeakably holy passion, as though it polluted the heart. It has placed the love of God above the love of woman, above the love of man. Human love is generous and noble. The love of God is selfish, because man does not love God for God's sake, but for his own.

"This prelate insists that celibacy is far better than marriage. If the world could be induced to live in accordance with the 'highest state,' this generation would be the last. Why were men and women created? Why did not the Catholic God commence with the sinless and the sexless? The cardinal ought to take the ground that to talk well is good, but that to be dumb is the highest condition; that hearing is a pleasure, but that deafness is ecstasy; and that to think, to reason, is very well, but that to be a Catholic is far better."

Pietists Ask for National Troops to Compel Observance of Their Holy Day.

On Tuesday, the 16th inst., the local board of directors of the Columbian Exposition performed what was deemed a bold act. They went beyond their previous action of ordering the grounds open on Sunday though the buildings should be closed, which deed in itself had sufficiently angered the national commission. They voted almost unanimously to return to the United States government its appropriation of $1,929,120, made Aug. 5, 1892, in aid of the enterprise, if it should demand it, thus freeing the directory from the obligation imposed by the act, and enabling it to open both the grounds and buildings on Sunday. This action was to go to the national commission on the morrow for approval. That body, with the oversensitiveness which has marked its entire existence, thought that the directory in its previous action had exceeded its authority. To avoid any appearance of friction, the resolutions, which are given in full below, were passed. These resolutions were sent to the national commission. The amount stated in the resolutions as that to be returned to the government on demand is $1,929,120, instead of $2,500,000, the original amount of the appropriation in souvenir fifty-cent coins, because the government held back a part of the appropriation by an act of March 3, 1893, to pay the expenses of the making of awards. This withdrawal of a portion of the original appropriation, seven months after it was made, and when the Exposition authorities had figured on securing the total amount, and arranged their scheme of finances, was felt by everybody connected with the Exposition to be a breach of faith on the part of the government. A number of officials believed that they were under no further obligations to keep the Fair closed. But, rather than have any controversy in the future, it was decided to provide for refunding the government appropriation. It will be noticed that this is to be done "if demanded" by the government. It is possible that no demand will be made by Congress, but the directory is not figuring on this. It is believed that the large numbers of people who will visit the Fair on Sunday will pay in more than enough money to make good the amount. At the meeting Director-general Davis was present, but was excused from voting. He expressed himself as opposed to refunding the appropriation, because he believed the government had violated its contract. Mayor Harrison attended for the first time since he became a director. He left before the vote was taken, but said he wanted the Fair open, and thought the plan of giving back the money a good one. The vote stood 34 to 2, the dissenting directors being Victor F. Lawson, publisher of the Daily News, and I. N. Camp. The resolutions follow:

"WHEREAS, A recent action of this board in regard to the admission of the public on Sundays to the grounds surrounding the Exposition has made manifest a widespread demand that the main buildings of the Exposition should also be opened; and

"WHEREAS, This board believes that the welfare of the public, especially of the wage-workers, will be promoted by permitting the people to enter the entire Exposition on Sunday, and that a large majority of the people of the country demand this privilege; and

"WHEREAS, We believe that the Congress of the United States by the act of March 3, 1893, withdrawing over one-fifth of the entire appropriation made in aid of the World's Columbian Exposition, has thereby removed all obligations on the part of this corporation to comply with the requirements of the act of August 5, 1892; nevertheless, we propose to return the amount received, as hereinafter provided. Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That both the Exposition buildings and grounds should be opened during Sundays of the Exposition; that the operation of the machinery in Machinery Hall should be suspended as far as practicable; that all exhibitors and employees be relieved from duty on that day, except so far as their presence is essential to the protection of life and property; that there should be religious services and sacred music in Choral and Music Halls. The board believes that such a policy would be a full recognition of the American Sabbath.

"Resolved further, That in case the above is carried into effect, this corporation pledges and obligates itself to return to the government on demand that portion of the appropriation received by virtue of the act of August, 1892, to wit, the sum of $1,929,120 from and out of the net receipts of this corporation after the payment of all just and valid debts and obligations and before any payments shall be made to the stockholders of the city of Chicago. Be it also

"Resolved, That the rules should be so amended as to be consistent with and to enable the execution of the provisions of these resolutions, and that the same be certified to the national commission."

When, on the following day, these resolutions were communicated to the national commission, that body referred them to its judiciary committee. For the next two days, while this judiciary committee was deliberating and the national commission awaiting its decision before taking formal action, the commissioners individually expressed opinions adverse to Sunday opening. There was, to judge from the comments made, no ground for hoping that the commissioners would adopt the opening rule. Nearly all declared that the Fair would be closed on Sunday unless the courts should declare the law unconstitutional. It appeared to be the general sentiment that if the directors saw fit to open the gates on Sunday anyhow the commission could itself do nothing, but it would then rest with the president to see that the law of Congress was enforced. So far as paying back the money was concerned, the commission could not take it for granted that the money would be paid until it had absolute guarantee that it would be. The local directors have not offered to give any guarantee.

It was stated that the Fair has no power to give money which was appropriated for its use back to the government any more than a Congressman has the power to give back his salary. Some of the members of the commission insisted that if the directory opens the gates without the consent of the commission, the president will send United States troops to close them.

Then, too, the squabble over Musical Director Thomas seemed likely to make trouble. The commissioners threatened to side-track the Sunday-opening resolution by sending it through all the committees and councils and boards, if the Thomas case was not handled promptly.

On Thursday, the 18th, the judiciary committee made a report, but it was only on the directory's action of the previous week. For consideration of the bold directory's latest move this committee said it should require till some time on the following week—i. e., the week from the 21st to the 28th inst. Commissioner Massey denied that the judiciary committee had wasted any time. "There are grave questions of law involved in the Sunday-closing question, and these cannot be rushed through," said he.

On the same day, the 18th, an unexpected incident fell out, that angered the national commission more than before, and, it is to be feared, set them all the more strongly against yielding. They were present at the dedication of the Illinois Building. Near the close of the exercises Mayor Carter Harrison was making a speech. A messenger pushed his way to the stage and handed a note to him. It read: "Call for a rising vote on the Sunday-opening question." The mayor read the note, hesitated a little, and then, in his most dramatic manner, said: "My Friends: Yonder Horticultural Hall presents to the eye a beauty that will cultivate the heart and never debase the soul. In this art gallery there is a magic work of man that will cultivate the heart and brain and never debase the soul; but yonder, beyond those gates, are buildings erected for saloons, where diluted poisons are poured down men's throats." He then praised the local directors upon their attitude in regard to Sunday opening. The mayor complimented them upon their loyalty to the interests of the Fair and the city, the laboring people and the country generally, in returning the appropriation to the government in order that there should be no obstacle in the way of Sunday opening, and, pointing to the Exposition buildings on all sides, exclaimed: "Is it not better that the workingmen of the city and country should be allowed to enjoy all the beauties of this place on the holy Sabbath day than to be compelled to pass their time at the many places of resort on the outside of the Exposition fence?" As he spoke, the mayor pointed to the west side of Stony Island avenue, which is fringed with saloons. The mayor went on: "Do you want to take all privileges from the poor man that works six days of the week, obeying his creator when he said, 'Six days shalt thou labor?' Shall he not have the time to come here to the World's Fair on Sunday? The churches are closed to him. Not one man in a thousand can go to a church on Sunday. Do you not want the World's Fair open on Sunday? I will put it to a vote. All in favor of an open Fair will please rise." Everyone present, to the number of several thousand, arose and cheered heartily. The board of national commissioners, the members of which were present as guests of honor, also arose, but when the others sat down the commissioners did not. They looked angrily around, and, putting on their hats, strode solemnly back to the Administration Building, where they resumed the business they had broken off in order to go over to the Illinois Building and assist Governor Altgeld and others to dedicate it. So angry were they, that they did not even stop to eat any of the good lunch the state of Illinois had caused to be spread for the guests. It is putting it somewhat mildly to say that the commissioners were mad. They were furious.

On Saturday, the 20th inst., the local directory assembled and enacted that whereas their Sunday-opening rule

"has been duly certified to the World's Columbian Exposition Commission for such modification, if any, as that body may desire to make under the law; and

"WHEREAS, Said commission has not yet reached definite action, therefore be it

"Resolved, That, in order to avoid action that may anywhere be characterized as precipitate, the operation of the rule above referred to be suspended for one week, and that on Sunday, May 21st, the gates be closed."

Accordingly, last Sunday the Fair was tight closed. There was no riotous demonstration as on the preceding Sunday. But thousands of men and women wandered aimlessly up and down the thoroughfares outside the World's Fair grounds, peering wistfully through the closed gates of the White City and murmuring regrets at their inability to gain admittance. Men kept their tempers, evidently buoyed by the belief that that would be the last day of Sunday-closing. It was by far the largest Sunday turning-out since the exhibition opened. From early morning until dark the elevated road, the cable lines, the steamers, and the suburban trains poured a continuous stream of humanity into the streets surrounding the grounds. The pressure was in a large measure doubtless due to an ill-defined hope that the closing order might be revoked during the day. The crowd had money, and, unable to spend it in the Fair grounds, made its way to haunts of debauchery; and another chapter was added to the history of humanity being forced into low activities because of ecclesiastics having closed the higher out of jealous fear of rivalry of their own attractions.

At this stage the directors and the public were getting along bravely in plans for enjoying an open Fair on the next Sunday at any rate. The press expressed these expectations and intentions in many passages like this from the Chicago Herald:

"The directors need not be concerned about boycott threats. Let them pay heed to their law adviser and go ahead. If the United States as a government shall oppose their determination to admit the people of Chicago to their own grounds in Jackson park, even by paying a fee, let the initiative of proceedings to keep the people out of their own be on the United States. Grover Cleveland is president. The proceedings, if any be taken, must originate in a department presided over by a member of his cabinet. It is not likely that the attorney-general will institute action in so grave a matter without consultation with the president. The people of the United States who elected Grover Cleveland will be amazed if by his orders action essentially bigoted, cruel, and reactionary, shall be taken by District-Attorney Milchrist against the directory of the World's Columbian Exposition."

But very soon all this bright prospect was overclouded. Dispatches from Washington put a damper upon the enthusiasm of the directors and other Sunday openers, and the opinion was that it is hardly probable that the gates will ever be open on the first day of the week. It was learned that

Attorney-General Olney had sent instructions to United States Attorney Milchrist to enforce the law should the directors attempt to open the Fair gates on Sunday, which show how the chief law officer of the government stands. Mr. Olney says the law is plain that the gates shall be closed on Sunday, and that is the end of it. At this news both the directors and the national commissioners began to feel that they have no voice whatever in opening the gates on the prohibited day, as the government had announced its intention of seeing that they are kept shut. The national commissioners have been informed that their sole duty in the premises is to make such rules and regulations as will tend to the keeping of the gates closed, and not to dillydally with any sort of measures which have in view their opening. Presently, however, the directors in a measure recovered their spirits and some expressions were heard of intention to open the gates whatever happened. Thus the case stands, and the outcome is unforeseeable.

The Trade and Labor Assembly at Chicago spoke a bold and commendable word last Sunday. Speaking on a resolution favoring Sunday opening, President Linehan said:

"When efforts were being made to raise money for the Fair, promises were made the workmen of Chicago that the Fair would be open on Sundays. Hundreds of workmen in Chicago have contributed to the Fair stock subscriptions, according to their means, and their wishes should be as much consulted as those of any other subscribers.

"I propose that we say to the Fair authorities: 'We are willing to pay fifty cents each to get into the Exposition on Sundays, and if you do not let us in on those terms we shall go in anyhow.' Let us name a day and hour when we shall march to the ground and tear down the fence if our just demands are not acceded to."

The assembly decided to hold an open-air meeting on the night of the following Wednesday to agitate the case.

The Sabbath associations, and the regular denominations, are everywhere in the country working for closing. The American Sabbath Union is preparing a request to be mailed to every pastor in the land that he persuade his flock to boycott the Fair if it is open Sundays as an unholy affair. President Palmer has received bushels of protests. At the Southern Baptist convention a speaker demanded closing "in the name of one million three hundred thousand communicants of the Baptist church." The New Jersey State Epworth League, Methodist, declared similarly. At Washington, Secretary Carlisle and Attorney-General Olney are being deluged with Sunday-closing letters, telegrams, and petitions. From Worcester, Mass., alone, they have received thirty-two separate protests. President Cleveland has likewise been beset with these communications. In the president's batch was this one:

"The general synod of the Reformed Presbyterian church in North America, now in session in the First church, New York city, respectfully request that you defend the Sabbath-closing law of the Columbian Exposition through the attorney-general."

Another received by the president was:

"The First United Presbyterian church of Boston, distrusting both directory and commissioners, appeals to you to suppress Chicago nullification with Jacksonian firmness, and to guard the gates next Sabbath with troops if necessary."

And another:

"The American Sabbath Union, representing fourteen leading denominations, appeals to you to use your influence and power that the laws of our country may be obeyed and the gates of the Columbian Exposition be closed on Sunday."

President Higinbotham of the Exposition has received this:

"MR. H. N. HIGINBOTHAM, President World's Columbian Exhibition, Chicago, Ill.: I beg leave to inform you that advices are coming to me from local societies all over the United States and Canada stating their determination to remain away from the Fair altogether if the gates are opened Sundays. Already thousands are at work securing the same decision from others. The Christian Endeavor societies now marshal one million five hundred thousand young men and women, and we mean to do everything in our power to prevent the disgrace of the nation and the financial failure of the Exposition."

The Rev. Drs. Lawrence, Henson, and Parker, the committee of the Baptist auxiliary of the Religious Congress of the World's Fair, have withdrawn the acceptance of the invitation to the Baptist denomination to participate in the Congress. The committee's action is taken in view of the determination of the directory to throw open the gates on Sunday. Again, the following telegram was sent from Boston to the guardians of Liberty Bell at Chicago:

"As Pennsylvanian, American, and chairman of the National Sabbath Closing Committee I urge withdrawal of the republic's birthday bell in case directors persist in rebellion against its Sabbath-closing law. Liberty has no fellowship with anarchy, but is wedded to the Sabbath."
"WILBUR F. CRAFTS."

Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania has also been requested to order the bell out as soon as the law is violated. The Presbyterian general assembly at Washington has thus expressed itself:

"Resolved, That this assembly protest in behalf of the Christian and law-abiding sentiment of the nation against the opening of the Columbian Exposition at Chicago on the Lord's day. We appeal to the national commissioners to assert their rightful authority to prevent the local directory from opening the Exposition gates on that day, and we respectfully invoke the cooperation of the national executive in the enforcement of all laws designed or calculated to secure that end.

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be communicated to the president of the United States and to the Honorable T. W. Palmer, president of the World's Fair commission."

The Evangelical Alliance at Boston has sent a long telegram to Attorney-General Olney asking him to invoke the authority of the courts to keep the World's Fair closed on Sunday. The telegram concluded thus:

"The presence of the United States troops at Fort Sheridan holds Chicago Anarchists in check. Cannot the administration notify the directory that those troops will be promptly used if necessary to maintain inviolate the nation's authority and keep the Fair closed on the Lord's day?"

Leaving the above to serve as samples of the great multitude of bigot clamorings for which we cannot find space, we will note only the ridiculous menaces of divine vengeance. Rev. Robert Plunkett, of Texas, prophesies a furious and woe-working storm at Chicago if the Fair is opened Sundays. Rev. Dr. Rossiter, of New York city, says:

"As a result of the open and daring defiance of God I would not be surprised at anything that might happen to the Fair. I would not be surprised if an electrical storm, the like of which the world has never known, should with flashing lightning and tremendous winds level those mighty buildings to the ground and leave Jackson park, Chicago, a frightful and appalling evidence of the just wrath of God."

Freethinkers, speak to your acquaintances on the spurious paternity of what is called the Christian Sabbath, and on the injustice of enforcing its observance; and distribute literature on these themes.

A Truth To Be Impressed on the Mind.

A subscriber living in Wyoming, in a discouraged and discouraging letter says:

"I must ask you to discontinue my paper. I will try my best to send you the subscription due this pay-day. I have spent time and money in the Populist party movement—attended all the national conventions at Cincinnati, St. Louis, Omaha, and our own state convention, believing the people would do something for themselves—but have once more got back to first principles, and that is, so long as they are not mentally free there is little hope of seeing them anything but physical slaves."

Thus is the great lesson again enforced—truth makes man free, but freedom comes not to mental serfs. Reforms make no substantial progress among devotees of superstition. They cannot, or dare not, think for themselves. There is an orthodoxy in government as well as in religion, and it is the result of religion. To be politically free to think, even on so non-religious a subject as the currency question, men must be free from religion. The church is against all thinking. Freethought is for all thought, even wrong thought. There are thousands of Freethinkers in the Populist party, including the Man with the Badge-Pin, but the party as a party is a little more pious than either of the old ones, because it is not as yet politically respectable. But it would accomplish more if it had fewer pietists in the ranks. Mental freedom must come before industrial or economic reform will be more than a temporary hope and illusion, visionaries to the contrary notwithstanding.

Death of E. H. Heywood.

As we go to press a telegram from Josephine S. Tilton, dated Boston, announces the death of Ezra H. Heywood, of Princeton, Mass. No details are given except that the funeral is arranged for Thursday afternoon at Boston. It is only a few days ago that Mr. Heywood was in this office, in apparent good health, cheerful to jocoseness. At his labor convention, however, he caught cold and was prevented from attending one or two sessions. His death is evidently due to the results of this seemingly trifling illness preying upon a frame and constitution weakened by incarceration in a Massachusetts jail at the instigation of Anthony Comstock, compassed by a trick of a subservient pietist postmaster. It is almost murder.

E. H. Heywood was born Sept. 29, 1829. Reared in the strictest school of Calvinistic theology, to emerge into the realms of mental light and freedom he had to pass through earnest and protracted mental struggles. His Christian faith was early shaken by the perusal of Garrison's Liberator and Theodore Parker's inimitable "Discourses on Religion." He soon became disgusted with the Christian clergy as mediums of thought, and the imperfect borrowed system which they promulgated. He also became indignant with the equivocal position which the clergy occupied toward such reforms as anti-slavery and temperance, and the tendency which they exhibit to uphold the established institutions and to oppose reforms and innovations. When he found the exponents of Christianity opposed to progress—"a suspense of faith"—he realized the truth of the poet's maxim, "Near the church is far from God," and he felt forced to separate himself from the church "to save his soul," though he had prepared himself for the ministry. The right of the mind to dispense with a mediator, with second-hand truths, and to enjoy original relations with the source of thought and being, was the mainspring of his principles and purposes as a reformer. Hence in seeking the abolition of war, of the speculative property system, of compulsory government, and of the current system of marriage, he says he "appealed from God's wife—Mrs. Grundy—and from the conventional opinions and customs called 'laws' to the laws of nature," which he deems to be good enough for him until better ones can be found or made. Mr. Heywood graduated at Brown University in 1856, and studied as a resident graduate two years longer.

In 1865-6 he called the first meeting and wrote the first draft of declaration of sentiments and constitution of the Universal Peace Society, which still flourishes and has its headquarters in Philadelphia. In 1867 he organized in Worcester, Mass., the first Labor Reform League, which ultimately developed into New England American Labor Leagues. In May, 1872, Mr. Heywood issued at Worcester the first number of his monthly paper, the Word, which advocated his leading measures on labor reform, the abolition of interest, dividends, profits, rents, the tyranny of capital, the coercion of governments, the principle of oppression, etc. It will be seen that Mr. Heywood was very radical, and much in advance of the ideas which the conservative class hold, but he was honest, earnest, and sincere. He cared not whether a measure is popular or unpopular; if he deemed it right he advocated it all the same. He was a genial, amiable gentleman, who was filled with the "milk of human kindness," and whose great object was to ameliorate the ills and sufferings which bear down upon his fellow-men, and to remove, so far as was in his power, the impediments to their prosperity and happiness. It will be a long time before his views are generally adopted by the oppressing aristocratic classes, and it will also be a long time before a more earnest, disinterested, and self-sacrificing worker is found in the field of reform.

Mr. Heywood was tall and slender of frame, of sharp and rather delicate features, of a nervous and flexible temperament, animated in style, had a

(Continued on page 328.)

Communications.

International Congress of Freethinkers.

The call has now been issued for this vast undertaking, the great gathering of Freethinkers, under the auspices of the Federation, and the work of arranging the same is now fairly under progress. We trust that each and every Freethinker in our land, that every member of the Federation, and those connected with Freethought societies, will put their shoulders to the wheel and make it a gigantic success. We are preparing for an imposing array of talented speakers from various parts of Europe and the United States. We want this to be a representative meeting, not of America alone, but of Universal Freethought. If every Freethinker will but make some small sacrifice in order to help us, our work will be made all the easier and success more certain. It is not a privilege we wish to afford you, but a duty we ask you to perform. The progress of the world is due to freedom of thought, and every individual owes to society the performance of one duty, and that is the duty to think, and in this Congress of the World's Freethinkers let us make it our duty to emphasize the right of Freethought the world over. By this movement, in which such splendid work has been done by its leaders in the past, the leaders of the present day are enabled to successfully maintain their rights and privileges. Let us, then, make the path that our children shall tread more easy and more cheerful than the path we ourselves are treading to-day. Each day some poor soul is confronted with obstacles in his attempts to secure liberty of thought, but at last, by determination and perseverance, these obstacles are overcome, and a new light suddenly dawns upon the once darkened intellect. We must endeavor, then, at this Congress to give forth a new light, a light resplendent in its glory, issuing from the flaming torch of reason, ever shedding its effulgent rays, striving to pierce the inner darkness of some bewildered brain, giving hope where there was despair, happiness where once misery could be found, and stirring the heart with a new song of triumph for victories achieved.

In the stream of life many a strong swimmer is disabled; the waves of uncertainty crowd upon him, and, driven blindly along by the current, too weak to swim against it, one becomes lost for the want of a timely help. We must try, then, to encourage those in the midst of the stream, and teach to those who are just entering upon the way how to use the new art advantageously and well.

We want help—financial help, and help in the work of arrangements. We would be glad to receive any suggestions from our friends that might tend to assure us success. There are plenty of good workers in our cause, and if there ever was a time in the history of our cause when such help was needed it is now. There are others, too—many, I know from my experience in the lecture field—who will be glad to help financially, although they themselves cannot attend the meeting in person. To these, many of whom are able, I make an urgent plea for the means by which we may be enabled to carry this work to a successful issue.

In order to work upon this Congress the president and myself will be compelled to give up the lecture field until the Congress is over. Our presence is required here in the World's Fair city, and nothing shall remain undone that will tend to make this Congress a success and an impetus to our cause throughout all the world. As a means to raise the necessary funds for this Congress we propose to give to every Freethinker who shall subscribe the sum of $1 a silver button with the initial letters of the Federation thereon; to everyone subscribing the sum of $5 will be given a special souvenir copy of the proceedings of the Congress, containing a full report thereof, with list of members and portraits of the leading Freethinkers of the world; and everyone subscribing the sum of $25 shall be given a vice-presidency of the Congress and a certificate of the same.

The time for active work is now upon us. Delay at the present time will be fatal to our cause. We must push this meeting, and we will brook no failure. Our cause is a glorious one indeed, well deserving the support of every Liberal-minded man and woman in the world. To make this gathering a grand and imposing one none should stand aloof, but send in their subscriptions cheerfully and gladly. Your support was never solicited for a more worthy object, and to our many friends we once more make an urgent appeal for help. The president and myself are giving to it our time, our labor, and our means. We give it ungrudgingly and unflinchingly, and shall feel amply repaid for our labors if we can only meet with deserved success.

All donations and communications are to be addressed to me at 345 W. Randolph street, Chicago, Ill.
JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.

The Church's Last Insult.

Once more the tooth and claw of monstrous medieval superstition reveal themselves in the roar of religious bigotry against the freedom of the individual and the enlightenment of science.

The whole Christian church apparently is at war with the Columbian World's Fair. This greatest of all world's expositions; this characteristically American and Western embodiment of pluck, enterprise, skill, and genius; this finest school of universal education ever instituted in behalf of the welfare of any age, is made the target of bitter opposition and of a proposed Christian boycott, because there is danger that its vast audiences, if admitted to the grounds on Sundays, would empty the local churches for a period of some six months! Did ever churchly audacity reach higher? Did ever the danger of ignorance in authority and the asinine recalcitrance of religious bigotry reveal more monstrous proportions?

A vast church organization, representing, as it claims, one million boycotters, cries out, "Close the World's Fair gates on Sundays, or we'll ruin your treasury; shut the gates on Sundays, or we'll disgrace you before all the world by impoverishing your coffers and clogging all the wheels of your vast machinery; give us a chance to keep our Sunday audiences, or we'll prove to you this is a Christian land by showing that, if you open your gates, we'll shut off your gate-fees to such an extent as to compel you to close the Fair altogether."

Happily, this is a vain boast and an insane threat. But it is an instructive exhibit of the instinctive spirit of revenge which still inheres in all religious bodies. It illustrates the nature and character of the God whom the churches uphold and proclaim. It is a fair illustration of the vengeful spirit which engendered in the minds of ecclesiastical leaders the abominable doctrines of hell and everlasting punishment, which are simply boycotts against the freedom of thought and the research of science.

Shame upon these little churchly pismires who, millions in number, squirm and crawl and bite and sting, because they cannot rule the age and place their tiaras of ignorance on their brainless bullet-heads!

If anything ought to stir up all Freethinkers and Radicals of every grade and phase to organize, unite, and fight in one body against the still triumphant bigotry of priests, evangelists, religious fools, and insane fanatics, it is such an exhibition of contemptible yet provoking asininity as may be seen in this threatened boycott of a million fools who claim to be the followers of Jesus Christ.

Let there not be a Freethinker in the land so poor but that he will spend his little mite to attend the World's Fair if for nothing else than to neutralize the effect of this nonsensical Christian boycott.

If necessary let a great society be formed among all Radicals for the raising of funds to enable the countless poor among the toiling millions of the land to spend a day or two, or a week or two, at the World's Fair.

I myself would gladly give $100 toward such a movement if it could be properly and successfully conducted.

If the church demands that the gates be closed on Sunday, then I solemnly propose that a great movement be started among the radical laborers and thinkers of this country to raise funds enough whereby the World's Fair managers may be guaranteed vast Sunday audiences to be transported from all over the country to the great Western metropolis.

What say you, friends of freedom and independence? Shall we begin such a movement and prove to the bigots of the church that they do not own the consciences of the sons of liberty and are not the masters of the poor of this nation?

Fie upon their dastard insult!
Sons of freedom, speak, and let the thunder of your defiant denunciations be heard abroad through all the world!

HENRY FRANK.

Religion, God, and Immortality.

BROTHER PUTNAM: Your logic on the subject of religion I consider sound; and I take no exception to your postulate that the fact of a life after death does not prove immortality.

Before the advent of Spiritualism, I read in one of Swedenborg's works a statement that he had heard in the spirit world a grave argument by a departed Sadducee that man was not immortal.

The late Austin Kent, of Potsdam, N. Y., like yourself an evolved clergyman, published a pamphlet entitled, "God or No God: An Infinite God an Impossibility." Mr. Kent was a Spiritualist. He claimed to have positive personal proof that death was not the end of human life; and yet he logically held that if man was created the time must come when he would be uncreated.

And now the speaker for the First Spiritual Society of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Colby Luther, professing to speak by inspiration, and in an unconscious state, declares that she has no religion and no use for a God. She asserts positively the existence of the spirit after the death of the body, but does not say that life in the second sphere continues throughout eternity. That is to say, as I understand her, there may be a series of deaths whereby the spirit rises to higher spheres.

Mrs. Luther, in my judgment, is not excelled by any lecturer I ever heard on the Spiritual platform. During the late war she was a stump speaker, following up Voorhees, Vallandigham, and Hendricks. She would address vast crowds two hours at a time, six days in a week. And yet she claims that even in those political speeches she was entranced and unconscious.

When Mrs. Luther preaches for the Spiritualists there is no prayer or benediction. W. H. BURR.

Washington, D. C., May 15, 1893.

Butler's Soul-not-the-Body Argument.

A copy of Butler's "Analogy" was recently handed to me by a preacher with the information that the arguments contained therein were so conclusive that no Infidel had ever attempted to refute them. So powerful indeed, I was informed, was the reasoning that skeptics had only to read the book with due care and reflection to become converted to the bishop's views of matters theological and become good supporters of the bishop's church, that is, the Church of England—and about the time of Bishop Butler his brethren of the miter were a sorry set of reprobates: they and the clergy of the upper ranks were living in pomp, ease, luxury, and debauchery, while the masses of the people—the producers of the wealth—were living in ignorance, poverty, squalor, and brutality worse than the savages to whom they were sending missionaries; for experience teaches that when the church is in power the people are in ignorance, consequently degraded.

I had not read many pages of the book when I became conscious of the fact that my mind was either too obtuse or that I was not sufficiently prepared and sanctified to fall in with the method of the author's reasoning and alluring style of logic; so I soon abandoned the idea of becoming one of Bishop Butler's converts, for however deficient I may be in the art of abstruse reasoning, my faculty of common sense has been fairly trained, and any mode of argument that does not agree with that faculty I reject.

Let me give a sample of the style of reasoning from the "Analogy" that I can hardly accept. As a proof, or rather I should say one of the proofs, of the immortality of the soul, we are told that our limbs may be lopped off one after another and yet the soul will remain untouched. We are not told how long it might take for the experiment, nor does he refer to the chances of the soul escaping during the operation, when the fluid which Moses says is "the life" might pass away and the soul, or life, would be apt to take flight. Theologians try to make us believe that there is a distinction between the life principle and the immortal soul. The logic which they shuffle up is certainly rather confusing.

Now, it strikes me that an easier mode than lopping off limbs by way of demonstration of the security of the soul would be to saw off a slice of the upper part of the cranium; or, better still, just let the point of a needle penetrate the spinal cord at the base of the skull. The life or soul would be apt to make its quietus "without standing on the order of its going." Another argument introduced is, that while every particle of the body changes periodically the soul or life remains the same unchanged element.

Now, this fallacy, which was accepted in Butler's time and many years after, has since been exploded. What a rich mine of analogy Butler might have worked out of Darwin's great immortal truth of evolution, which in the future, nor far distant, will be taught in our public schools. So much for the vaunted and overrated "Analogy" which is said to have defied Infidels for one hundred and fifty years. If my judgment is correct, science and knowledge have made great strides since Butler's time.

It is soon made evident to the reader that if he is to accept the bishop's views he must also accept a number of propositions as a basis upon which to build his ingenious conclusions. Without certain concessions being made the bishop acknowledges that he cannot move on the line of his argument. The reader must confess his belief in a personal God, an overruling providence, who watches even a sparrow falling to the ground. While flood, famins, earthquakes, cyclones, shipwrecks, the murdering of innocent infants in baby farms and foundling hospitals, go on hourly, and millions of poor, helpless creatures are suffering cold and hunger, while the lines of the priests, who toil not, neither do they spin, are cast in pleasant places. But do they not pray for us? Yes, but all the calamities go on just the same as if they had never uttered their dull, senseless platitudes.

The bishop's methods remind me of a little trick played among youngsters when I was a boy. One urchin would, with a solemn look, approach another and inform him that he could tell him what he was thinking about. This assertion would be disputed, when the young professor of mind-reading would ask the doubter to think of some figure. "Hav you thought of it?" the professor would ask. "All right. Now add four, and two, and six more. Subtract three and take away the first figure you thought of. Hav you done it? All right. Now there are nine remaining." At once the little doubter is made a convert to mind-reading, and he looks upon the young professor as an oracle having some supernatural power. But yet such tricks are about on a par with some of the priestly arguments. We had an evangelistic tramp here lately preaching about hell. He wanted to know if anyone doubted the existence of such a place because they had no proof. "Hav you ever been at Constantinople?" he exclaimed, triumphantly. "How do you know that there is such a place?" And that argument settled the doubters on the subject of hell in this latter part of the nineteenth century.

And, sad to state, this boasted land of liberty is almost completely in the grasp of the church octopus. Witness the cunning movements of that subtle Jesuit, Satolli, and his machinating satellites of the church of Rome, who are now cunningly forging the fetters to bind the limbs of Columbia while she is dozing sweetly in conscious security, forgetting that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." There is only one hope that may be indulged in for the safety and redemption of this glorious republic. Alas! that hope is obscured by dark clouds. The selfish plotting of the priests of all churches renders the outlook by no means encouraging; but at all events let us hope that the time may come when an equal taxation will be levied on every church from Maine to California, and that the money so collected will be devoted to the erecting and full equipping of vastly superior and vastly more numerous schoolhouses, where the teaching shall be broad, liberal, and efficient; where every school shall represent the best instructive talent of the nation, and the temples of learning only shall be looked upon as sacred, unsoiled by the poisonous touch of the Jesuit or the cramping fangs of the bigoted fanatic. When the cry of the people shall be, "More schoolhouses and less churches!" the day of human redemption will be dawning.

OWEN JONES.

Corry, Pa.

DURING several days recently the sidewalk before 185 Division avenue, Williamsburgh, New York, was occupied by a pile of household goods. A poorly dressed, gray-haired woman protected them, and dusted them every day. She was a Mrs. Christian Frank, and had been evicted for non-payment of rent. She had supported herself and paid her rent promptly for years until recently. To a reporter she said, with a heavy sigh: "This is the result of too much Christianity. Had I preached less and attended to my household duties my home would not now be on the sidewalk. But God is good and I know he will soon help me. If I hadn't attended to Christianity so much I might have been a rich woman to-day. But, of course, I was destined to be thus treated. And then this country is the home of the poor and the land of the brave. There are probably other women just as unfortunate as I am. But I rejoice in the fact that I served God, and even that Christianity made me what I am to-day." What a commentary on the injunction of Christ to depend on prayer and faith in him, and take no thought of the morrow! When has a person or a nation trusted to that crack-brained Hebrew without similar consequences of disappointment and ruin?

Talmage and the Czar.

It grieves me to think how the czar's been maligned,
And painted a demon as black as coal tar;
He is pious and just, sympathetic and kind,
And I boldly stand up in defense of the czar.

I solemnly promised my friend that his name
I would glorify loftily, high above par—
Throughout Yankeedom wide I would blazon the fame
Of Talmage the great and the kind, gentle czar.

If ladies in Russia are stripped, flogged, and sent To the quicksilver mines in Siberia far—
Suffer torture that demons alone could invent;
Such crimes are unknown to my dear friend the czar.

Though Jews may be plundered, murdered, exiled;
Though Russians their victims from justice debar,
Noble, magnanimous, gracious, and mild
Is the friend of all downtrodden people, the czar.

It makes little matter wherever I go,
On steamboat, or rolling along in a car,
Folks know who I am, so I modestly blow
Of my pleasant familiar chats with the czar.

I tell them of Petersburg city so fine—
Its palace resplendent, the richest by far,
Like the heaven that was pictured by John the Divine
And its monarch celestial my dear friend the czar.

And when I go off on a lecturing trip,
I'll humbug the folk as a mountebank star;
I'll bellow and kick, grin, shuffle and skip,
And tell some good jokes of the good-natured czar.

Should ever unpleasantness happen between us—
Uncle Sam and the czar—that might lead to a war,
I'd skip off to Washington, settle the fuss,
And fix things all right for my dear friend the czar.

I gammoned the folks with the Holy Land tour—
The thought of it now sets my nerves all ajar—
The farce played at Jordan they cannot endure,
But they know I'm sincere in my love for the czar.

I told the dear czar how his people so loved him,
With pious devotion that nothing could mar;
The ghost of his father appeared and a grave,
Sad smile overshadowed the face of the czar.

I'll write to the czar to the World's Fair to come,
As a card of attraction he'd beat all, by Gar!
For the debt of my church we might raise a big sum,
By the aid of my friend, Alexander the czar.

I'll soon be too old to spin yarns any more—
So I'm going to buy me a first-rate guitar,
I'll twang it with glee and forever adore
My idol, the noble, immaculate czar.

OWEN JONES.

Rational Labor Reform.

At Science Hall, 141 Eighth street, New York, beginning at 10:30 A.M. on Sunday, May 7th, and continuing until 10:30 P.M. on Monday, May 8th, with three sessions each day, was held the twenty-second annual convention of the American Labor Reform League. In more ways than one it was an important meeting. For twenty-two years, in spite of adversity and poverty, in spite of vituperation and calumny from foes of every description and no description, and in spite of Comstock spies and prison walls, this movement, born of oppression, has lived and breathed and propagated.

The first session opened with President Henry Beeny, of New Jersey, in the chair; E. H. Heywood, secretary. A large list of speakers had been announced, but more were developed as the meetings progressed. Among the speakers at the day meetings were Col. Henry Beeny, who made the opening speech upon taking the chair; Prof. A. L. Rawson, of New Jersey; Wm. Hanson, Henry Nichols, Dr. T. R. Kinget, Dr. C. S. Weeks, James Bohan, Henry J. Woodhouse, Harding Weston, C. L. Swartz, and Mr. Wright, of New York; Henry A. Beckmeyer, of New Jersey, and Dr. C. H. Sims, of Boston. By these almost every shade of reform was represented, from ultra state Socialism to extreme Anarchism; from Greenbackism to mutual banking; from Single Taxism to free land. Vaunting a free platform, no one was denied a hearing; but the tendency of the meetings, as will appear from the following resolutions, which were under discussion and generally commended, was toward liberty rather than restriction; toward individuality rather than collectivity; toward voluntary cooperation rather than compulsory political institutions:

Resolved, That since a chance to work out personal destiny and mind our own business is Natural Right and perennial necessity in human affairs, access to land, free trade, and mutual money are indispensable to prosperous existence; that poverty, vice, and crime come of false claims to obedience and service, which class greed and protective spoliation engender.

Resolved, That tenure of land for personal use only, property in the fruits of labor done, cost of improvements, is the equitable basis of price and exchange; and, since property is a perishable commodity, unable to increase or even continue to exist without aid of its parent Labor, usury, whether in the form of rent, interest, dividends, or profits, is robbery.

Resolved, That, as labor paid once expects no more for the same work, so debts paid once in the form of interest, buildings paid for once in the form of rent, stocks returned once in the form of dividends, leave no just claim to further increase; hence, income without work, profits from others' labor for which no equivalent return is made in personal service, are predatory theft, the chronic, world-wide steal, whereby vested interests perpetually plunder useful people and enrich privileged vampires.

Resolved, That charge for the use of land, whether by a single tax steal, or in unmitigated robbery, called rent, is the bottom fraud of capital on labor, which must be abolished; that it is the Natural Right and imperative necessity of persons to take and use land; and pretensiv owners, or nationalized protectivs, who exact tribute for adhesion to Mother Earth, like their predecessors, the old slave oligarchy, are traditional robbers, who must give way to living Service.

Resolved, That, since organized violence, called government power, resting on jails and taxes, state coercion and robbery, never has and never can exist on its own merits, pretense, that the tax swindle liberates land; that nationalized tyranny assures freedom of persons; that prohibition promotes temperance, or that war of organized labor on the poor, called scabs, helps working people, is ludicrous absurdity; that law aids progress only by getting out of its way, and our watchword now, as always hitherto, is REPEAL of all restrictions on Enterprise.

Resolved, That exposure of the protectiv tariff fraud is a step toward abolition of property in land which begets rent; of bank monopoly which makes usury possible; of obscenity laws which impose a vicious and ignoble censorship of the press, and of the many other class-devices whereby conspiring ignorance now robs people of their freedom and property; that, if Republicans expect to survive their own party's funeral, they must step ahead of Democrats in liberation, and guarantee all citizens freedom of conscience, speech, press, and mails, asserting in labor and business the opportunity and reciprocity which free institutions should assert and maintain.

Resolved, That neither silverites nor gold bugs have any clear idea of honest money, which can never be until the legal-tender bludgeon is taken from behind both paper and specie, not state "wildcatism," but the clearing-house Democratized; not imposed currency, but dollars, payable in values mutually agreed upon and taken on their own merits, the people, in voluntary associations, staking their own labor and property as basis of banking. This only can liberate the West and South from the usury lords of New York and Boston.

But the most exciting meetings were the evening sessions, as must of necessity have been the case, since George Francis Train was the principal speaker at both of them. Citizen Train is at one moment an ardent Greenbacker and at the next a rabid revolutionist; so if you try to put your finger on him, you find he is not there. However, his gymnastics and blackboard exercises served to lay bare the vicious monetary system of the present and the gigantic robberies of the past, as well as to entertain his listeners.

Before adjournment, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Henry Beeny, of New Jersey, president; Prof. A. L. Rawson, of New Jersey; John Orvis, of Massachusetts, and R. W. Hume and Mrs. E. A. Spencer, of New York, vice-presidents; E. H. Heywood, of Massachusetts; John A. Lant, of New York, and L. K. Jasslin, of Rhode Island, secretaries. There was also elected an executive committee composed of E. H. Heywood, Josephine S. Tilton, of Massachusetts; Prof. A. L. Rawson, and Henry Beeny.

Mr. Heywood, having too industriously and persistently advertised the convention by circulating bills in the inclement weather, was suffering from a severe attack of chills and fever, and hence was unable to attend the last session.

The New York press, among the most prominently pueril of which was the Sun, paid their respects to the gathering in the usual manner. But the American Labor Reform League, fortunately, does not depend upon monopoly's puppets for its support.

Men of God Worse than Other Men.

From the Concordia Blade.

The object of the book, "Crimes of Preachers," is to prove that the "men of God" are very like other men, if not worse, and that while their preaching may "save others' souls," it does not always save their own. In fact this authentic work proves the preacher class more immoral than any other professional class of people on earth, by showing a greater per cent of them become criminals.

The Methodists, the author says, head the list in the first edition, and they still hold to that preeminence, having 56 of the 209 guilty ones. The Presbyterians behaved themselves remarkably well—for them—last year, as there is only 9 of the 209. The Campbellites have 2; U. B., 2; Hebrew, 2; Adventists, 9; Universalists, 1. The name, place of residence, and the crime charged, are given. We presume that many of the "brethren" will want to see this book, and they can get it by sending 25 cents to THE TRUTH SEEKER office, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

They Want to Pay Taxes.

The following resolutions, recently adopted by the general conference of Seventh Day Adventists and re-adopted by the Litchfield church of that denomination, speak for themselves:

"WHEREAS, in view of the separation which we believe should exist between the church and state it is inconsistent for the church to receive from the state pecuniary gifts, favors, or exemptions; therefore,

"Resolved, That we repudiate the doctrine that church or other ecclesiastical property should be exempt from taxation; and further,

"Resolved, That we decidedly protest against such exemption, and favor the repeal of such legislation as grants such exemption."—Litchfield Independent, Litchfield, Minn.

(Continued from page 325.)

pleasant voice and manner, was fluent in speech and ready in debate.

He wrote and published several pamphlets, advocating with ability the views which he entertained. Over one hundred and fifty thousand of these have been sold. The titles of some of them are: "The Labor Party," "Hard Cash," "Uncivil Liberty," "Yours or Mine," "The Good or Evil," "War Methods of Peace," "Cupid's Yokes," etc.

It was Mr. Heywood's pamphlet "Cupid's Yokes" that sent D. M. Bennett to prison for thirteen months, and Mr. Heywood's death strikingly resembles the lamented close of Mr. Bennett's career. Like Mr. Heywood, Mr. Bennett contracted a cold which he deemed slight, but which gradually overcame a constitution weakened by imprisonment in a prison, where good air and adequate exercise are unknown. The seeds of fatal diseases were sown in both cases. Mr. Heywood survived two previous terms, for substantially the same offense, but the last was the turning-point toward death. Thoughts of these outrages move to indignation deep, and enmity relentless. Soapboiler Colgate's society ought to be swept off the face of the earth. It has murdered several men, the worst of whom was infinitely better than the supporters of this bigoted society.

To Mrs. Heywood and the Misses Tilton, to all his family, we extend heartfelt sympathy for what to them will be a most severe loss.

It will be noticed that Mr. Heston's picture on the title-page of this issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER might appropriately be placed in Mr. Putnam's new book, "Religion a Curse." Only Mr. Putnam puts the American Congress in place of Religion, which is endeavoring to stab Liberty to the heart. However, the two are the same, for it was religion which caused Congress to stab liberty by legislation, depriving the people of their freedom on Sunday. Guizot very directly upholds Mr. Putnam in his contention that religion is a curse; that it is a disease our medical men will admit, and the lunatic asylums show, and that it is a lie all know who have studied its history and examined its foundations. Mr. Putnam's characterization may be harsh, but it is unquestionably true.

We desire to call the attention of readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the benefits of subscribing to the Truth Seeker Monthly Library. The yearly subscription is only $3, and subscribers to the Library receive a paper-bound copy of each book issued in it; or, if they desire the books in cloth binding, subscribers to the Library can remit the difference in price between paper and cloth binding, and get the books in the latter shape. So far this year subscribers to the Library have received "Paine Vindicated," by Colonel Ingersoll, price 15 cents; the "Creation of God," by Dr. Hartmann, price 50 cents; the "Resurrection of Jesus," by Don Allen, price 40 cents; "Crimes of Preachers," price 25 cents; the "Handbook of Freethought," by W. S. Bell, price 50 cents—one dollar and eighty cents' worth in four months. We have also added to the Library "Religion a Curse," by S. P. Putnam, price 25 cents; "Design Argument Fallacies," price 15 cents, which subscribers will receive in May, making two dollars and twenty cents' worth in five months, or at the rate of $5.40 worth per year; and all for $3 paid in advance. We shall add J. E. Remsburg's "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" and other books now in preparation. The present program will give subscribers surely $5 and probably $6 worth of books for the price of a yearly subscription to the Library. This will be from $2 to $3 in excess of what we promised to do.

J. E. REMSBURG delivered thirty-three lectures in thirty-three days in Kansas. He is now lecturing in Missouri, and will speak in Nebraska and Iowa next.

Bound Volumes of The Truth Seeker.

We have a few bound volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER for the year just closed (1892) which will be sent on receipt of $4. We also have a few of previous years which can be sold for $3. Readers desirous of keeping files as received weekly can obtain the File Binder for $1.

World's Fair Notes.

From the Agricultural Building, from the Manufactures Building, and from Music Hall, in addition to the thousand electric lights and the glaring gas torches around the dome, flame the "search-lights" of a million-candle power. The streams of light flash in changing colors. First green, then blue, then purple, and yellow, and scarlet. The golden figure of Diana shines against the black sky, undraped and glorious in the rushing beams. The fountain, the statue of the Republic, the peristyle with its columns and glowing figures, glitter anew in the sweeping colors. The band pours forth resounding strains, the people shout, and the bosom of night makes a more sparkling display than the day itself. The illuminations hereafter will be on a much more splendid scale. When the full power of the electric machinery is on a hundred thousand jets will flash over the grounds and through the buildings of the Fair.

MEANS OF LOCOMOTION.

I suppose the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER, especially those who intend to visit the Fair, would like to know something about the means of locomotion. These are many. At least a million people can be easily carried to and fro in one day. From the North side and the West side there are two or three cable lines and horse cars to the central part of the city, where uninterrupted transit is obtained to the Fair grounds. One can take from here the State street or Wabash avenue cable cars direct—fare, five cents; or the elevated railway at Congress street, near Van Buren, which lands one in the Fair grounds near Transportation building—fare, five cents; or the Illinois Central railroad from the depot foot of Lake street, suburban trains. The so-called "cattle trains" leave from the foot of Van Buren street. These "cattle trains" run directly to the Fair, and are built expressly for the occasion. They are open cars, with uncushioned seats. This is why they are called "cattle trains." They are very comfortable and expeditious—fare, round trip, twenty cents. Don't take the suburban train at Lake street. It will cost forty-four cents round trip, and it takes longer to go, the train stopping at stations, a dozen I should think, between Lake street and Fair grounds. I got sold on this myself, paying thirty-four cents more than on the elevated and cable, with much less comfort. The "cattle trains" are preferable to the suburban trains. Transportation by the steamers is twenty-five cents round trip. This is pleasurable when there are no crowds, and one has a fine view of the Fair buildings along the shores of the lake.

HOTELS, EATING-HOUSES, ETC.

There are about five hundred hotels in Chicago, besides innumerable boarding-houses and lodging places, ready to take in the stranger. Good rooms can be obtained for $1 per day, lodgings from fifteen cents to $1. I won't recommend the fifteen and twenty-five cent lodging. There is too much live-stock about them. One dollar per day is about right for the South side, and about $4 per week on West side and North side. It takes five cents extra and twenty minutes longer to go from North side and West side than from South side. Hence the difference in prices. Board can be obtained for about $7 per week, comfortable apartments; but the chicken and the beefsteak are not to be eaten. They are simply to be looked at. On the whole it is best to secure a good room and take meals out. This is not quite so cheap as boarding, but you have a better chance of getting what you want. If one desires to be within a stone's throw of the Fair grounds, and avoid all the inconveniences and cost of travel, he can find neat accommodation at Santa Maria. Mr. Goodwin's hotel, for $1 per day; man and wife $2 per day. This hotel is advertised in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Eating-houses are plenty all over the city, and rates not more than usual. There are thirty-five places for dining on the Fair grounds. Anything from a ham sandwich, at ten cents, to a porterhouse steak for $2, can be obtained. In the Great White Horse Inn, patterned after the hostelry made famous by Dickens, the cooking will be English. In the Columbian Casino are parlors, reception rooms, lavatories, and smoking-rooms. Old-fashioned New England clam-bake dinners will be served in one of the buildings. When all arrangements are completed, 59,400 people can dine at one time on the Fair grounds. Counting six changes to each sitting, which is the average, it will be seen that 356,400 meals can be served each day. Besides this many people coming from their own homes bring their lunches with them, which is not a bad idea. On the Midway Plaisance one may be served with familiar viands, or taste the food of strange lands and be waited on by the natives. If he wants "high living" he can find a lunch-room fifteen hundred feet above the earth in the captive balloon, but he will have to pay $2 for his ride.

COST, ETC.

What is the cost of visiting the Fair and taking in all the sights? In addition to the fifty cents admission it will cost $11, at the least, to see all the side-shows. If the visitor wishes to use the different means of conveyance within the grounds—steam and electric launches, camel and donkey rides, sedan and rolling chairs, rides in all the elevators, and the captive balloon and Ferris wheel—it will cost $7 more, at the least. This will make it $18.50 for a single person to see all the sights and shows of this great Fair. These side-shows are perfectly legitimate. They add nothing to the Fair itself, and the existence of these, mainly upon the Midway Plaisance, is nothing of which the visitor can complain. They wouldn't have been added to the Fair on any other condition than as pay-shows. The only side-shows in Jackson park proper are the Eskimo Village and Ruins of the Cliff Dwellers. Remember, that for fifty cents one has the privilege of seeing a hundred times more than he possibly can see in one day. He can roam over 670 acres of ground, crowded with the wonders of the age. I think it well to give a list of the buildings, their dimensions and area, which one can see and walk through for fifty cents; a list valuable for reference, for each of these buildings should be visited:

	Dimensions, feet.	Area, acres.
Administration.....	262x262	1.6
Machinery hall.....	492x846	9.6
Machinery annex.....	490x550	6.2
Machinery power-house.....	490x461
Machinery pumping works.....	77 x 84	2.1
Machine shops.....	106x250
Agriculture.....	500x800	9.2
Agriculture annex.....	300x550	3.8
Agriculture assembly hall.....	125x450	1.3
Forestry.....	208x528	2.5
Dairy.....	100x290	.5
Freight-house.....		1.0
Stock ring.....	280x440	2.8
Manufactures and liberal arts.....	787x1,687	30.5
Mines.....	350x700	5.6
Electricity.....	345x690	5.5
Transportation.....	256x960	5.6
Transportation annex.....	425x900	8.8
Woman's.....	199x388	1.8
Art galleries.....	320x500	3.7
Art gallery annexes (2).....	120x200	1.1
Fisheries.....	165x365	1.4
Fisheries annexes (2).....	135 diam.	.8
Horticulture.....	250x998	5.7
Horticultural greenhouses (8).....	24x100	.5
Sawmill.....	125x300	.8
Casino.....	120x250	.7
Music hall.....	120x250	.7

Total.....	153.7
United States government.....	3.8
United States government imitation battleship.....	.3
Illinois state.....	1.7
Illinois state wings (2).....	.3

Total..... 159.3

There is also a gallery area of 45.9 acres, making the total 199.7 acres to be traveled over under roof to see the exhibits. In the Art Palace is 145,852 square feet of wall to be looked at, covered with the most beautiful pictures in the world. One can simply ignore the side-shows and every moment be crowded with marvels. But if he has money, he'd better spend it, as Ingersoll says, like a prince. He will never have a better chance to get so much for his coin; so large an insight into universal human life. To sum up, I will give the total cost of a ten days' visit to the Fair, which may be of service to those of my readers who have limited purses and must calculate expenses:

Hotel, ten days.....	$10 00
Meals, ".....	10 00
Car fare, ".....	2 00
Admission, ".....	5 00
Sundries, ".....	3 00

Total.....$30 00

If one visits all the side-shows, add to this $18, making $48 for one person to see the "whole elephant"—head, tail, and all—from the time he lands in Chicago until he steps on the train for home. On this basis one can reckon up the cost for a month or more.

HORTICULTURAL HALL.

Entering the Fair grounds from Midway Plaisance we begin our grand tour from Horticultural Building, a palace of flowers, plants, ferns, grottoes, and fountains. The area covered by this building is over five acres. The cost of the exhibit is $325,000. The central pavilion is roofed by a crystal dome 187 feet in diameter and 113 feet high. Beneath this dome towers a mound of luxuriant foliage 100 feet in height. Suspended from the ceiling are twelve hanging baskets, each of which weighs a ton. These surpass in magnificence the hanging gardens of Babylon. From this gorgeous central pavilion extend two glass-roofed archways 100 feet in length to the beautiful end pavilions wherein are the fruit and wine exhibits. All along is a continuous display of the rarest products of the earth—tulips and pansies, orchids from Mexico and Central America still clinging to the original branches and bark, hyacinths, roses, carnations, rhododendrons, azalias, flowering annuals and perennials, sweet clematis, fleur-de-lis, geraniums, cacti, single and double begonias, aquatic plants, and ornamental grasses, etc. It is impossible to name the varieties. It is like the fairyland of Titania. The stately century plant is here in wondrous bloom. From the miniature mountain, from alongside a vine-embowered cabin, a stream dashes down, lost apparently in the crystal cave. Beneath, a subterranean mansion of many chambers, brilliantly illuminated, displays Japan's little garden—on a minute scale the mikado's vast gardens, fifty miles in extent. There are dwarf trees two centuries old. The Mexican cacti bed contains more than five hundred varieties. The number of ferns is simply astonishing. There is the golden fern, Peru; the crested-sword fern, a native of South America; golden maiden-hair fern; the stag-horn ferns from Australia; the Pteris Wallichiana from Japan, the largest fern in the collection—eight feet across—and pyramids of fern asparagus. We behold Australian palms from four hundred to six hundred years old, eighty-four varieties of pineapple plants, a hundred coconut palms, nine feet high, growing out of the nuts—quite a novelty.

Oregon, California, Utah, Florida, and Nova Scotia have especially fine exhibits in the pomological section. The orange pyramid from Los Angeles county is fifty feet high. There is a walnut tower twenty-six feet tall. There is a pavilion made of preserved fruits. A German seedsman gives a curious exhibition. Instead of labeling the seed he has them displayed in glass vases, from the mouth of which spreads an artificial flower such as the seed itself will produce.

The exhibit of the wine industry of the world is attractive. There is a twenty-thousand-gallon wine tank from California; a wine bottle twenty feet high and ten feet in diameter; a German wine cellar lighted by thousands of electric lights; also a highly ornamental fountain throwing jets and sprays of real wine protected by a crystal case.

Santiago county, Cal., has built a beautiful effigy of Liberty Bell, crack and all, with lemons and oranges. Maine sends a handsome lot of apples, blooming, as if just plucked from the tree. Canada has one of the largest displays in the department. Idaho has 400 jars of fruits and vegetables of surprising size and beauty. There are blue pears that weigh nearly two pounds. There are 30 boxes of silver prunes. Washington has a marvelous display, including 300 plates of apples. Colorado exhibits 42 varieties of the same fruit. Oregon gives a many-colored story of its resources. Its plan of display is remarkably artistic. There are monster pears, some weighing 4 pounds, quinces, plums, peaches, apricots, cherries, and grapes. Florida has the place of honor at the north end of the hall, and is approached through an arch made of oranges and lemons, and the base of it is lined with cocoanuts. Around are palms and brilliant foliage plants imparting a semi-tropical picturesque appearance.

On the roof of the building around the central dome an elaborate roof-garden is made, a pleasurable and lofty promenade, from whence a blaze of architectural glory is witnessed.

The view from the main portal of the building is not to be overlooked. Opposite is Wooded Island, a sylvan retreat, a sweet solitude for a moment from the vast wonders of man's hand. The lagoon glides limpid along with shining boats. Beyond is the Government Building and the Art Gallery. To the right are the Mines and Mining and Electricity structures, and towering over them is the dome of the Administration Palace.

These are a few glimpses of the treasures of Horticultural Building, where are the earth's flowers and fruits in infinite variety. The beauty of art is lost in the luxuriance of nature's products. We seem at one time to be in the heart of a mighty forest; then in some gorgeous cave, then a leafy haunt, and almost expect to see a naiad amidst the sparkling green; then a bower of roses, or a dazzling garden, or blooming orchard, or fragrant vineyard. We wander through the tropics; we see the splendor of the Orient; we are in a land of flowers. Wreaths and glittering wine adorn our pathway, as if Bacchus were rolling along in his chariot. In one grand mass nature has poured forth its sweetest graces, colors and forms.

THE WOMAN'S BUILDING.

The Woman's Building is perhaps the most interesting place of observation to one who looks upon the World's Fair as a noble index of human progress. This building represents woman's independence, equality, and genius. In every respect it is a pronounced success. Evidently woman can take care of herself. She can not only cook, and wash dishes, and mend clothes, but she can provide herself with the treasures of art, poetry, philosophy, and invention. In fact, she can do everything that man has done, be it great or small. Man has no monopoly, nor woman either.

Do not imagine that woman has put all her glory into this bright particular structure of her own. I should protest, indeed, against the absolute separation of woman's work from man's. It would not be any sign of progress to my mind if woman simply exhibited her talent in this building, and was not elsewhere to be noted in the activity of her powers. That would be too much after the doll fashion. Much as woman has contributed to the excellence and beauty of this her own building, it is not a tithe of what she has done throughout the whole Exposition. In every building and in every exhibition woman has entered into competition with man, not as something separate from man, but as a man herself in the larger intellectual meaning of that term, endowed with the same original capacities, and able freely and victoriously to make her way in every field of human action. Wherever we turn, therefore, in any part of this immense Exposition we see something that woman has done; and this is the real glory of woman, not to be regarded as a woman, but as an intelligent human being. Woman's genius will never be entirely appreciated until we forget that it is the genius of a woman; but think that it is simply genius.

Only as a complement of what woman has elsewhere done is the Woman's Building of any value or interest. It is a kind of a blossoming forth of her peculiar self, an expression of her idiosyncrasy, that is exceedingly attractive. But this I know, or think I know, that in the great World's Fair in some golden age to come, there won't be any Woman's Building, for it won't be necessary to emphasize in any such form the equality of woman, it will be so fully accepted otherwise. Woman will some time be so free that she won't have to make any fuss about it at all. But now, of course, she has to make a fuss, and she does it in a very beautiful fashion.

The Woman's building is a museum in which we see the history of woman—what she has done, what she is doing for human knowledge and progress. Contributions have come from every clime and country. Especially do we see the wonderful achievements of the last century. It shows the vast variety of woman's gifts. She can wield the hammer as well as the needle. Not among the least novel of the exhibits are the specimens of iron-work wrought at the anvil by a young lady of California.

Miss Sophia G. Hayden is the architect of this building, which is 199 feet in width and 388 feet in length, and cost $138,000. Directly in front of the building the lagoon takes the form of a bay, 400 feet wide. A grand landing and staircase leads to a terrace, 6 feet above the water, which is designed in artistic flower-beds. The building is 100 feet back; its style is Italian renaissance. A wide entrance leads to the central pavilion. This pavilion, with an open colonnade, is finished with pediment enriched with elaborate bas-relief. The rotunda, reaching through the height of the building, is protected by a richly ornamented skylight. This rotunda is surrounded by a two-story open arcade, admitting abundance of light.

Among the exhibits are a model hospital, a model kindergarten. Queen Victoria is represented by six water-color drawings of her own, the Princess Louise by a water-color, Princess Beatrice by an oil painting. The priceless court laces of France, Spain, and other countries are to be seen. The library is filled with the books and also with the original manuscripts of the works of famous women. I believe that every book written by a woman is to be found here. I shall not try to read them all. The oldest book written by a woman, I guess, is the "Boke of St. Albins," printed in 1450, which deals entertainingly of hawking, hunting, and heraldry.

Relics of Queen Isabella are a curious feature of the exhibits from Spain, among them being the sword of "her most Catholic majesty." I suppose this is the weapon with which she smote off the heads of heretics. Isabella wouldn't make a very advanced woman for to-day. However, she will do to exhibit. There are also the religious writings of St. Therese of Jesus. I couldn't keep awake long enough to read them. It appears that all sorts of religious women congregate here—the Catholic Benevolent Association, King's Daughters, W. C. T. U., etc.; but there are also more or less liberal associations, like the Chicago Woman's Club, etc.

The exhibit of paintings, ceramics, art work, manufactures, fancy work, embroideries, etc., is pronounced the most beautiful ever collected.

In the vestibule are large mural paintings by Mrs. Swinnerton and Mrs. Lea Merritt, and modeled work by Miss Halle and Miss Rope. These fill the entire space of the arched entrances. The ceiling decoration is by Mrs. Crawford. There are 150 portraits of eminent women displayed in groups by Miss Helen Blackburn. The ladies of every state in the Union have contributed mosaics, inlaid work, panels, polished wood, marbles, etc.

Miss Alice Rideout, of San Francisco, is the sculptor of "The Three Fates," "A Family Group"—twelve groups in all, representing the various works in which woman is interested. There is considerable religious nonsense about the statuary, but it's well done—shall we say "considering it's a woman?" I am afraid that wouldn't be complimentary.

The Ceylon pavilion, which is composed chiefly of ebony, satin wood, and mahogany, is extremely ornate, and is sure to attract attention. The Japanese women make a fine display. Besides the pretty home picture on the lower floor, they have just thrown open a room on the upper corridor filled with beautiful screens, tables, and panel pictures. One exhibit is a peacock screen, a gorgeous piece of coloring, the groundwork in gold, against which the beautiful bird stands outlined, all the iridescent hues of its feathers being brought out in strong relief. Opposite is a Japanese masterpiece, a lady of the days of 1001 on her way to the Buddhist temple. The costume is that of a learned lady of that ancient time. Very magnificent it is, being of white brocade, with petticoat of crimson and yellow. The coloring is superb. It is framed in corded white silk.

No Japanese exhibit would be complete without chrysanthemums and so a flower-piece composed of these royal beauties occupies a prominent place.

So women from every land have come to this modern temple and displayed their craft, their skill, their ingenuity, their learning, their strength, their aptitude, their brawn and brain, their fervor, their patience, their perseverance, their victory, and in fact their all-round capability to do anything in any sphere of human effort. With all her soaring genius, however, and beautiful and wonderful fancies and vast achievements, woman is still the same gentle, comfortable creature that looks after our material wants. There is a model kitchen in the Woman's Building; and in the open air on the roof, whence a grand view can be obtained of the grounds, are the hanging gardens, with pleasant cafés attached where you can get a nice lunch and a dish of real tea.

The Woman's Congress opens on May 15th. Among the speakers announced are Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Augusta Cooper Bristol, Julia Ward Howe, Helen H. Gardener, and there will be some flashes of Freethought in the domains of the World's Fair. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

FATHER CHARLES FLAHERTY, a priest of Geneseo, N. Y., has just been tried and convicted on a charge of criminal intercourse with a young girl. Part of his cross-examination ran thus:

Q. "Do you believe that there are conditions upon which sins committed by members of the Roman Catholic church may be forgiven?" A. "Yes, sir."

Q. "What are the conditions?" A. "Examination of conscience, preparation for confession, full confession before a duly authorized priest, resolution to sin no more, submission to the penance proposed by the priest, absolution, and forgiveness."

Q. "Do you believe perjury a sin?" A. "Certainly."

Q. "And can it be forgiven under these conditions?" A. "Certainly."

Who would credit the word of a person believing thus? And who would expect the mass of the persons believing so to equal in any branch of morality the classes whose minds are not vitiated by such notions?

How to Help The Truth Seeker.

1. When renewing get a friend to subscribe and thus save a half dollar apiece.
2. Get your newsdealer to display it on his stand or in his shop window. Be sure that he displays the pictures.
3. Get your newsdealer to keep in stock one or more copies, with your guarantee to take off his hands at the end of the week any that remain unsold. If he exhibits them the pictures alone will sell them.
4. Take a few extra copies and circulate them among your acquaintances. On your request, we will send you back-number sample copies free.
5. Leave a copy occasionally where it will be picked up—in the train, in the factory, in the meeting-room, in the cigar store, in the barber-shop. Leave it picture-side up.
6. Keep in your pocket some of our cheap tracts and when convenient hand one to a friend.
7. Get a new subscriber by persuading some friend to take it.

Letters of Friends.

Against a Peace-destroying Clergy.

MONTGOMERY, MISS., Apr. 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have succeeded at last in getting a new subscriber.

I cannot afford to lose even one issue of the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. Long may it wave to fight the battle of freedom against the myths and bigotry of a peace-destroying clergy. R. R. PARSONS.

How We Could Have Perfect Government.

WICKLIFFE, KY., Apr. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Send me Colonel Ingersoll's Argument in the Reynolds Blasphemy Case at Morristown, N. J. I hope you will keep up your war against the ignorant superstition of religion. If we had more TRUTH SEEKERS and less Christian Advocates and Apostolic Guides in this country we would have a perfect form of government in a short time.

Respectfully, CHAS. WICKLIFFE.

On the Danger Awaiting Us.

CHAPIN HOME, NEW YORK, May 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I was greatly amused in reading the spite proclaimed by your gentle lady correspondent from Pennsylvania. You have warning of your fate and must know what you have to expect should you send another paper to Dr. Stroup. One thousand dollars is promised to be expended to stop your paper. Shall the lady succeed? We shall see. It was rather rough on the lady for you to publish her want of judgment in reference to THE TRUTH SEEKER. S. R. THORNE.

Eager for Putnam's Fervid Phrases.

EUREKA, UTAH, Apr. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: THE TRUTH SEEKER became, and will be, the friend of my family. Having tried my best among my Liberal friends, I could not do much for your great weekly, as many of them are afraid they might step on a good Christian's toe by becoming known as subscribers to it. But still I hope some of them will soon subscribe. Inclosed find $3 for one year's subscription, and if possible send me No. 15, as I would not like to miss Mr. Putnam's continuance of "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie."

Your Liberal friend,

STEPHEN LOSSMANN.

We Are Joyful to Have Done You Good.

VILLA GROVE, COL., May 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write you a few lines to thank you and your Company for your paper, the blessed TRUTH SEEKER, the best in the world, and for the great benefit you are doing with the pictures. They will open the eyes of all that see them.

I inclose $2.10 for the following books: Helen H. Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods" and "Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle;" Saladin's "Isaure;" "Crimes of Preachers;" Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason;" "Liberty in Literature," by R. G. Ingersoll. DUGALD McDONALD.

Morality Without Christianity.

NEWTON, IA., Apr. 24, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: THE TRUTH SEEKER is a regular visitor once a week, and is appreciated very much.

We had the pleasure of having Franklin Steiner here on the 16th inst. to address the people of this place. Subject in the afternoon, "Secularism and Morality Without Christianity;" evening, "Is the Bible of Divine Inspiration?" The audience was more than we expected, and I never saw such attention given by any body of people before. The masterly manner in which Mr. Steiner handled the subjects was enough to open the eyes of any thinking person. We will surely have Mr. Steiner here again.

Best wishes for THE TRUTH SEEKER and long may it live. H. L. MOFFITT.

Thanks for Your List.

ARCH BEACH, CAL., March 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $5 for renewal of subscription, with premium, and one trial subscriber; also list of Liberal-minded men who I think are not yet awakened to the importance of the Liberal movement, but with the help of a little good literature might become active members of the glorious cause.

I did wish to help Mr. Putnam with his good work in Washington and THE TRUTH SEEKER in its late embarrassment (which I hope is something of the past ere this), but I, like many others, could not spare the money. However, I will not desert the good old TRUTH SEEKER, which is already better than good, and still improving.

I am anxiously waiting for the rest of Charlesworth's debate with the striped animal, who is using good old Christian weapons which it seems do not have the desired effect under the light of intelligence, with such a man as Charlesworth to wield the sword of reason and justice.

I will close with the forlorn hope that Congress will take a wise vote and not close the gates of the Fair and leave the saloons open, and success to free speech and a total separation of church and state.

J. S. THURSTON.

Has a Cabinet of Material Proofs That the Earth Is Over Six Thousand Years Old.

CLARKSVILLE, PA., Apr. 24, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please forward to my address "Crimes of Preachers," with the late additions, and also send me "Infidels and Charity," a leaflet.

I have been a Freethinker for over thirty-five years, and a collector of natural curiosities of the world's antiquity, and to-day I possess one of the largest and the finest collections in the state of Pennsylvania. I could not stand the belief of what is called religion, and I started to collect those specimens out of the earth; and whenever Christians look at my collection their minds get confounded and a great number of them have said the Bible has made some mistakes in the creation and my record is correct.

I am very poor, and my health is very poor, but I am backing up Freethought, and I am well known on that subject in my locality; and I say here for all of you Freethinkers, if ever any one of you should come through these parts, stop to see me.

I am taking THE TRUTH SEEKER and I am lending it around very freely.

G. W. URMSON.

Short Sermon on a Bible Text.

PALOUSE, WASH., Feb. 9, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As others have taken in hand to set forth the gospel nonsense, I too feel inspired to write a few lines.

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, and the earth was without form, and void: and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." Now, to be without form would be to not be at all. Can anything exist and be without form? All matter has a form. It must be something or nothing. To be something is to have a form. The spirit of God moved upon the face of the water. There was no form of an earth. Was the water frozen? And did God have a pair of skates, and skate on both sides at once? or was the water a ball of ice? That's it—and God got to skating, and the ice got to whirling, and as God could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley neither could he stop skating; so he skated till his skates wore out, and he kept on skating till there was nothing left but the Holy Ghost; and the Holy Ghost kept on skating till the Ghost was all worn out and there was nothing but the holy left. Oh, where, oh, where is the Christian God?

Inclosed find $1 for a new Bible Picture Book. JAMES W. ROBERTSON.

A Sliding and a Disagreeing With A. Augusta Chapman.

DALLAS, ORE., Feb. 20, 1893.

DEAR MADAM: I side with you that there is a designer. We find him with our senses. How wonderfully he made those microbes which cause epidemics; the bacteria which eat up millions of lungs; the ascarides; the three-inch-long worms; the tapeworms one hundred feet long; the skin-eaters; the musketos with such fine song, so accommodating that they come into one's house—their wonderful bill, the horny piercer with two saws, real surgical instruments; then the sucker; then the poison-bladder. The flea is a beautiful work; its scratchers and bill make you and millions other ladies feel the designer. I took one once under a glass with a piece of raw meat. The flea did not quit eating, so has a stomach like a church—as Goethe's "Faust's" priest says: The church has eaten up whole countries and never over-eaten. The bed-bugs make us smell the designer. He made big spiders, scorpions, and a great many others like them. In India there are annually twenty-one thousand of God's images killed by snakes, wolves, tigers, lions, and other designed works.

Your soul must be a very sweet-looking one, I think. We disagree in this, that you are God-loving and I am God-fearing. As described in his Jew-book he is often awfully mad. He may in a fit take the golden harps from the saints round him and knock them to pieces on their heads.

AUG. W. KIENOFF.

A Brother Riseth in Meeting and Testifieth.

BRUCE, S. D., March 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As our brothers in Christ say, I wish to testify to the goodness of—no, not God, nor J. H. Christ, but Nature, Reason, and Science, believing I can rely more fully upon the latter than the former.

We are having a course of lectures delivered by C. L. Abbott, of Estelline, S. D., which are very interesting, entertaining, and instructive. His first lecture, "The Higher Criticism," was listened to by a visiting pilot, who took some exceptions to his (Abbott's) remarks, and announced to the audience that he would reply the following Sunday. Well, Sunday came, and of all the replies I ever heard that was the slimmest. He never touched the subject in question at all, but went on to describe a seven-horned monster, and handled him so roughly that he finally got his last horn sawed off. From that he went on to describe an angel, who suffered terribly from a corn on his toe. And, to conclude, he became honest, and stated that he did not know what the Higher Criticism was. But, nevertheless, there were a lot of ignorant, superstitious fools who swallowed the whole, and pronounced it good.

Not wishing to intrude, I will close, regretting that death will ever overtake such as the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, R. G. Ingersoll, John Peck, Watson Heston, and many other good men too numerous to mention. C. E. EVES.

There Is a Devil, or "Great Old Dragon."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Apr. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your correspondent is sometimes tempted to believe that there is something in the story of the "Great Old Dragon," and thinks the simile is very appropriately applied to the church of Rome. If Samuel were living to-day he would not have to consult the witch of Endor to find out what that arch-enemy of progress is trying to do for the United States. The spirit of the Inquisition still burns within her. Our public schools are under the ban of her displeasure.

Colonel Ingersoll delivered a masterly address here some time since. As usual, he has been "answered" several times since, and as usual those answers abounded in personal abuse and little argument.

The Spiritualists are dividing their time between conversing with the "dear departed" and showing up the fallacies of the Christian scheme.

At Sheldon's Hall, every Sunday, a number of Freethinkers meet and discuss the leading topics of the day. So-called religion is handled without gloves, and much good is done in awakening the people to a knowledge of its absurdity and inconsistencies. Salvation is twenty-five above par in Washington, judging by the admission fee charged at the Romish churches here, and Satolli, the American pope, has not stopped the proceedings, either.

One of the priests at a certain church came out on the steps and, seeing a poor beggar woman, scantily clad in rags and half starved, standing near awaiting the charity of the church-goers, ordered an usher to drive her away. "By their fruits ye shall know them." "CHITARO."

A Book That Is Both Biography and History.

LEWISBURG, TENN., March 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have just finished reading "The Life of Thomas Paine," by Moncure D. Conway.

My attention was first called to the work by Colonel Ingersoll's admirable paper in regard to it in the North American Review. Any book that could elicit such an indorsement from such a man may, for that reason alone, be set down as "one of the things that were not born to die." I believe Ingersoll is the only living man who could have done adequate justice to the book—whose incomparable genius was equal to the sublimity of the subject of Mr. Conway's work. But, independent of any tribute or indorsement from whatever source, the intrinsic merits of the work will make it as immortal as the name of Thomas Paine himself. It is the first and only "Life of Thomas Paine" that shows any understanding or appreciation of the subject. Paine's life has been so beclouded and befogged by the infamous slanders and vilifications of the church that the truth about the man could not be easily observed. It must have required a prodigious amount of labor on the part of Mr. Conway to get at the facts as he does. Every page of the work is marked by the most painstaking and thorough investigation. England, France, and America have been ransacked for important and hitherto unpublished public and private documents that would throw light on the subject, or contribute to clear away the filth and rubbish which the church for one hundred years has been busy in heaping upon the memory of one of the greatest benefactors of man.

The work is not alone a biography of Thomas Paine. It is the best inside view yet published of the real influences and potentialities, the silent, though powerful, undercurrents, of the American Revolution. It is the best exposition so far of the nature, causes, and effects of the French Revolution. And it is the severest possible arraignment of the corrupt and damnable despotism of church and state under George III. Mr. Conway gives Paine his true position in each of those historic epochs, and he is the first man who has ever done so. It is the disgrace of America that, through an abject and slavish fear of the church, the memory of the man who contributed most to the establishment of the great republic should have been so long neglected. But the work has at last been done; the tribute due to the immortal author of "Common Sense," which virtually secured American independence; of the "Rights of Man," which made every European despotism tremble on its throne, and of the "Age of Reason," which has partly civilized Christianity—that tribute has been paid, and Moncure D. Conway deserves the gratitude of every man who loves liberty and acknowledges the sovereignty of reason.

This short and hasty notice of the work is only intended to call attention to it. Every truth seeker should at once procure it. It is simply invaluable. It is in two handsome volumes, and will be supplied by the Truth Seeker Company for $5. Send for it, and when you have read it hand it to your neighbor. It will and certainly ought to work a radical revolution in American thought and feeling on the subject of Thomas Paine, and in doing so will administer to the church the severest possible blow. JAS. W. BRENTS.

Disfranchise Incompetent Individuals, Not Classes.

PORTLAND, KAN., May 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I see that you have given my last article the desired attention, and as there have since been several others, both for and against, on this question and one in direct reply to my effort, please allow me space a second time.

I suppose that the gentleman, Mr. Laperche, has sunk back utterly exhausted since he made that frantic "grab" for his pen, and "slung" out his deadly opinion; surely such an opinion ought to make him sink into oblivion, where he would have no desire to "sling" said opinion again.

It seems to have given the gentleman considerable trouble in trying to fix a title to my name. He says "Miss or Mrs." no less than four times; calls me

"Madam" once, and at last, in sheer desperation, leans forward with that heart-rending appeal, calls "Oh, Laura, Laura."

Now, I have no desire to follow the example of my opponent and "sling" my opinion at him, but if he does not care to make a disgusted smile over the faces of his readers, I would kindly advise him in the name of good taste, decency, and common sense to refrain from using what seems very much like "sentimental gush" (please pardon the use of slang) in the future. He may have a burning desire to "sling out" his opinion, but the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER, I feel sure, want something more substantial with which to feed their brains. If Mr. Laperche would refer to some good work on etiquette he would have no trouble in finding the correct title.

In regard to his making any points against my article, I will simply leave it with the readers of both his article and mine to decide, for I have faith enough in these people to believe that they will decide in a sensible manner whether they are for or against me.

But while I leave this question thus, and shall endeavor to keep away from this ground, let me show up a few of his own direct contradictions and inconsistencies.

1. In his attempt to answer my question, how women are to be prepared to vote, he says, "I fear the only answer will be to emancipate them." He then goes right on to say that if we do this thing, then our chance for improvement will be indefinitely lost, thus admitting the chance for improvement would be through emancipation, yet claiming that all chance for improvement would be indefinitely lost by the same act. How is he going to reconcile these two statements?

2. Let us look at his figures. He claims that twenty per cent of the voting population votes intelligently, and says that the women's vote would reduce this intelligent number from twenty to five per cent. Now, let us see. Suppose that there are twenty million of legal voters at present, twenty per cent of this number would be four million, according to his statement, intelligent voters. Now, if we give woman the ballot, we will suppose the number is doubled, making forty million, instead of twenty million, as it now is. In order that his statement be true, we will have to divide this number forty million by twenty, in order to obtain five per cent. When we do this we find that the number of intelligent voters is reduced from four million to two million. Thus we see that if his statement is correct, not only would all the women vote ignorantly, but two million of the number of men that did vote intelligently would either cease to vote or else lose their intelligence. Surely women have a powerful influence over intelligent voters; but we doubt this influence would leave Mr. Laperche unchanged. Now I ask if it is not apparent to all that Mr. Laperche has overreached himself in his mighty effort to make it appear that women are so ignorant.

The gentleman has shown me a new class of Liberals. He belongs to this class. The one who does a wrong, knows it to be such, and is opposed to a change, for he admits that it is a great injustice to deny to women the right of suffrage, yet he is very unwilling to give them justice. Mr. Laperche admits that his method is not right, so let us see if there is not a better way. If there must be a restriction placed upon the ballot, so that progress may not be retarded (which I do not deny), why not let intelligence of the individual, regardless of sex, do our voting? Thus giving to each voter a certificate of brains as well as of residence. I ask, is not this a fair method, or would the gentleman in question arise with the objection that this would debar him?

In regard to the accusation of my being an orthodox Christian in poor disguise, and also my favoring Sunday law, as my opponent infers, I will say that I take sides with those who are in favor of opening the World's Fair on Sunday, and no orthodox church would receive me as a member, because I am an outspoken opponent to so-called orthodoxy. However, I very earnestly contend for law (as I said in my former letter), intelligent law, protecting people in their pursuit of happiness on Sunday and on all other days. If I am governed by a just law I do not consider myself a slave in so doing, but rather that I am enjoying myself the greatest amount of liberty that can be granted to human beings by being protected by said law.

I would like to correct Mr. Laperche in two of his assertions: first, he says that Mrs. Schwartz is the first objector to woman's voting. He certainly cannot expect us poor, ignorant women to believe that. For I do not doubt but that this question was opposed and defended before Mrs. Schwartz was born. Second, he says, "It is a noted fact that the great lights of the Woman's Rights party, such as Mrs. Colman, Mrs. Slenker, Miss Gardener, Miss Wixon, and others, have not yet attempted to answer Mrs. Schwartz's objections, etc." What an assertion! When he must know, if he knows anything, that no lecturer on this question ever leaves the floor without completely showing the fallacy of said ladies' assertions and arguments. Mrs. Schwartz's objections are the same as many that have objected before her, all of which have been answered. Besides, we have facts to prove, as the late election in Kansas has just shown, that the women voted as wisely as the men. This may be verified by reading the leading daily papers.

I fully agree with Mr. Laperche (if he means what he says), when he says that these lights of the Woman's Rights party are "wise, honest, and true." So do I. But when he admits that they are wise he must also admit that he is unwise, for I am certain that their sentiments are not a corroboration of Mr. Laperche's letter.

Our triumph in progress is indeed glorious, but we might make it more so if we did not have so many Liberals (?) who are not willing to right their own acknowledged wrongs. And now I will say that I still understand that the Freethought Federation upholds law and order, and desires to give equal rights to all regardless of sex; fostering good and suppressing evil. To such an organization a few of us in this place would be proud to belong.

LAURA KNOX.

Thinks the Single Tax Would Remove Superstition and All Evils.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In the effort to abolish from the minds of men the superstitions of the past, the principal factor in the best method is ignored. The best method is education. The principal factor is freedom. And as education is impossible except to the degree of existing freedom, it follows that absolute freedom by insuring greater education will, to a tremendous extent, abolish superstition. The least abridgment of freedom is tyranny. And if it can be proved that superstition is the result of tyranny, which it probably can be, the effort of all should be to obtain perfect liberty for each and all. As we can agree that superstition is the dreaded offspring of wedded ignorance and fear, and that fear is a kind of relative ignorance, if we can prove that ignorance is the result of poverty, and poverty the result of tyranny, the evidence will be conclusively that superstition is the indirect result of oppression—tyranny. The first proposition which we have to deal with is: Ignorance the result of poverty. Ignorance is the absence of knowledge. Such a condition may be the effect of any or all of three causes—the lack of desire to know, inability to obtain the means, and insufficient leisure. The lack of desire to know may be caused by defect or disease of the mind, as the desire for wealth overshadowing all other desires, or, being surrounded by uncivilized conditions, there exists no inducement to learn. The inability to obtain the means is caused by expenditures equaling profits, and insufficient leisure is caused by the strict and long application necessary for the maintenance of life.

All these causes save one are the results of poverty, and that one to a great degree finds its origin in the same source. Overwork, insufficient means of living, monotony of life, and resulting despondency will often end in disease of the mind.

The dual sights of extreme wealth and abject poverty, as men in tattered rags or far from ample clothing, with children and wives in a half-starved condition, inevitably fosters an abnormal longing for wealth, to which the desirable "speculative thought" must surely succumb.

The uncivilized conditions which exist in the tenement districts of New York and all cities, the crimes, brutal pleasures, degraded surroundings, insufficient food, inadequate protection from cold, and complete absence of refinements can never lift from the black chasm of ignorance the mind of man. Why? Because "the [intellectual] progress is one, not of internal power, but external advantage," "and the difference which ensues between the acts of the two children will be caused, so far as we know, solely by the pressure of external circumstances; by which I [Buckle: H. of C.] mean the surrounding opinions, knowledge, associations, in a word the entire mental atmosphere in which the two children are respectively nurtured." Even if it should happen that a particular mind touched by other influences had ripened into a desire to know the reason why—to study cause and effect, expenditure equaling income, and thus depriving the means, would result in its death, and we can safely conclude that equalization of income and expenditure is absolute; if it was not, the above conditions would not exist.

So we have seen that poverty is in part the cause of disease of the mind, is the cause of wealth overshadowing desire for knowledge, and is the cause of uncivilized surroundings which are detrimental to civilization; is the cause of inability to obtain means and of insufficient leisure. If these are caused by poverty, what is the cause of the greater part of ignorance but poverty?

Now let us take another step. The second proposition is: Poverty the result of the abridgment of freedom, of oppression. Poverty is an inadequate supply of wealth. Poverty may be caused by the denial of the right to produce wealth, or to retain wealth when produced. Perfect liberty, which is all that equity can claim, accords to each the equal right to do whatsoever he wills, "provided he infringes not the equal freedom of any other."

"Given a race of beings having like claims to pursue the objects of their desires, given a world into which such beings are similarly born, and it unavoidably follows that they have equal rights to the use of this world. For if each of them has freedom to do all that he wills, provided he infringes not the equal freedom of any other, then each of them is free to use the earth for the satisfaction of his wants, provided he allows all others the same liberty, and conversely it is manifest that no one or part of them may use the earth in such a way as to prevent the rest from similarly using it; seeing that to do this is to assume greater freedom than the rest, and consequently to break the law."

Now, if we can prove that the right to produce wealth and the right to retain the wealth produced is denied, it becomes evident that we have not perfect liberty, but, on the contrary, tyranny. And as we have seen that poverty is the cause of ignorance, and ignorance of superstition, it follows that in order to obtain freedom of thought and liberty of speech we must secure liberty, absolute and equal.

Let us see what we can prove. Wealth is that product of labor which gratifies desire. Let us be careful and not confound money with wealth. Money is simply a medium of exchange. It is a certificate that so much wealth has been produced, and the owner has a right to the certified amount of production. But money is not wealth except as a commodity. Wealth is merely a result of labor—it is a gratifying production.

Now, it is evident that the right to live upon this earth is denied to the majority, except upon condition of payment for the privilege to its assumed owners. Under this condition, in most instances, rent for the land, taxes upon commodities, and interest for the house, being excessive, denies the right to the use of this earth, which likewise denies the right to produce wealth.

Again, taxes are levied on commodities of all kinds—those which we eat, wear, live within, and admire. That is to say, personal property must be divided, or shared, with the community. Therefore, personal property or wealth is partially denied to or taken from its owner by the government, the people, and by the monopolization of land the assumed owners of the earth can collect, at their option, a greater or less amount of the production—the wealth—and thus the part of the product which the producer shall keep is decided, not by the producer, but by the owners of the earth.

The sequence of all this is poverty. There being no outlet for labor, because of the denial of the right of access to land, the labor market is overstocked, hence "wages fall to a bare subsistence," and where labor works on given capital, for which there should be but the return called interest, all production going to labor, competition is so severe that it is necessary for the laborer to be robbed of the greater part of his wages—his production—to exist.

So we see that poverty is the result of oppression, of the denial of rights; is simply the result of the abridgment of freedom. Thus we see that tyranny is the source of the greater part of superstition. For what is tyranny but the assumption and wielding of an unjust and monstrous power which is denied by equity? It is naught but a forcible denial of the equal right. What are kings and queens but tyrants? And why tyrants? Simply because they take the power to exercise and compel. Then imagine a thousand acres ruled and conditioned by one man who, although unable to put it to full use, denies access to all others. Compare this with a kingdom, and think of a king or queen denying the use of any part of this kingdom to all others. Think of having to bend a knee to pomp, then think of having to pay heavily for the right to live upon this earth. Which is the greater humiliation? Has one person more right to live upon this earth than another? If he has, where did he get it from? By what method are we to prove the greater right? For my part I cannot see why the monopolization of land is not just as foul and tyrannical as the monopolization of governments—why dictators are not just as bad as monarchs.

But, as we see that superstition is the indirect result of oppression, let us remove the cause. Let us give to everyone an equal right to the use of this world. We can do this by the denial of special privileges—we can do this by treating all equitably and impartially:

By ceasing to interfere with personal property, which is everything that can be produced by the person, and by taking only that which belongs to all—to the community. By taking only that which no one can make but which all cannot help but make. That is to say, the full rental value of the land.

This method would make the holding of unused land unprofitable. It would, consequently, employ all now idle labor, and when labor could not be obtained the consequence would be the rejection of unused land; hence a new road being opened, the labor market would become scarce, wages would go up to the full capacity of labor to create wealth, improvements being untaxed, and wealth bountiful and pretty equally distributed would result in very little superstition and less poverty, grander civilization, short hours for laboring, and following, broader and more thorough intellectual attainments, freedom in thought, and liberty of speech. There may be those who object upon the theory of "the survival of the fittest." Those who object on that ground take, relatively, the same position that the church took regarding anesthetics—that pain was the result of God's wishes, and should not be allayed. But as science adopts for her motto, "We live to benefit our progeny," it can be reasonably hoped that she will join heart and hand for its benefit.

A single tax on land values has been popularly treated in "Social Problems," and scientifically in "Progress and Poverty," by the immortal lover of liberty, Henry George.

Sincerely yours, L. B.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Cat's Explanation.

You ask the reason, little friends,
Why cats don't wash their faces
Before they eat, as children do,
In all good Christian places.

Well, years ago, a famous cat,
The pangs of hunger feeling,
Had chanced to catch a fine young mouse
Who said, as he ceased squealing,

"All genteel folks their faces wash,
Before they think of eating!"
And wishing to be thought well bred,
Puss heeded his entreating.

But when she raised her paw to wash,
Chance for escape affording,
The sly young mouse then said good-bye
Without respect to wording.

A feline council met that day,
And passed in solemn meeting
A law forbidding any cat
To wash till after eating.

EVA J. BEDDE.

Sunday and Marbles.

First Scene: Bobbie and Johnnie playing marbles. Clergyman stopping in his walk near them.

Clergyman: "My sons, did you not know it is wicked to play marbles on Sunday?"

Bobbie: "No; is it?"

Clergyman: "Yes, indeed, very wicked. You should remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy."

Johnnie: "Who says so?"

C: "The Bible tells us so."

B: "The Bible—what's that?"

C: "You don't know what the Bible is?"

B: "No—honest."

J: "I do, for I'm older'n he is. It's a book that tells a few good things, a little history that's true, lots that isn't, two or three cart-loads of other lies, and—"

C: "Tut, tut. You must not speak thus of the Bible—it is God's holy word."

B: "Holy, holy; how can a word have a hole in it, and who is God?"

C. (aside): "How horribly ignorant and depraved. (Aloud) God is the supreme infinit being, the creator of all things."

B: "Did he make folks?"

C: "Certainly."

J: "He made an awful bungling piece of work when he made Jim Clark, Sal Amadon, and lots of others."

B: "And Mr. Smiggins's calf, that had two extra feet and legs, little things growing out on each shoulder, and don't do him a bit of good, nor even look pretty."

C. (aside): "Patience, if I would bring them to the fold. (Aloud) God's ways are not as our ways."

J: "Well, I should say not."

B: "Please tell us how God looks?"

C: "Man was made in God's image."

B: "Where does he live?"

C: "In heaven."

B: "Where is that?"

J: "Heaven is above the sky somewhere, Bobby."

B: "Does he have hands and feet?"

C: "As we are made in his image, he must have. The Bible says the earth is his footstool."

B: "What a long-legged feller he must be. Strange no one ever sees his feet."

J: "Perhaps he puts one foot on each of the poles; but I should think they would get jerked off when the earth turns on its axis or moves around in its orbit."

C. (Rolling his eyes upward): "What depravity. I feel terribly angry. It would do me good to thrash them soundly. (Aloud) I see I can do nothing but pray for you."

J: "Now, mister, you think we don't know much; but we know a heap too much to believe God would care if we played marbles on Sunday (if there is such a feller). We don't steal, nor fight, and your Sunday-school boys do both."

B: "And only this morning your own boy was going along to Sunday-school and made fun of our clothes, 'cause they wasn't so good as his'n. And he called us bad names, and we don't do that either."

(Clergyman starts to leave.)

J: "No, we don't; but when we see a boy that isn't dressed as good as we are, or hunchbacked, or lame, or hungry, we are sorry for him."

SADIE ATHENA MAGOON.

Los Angeles, Cal.

The Cat and the Sparrow.

A cat caught a sparrow, and was about to eat, when the sparrow said: "No gentleman eats till he has first washed his face."

The cat, struck with this remark, set the sparrow down and began to wash his face. The sparrow then flew away. This vexed Tom, and he said: "As long as I live, I will eat first, and wash my face afterward."

Correspondence.

BENJAMIN, UTAH, May 3, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: My papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER and thinks it a very good paper. There has been a revival in Benjamin this winter in the Presbyterian church. Papa and mamma have been to the city. All the Mormons have been to the Temple; now the children are going to the Temple. There is one of my cousins from England living with papa's family. He is thirteen years old. There are no leaves on the trees yet. It was snowing on the 29th of April. I go to school now. The teacher is going to give a prize to our class if we will learn the tunes; the one that learns them first will get the prize. Two of my aunts have joined the Presbyterian church and one of my uncles.

Your friend, ROSE E. HOWE.

SAN JACINTO, CAL., Apr. 27, 1893.

MISS SUSAN WIXON, Dear Friend: It has been a long time since I last wrote to your "happy Corner."

I do not often see letters from this part of California.

I go to school and study history, arithmetic, physical geography, music, drawing, spelling, grammar, reading, and business forms.

I like to read THE TRUTH SEEKER very much, especially the works of Ingersoll. Everything is turning golden now; in about three or four weeks harvest will begin.

I would like to correspond with some of the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Your Liberal friend,

LUCINDA C. CLARK.

FORRESTON, ILL., Apr. 8, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON AND LITTLE CORNER FRIENDS: I will now take the pleasure of writing a few lines to the Children's Corner. I have been a reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER for about sixteen years, and have read the Children's Corner ever since it was published. When I was reading the sweet little letters to my little boy to-day he said: "Why can't you or papa write such a nice letter, mamma?" When I told him I would write a letter some time, he was very glad. There are few Freethinkers around here. I have only had the pleasure of hearing two Freethinkers speak. One was Mr. Bell, and the other was Mr. Remsburg, who spoke at our house. I liked to hear them very well. I will close for this time.

Wishing you success in all your undertakings, I remain, Yours truly,

MRS. H. B. AKKERMANN.

N.B.—Will the little boys and girls please send my little boy, Bernard, a few ocean and sea shells for his collection? I will pay postage and will also try and return the favor. Address:

H. B. Akkermann,
Forreston, Ogle Co., Ill.

NORTH KANSAS, UTAH, May 4, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I am a reader of the Children's Corner and, not finding any letter from this place, I will for the first time write a few lines, and at the same time tell my grief. My brother died with pneumonia on the last day of March, aged fourteen years. Papa, mamma, grandma, and I are left alone to mourn his loss.

My brother took lots of interest in his schooling, and one thing is certain, that he did not have his head troubled by any religion.

In our district school, where I have been a scholar, we have a lady teacher who is a Methodist, and she says he is still alive; but, if she does not bring him to me alive, how can I believe that she knows?

I am a girl eleven years of age, and am now going to private school.

Papa takes a number of papers, but THE TRUTH SEEKER is the best, and I like the pictures.

Well, I must close, for fear of my letter being too long. With best wishes to all in the Children's Corner,

I am your little Freethinker friend,
WILHELMINA LUNDBERG.

[We deeply sympathize with Wilhelmina and her parents and grandma in the loss of a brother and son. He has only gone a little in advance of others, for death is common to all who live. While we remember the virtues of our dead, it is true philosophy to bear our grief and loneliness as patiently as possible, and love more fondly those who still remain with us.—ED. C. C.]

GOLD.

SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE.

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL.

MINERAL.

3mo14

LITTLE FREETHINKER.

Friends, please try our LITTLE FREETHINKER, the only paper published for the young free from superstition, 50 cents a year. I will send it and Foote's Health Monthly for 50 cents; or it and "Little Lessons" for 75 cents; or and THE TRUTH SEEKER for $3. Address

ELMINA D. SLENKER, Snowville, Va.

3t20

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialist Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Idea of God. 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialist Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price 50 cents

Books by Helen H. Gardener.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. Paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
22 Lafayette Place, New York.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French

Catholic

Priest who renounced

Christianity and Exposed the

Falseness

of that Religion and the object of the

Present-

ment. Paper, 50

cents;

cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

— 144 —

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 80 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt-lettered, $2.50.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stipendiature; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE and OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attitude at Continence even more ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America. Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	10
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. Gould. Price, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Gluckens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages; 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages; 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages; 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Graeco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c.; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims. A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. Bail. Price, 25 cents.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and viceregerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Force and Matter;

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:
Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology), Immortality of Matter, Man, Infinity of Matter, Brain and Mind, Value of Matter, Thought, Motion, Consciousness, Form, Seat of the Soul, Immutability of Natural Laws, Innate Ideas, Universality of Natural Laws, The Idea of God, The Heavens, Personal Continuance, Periods of the Creation, Vital Force, of the Earth, The Soul of Brutes, Original Generation, Free Will, Secular Generation, Morality, Concluding Observations.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.

Price, 15 cents.

Address this office.

Gems of Thought.

THERE are so many things to be said against religion that I wonder they do not occur to everybody. But men are not made for the truth. I regard them as a herd of deer in the park of a great lord, which have no function but to people and occupy the inclosure.—Frederick the Great to Voltaire.

THE battle of science seems to be nearly won, but overconfidence is always dangerous, and, as our author himself remarks, we see in our time "the highest intellectual power accompanied by the strangest recrudescence of superstition." Let the guardians and champions of truth be, therefore, unrelenting in their vigilance and ceaseless in their efforts, till science has become to all mankind the symbol of blessing and of hope.—Professor Youmans.

MORALIZATION must be looked for in the general refinement of customs and of social habits and of views of life in general. For this reason we must, at the present time, look for a basis of morality very different from the fantastical and unpractical, out-of-the-way belief in things supernatural and independent of Nature. Science must take the place of religion; and belief in a natural and infrangible universal order must be substituted for a belief in spirits and ghosts, and the factitious morals of dogmas make room for a morality suited to Nature.—Büchner.

I SEE quoted frequently a supposed speech made by Mr. Lincoln to the colored people of Baltimore, on the presentation of a Bible to him. This supposed speech contains the following: . . . "But for this book we could not know right from wrong." The lowest organized life, I was about to say, knows right from wrong in its particular sphere. Every good dog that comes into possession of a bone, knows that that bone belongs to him, and he knows that it is wrong for another dog to rob him of it. He protests with bristling hair and glistening teeth against such dog robbery. It requires no revelation to teach him right from wrong in the dog world; yet it requires a special revelation from God to teach us right from wrong in the human world. According to this speech, the dog has the advantage. But Mr. Lincoln never uttered such nonsense.—Life of Lincoln, by his secretary Lamon.

In relating the horrors of religion in every age, Voltaire still blends pathos and fun; lamenting the woes unutterable that zealots have inflicted for religion's sake, and yet never allowing his readers to forget the trivial and ridiculous nature of the usages and doctrines for which they slew and tortured. He sometimes makes the mistake that we are all apt to make in commenting upon those scenes of blood and devastation, in Spain, in Holland, in Florida, in France, attributing them too much to individuals, and too little to man. People were dismal in Geneva and cruel in Spain, not because Calvin was dyspeptic and Philip II. ambitious, but because man was still weak, ignorant, and timorous. He, too, felt this when, after relating the appalling massacres that followed the surrender of Haarlem, he adds only, "The pen drops from the hands when we see how men are wont to deal with men." He felt it, also, and gave it memorable expression, when he wrote, "It is characteristic of barbarians to believe the divinity malevolent. Men make God in their own image."—Parton.

MONSIEUR, I should be wanting in sensibility not to be infinitely touched by the letter with which your Royal Highness has deigned to honor me. My self-love was too much flattered by it; but my love for the human race, which I have always had at heart, and which I venture to say makes my character, gave me a pleasure a thousand times purer when I discovered that there is in the world a prince who thinks like a man, a prince philosopher, who will render men happy. Be sure that there have been no truly good kings except those who have begun, like you, by instructing themselves, by knowing men, by loving the truth, by detesting persecution and superstition. There is no prince who, being thus formed, could not bring back the age of gold to his states. Why do so few kings seek this advantage? You know, Monsieur, it is because almost all of them think more of royalty than of humanity. You do precisely the contrary. Rely upon it, if one day the tumult of business and the wickedness of men do not alter so divine a character, you will be adored by your people and beloved by the whole world. Philosophers worthy of the name will fly to your dominions; and, as celebrated artisans go in crowds to the country where their art is most esteemed, men who think will go to gather about your throne.—Voltaire to Frederick the Great.

Scientific Works.

Three Introductory Lectures on the Science of Thought. By F. Max Müller. 1. The Simplicity of Language; 2. The Identity of Language and Thought, and 3. The Simplicity of Thought. With an appendix which contains a correspondence on "Thought Without Words," between F. Max Müller and Francis Galton, the duke of Argyll, George J. Romanes, and others. Neatly bound in cloth. Price, 75c.

Three Lectures on The Science of Language. By Prof. F. Max Müller. The Oxford University Extension Lectures. With a supplement, "My Predecessors," an essay on the genesis of "The Science of Thought." 112 pages; cloth. Price, 75c.

The Psychology of Attention. By Th. Ribot, professor of Comparative and Experimental Psychology at the College de France, and editor of the Revue Philosophique. Authorized translation. Treating of the following topics: a. Spontaneous, or Natural, Attention; b. Emotional states; c. Voluntary, or Artificial, Attention; d. Its mechanism; e. Inhibition; f. The feeling of effort; g. The Morbid States of Attention; h. Distraction; i. Hypochondria; j. Fixed ideas and ecstasy; k. Idiocy; l. Attention in sleep and hypnosis. Cloth, 75c.

Fundamental Problems. The Method of Philosophy as a Systematic Arrangement of Knowledge. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.

The Psychic Life of Micro-Organisms. A Study in Experimental Psychology. By Alfred Binet. Translation from the French with the sanction of the author. Treating of the following subjects: 1. The Psychology of the Cell—Introductory. 2. The Structural and Psychological Character of Proto-Organisms: Motory and Sensory Organs. 3. The Psychology of Nutrition: Holophytic, Saprophytic, and Animal Nutrition; Predatory Habits of Certain Animals. 4. Colonies of Unicellular Organisms. 5. Fecondation of Proto-Organisms. 6. Fecondation of Higher Animals and Plants. 7. The Physiological Function of the Nucleus. 8. Correspondence between Alfred Binet and Ch. Richet (professor of physiology in the Faculty of Medicine at Paris) respecting cellular psychology. 10mo, 135 pages; cloth, 75c; paper, 50c.

Wheelbarrow Articles and Discussions on the Labor Question, Including the Controversy with Mr. Lyman F. Gage on the Ethics of the Board of Trade; and also the Controversy with Mr. Hugh O. Pentecost, and others, on the Single Tax Question. Elegant cloth binding, portrait of the author, and autograph letter. Price, $1.

The Idea of God. By Dr. Paul Carus. Being a disquisition on the development of the idea of God in human thought and history; discussing: 1. The Nature of Ideas. 2. The Etymology of the Word God. 3. God an Abstract Idea. 4. The Conceptions of God (Polytheism, Monotheism, Pantheism, Theism, and Atheism). 5. Definitions of the Idea of God. 6. Entheism, the Monastic Conception of God. Price, 15c.

Epitomes of Three Sciences. 1. Comparative Philology: The Study of Sanscrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg, of the University of Kiel.—a. Sanscrit Research; b. From Jones to Lassen; c. The Discovery of the Veda; d. The Interpretation of the Veda; e. The History of the Vedic Epoch. 2. Experimental Psychology. By Prof. Joseph Jastrow, of the University of Wisconsin.—a. Aspects of Modern Psychology; b. Psychology in Germany; c. Psychology in France and Italy; d. Psychology in Great Britain and the United States. 3. Old Testament History: or, The Rise of the people of Israel. By Prof. C. H. Cornwell, of the University of Königsberg.—a. The Traditions of the People of Israel; b. The Migrations of the Tribes of Israel; c. The Conquest of Palestine and the Kingdom of Israel. With special introductions by Professors Oldenberg and Cornwell, and prefatory remarks by the editor of the Open Court. Elegant cloth binding. Price, 75c.

The Ethical Problem. By Dr. Paul Carus. Three Lectures, delivered before the Society for Ethical Culture of Chicago at the invitation of the Board of Trustees: 1. Ethics, a Science; 2. The Data of Ethics; 3. The Theories of Ethics. 112 pages, cloth. Price, 50c.

On Double Consciousness. Experimental Psychological Studies. By Alfred Binet. Table of contents: 1. Introductory; Experimental Psychology in France. 2. Proof of Double Consciousness in Hysterical Individuals. 3. The Relations between the Two Consciousnesses of Hysterical Individuals. 4. The Hysterical Eye. 5. Mechanism or Subconsciousness? 6. The Graphic Method and the Doubling of Consciousness. 7. The Intensity of Subconscious States. 8. The Role of Suggestion in Phenomena of Double Consciousness. 9. Double Consciousness in Health. 93 pages, paper. Price, 50c.

The Lost Manuscript. A Novel. By Gustave Freytag. A handsome, elegantly bound edition of this famous and popular German romance. The author writes as a motto for the American edition: "A noble human life does not end on earth with death. It continues in the minds and deeds of friends, as well as in the thoughts and the activity of the nation." In two octavo volumes; boxed. Price, $4.

Diseases of Personality. By Th. Ribot. Authorized translation. Treating of the following subjects: 1. Nature of Personality and consciousness. 2. Organic Disorders. 3. Emotional Disorders. 4. Intellectual Troubles. 5. Dissolution of the Personality. Cloth, 75c.

The Soul of Man. An Investigation of the Facts of Physiological and Experimental Psychology. By Dr. Paul Carus. With 152 Illustrative Cuts and Diagrams. Price $3, pages 480. Printed on extra fine paper, handsomely bound in cloth. The subject-matter of the work is divided into the following sections: 1. The Philosophical Problem of Mind. 2. The Rise of Organic Life. 3. Physiological Facts of Brain-Activity. 4. The Immortality of the Race and the Data of Propagation. 5. The Investigations of Experimental Psychology. 6. The Ethical and Religious Aspects of Soul-Life. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. 40 cents.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure. By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol. 12mo. 399pp., $1.50.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

IN THE

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial, At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW. WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER.

10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not included in the New Testament.

Price, $1

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, 75 cents

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLINOT.

Price, $2

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth. 75 cents.

Christianity a Fiction.

Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 883 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.
6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Port. Pap., 50c.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS,
HISTORY,
STATISTICS,
AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF
THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
WITH PORTRAIT OF
THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
3 " The Church Robbing the People.
2 " Thanksgiving.
3 " Sabbath Laws.
14 " Children and the Church.
10 " Woman and the Church.
6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.
2 " Studies in Natural History.
4 " The Bible and Science.
15 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.
1 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
4 " The Atonement Scheme.
3 " The Lord and His Works.
30 " Prayer.
1 " The Creeds.
1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
5 " Missionaries.
1 " The Lord's Instruments.
25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1 " The Church and Slavery.
2 " Priests and Politics.
4 " Ireland and the Church.
2 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
1 " The Uses of the Cross.
9 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
4 " Persecutions of the Church.
12 " Some Allegories.
3 " Heaven.
6 " Hell.
7 " Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter absurdity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER

POPE'S AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By
G. W. ROOTS.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambaetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake..... 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller..... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall..... 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Lyndall's Belfast Inaugural and Portrait..... 25
13 Essays on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
18 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh..... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake..... 5
20 Superstition. Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts..... 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts..... 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts..... 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake..... 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H..... 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts..... 10
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts..... 5
44 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake..... 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
5 20 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake..... 5
13 Specimen of the Bible. Esther. Holyoake..... 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H..... 10
15 Lucifrons Aspects of Christianity. A. H..... 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz..... 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

150 AMERICAN WATCH

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 30 days; is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.

It has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lovers' Pattern, 240 beats to minute. No key required to wind and sets weight 4 oz.; exactly like cut. Post-paid for $1.50, 3 for $4.00, 12 for $15.00. By express, mention paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CHARM. AGENTS & stockholders send for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BROS.,
65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT O. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL.

Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	Oxidized,	each $2.50
"	10 ounces per doz.,	"
"	Oxidized,	3.00
"	14 ounces per doz.,	"
"	Oxidized,	3.00
"	gilt bowl,	"
"	10 ounces per doz.,	"
"	Oxidized,	3.50
"	sectional gilt,	"
"	10 ounces per doz.,	"
Orange "	Oxidized, plain bowl,	2.75
"	gilt	3.25
Sugar "	" satin "	3.00
"	gilt	3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Ba ges, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer. (If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for pricelists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy. Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and Reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. RAGAN & Co., Atty's Washington, D.C.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST,
For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 35 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,

Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

To regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABULES.

The word which came unto Jeremiah from the Lord -- saying:--
Go unto the house of the Rechabites, and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the Lord -- and give them wine to drink. --
I brought them into the house of the Lord --
And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups; and I said unto them, DRINK YE WINE.
But they said, WE WILL DRINK NO WINE. etc.
-- Jere, XXXV, 1, 2, 4, 5, 6. --

THE RECHABITES BELIEVE IN TEMPERANCE--THE LORD DOESN'T.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations. 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.
Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature -- i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.

Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church: Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. Bennett. 8vo, 1,119 pages. Morocco, gilt edges. Price, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per vol.

ume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

EAGLE BRAND.

THE BEST

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO.,
Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.

13t18

HEAVEN AND ITS WONDERS

From Things heard and seen in the Spiritual World, by

EMANUEL SWENDBERG;

THE LAST JUDGMENT,

as witnessed by him in 1757.

Both books (the first in cloth 375 pp. and the second in paper 208 pp.) sent by mail for $1.00. Address exactly
Am. Swedenborg Printing & Publishing Society,
Dept. "A," 20 COOPER UNION, N. Y. CITY.

Steow17

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, 10 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine, and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

News of the Week.

GRESHAM is spoken of as a nominee for the next presidential term.

BARNUM's circus had trouble at New Haven, Conn., with the authorities who opposed an ancient Blue law to its performance on Fast day.

MR. LYNCH, leader of the new sect in Maryland called "the Sanctified Band," announced that he would walk on water on the 11th, but failed to fulfill his promise.

THE government may defer deportation of the Chinese till the next session of Congress gives them another chance to register. Religious bodies are petitioning the government to forbear, fearing retaliation on missionaries in China, perhaps with violence.

THE Presbyterian assembly at Washington, D. C., it is said will depose Dr. Briggs. Rev. Dr. Sunderland said that a previous speaker had "not stated the true cause of the disturbance in the church. Dr. Briggs is the occasion of the controversy and is wholly responsible for it. I would not stand in Dr. Briggs's shoes to-day for worlds."

HUXLEY's lecture on the 18th, on evolution and ethics, awoke attention. One passage was: "Nature is not only non-moral, but often anti-moral. The survival of the fittest, in the sense in which biologists use the phrase, is often distinctly opposed to ethical aims, since the fittest may be either the degraded organism which crowds out higher species or the beast of prey which devours them. Though a moral mood may have arisen out of the process of evolution, so also has moral evil, and there is no reason in the nature of things why one is preferable to the other."

At the last meeting of Sorosis, a New York society of women connected with artistic, literary, and scientific work, Mrs. E. B. Foote rose and said she had heard that some members had plotted to reject Mrs. T. B. Wakeman, who had just been proposed as a member. Accordingly she wished the name withdrawn lest Sorosis should degrade itself by insulting Mrs. Wakeman. The withdrawal was made. Mrs. Alma Calder Johnston said: "I am sorry that this name has been withdrawn. I understand that the reason for some members objecting to Mrs. Wakeman is that her husband has been reported to be an Anarchist and an Atheist." Mr. Wakeman said to a reporter: "I am not an Anarchist or an Atheist. . . . As regards Atheism, I am a believer in the deity, but not in the old way. I have drawn my conclusions from modern science. I follow the lines of Darwin and Huxley, a fact which will go to show that I am not in any sense of the word an Atheist."

On the 19th commissioners and visitors of the Presbyterian general assembly at Washington, D. C., were received by President and Mrs. Cleveland at the White House. The speaker of the delegation said, among other things: "Let me congratulate you upon the fact that sturdy Presbyterians hedge you round about, and that the sturdiest Presbyterian of us all [Mrs. Cleveland] is at your side, a holy benediction to keep you straight to the faith of your ancestors." He concluded with an invitation to visit the assembly. President Cleveland replied: "I assure you it affords me much personal gratification to meet on this occasion the representatives of that great religious denomination which has done so much to make our people better and happier, and which is associated with so many tender and pleasing incidents of my individual experience. The thought is also in my mind that, in the light of my public duties and responsibilities, there is a propriety in extending to you a welcome to this home of the nation's chief executive. We still profess to be a Christian people. This means that no public officer of high or low degree should be unmindful of the restraints of religious sentiment. It means that the religious teaching of our people should lead them to exact from those who make and execute their laws a recognition of these restraints. It means that the rules which a popular religious sense approves should underlie the performance of every public duty; and it means that those who assume to be religious teachers in this land where the people rule are related in responsibility to those in public station. You therefore will, I hope, permit me to say that though you do well to insist upon the conscientious discharge of official obligations, and though you ought never to shrink from the exposure of official shortcomings, the contribution you owe toward accomplishing good government will not be fully made unless you teach the people by precept and example that they will find their safety and welfare in enforcing upon their public servants the observance of the mandates of Christianity and morality."

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 22. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 3, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

SOME PROVIDENTIAL GIFTS.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

By WATSON HESTON.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism I-patched; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

--With Music Written to All the Songs.--

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN. For sale at this office.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. H. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line however, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK--AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE!

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect:

The Sun.

Genesis--The Creation.

Genesis--The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God--The Creation.

The Creation of God--Abraham.

Moses--Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life--Vegetable.

Organic Life--Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul--What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions--Bible Dreams--Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non-Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties--The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters--Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages, Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The

Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies--thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that Infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN.

Price 25 cents.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

For $7.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and the "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times" ($5.00), by D. M. Bennett. In two volumes. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 22. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 3, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - JUNE 3, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Christianity and Geography.

A week or two ago we stated that the Christian church is not entitled to any credit for the discovery of America by Columbus. That church, we went on to declare, is even to be blamed, as a steady opponent and would-be extinguisher of the doctrines that inspired Columbus to his attempt. We will now recount the hostility of the church to those true doctrines of geography, namely that the earth is round, that it may be circumnavigated, etc.

Among the barbarian nations of antiquity it was believed that the earth is a flat plate or tablet, domed or canopied by the sky, which sky rests on the mountains as pillars. This view, with some of those modifications that each nation attached to it, was entertained by the Chaldeans, Jews, and others, from whose scanty knowledge and earnest but erring pens proceeded our Old Testament. In that collection of writings it was incorporated. When, finally, Christ had appeared, and his church had begun to rise, the Christian fathers received this view into full acceptance.

To do this, these ecclesiastics had to overbear and bury, with infinit arguing and the force of arms, the truths on the subject that had been discovered by that brightest of the ancient nations, Greece. In that people, Plato and Aristotle had evolved the idea that the earth is round. This conception was fostered also by the Pythagoreans. But these views—with all those others, generated by that brilliant nation, which could they have been developed would have advanced the dawn of our modern civilization by a thousand years, and by so much have enhanced our state to-day—these precious views were doomed to eclipse under the lowering cloud of Christianity.

Accordingly, as soon as a few among the thinkers in the early church broached the Grecian doctrine of the sphericity of the earth, the great body of the fathers fell upon them tooth and nail. Lactantius showed that scripture contravened the doctrine, and declared that it therefore must be false. Indeed, he said, all the ideas of those who studied astronomy and geography were "bad and senseless." Eusebius pursued, as the best method of turning off this idea, the plan of casting contempt upon all scientific studies. This was done by contrasting their temporal, fleeting worth with the unspeakable value of the heavenly things about to come. To these latter, he argued, should be consecrated all our time and thought. Speaking of investigators, he said: "It is not through ignorance of the things admired by them, but through contempt of the uselessness of their labor, that we think little of these matters, turning our soul to better things." The wise dictum of Basil of Caesarea was that it is "a matter of no interest to us whether the earth is a sphere or a cylinder or a disk, or concave in the middle like a fan." The ever so venerable St. John Chrysostom chimed in against the Grecian doctrine. Another of this view's chief antagonists was Ephrem Syrus, the greatest man of the old Syrian church, widely known as "the lute of the Holy Ghost;" the music that flowed from this notable instrument when breathed into by its ghostly player was of the signification that affirmers of the globe's roundness were conducting themselves very unhandsomely, and must leave off.

But the fathers who followed were not content with merely branding the true doctrine as a heathen one, and therefore untrue. These succeeding fathers, coming under the head of biblical men of science, such famous bishops and writers as Theophilus of Antioch in the second century, Clement of Alexandria in the third, and others in centuries following, besides denouncing the Greek view, constructed a new theory to supplant it. The timbers for this construction they fetched from that lumberyard whence come so many edifices now called "jerry-built"—timbers sadly warped and unsound. To this structure of Christian geography one churchman after another added story after story, till a complete edifice had been reared. From Gen. i, 6, 7, they drew that the creator had, after making the earth, arched it over with a vault or dome of some substance, sufficiently firm to hold one body of waters separate from another body. Further search of that encyclopedia of science and morals, the Bible, brought them to Isa. xl, 22, where they found that the heavens are stretched out "like a curtain" and again "like a tent to dwell in." They were furthermore helped by sundry other pieces of information about the earth and sky, direct from the mouth of him who had made them. Job xxvi, 11, and Ps. cxlviii, 4, form the holy tabernacles wherein reside these breathings of the truth. From all these texts, then, they put together the doctrine that the universe is like a house: the earth is its ground floor, the firmament its ceiling, under which the almighty hangs out the sun to rule the day, and the moon and stars to rule the night. This ceiling is also the floor of the apartment above, and in this is a cistern, shaped, as one of the authorities says, "like a bathing-tank," and containing "the waters which are above the firmament." These waters are let down upon the earth by the almighty and his angels through the "windows of heaven." As to the movement of the sun, there is a citation of passages in Genesis, mixed with metaphysics in various proportions, and this is thought to give ample proofs from the Bible that the earth can not be a sphere.

Those who are devoted to search of the precious truths contained in scripture, will be delighted to learn that this eliciting of knowledge from the divine pages did not halt at the point thus far reached in our narration. They will, no doubt, at once procure the volumes which we are about to indicate, and joyfully prepare themselves for a handsome enlargement of their cosmological information, upon hearing that in the sixth century Cosmas Indicopleustes, intent on surpassing former church authorities, constructed, with its every statement based on scripture, nothing less than a minutely detailed and complete system of the universe. In sketching this work of sacred science, we shall use the words of Ex-President White of Cornell University, in his "Warfare of Science" articles in the Popular Science Monthly, to which valuable series we are under great obligations throughout. According to Cosmas, says Mr. White, "the earth is a parallelogram, flat, and surrounded by four seas. It is four hundred days' journey long and two hundred broad. At the outer edges of these four seas arise massive walls closing in the whole structure and supporting the firmament or vault of the heavens, whose edges are cemented to the walls. These walls inclose the earth and all the heavenly bodies. The whole of this theologic-scientific structure was built most carefully and, as was then thought, most scripturally. Starting with the expression applied in the ninth chapter of Hebrews to the tabernacle in the desert, Cosmas insists, with other interpreters of his time, that it gives the key to the whole construction of the world. The universe is, therefore, made on the plan of the Jewish tabernacle—box-like and oblong. He works all this into his system, and reveals, as he thinks, treasures of science. This vast box is divided into two compartments, one above the other. In the first of these men live and stars move, and it extends up to the first solid vault, or firmament, above which live the angels, a main part of whose business it is to push and pull the sun and planets to and fro. Next he takes the text, 'Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters,' and let it divide the waters from the waters,' and other texts from Genesis; to these he adds the text from the Psalms, 'Praise him, ye heaven of heavens, and ye waters that be above the heavens'; then casts all these growths of thought into his crucible together, and finally brings out the theory that over this vast vault is a vast cistern containing 'the waters.' He then takes the expression in Genesis regarding the 'windows of heaven' and establishes a doctrine regarding the regulation of the rain, to the effect that the angels not only push and pull the heavenly bodies to light the earth, but also open and close the heavenly windows to water it. To understand the surface of the earth, Cosmas studies the table of shew-bread in the Jewish tabernacle. The surface of this table proves to him that the earth is flat, and its dimensions prove that the earth is twice as long as broad; its four corners symbolize the four seasons; the twelve loaves of bread, the twelve months; the hollow about the table proves that the ocean surrounds the earth. To account for the movement of the sun, Cosmas suggests that at the north of the earth is a great mountain, and that at night the sun is carried behind this; but some of the commentators ventured to express a doubt here; they thought that the sun was pushed into a great pit at night and pulled out in the morning.

"Nothing can be more touching in its simplicity than Cosmas's summing up of his great argument. He declares: 'We say, therefore, with Isaiah that the form of the heaven that embraces the universe is that of a vault, with Job that it is joined to the earth, and with Moses that the length of the earth is greater than its breadth.' The treatise closes with rapturous assertions that not only Moses and the prophets, but also angels and apostles agree to the truth of his doctrine, and that at the last day God will condemn all who do not accept it. This theory was . . . received as virtually inspired, and was soon regarded as a fortress of scriptural truth. Some of the foremost men in the church devoted themselves to buttressing it with new texts and throwing about it new outworks of theological reasoning; the great body of the faithful considered it a direct gift from the almighty."

To trace these teachings up through the mediæval centuries to the time of Columbus, and show how they were employed against that bold theorizer and very nearly succeeded in preventing his voyage, will require space in another number of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The People's Fight for Education Against the Clergy.

The strife is still on between the masses at and near Chicago who wish to educate themselves, and avoid demoralizing resorts, on Sundays, and the preachers who insist that those masses shall not educate themselves, and shall be left with only demoralizing resorts to visit on their sole leisure day.

The closing of the Exposition gates on Sunday, the 21st, and previously, elicited indignant comments from the larger number of journals, and spokesmen of the intelligent classes, throughout the country. Its evil effects on morals received hundreds of notices, such for example as the following two:

"It is said that fifty thousand people clamored in vain for admittance to the World's Fair on Sunday last. If this be true, at least fifty thousand glasses of beer were consumed in Chicago that day which would not have been absorbed had a more liberal policy prevailed."

"If the Sabbatarians are prepared to deny or dispute that the people who desire to attend the Fair on Sunday and who are debarred from attending the Fair on Sunday will be worse occupied, from a humane or a moral or even a Sabbatarian point of view, they simply show that they do not know what they are talking about. The opening of the Fair on Sunday is the greatest moral boon that could be conferred upon the people."

Opinions of prominent journals and persons adverse to the legality of the Sunday-closing attempt were abundant, too. For instance:

"Nobody has ever before contended that Congress has constitutional authority to enact Sunday laws or other police regulations for the several states or for any part of any of them. There is no clause of the Constitution which even suggests a grant of such power to Congress, none that can be tortured into such meaning except by a construction which would sweep away all limitations, make Congress absolute as the British Parliament is, and reduce the states to merely permissive governments, existing by grace of Congress alone. The United States courts are the jealous guardians of the powers 'not granted by this Constitution,' but 'reserved to the several states or to the people.'"

This is good Jeffersonian principle. Equally commendable is the following logic:

"The grant of certain money to the Exposition by the federal government, with a proviso that the Fair shall not be opened on Sunday, is nothing more than a civil contract, and must be enforced like all other contracts. Like other contracts, too, it is binding on each party only so long as its terms are complied with by the other. And if the government has violated its terms the other party is no longer bound to respect them either in morals or in law. On the other hand, if the local authorities violate the agreement the government has a perfect right to withhold the appropriation, or, if it has been paid over, to recover it by judicial process, just as it recovers money due it under other contracts and by private parties. But in no case has the government commissioners the right to close the Exposition on Sunday. Neither the terms of the agreement nor any other act of Congress confers on them the right to close the gates or to assume a jurisdiction not belonging to their function. In order to exercise police jurisdiction over any part of a state, the federal government must acquire a title to such territory or plot by purchase or voluntary grant. This is not done nor attempted to do in the case under consideration."

Another point is:

"An interesting question that will doubtless enter into the litigation has been raised by General Lippitt, of Washington, and concerns the constitutional power of Congress to do by indirection what it cannot do directly. It must be conceded that an act of Congress requiring a corporation organized under the laws of Illinois to refrain from doing on Sunday business which is lawful in Illinois on that day would be absolutely void as being beyond the constitutional competency of Congress. Does Congress gain any additional powers by annexing, as a condition of a grant of money to a quasi-national enterprise, a prohibition which would be decided by any court to be inoperative if it were made nakedly? In other words, does an appropriation give Congress jurisdiction over matters which are not committed to it by the Constitution?"

This view of the case is repeated by another organ of opinion:

"The rule of law is that when a grant is made with an unlawful condition the condition fails and the grant stands. Congress has sought to accomplish by indirection what it could not constitutionally accomplish directly. Not only by the universal law of construction, but by a distinct clause of the Constitution, the states retain all the power not expressly granted to the federal government. Among these powers is the right of police regulation, which includes the right to open bar-rooms, theaters, or expositions on Sunday or to close them. Such questions can be determined only by the state. Congress has no more to do with them than it has with the national affairs of China. But in an attempt to avoid the constitutional difficulty Congress made a grant of money to the Exposition with a condition that there shall be no Sunday opening. In other words, it sought to accomplish by a proviso in an appropriation bill what the Constitution gives it no power to do directly. If Congress shall choose to regard the grant as in the nature of a contract, suit may be brought to recover what has been paid and the case tried on its merits. But we cannot see how in any event the federal government can close the gates."

Again:

"The province of national legislation is strictly defined by the Constitution. Such powers and functions of government as are not therein defined belong not to the federal establishment but to the states. Illinois has the undoubted power to say whether World's Fairs held in Chicago or elsewhere in that state shall be allowed to open their gates on Sundays. The Congress of the United States has no power to decide whether World's Fairs or other exhibitions held in Chicago, in New York, in San Francisco, or anywhere else except in Washington, shall be opened or closed on Sundays. There has been no pretense that Congress has such power. The provision that the Columbian Exposition should be shut up on Sunday was attached by the last Congress as a condition to a grant of money. If Chicago should keep the money, but repudiate the condition, we do not see how the condition could be enforced. If she should return the money, her right to open or shut the gates at will, subject only to the laws of Illinois, would be indisputable. The point has been raised that the law with the Sunday-closing provision is unconstitutional, inasmuch as it amounts to the appropriation of money to hire citizens of the United States to refrain from doing what the government of the United States has no power to prohibit them from doing; and a very strong point it is."

An opinion of Charles Levi Woodbury, of Boston, must close our reproduction of these sensible judgments:

"In my opinion the national government has no authority to declare that the gates of the World's Fair shall not be opened on Sunday. The control of the park in which the Fair is situated is not within the jurisdiction of the national government, but of the local authorities. Whether the gates shall be opened is a police regulation."

But while the Freethinkers and the fair-minded laymen of the country were declaring as above, the pious despots were exerting themselves frantically to move public opinion, and governmental action, in the opposite direction.

For instance, Edwin Walker, attorney of the local directory, states that, by way of comment on the legal advice he gave the directory in favor of at least partial opening of the Fair gates Sundays, he has been deluged with letters from women "whose language would be a disgrace to London fishwomen. They all consign me to a pretty warm place." We are fain to reproduce a Chicago Herald comment on this incident:

"No incident in the cruel and bigoted attitude of the fanatics opposed to common sense about Sunday and the Fair is more amazing than the part women, professedly pious women especially, have had in the crusade against the rights of the people. The women who have promoted and participated in the agitation for excluding the people Sunday from the Fair are, of course, women who need not go to the Fair Sunday, because they are at liberty to go to it week-days. They are not likely to derive much benefit from it. Their degree of education is so small that so far as they are concerned, there need not be a Fair any day in the week. They are for the most part smatterers in small ways, dealing chiefly with foreign missionary questions, and having no sympathy with and no interest in the women who work in their own country, and whose labor secular days necessarily will deprive them of any opportunity to visit the Fair unless it be open Sunday. It is these women, the professionally 'holier in the sight of God than thou,' that have written to Edwin Walker the letters he says would disgrace London fishwomen."

Then, the Presbyterian general assembly in session at Washington, D. C., appointed a special committee of five to wait on the president and urge Sunday closing. Besides, they passed this resolution:

"The assembly expresses its profound gratitude to almighty God for the success of the effort to secure in our national legislature a prohibition of Sunday opening at the Columbian Exposition, and its appreciation of the action of Congress in deciding by so large a majority to continue the time-honored course of the American people in doing reverence to the Lord's day. It joins the whole church in hearty thanksgiving that we have been spared the humiliation as a Christian nation of a public sanction of the Sunday opening of the World's Fair. And it here by voices what it believes to be the well-nigh unanimous judgment of the church it represents in declaring that any attempt after this public and official expression of the nation's will to open the gates of the exhibition on the Sabbath would be a gross affront to the Christian conscience and a flagrant breach of faith. And, inasmuch as the local managers have decided to open the gates of the Exposition in defiance of the authority of Congress and in clear violation of the principles of the common honesty, as well as of God's command; therefore,

"Resolved, That we urge upon our people the importance of standing by their consciences at whatever sacrifice of personal profit or pleasure. If the trial of their integrity is come, let them not defile themselves with the king's meat."

This assembly finally distinguished itself by ordering that if the Fair was opened Sunday the exhibit of the Presbyterian church should be removed.

President Cragin, of the Columbian Sunday Association, expressed himself:

"I am surprised that the resolution of the directors to open Sundays should be taken seriously, if it is taken at all. It seems to me that it amounts to nothing. After opening the gates for a period under this resolution, they might by another resolution declare that they would not refund this money to the government."

"What right have they to refund the money, anyhow? As a stockholder in the corporation I could enjoin them from doing so. So could any one of the stockholders. The directors do not own that appropriation. They are responsible, as the directors of any corporation are responsible, to the stockholders."

At Steubenville, O., eight churches, representing three thousand members, held two mass meetings to protest against opening the Fair on Sunday. Resolutions were passed, and telegrams sent to President Cleveland, Governor McKinley, and the World's Fair directors. One hundred persons who had intended going to the World's Fair pledged themselves not to go if it was opened on Sunday. One minister predicted that "the Lord might visit cholera on the United States if the World's Fair was opened on Sunday."

The Methodists passed this resolution:

"Resolved, That in view of what has transpired during the last week, and the present status of the question, we hereby confirm our action of last week relating to the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday, and withdraw our exhibit."

One declaration of the pietists of the United States was that Sunday opening would be anarchy; and they called on the president to suppress it with troops. Still another assertion equally brilliant was that the Fair should be declared a bonded warehouse, and so under the jurisdiction of the national government exclusively, like other bonded warehouses. This claim was made in absurd ignorance of the presence of the property of almost all the nations of the globe within that collection which they wish to hold is under the sole sway of this government. Next they will call the Fair a safety vault or a territory or another District of Columbia.

As to the action produced in the Fair managers by these solicitations this way and that, the first noteworthy step after those recorded in our last issue was taken on Tuesday, the 23d ult. On that day the national commission voted on the opening order of the directory. When the commission was called to order the speaker drew attention to a large stack of telegrams petitioning for Sunday closing that had been sent to that body. The vote was 31 for letting the opening rule stand to 27 for repealing it. The chair decided that as a majority vote, or 55, is necessary to change a rule of the local board, the commission had failed to act on this one. Consequently this opening rule would have to stand until at some future session the commission could secure a majority against it. A storm of protests arose from the Sunday-closing commissioners. These commissioners are anxious for the approval of the pietists of the land, whose gaze is fixed on them, and perhaps nourish in their bosoms expectations of some high political office to be obtained thereby. We must note the remarks of Commissioner Massey, of Delaware, which were that divine law forbade the breaking of the Sabbath, and that this was not a question of human law, but one for each individual commissioner to take to himself, and his conscience, and his God.

On Wednesday, the 24th, the commissioner Massey just mentioned found that his saintly feelings were being so lacerated by these God-defying doings that he could no longer remain on a board capable of them, and he tendered his resignation.

On the same day the World's Fair council of administration issued an order to Horace Tucker, superintendent of the bureau of admissions, to throw the gates of Jackson park wide open on the next Sunday. And on the same date, as a result of the conference at Washington, D. C., between Attorney-General Olney and District Attorney Milchrist, of Chicago, the latter was empowered to seek an injunction in the federal court against Sunday opening of the World's Fair. When Mr. Milchrist left for Chicago it was understood that he would begin an action on his arrival home. As the attorney-general of the United States may be assumed to be acting agreeably to the desires of his superior, the president, to President Cleveland the credit for this action may be attributed.

In obedience to the instructions received from the presidential subordinate at Washington, the district attorney at Chicago filed in court on Saturday, the 27th ult., an injunction against opening the gates Sundays. The bill was filed on behalf of the United States, and is against President Higginbotham, Director-General Davis, Director of Works Burnham, Colonel Rice, commanding the Columbian Guards, and Superintendent of Admissions Tucker. The history of the creation of the Exposition and appropriations by Congress is given, particular attention being directed to the Sunday-closing clause in the Congressional act of Aug. 5, 1892. It also reports the fact that the majority of the members of the national commission gave the Sunday-closing clause their approval, and sets forth that neither the commission nor the board of directors have the legal power or authority to change or abrogate the rule adopted in accordance with the acts of Congress. The bill then says that the defendants have adopted a rule to open the Exposition on Sunday, May 28th, and every Sunday thereafter. They have announced that the gates will be open on that day, and they will open, the bill says, unless the court orders otherwise. The defendants are considering and confederating together, and are usurping the control of the buildings and grounds in defiance of the laws passed by Congress. In addition to being called usurpers of authority, the defendants are charged with conspiring to set aside the acts of Congress and open the gates, to the great prejudice and injury of the common welfare. This injunction was not filed in time to be passed on before last Sunday, and the Fair gates were consequently left, to the horror and dismay of the Sabbatarians, without any influence capable of closing them. They were open on Sunday, the 28th of May. Whether they will be on any following Sunday remains to be seen. The injunction, it was announced, would receive judicial decision on Wednesday, the 31st ult.

Pleasant it is to record this fact, that last Sunday the Exposition gates were open. The buildings, it is true, were not all open. How many thousands were disappointed in wandering in that section where the state buildings are in Jackson park can not be told in exact numbers, but there were many. It was not thought that all the state buildings would be open, but more were closed than was expected. The whole of New England, with one exception—Vermont—was not only closed, but the blinds were drawn, and where there were outside shutters they were closed. The Massachusetts building was shut as securely as a bank after banking hours. "By vote of the great and general court of Massachusetts, this building is closed on Sunday, the Lord's day," was the legend on the door. Pennsylvania was also barred, thus disappointing thousands of people who lingered around to get a glimpse of the old Liberty Bell, which, in all of its ringing out of liberty in the early days, did not ring out enough of that article to suit those who stood before the building in which the old toesin was locked up Sunday. Missouri, too, closed its doors. Virginia locked its doors, but left the windows up, so that visitors could look in. Of course several other buildings were closed—New York, Kentucky, Indiana, Nebraska, Texas, Arkansas, and others—but it was because they are not furnished and are not open on week-days. All the other states not named kept open house and vied with one another in extending hospitality. In the Wisconsin Building a young woman played operatic airs all day. New York placed a delegation in front of its handsome building, which politely explained that the doors were not closed on account of any opposition to the Sunday-opening business, but in order to push the work on the interior to completion. But the buildings of the national government were tightly closed. Stiff-necked marines stood at the doors and refused entrance to all who sought admission. Marines also barred the way to the battle-ship Illinois, although thousands went up on the pier and begged and implored for a sight of the interior of the monster. The great department buildings were open. The exhibits of foreign lands are mostly uncompleted. When they are ready some will be opened to view Sundays, while others, like those of pharisaical England for instance, will be shut. Individual exhibitors will be left to follow their wills.

The attendance was estimated at one hundred and fifty to two hundred thousand. That the Fair would be open was known only late Saturday afternoon, hence no arrangements could be made for the excursions from neighborhoods for hundred of miles around which will bring huge concourses on future Sundays if the exhibition is open.

The lie was given to the Sabbatarians who regularly predict drunkenness and disorder at every proposed Sunday opening of an exposition or a museum. The crowd was extraordinarily quiet. There were only five arrests made on the Fair Grounds all day. One of these was of a woman who wanted to see her daughter in a beauty show on the grounds, and not having a half-dollar jumped the fence. The other four were of workmen who were employed on the grounds, but who managed to sneak away from their jobs and secure enough liquor to get drunk. They made a disturbance, and were put under arrest. It is a fact worthy of notice that of the five arrests made, none was of people who were visitors to the Fair. There was not the slightest evidence of drunkenness. There was no boisterousness. The patrol wagons remained in the stations. The Columbian Guards had nothing to do but answer questions. Indeed, officials who are in attendance at the Fair every day, and others, have not as yet seen an intoxicated person on the grounds. There are no resorts of any character where intoxication could easily be incurred. In fact, the crowd last Sunday was altogether too quiet. It looked a good deal like a Puritan congregation. There was nothing Continental about it. At the Paris Exposition on Sundays one could see people shouting and laughing and playing and showing that they were enjoying themselves. It was not so at Chicago last Sunday. "The people look'd," says a dispatch, "as if they felt oppressed by something. They did not seem to feel as if they were entirely free. They stepped along gingerly and cautiously and would not talk very long." Thus, even over this concourse assembled in unexampled scenes of proud and hope-giving achievements, successful in having done so in spite of opposition, Christianity the Religion of Sorrow had thrown its gloomy pall. Energetically must we all labor for the day when the Galilean's sad cult shall have disappeared and life shall, under a religion of natural freedom and healthy joy, have become one perpetual Exposition, and Festival more than Columbian of pride and delight.

Away with tyranny and limitation and meddling. The earth for men and freedom and gladness, not for Christ and dolor and denial. Open the Fair Sundays. Down with the Sabbath.

One of the best contributions on the question of Lincoln's religion is Colonel Ingersoll's letter to General Collis. Mr. Remsburg's work on Lincoln contains this letter.

Christian Fundamentals About to Be Probed.

The case of Rev. Dr. Briggs, of New York, accused of heresy, is about to be tried by the Presbyterian general assembly at Washington, D. C. This trial will be on appeal from his former one by his local synod. By the latter body he was, substantially, acquitted. It is thought that he will now be convicted. The questions involved are of vital importance to the Christian religion. Their great moment is thus spoken of, with none too great stress, by the New York Sun:

"The present meeting of the general assembly at Washington is of universal interest for believers and unbelievers. It has become a great event, the greatest in the whole history of the Presbyterian church, and of momentous consequence to all Protestantism. The very charter of the Protestant church is in dispute, whether it is genuine or spurious. The difference to be settled is too fundamental to be compromised after the usual theological fashion."

One of the questions involved, for example, is whether the Bible is wholly God's word, and free from error—inerrant, to use a shorter term. Dr. Birch, the leader of the prosecution, says: "What is really Presbyterian doctrine? is to be answered not for ourselves alone, but for all American Presbyterians, both now and for some years to come, and must be answered by the whole church." This notorious old Presbyterian hardshell then appeals to the assembly: "Hence your appellant as the spokesman of hundreds of thousands of Presbyterians, in the name of law and order, of denominational loyalty, of scripture precept, and biblical example; in the name of the historic, orthodox, evangelical, constitutional, missionary Presbyterian branch of the church, beseeches this venerable court to bless the church and the world and to exercise its authority in a crisis so momentous." THE TRUTH SEEKER, in the name, not of the dreadful things above mentioned, but of the Freethought propaganda which aims to keep the people informed on what each latest research into the nature of scripture discovers that famous piece of writing to be, will give a full account of the proceedings at this trial.

Readers who have called our attention to several topics, with the desire that they be treated editorially, will please accept the crowded condition of our columns as excuse for the delay. We desire to oblige them all, and will attend to the most pressing of the themes suggested very soon.

Mr. John R. Charlesworth, owing to personal matters, will hereafter be unable to attend to the affairs of the Freethought Federation, and has resigned his secretaryship. Letters on Federation business should be addressed to Geo. W. Robertson, 345 West Randolph street, Chicago, Ill., or to Mr. Putnam, who will attend to them.

The Masonic journal, the Knight, prints this item of brotherly news: "A member of a lodge in New Mexico was tried by his lodge for un-Masonic conduct in writing the following, and was acquitted: 'I believe the holy Bible to be a dangerous book, one that has been directly the cause of more outrages upon innocence and helplessness than any other cause in the history of mankind. It should be taken from the altars of Masonry as a maligner to the glorious architect of the universe, the God of nature.' The grand lodge reversed the decision and expelled him."

The American girl of a generation ago represented a delicate type physically. But her delicacy of physique, remarks the Sun, appears to have been lost, partly through the adoption of athletic habits in imitation of the English. The most famous ladies' tailor in this country said to a reporter that within ten years the average native-born young woman of twenty has become one inch larger in bust measure and more than an inch bigger around the hips, as shown by his measurements. "Their figures are better developed altogether," he said, "and they do not need or use so much padding as formerly. I attribute the increased measurement about the hips chiefly to tennis playing." Yes, the

(Continued on page 344.)

Communications.

Reply to Otto Wettstein.

NO. III.

Dear Sir: As the caption of your last article in THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 29th is in the form of a question, presumably addressed to me, permit me to consider it at the outset of my reply. Yes, we have not only a "spiritual sense," but spiritual senses. I feel justified by personal experience in making this positive, affirmative answer since I am conscious of possessing and using such senses. But as it might be difficult, perhaps, to convey an intelligible idea of sight to one who had been blind from birth, so it may be difficult to explain the nature of a spiritual sense to one who has never consciously made use of it.

Before we proceed further will friend Wettstein kindly answer the following questions:

Have you ever seen objects in your dreams which were not among your material surroundings at the time? I have.

Did you see them with your material eyes, at that moment closed in sleep or veiled in darkness? I doubt it.

If not, with what eyes did you see them?

With what organs of vision do the blind see in their dreams?

Can we see at all without eyes of some sort, and can we perceive with one or more senses anything that has absolutely no existence? If so, of what value to us is the testimony of our senses in any case?

You may take a short cut out of this difficulty by denying that I see at all in my dreams; but there my personal consciousness is against you, and back of personal consciousness we cannot go. Discredit its testimony and we strike a deadly blow at the foundation of all knowledge. Or you may declare that the vision, etc., is that of the imagination only, which merely substitutes one mystery for another, and explains nothing, until you can demonstrate what this wonderful, godlike imagination is that can create a world of vivid realities out of nothing and store it within the four walls of a narrow sleeping apartment! Could the Almighty Himself do more?

Dreamland is a very real world to me while I am in it. It shows me long vistas of city streets and broad reaches of field and sky. I have struck my heel upon its stony pavements to assure myself of their reality, and have felt as firm a sense of resistance as was ever given back by the pavements of New York or Baltimore. It is a well-peopled country, too. I have met and conversed there with old friends, both in the flesh and out of it, besides making new acquaintances whom I have never met outside of dreamland. My relatives and intimate friends, especially those who have passed from this world, often appear younger and comelier than when I last knew them in the flesh; and I am usually conscious myself of possessing a bodily vigor and elasticity far exceeding anything I have ever known in my so-called waking moments. For in dreamland I am always conscious of being very wide awake and with senses keenly alert and active to take in everything around me.

The familiar phenomena of dreams clearly teach us one of two things: either that sense impressions can take place—sight, hearing, etc., be exercised—without the aid of any organs of sense whatever, material or spiritual, or else that we have a second set of senses which come into conscious operation only when the outer, material senses are quiescent. Take whichever horn of the dilemma you choose, you are welcome to either.

You kindly credit me with the possession of some degree of intelligence and argumentative ability, and in so doing compliment yourself as well as me. Only mind can perceive or appreciate mind; and your own intelligence and ability make you cognizant of the presence of such qualities in me. Thus, you see, "with what judgment ye judge" you are liable to be judged, and this much of scripture is true, at all events. But if mind be essential to the perception, much more, the appreciation of mind, is it not both reasonable and logical to infer that it must be even more essential to its production? And since nature confessedly shows no trace of mind or intelligence, and common sense insists that she could not possibly bestow what she does not possess, is it not rationally clear that we must look above and beyond nature for the Intelligence that controls all her manifold activities, and has evoked that crowning glory of the universe, the Human Mind?

You affirm that "conditions, laws, processes, or operations, based upon or produced by material forms are in themselves not material," and consequently "have no existence per se." How "a powerful factor" can produce "innumerable results," and yet have no existence, is more than I can comprehend. Perhaps the results, likewise, "have no existence," in which case we need not worry much about them. If an object can be said to have any real or demonstrable existence, it seems to me that those things—qualities, properties, or whatever you may choose to call them, which are indispensable to its being, can be no less demonstrably real—perhaps even more so. Certain properties, as form, size, bulk, etc., are called attributes of matter, because always associated with material objects and presumably dependent upon them for continued existence. But in fact the material object is even more dependent upon them for its very being. Take any material form whatever, from an irregular piece of rock to the most highly developed organism, and divest it successively of extension or size, weight, form, and color, and what is left of it? But even when the object is practically annihilated these properties are not destroyed, for we find them reappearing and combining to produce other material forms.

Conditions are not material, you say. Well, steam is one condition of water; ice is another and opposite condition of the same elements. Are steam and ice matter, or what are they? I claim that space is likewise a condition of matter; but is space something or nothing? If something, of what is it composed? If nothing, why seek to locate God, spirit, or anything else therein? If God is in space, and space is nothing, then God is nowhere! Likewise, if we are in space, and space is nothing, then we are nowhere. Do you know, or does anyone know, in fact, where we are in the boundless universe of facts and possibilities? Do we even know what we are in reality?

I accept your proposition that "dogmatic assumption of the knowable is always in order," and that "it is only when theorists affirm doctrines beyond proof and contrary to knowledge, reason, and analogy that such affirmations and their persistent defense become rank dogmatism," and I shall hold you strictly to this statement. So, to insist that when our bodies die they are dead is not dogmatism, because it is a self-evident fact that requires no proof. But to persistently affirm that "we" are identical with and inseparable from our bodies, and therefore necessarily perish with them, is dogmatism, because there is no possibility of proving such an assertion, and all the evidence that exists is to the contrary.

Suppose you and I stood by the recumbent form of a friend who had fallen into a deep sleep. We should be justified in affirming his condition to be one of complete insensibility to his surroundings. The half-closed, expressionless eyes see not our faces as we bend over him, we speak to him but there is no response—our voices fall on deaf ears. Even at the touch of our hands he does not stir. We may discuss topics of the greatest interest and importance to him as we stand there beside him, but he heeds us not. He is as insensible to his surroundings, as unconscious of all that is going on about him, as if he were dead.

But perhaps at the very moment when we are noting and commenting upon his profound unconsciousness of outward things the man himself may be fully awake, and amid other and far-distant scenes be in the active enjoyment of the full tide of conscious life and sensation. He may be conversing with long-departed friends, partaking of delicious viands, listening to sweet sounds, inhaling sweet odors, and gazing upon a landscape bathed in light and decked with beauty. Of all this we should know absolutely nothing did not the sleeper awake and tell us of his dreamland experiences; and even then we should be slow to credit his marvelous story had we not had similar experiences ourselves.

Does not all this convey a striking hint as to what may be the real state of the case when permanent and total physical unconsciousness shall have taken the place of partial and temporary insensibility to outward things? And if in that "sleep of death that knows no waking" such vivid and lasting dreams may come to perpetuate our conscious existence—what then, my friend, what then? Do we do well to deny too recklessly the possibility of such a thing? But no such sleeper has ever returned to tell us of his visions. No? And yet the folk-lore of all peoples and ages is replete with traditions of those who have returned and testified to the reality of the life after death. And in this scientific, practical, and skeptical age Spiritualism has risen almost to the dignity of a science, and Spiritualists in daily increasing numbers are adding their corroborative testimony. Though emanating from all sorts and conditions of men and all phases of social and scientific development, from the lowest to the highest, the testimony is wonderfully unanimous, and everywhere returns an affirmative answer to the ever-recurring question, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

To insist that Christ lived is dogmatic, you say, "because it is claimed a God, not a man, was his father. To dogmatically deny [this] is justifiable, because men are not bred and born without human fathers to-day." And yet, according to the theory of evolution, which you apparently indorse, there was a time when some men, at least, were bred and born without human fathers, but had no other than a brute paternity! Marvelous consistency! A God cannot beget a man, it seems, but a beast may! In other words, Infinite Wisdom may not condescend to enlighten ignorance, but absolute ignorance can enlighten itself and teach what it does not know! Infinite Divine Life may not kindle the spark of humanity in a highly developed, especially prepared animal organism, or embody itself in a human form so as to become apprehensible to the minds of men—that would be an incredible miracle; but utter destitution may impart what it does not possess, and nature, absolutely void of intelligence or purpose, can generate rationality, mind and character! Is not this straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel with a vengeance? Verily, the credulousness of incredulity passes all belief!

For my part, even were the gross and sensual ideas of the relation of the gods to mankind that formerly obtained among degenerate men, still prevalent, I would far rather believe that I was "a daughter of the gods" destined eventually in immortal bloom and comeliness of form and character to verify and justify my divine paternity than to know that I was but the hapless offspring of the beasts that perish, bound down to bestial limitations, and doomed, in spite of the unfulfilled aspirations and intuitive yearnings of my nature, to end a brief, incomplete, incomprehensible, purposeless existence as food for worms, and the equal in the dust of the lowest, vilest reptile that crawls. But then "chacun à son goût."

"So, to affirm the supremacy of nature, its eternity, infinitude, and self-existence, is not dogmatism, because this is a self-evident fact." Is the eternity of nature proven by the mutability and perishability of all natural forms? or its self-existence by the everywhere present evidences of its dependence? "It requires no proof," you say. To my mind, it requires every proof. But "all beyond is idle speculation, wild theory, originating in the brains of ape-men," etc. Now, then, Dogmatist, prove your unwarrantable assertion. Where are your ape-men? Produce them. I challenge you to show even one specimen. Evolutionists have been and are still scouring the world in search of the "missing link" so necessary to establish your theories, but only to confess themselves baffled. You, it seems, have not only discovered this long-sought personage, but have dissected his brain and found therein the origin of ideas and conceptions that have been the inspiration of poet, painter, and musician, for centuries! Marvelous! Why don't you make this important discovery known to the world, so our scientists may corroborate your testimony that an ape-man with stupendous ideas in his brain exists in a certain place in this earth—or in your imagination—which is it?

If such a being as God existed, you say, we would know it. "He Himself would supply the proof." Why, my dear friend, He always does supply the proof and only He can do it. At no age of the world and among no people has He left Himself without a witness. But the nature of a proof and its satisfactoriness depend not only upon the nature of the thing to be proven, but likewise upon the character of those to whom the proof is offered. We do not undertake, for instance, to prove historical facts by mathematical demonstration. So, too, documentary evidence would be no conclusive proof to one who could not read, nor would oral testimony convince one who could not understand the language in which it was offered. One who has felt the love of God shed abroad in his heart can no more question its reality or its divine origin than he can doubt the fact of his own existence. The Spirit that witnesseth with our spirit that we are the children of God utters no uncertain testimony. It is largely a matter of personal experience which, like death and resurrection, or like falling in love, is unintelligible to those who have not passed through it—unmistakable to those who have.

I certainly cannot admit for an instant that Lincoln's character, virtues, and talents were purely attributes of his physique, else the same physique under the same general conditions would inevitably give us the same character, which we know is as far as possible from being the case. I may combine given proportions of any given ingredients a million times and I will never fail to get the same product possessing the same properties as the result. But when nature takes the 263 bones, five hundred muscles, thirty pounds of blood, ten million nerves, heart, brain, and other appurtenances, which you say constitute and are the man, and passes through them the daily allowance of 24,000 gallons of vitalizing air, she gets a different result every time.

Conditions, it is true, have a great deal to do with molding and modifying character—social conditions much more than climatic; but that they do not altogether determine it is proven by the obvious fact that people reared under the same conditions often show the greatest diversity of character and disposition. Two brothers, for instance, born of the same parents, with the same hereditary tendencies, brought up amid the same social and material surroundings, subjected to the same moral, educational, and religious influences, may yet turn out in the end to be the very antipodes of each other, the one becoming self-seeking, hard, and pitiless, the other self-sacrificing, generous, and merciful.

Contrast, for example, the characters of Jay Gould and Henry George, both native Americans of similar physique, both being men of small stature and large, active brains. Both were reared in comparative poverty and early trained to habits of industry and observation, both gave evidences in youth of philanthropic impulses, both were alive to the vast possibilities of wealth offered by the control of natural opportunities. But the one used his knowledge for his own aggrandizement, the other for the benefit of his fellows: one will be remembered chiefly as the bold, unscrupulous stock gambler and daring speculator, the multimillionaire, the remorseless plutocrat and corruptor of legislatures; the other will be revered by a grateful posterity as the Prophet of San Francisco, the first successful exponent of the "dismal science," the preacher of the economic Gospel of Fair Play and Equality of Rights and Opportunities, whose human sympathies are world-wide in their scope, the benefactor of his race who, under the well-merited title of "St. George," has achieved canonization before his death. And may such saints be multiplied among us.

I fully appreciate the difficulties in the way of spiritual thinking, for I have experienced them all and have had to think my way through and out of them, and it has cost me years of close, hard study to do it. But to have the will and the desire to possess this power is in itself half the battle. I can do but little to assist you except, perhaps, to point out some of the obstacles which seem to me to stand in the way, and to offer a few friendly suggestions for their removal. And the only conditions that I need make are that you will kindly accept my well-meant, if imperfect, efforts in your behalf in the spirit in which they are offered, which, I can assure you, is one of sincere good-will.

I do not stand in this discussion as a champion of the church or a defender of any particular form of faith. I am a truth seeker like yourself and a student of spiritual as well as material laws and phenomena. But I am also a lover of fair play and an admirer of common sense; and it seems to me that no one can go to extremes in any argument without doing violence to both. I have been trained to synthetical as well as analytical methods of thought, and have learned not only to take things to pieces to see what they are made of, but also to put this and that together and see what it amounts to. All science has been built up by affirmations, not negations, and human needs are generally supplied by construction rather than by destruction.

It does not require a very high order of intelligence to pull down or destroy. Savage hordes have laid waste in a night the costly products of generations of civilized labor; and the destructive propensity is one that we share with our quondam progenitors and first cousins, according to Darwin, the monkeys. But you as an experienced workman well know the amount of patient effort and intelligent skill necessary to the construction of any mechanical or artistic device, even the simplest. And if, while you are manipulating the gold and silver and precious stones into new and curious combinations of yet greater utility, significance, and beauty, you reflect upon the far greater mental effort and intelligence necessary for the production of a single original idea, you would no more think of referring such a triumph of genius to the half-idiotic brain of an ape-man—did such a creature exist—than of looking to the same source for an original design for your own artistic work. While brutes and brutish men often display a marvelous faculty of imitation, originality of idea and inventive genius are invariably associated only with a high order of intelligence. Put these things together and see what the inevitable inference must be.

To attempt to answer all the points raised in your very suggestive letter, in the limited space remaining to me, would be at the risk of being still more "ambiguous" than you have already found me. Permit me, however, by way of a parting shot, to call your attention to what seems to me a slight inconsistency in your antitheistic argument, and I am done for the time. You say, "If a human form, how can he [God] be the ruler of the universe? or if . . . any other than a human form, how can he possibly possess human attributes to govern, love, protect, judge, reward and punish mankind?" Thus while you deem certain human attributes essential to the Ruler, Protector, and Judge of mankind, you yet affirm that the presence of these very attributes unfits the being possessing them for being the Ruler of the universe. This can be true only on the supposition that Law is not uniform; that the principles most essential to human welfare have no relation to those which govern and determine the processes of nature. But I think it can be demonstrated that the contrary is the case.

If you can conceive of God as Archetypal, Antetypal, Ideal, and at the same time Infinite Man, clothed in a personality that embodies all that is most exalted and desirable in human possibilities, dwelling within and above all material forces, which he controls as our minds control the operations of our bodies, it would rid the subject of many difficulties, and would enable you to get a clearer perception of the vital nature of our relation to Him who is the Sun of our spiritual firmament, the Source and Sustainer of our spiritual life, and of all that is truly human within us. In the light of this perception nature becomes a living scroll, written within and without, and bearing on every page corroborative testimony to this great central truth which unifies and harmonizes all her varied forces and manifestations, and in place of the barren speculations and disheartening, degrading conclusions of materialistic agnosticism substitutes a calm, scientific, sound philosophy satisfying the soul and building up the mind of the student into a form of genuine wisdom.

I regret that I must close these remarks without directly replying to all of your questions. But then you have not answered all of mine yet, so we are quits. Your greatest difficulty in the way of spiritual thinking, it seems to me, lies in your mental bondage to material ideas of time and space. That these have no such wide domain as you ascribe to them I think I can demonstrate to your satisfaction if you care to hear the evidence. For the present I yield you the floor in your turn, and shall await your further comments with lively interest.

A. AUGUSTA CHAPMAN.

International Congress of Freethinkers.

The spirit and enthusiasm which pervades the Freethinkers of our country with regard to the forthcoming Congress is already manifest. From all parts letters of commendation are flowing in, assuring us of the general support in this worthy cause. Let none be lacking in their help; it is a great undertaking, and upon the success of this Congress depends the good name of Freethought in the United States. We stand as a nation before the world, with the greatest democratic institutions possessed by any nation. We stand in the eyes of other countries as a nation of free men and women, hampered by no dogmatic bonds, bound by no chains, held by no creed, and subjected by no serfdom. Let us, then, as Freethinkers of this Congress, emphasize these points in our national character.

We have received the following letter of encouragement from St. Joseph, Mo.:

ST. JOSEPH, MO.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH, Esq., Secretary, Dear Sir: I read the call for the International Congress of Freethinkers to be held in Chicago in September next. I can speak on behalf of the Infidels and Freethinkers of St. Joseph, and assure you and our indefatigable Brother Putnam that it meets with our unqualified approval.

All the Freethinkers here are in favor of a political organization, to nominate a candidate for president and thence on down to constable. We will never amount to anything, never have any standing influence, until we are organized as a political party. We will organize a branch of the Federation and send delegates to attend the convention in September next. We give Brother Putnam and yourself our warmest congratulations in the heroic fight you and he are making against the hydra-headed monster, Religion.

Very respectfully yours,

P. V. WISE.

From Escondido, Cal., Wm. Bechler writes assuring us of help and the formation of a sub-Federation for that district. Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, and Minnesota have promised us a good delegation, so that we are anticipating the grandest and most inspiring meeting that has ever graced the Liberal platform. To those Liberals with whom President Putnam and myself have come in personal contact we appeal for their personal support and financial assistance. Those who know us, will know full well that if given the proper help we can and will make this Congress a credit to our cause in America.

We have business of the greatest importance to transact at this Congress, both for our home work and the good of the cause abroad. Remember, friends, that the principle underlying our movement is confined to no one country, to no race, or to no class of men; it is universal in its nature as the light that permeates our solar system; the principle is one and the same whether we meet with it in the Congo districts of Central Africa or upon the shores of civilized nations; to the lowest savage and to the highest civilized man human freedom is one and the same the world over.

At this Congress we desire to formulate a plan of work that shall build up our party at home and place it upon a more solid basis, to cement our forces into one gigantic party, and, with ceaseless energy and untiring efforts, win for ourselves a name and a position that shall insure us the respect and appreciation of our fellow-men. Let us make this Congress the beginning of a new epoch in the history of our party. Let us make it the commencement of a new era in political and religious freedom. Let us give forth a demonstration worthy of Freethought, and one worthy of the United States. Make this Congress a success, for by so doing you will stimulate those of our home workers to deeds of greater daring; and give them that courage and inspire them with that enthusiasm that is so necessary to engage in the fight against public opinions, and wrest freedom from the reluctant hands of orthodox bigots.

In many places already the church has become an object of derision, though it still fights hard for prestige, and church prestige means the debasement of man, the prostitution of woman, the corruption of children with unsound morals, the trampling of love, the stultification of thought, and their attendant evils. Then let our battle-cry go forth from this Congress and prevent the church from prosecuting her purpose upon mankind. The monopoly and privileges she possesses to-day must and shall be destroyed and the sacrifice of liberty will be the penalty. Freethought and civilization have ever gone hand in hand—they have ever sustained and encouraged each other. The highest examples of human progress, the grandest illustrations of the civilization of man and of what man may be capable without the help of gods, ghosts, or spooks, are now on exhibition in this city. The city itself is a living witness of the marvelous achievements of men, and in this glorious pageant Freethought must not be behind. Congresses of all descriptions are being held now. Religions of all denominations are holding their reunions, and our part must be played, our duty must be done.

We feel that this Congress should be confined to the northern half of this continent, but open to the world. Freethought finds a place in the hearts of all nations. We welcome them to this Congress and ask their cooperation with us to emphasize the glorious traditions of our party.

Friends, do not hesitate to send us a subscription to help us; send us your promises of support by your presence at this meeting. We are in need of help, and if you will give us the means to work with, we will do the work.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,

Sec. Freethought Federation of America.
345 W. Randolph st., Chicago, Ill.

Religion Condoning Immorality.

A letter from a traveler in Turkey says: "The ideas of religion which you meet here are often inexpressibly droll. Take, for instance, the attitude of the Moslem religious authorities as expressed last year in the case of the notorious Kurdish marauder and murderer, Mousa Bey. He was a pious Moslem, and therefore the charges against him could not be true. Or take the case of that sanctified brigand, Anastasius, who captured the train from Constantinople to Vienna not long since, and who is said to have made his captives attend morning and evening prayer, not to speak of other religious exercises." The traveler might have stayed in Christendom and amused himself with religious absurdities just as "inexpressibly droll." Throughout Europe and America simple folk are continually found believing rogues innocent dears if they be but religious, and in many a part of Italy a traveler may, even at the present hour, with wonderful ease run upon a "sanctified brigand" who will cut off his ears if no ransom be forthcoming, but meanwhile will mutter his prayers and tell his beads with prodigious diligence.

Please renew your subscription and obtain another subscriber.

(Continued from page 341.)

race is improving in physique. As theology declines, mankind is improving in this, and in longevity, morals, knowledge, and everything else. Let the clergy, who would exaggerate the evils of the present age because it does not honor them sufficiently, always be met with this veritable and glorious affirmation.

Eternal vigilance on the part of the sensible men of the world is the price of their preservation from destruction by the fools. The hands of Rationalists and those under Rationalistic lines of guidance ever have been and ever will be kept full preventing mad superstitionists from ruining themselves and the Rationalists also. In Brooklyn, New York, the police are kept as busy attending to the doings of a certain new sect as the members of that sect are themselves. This sect is called the New Evangelists, and numbers five hundred members. They believe it not only useless but wicked to give medicine to ill persons. Several persons, including children, having died under their mummeries without medical attendance, strict measures against them have had to be taken. The Lutherans, from whom the sect has made most converts, have specially singled it out for the attention of the authorities, pointing out the fact that the common law declares that "it is no answer to the charge of manslaughter that the parent so neglected from the conscientious religious belief that it was wrong to call in medical aid, and that medical aid was not required, and not from any intention to disobey the law."

World's Fair Notes.

THE CHILDREN'S BUILDING.

After leaving the Woman's Building everyone who is interested in the little folks will stray over the Children's Building to see what pretty things are provided for their entertainment. The ladies of New York have presented a collection of dolls dressed in the costumes of the different centuries, from the fifteenth to the present. Japan has sent a collection radiant with all the fashion of the land of the rising sun. Toys, hobby-horses, rocking chairs, swings, cradles, are in abundance. There will be luncheons, plays, games, and every simple entertainment. It is the intention to care for children of all ages while their parents are viewing the grounds.

Not only, however, in the Children's Building are there things delightful and hilarious for the youngsters, but throughout the Fair there are for them scenes of perpetual amusement. I think the children will get more out of this Fair than the old folks. It sometimes seems as if it were originated for their especial benefit. Children by all means should come to this Fair. It will be the glory of a lifetime. Only youth after all can enjoy this Fair to the utmost and revel in the exuberance of its attractions. The play impulse here can have full sweep. In the soft effluence of spring a million flowers will bloom and a thousand birds will sing and the beautiful marble figures will seem almost alive in the festival atmosphere. What a place for children to romp and roam! What a place for them to dance, with the great illuminated pictures on every side, the buildings cloud-like and gorgeous in their summer beauty. What a place for adventurous voyage along the beautiful lagoon, winding in and out among superb edifices, with ever-changing views, with gilded boats and flaunting colors, while music sweet floats ever on the air. It is enchantment indeed—the stretch of lovely water, giant sculpture, white walls, resplendent roofs, echoing domes. Let the gay and festive gondolier dash on and carry the merry band in royal pomp by the Court of Honor, the statue of the Republic, the magnificent marble beasts, the Columbia fountain, the peristyle through whose luminous spaces glances the mighty lake, and on whose roof sparkles the triumphant procession of the states. What intoxication for the youthful senses! And more than this—just think of it, and let us all be boys and girls again and realize the genuine poetry of life—there will be more candy than a million children can eat in a year; huge caldrons of sugar will be boiled down to crystal sweetness and rolled and twisted into every sort of shape and color. There will be gorgeous dolls that will do everything almost—eat, drink, sleep, wake, and dress themselves it may be, and comb their hair and wash their faces; toy birds will sing until they fall off their golden perch; toy steam engines, saw-mills, ships, and race-tracks with nickel-plated horses that never tire of running; toy dogs as big as real ones, sheep that bleat, goats with long beards, punchinellos and columbines that dance like fairies, and the doll's trousseau—I can't describe the splendor, the fashion, the wonder of it all—but no doll can sing, like Flora McFlimsey, that she has "nothing to wear." Every doll is magnificently appareled. Yes, the World's Fair is the place for children, to give them happiness and a good "send-off" for a healthy human existence; better than a thousand Bibles, a thousand religions, and a thousand gods. I hope all the children in America can visit the World's Fair. It will be a priceless inheritance for the new generation.

It is sometimes asked, What will science give in the place of the Christian religion? I answer, for one thing, the World's Fair. Not one single thing, from the first shovelful of dirt to the cap-sheaf of the proudest structure, has been contributed by the Christian religion. It is all the result of purely materialistic science. Every glory, every grace, every ornament, every exhibit, every building is the direct result of Atheistic knowledge. There is not a glimmer of divine providence in tower, dome, roof, wall, picture, statue, engine, or ship. We thank God for nothing. We revel and glory in our own humanity and its illustrious works.

THE VISTA OF STATE AND FOREIGN BUILDINGS.

A splendid, picturesque, and unique village of thirty-seven buildings is the vista of states. There is every variety of architecture, old-fashioned and new-fashioned, representing the woodland, the wild prairies, ancient elegance, and modern life. These are not designed so much for exhibits as for sociability, acquaintance, official and neighborly intercourse. One can linger all day in these comfortable and stately mansions. There are rocking-chairs, lounges, smoking-rooms, fireplaces, beautiful pictures, curious relics, kitchens, parlors, bedrooms, etc. In roaming through this village one can witness the congregated life of all the states of the Union. It is like a trip through the whole vast country. History, legend, romance, promise and prophecy are all here; quaint memorials of the past side by side with insignia of the future's glory.

We begin our journey with the imposing building of Illinois, who naturally takes the lead among her sisters. This building is one of the great structures of the Exposition. It has exhibits covering every department of the Fair. The building cost $250,000. It can be seen from almost every portion of the grounds, with its lofty dome. It is classic in design, embellished with carving, mural decorations, and statuary. There are an educational display, collections illustrating the natural history of the state, a magnificent exhibit by the state fish commission; products of the several branches of agriculture; architectural drawings of every public building; memorial hall, with flags and trophies of the war. The building is 160 feet wide and 450 feet long, with a schoolhouse 75 by 60 feet at the end. Fountains and flowers adorn the grounds. The figure crowning the main entrance represents "Illinois Welcoming the Nations."

We next drift to the California building. It is after the manner of the old adobe mission church. I don't like it. It is not suited to the genius of California. It is too squat and too sepulchral and altogether solemn and barbaric. The faith it represents is not the faith of California to-day, nor is anything of the prosperity of California rooted in the dull life of that old mission-house. Had the mission prevailed the bloom of California would have been lost. Its glorious climate would only have nurtured idleness and superstition. California, in whose golden land we see the beauty of the Aegean, should have had for its building the airy and Grecian architecture, something lofty and magnificent—and not this lowly and somber edifice. Within, however, all is brilliantly changed. Here is splendor and magnificence. There are thousands of exhibits showing the resources of the state. The total floor space is 100,000 square feet. There is a roof garden to lighten the semi-tropical appearance. An orange grove will bloom and fruit here during the summer. There is received from San Diego an immense palm tree, 100 years old, and 52 feet high. There is on exhibition a raised map of California, which shows its wonderful mountains and valleys. The Valley of California, the upper part named Sacramento, the lower part San Joaquin, is the largest continuous valley in the world. It is 450 miles long, and could support a population equal to that of Great Britain. The coast of California is nearly 1,000 miles in length. This gives some idea of what California can exhibit.

Wisconsin building is opposite, with its spacious verandas and stained-glass windows. Over across the way we enter Colorado's quarters. In front of the entrance has been laid down the largest flagstone in existence, a slab of red sandstone, 25 by 8 feet in size and 10 inches thick. Its next-door neighbor is Washington's building, made of great logs, with an immense flagstaff, one of its own mountain cedars, planted in front of it. Among its exhibits is a miniature farm, with house, barn, machinery, and fields of wheat. It reminds me of the Palouse country. One of the chief attractions is the largest skeleton of the elephant primigenius yet found. It is thirteen feet high. It comes from near Spokane. Yesterday a lump of coal measuring 5 by 5 by 26 feet, and weighing over 50,000 pounds, was moved to the Washington building on a wagon drawn by sixteen horses. The progress of the wagon was witnessed by a large crowd of people, and there was quite a triumphal procession. The wheels at places cut two feet into the road and the cracking of the wagon was like a fusillade of musketry. This immense block comes all the way from Rosslyn mine, Washington, at a cost of thousands of dollars. It is probably the largest block ever mined.

In Montana's exhibit is a cabinet two feet square filled with silver crystals just as found 1,500 feet beneath the surface. There are two paintings representing Indian life, and scenes most vividly rendered by a cowboy artist. There is a shield made of copper, silver, gold, and sapphire. The biggest curiosity is a fossil vertebra dug up in a gravel pit in Dawson county. It is like a human vertebra. Paleontologists do not hesitate to say that it belonged to a biped; but the species is not known. The North Dakota building contains a select agricultural exhibit, among which will be found 146 varieties of wheat, and 300 different grasses. On the wall hangs a curiosity in the shape of two deer heads. These represent a furious duel in which one drove two prongs of his antlers through the head of his antagonist.

At the South Dakota building the greatest attraction is the front steps, made of true Portland cement, found nowhere in the world except in England and South Dakota.

The Idaho building is in rough-hewn style, after the colonial model. The mica hall is worthy of note. Mica for practical use is found only in one other state of the Union, North Carolina. Beautiful specimens from the agate fields are shown. The Arkansas building is entered from a large circular veranda which runs the width of the whole building. It is the French "rococo" style of architecture, as Arkansas was originally settled by the French. One of the chief ornaments is a mantle of Arkansas white onyx. The fountain of Hot Springs crystals is very attractive. It is beautifully illuminated with electricity. Connecticut is colonial in style, and is built entirely of Connecticut material. It contains many relics and art treasures, among which is the gun with which General Putnam shot the wolf. The Nebraska building is surrounded by porticoes. It is like a modern clubhouse, with post-office, etc. It has many interesting special exhibits. New Hampshire, the Switzerland of America, is represented by Swiss architecture. Being born among the granite hills, I recorded my name in the book, and enjoyed the cosy fireplace. The New Jersey state building is a reproduction of Washington's Headquarters at Morristown. It is supplied with relics of Revolutionary times. It has a somewhat exclusive look, the door being kept shut, and you must sound the brass knocker for admittance. A neat darkey opens the door, requests you to wipe your feet, and gracefully lets you in. A cheerful scene is before you—the big fireplace, andirons, a jolly fire of real logs, and old-style furniture. Maryland's state building presents an elegant appearance—mainly for social entertainment. Its chief curiosity is a wonderful oyster exhibit. The material for the Maine building is furnished exclusively by the state. Among its exhibitions is a group of stuffed animals. Iowa's building is quite magnificent, with porticoes, columns, and a lavish use of glass. The Iowa state band discourses sweet music. The Corn Palace is decorated with a variety of colors, with fantastic figures made of Iowa grains, grasses, and minerals. There is a big register, regularly printed and bound, six feet square, for the signatures of visitors. Kansas's building contains a vivid cyclorama of all the wild animals that have roamed over its vast prairies. Florida's building is a reproduction of the oldest structure in America—old Fort Marion, of St. Augustine, begun in 1620. Within is a splendid exhibit of the flowery land. Indiana's building is a series of Gothic towers. One of the curious contributions is the life-size figure of an elephant, chiseled out of a solid block of stone from one of the great Indiana quarries. Kentucky's Southern Colonial Mansion is filled with relics and curiosities. There is a lunch-room here also, where a "Kentucky breakfast" can be obtained. The tobacco exhibit is really gorgeous. Louisiana's headquarters is an old plantation house with broad corridors, immense doors, and dormer windows. The Massachusetts building is modeled after the old Hancock house. Within are the portraits of men illustrious in history. I like these old colonial dwellings. They are ample, with broad halls, big rooms, and wide staircases. The hurry and pressure and contraction of modern life is not here. Everything is simple, but on a large, grand scale. The old-fashioned furniture is for convenience as well as ornament. For instance, there is a table-chair. It can be used as a table. The top can be rolled over and it becomes a chair. You can eat on it and sit on it, and it can also be used as a bureau. Michigan's building is entirely modern in style. It contains a natural history museum, a beautiful organ, and is illuminated with five hundred incandescent lamps. The finest apartment is the "Saginaw Room," finished in many varieties of hard wood by the lumbermen of Saginaw. The statue of Hiawatha is in front of Minnesota building, contributed by the schoolchildren of that state. The building itself is one of the handsomest on the grounds—two stories, of the style of Italian renaissance. On either side of the portico are statues of a pioneer and Indian. Missouri adopts the Spanish style of architecture. It has an auditorium which seats twenty-five hundred people, a woman's department, reception rooms, etc. The state of New York appropriated $600,000 for the expenses of its exhibit and building. The latter is mainly a reproduction of the old Van Rensselaer residence, one of the historic landmarks of New York city. The quaint architecture recalls the period when the metropolis was only a straggling seaport town. The building is fifty feet wide, two hundred feet long, and three stories high. The furniture is two hundred and three hundred years old. A feature of interest is three columns of native wood from the Adirondack mountains. Among the exhibits are an ancient picture of Hudson, autographs of all the presidents and signers of the Declaration of Independence, model of Fulton's steamboat, etc. Ohio's building is modest in appearance, while its decorations and furniture are rich and costly. A monument executed in bronze, seventeen feet high, stands in front of the main entrance, typifying the greatness of the state. The "Keystone State"—Pennsylvania—reproduces Independence Hall for her headquarters. Beautiful grounds surround the structure. The cost of building is $300,000. It is really the most superb of the state buildings. Its entire height is one hundred and sixty-five feet, and the view from its lofty tower is exceeding magnificent. Nearly all the state buildings can be seen in their beautiful variety. The great Art Palace is before you, and beyond the swell of mighty domes and roofs, and eastward, are the lake front and the splendid foreign buildings. At the main entrance is the old Liberty Bell, around which crowds are constantly gathering. There is a profusion of historic relics—Jefferson's sword, Washington's sofa, etc. Rhode Island is represented by a structure of the Doric order. Vermont presents her "marble halls." New Mexico, Arizona, and Oklahoma are represented in one building. The roof-garden contains specimens of all the flora of these territories. There are some rare paintings six hundred years old and a most interesting archaeological exhibit. Texas makes a fine showing with thousands of curiosities and relics. Utah shines forth with Ionic columns and pilasters. Before the entrance is a fac-simile of the famous "Eagle Gate," Salt Lake City. Gold, silver, and sulphur are conspicuous among the products of this territory, in which almost every mineral has been discovered. Virginia's building is a duplication of the Mount Vernon homestead of Washington. The dining-room is furnished like the original with silver service loaned by the oldest families of Virginia. In the West Virginia building is the desk on which were written the terms of the surrender of General Lee to General Grant. Delaware's little building is somewhat suggestive of the state where no Free-thought lecture has ever been given, I believe.

Out of the many aspects of the state buildings I have endeavored to select what is most pronounced and suggestive. It would take a volume to describe all these thirty-seven different buildings and their contents. I can only touch upon those things which most graphically indicate the peculiarities of each. One could find a week's pleasure and profit in the group of representative structures; but probably most visitors can only wander for a day in this vista, and they must walk fast and keep their eyes open. They will be delighted on their varied journey with music, books, pictures, comfortable, luxurious resting-places, and on no account must one miss this part of the vast Exposition.

FOREIGN BUILDINGS.

Reaching the lake front from this charming journey the official headquarters of foreign nations extend in brilliant and imposing array. Germany's building is the cynosure of all eyes. It is graceful in form and gorgeous in color. Its roof is peaked and gabled and covered with vari-colored corrugated tiles. It has a gilded tower, parapets, and turrets. One of its chief attractions are the chimes presented by the German emperor. Their deep, sonorous tones mark the flight of time. Victoria House is fashioned after the British manor house. The architecture of Spain's building is beautiful. Sweden's house is formed with many-colored tiles and ornamental pressed brick. Hayti's home is of mahogany and tropical wood. France has a large open pavilion on the lakeshore. Ceylon's airy structure allures with its picture of tea industry and with attendants in their native dress. Brazil, New South Wales, Canada, Costa Rica, Guatemala, India, Nicaragua, Siam, Turkey, and Venezuela are represented in this foreign group with their arts, industries, varied productions, home life, costumes, and methods of education.

We thus behold in miniature the magnificence and greatness of the sister republics and imperial lands afar.

It is supper time when I reach the Victoria House, and I wander to the Polish café, where for good prices one can obtain a good meal. The charges are no higher than at first-class restaurants in the city and the service is excellent, and there's a smack of Poland in the cooking; and with coffee and cigars one can dream of liberty, Warsaw, and Kosciuszko.

The evening is brilliant, and with renewed zest, after a substantial repast, I wander along the lake shore, and for an hour enjoy perhaps the grandest scenery in the world. Certainly, from the standpoint of art and civilization the view before me is unequalled in its sublimity. In the realms of nature amidst vast mountains, tall cataracts, and gigantic forests, one may see an immensity of wonder beyond this, but never has man created a more amazing and enchanting view. Commingling with the loveliness of nature itself, the great lake is before me—a wonder in itself—seemingly as vast as the ocean, its waves rolling upon the beach, and its wide breast glowing with magnificent colors beneath the sunset blaze. Overhead is the sky, its sapphire glinted with gold and crimson bars, and draped with purple clouds which make gorgeous pavilions around the pathway of the sinking sun. The lake is covered with all sort of craft—the electric launch, the boat, the ship, the tug, the enormous dredge—and every one, slow or swift in motion, is made glorious in the illuminations of the descending orb. More wonderful still than lake or sky is the White City, for in it man's genius flames triumphant. It rises against the intense brilliance of the western horizon, bathed in floods of splendor, glowing in infinite variety of form, massive and delicate, exquisite and sublime. Think of it—here is a city of four hundred buildings in which there is every conceivable grace of architecture. Here are the greatest edifices which man has ever erected. Here the muse of every clime has hovered, and in multitudinous forms and colors poured forth the dreams and fancies of forty centuries of human growth. Thirteen stupendous structures confront one, and as you walk along the margin of the lake there is an ever-changing prospect. New vistas open while from point to point you look upon these walls and roofs and towers and domes. Between the city and the lake stretches the long promenade thronged with thousands of people as eager and curious as yourself. It is an hour's saunter from the Victoria House to the peristyle. We pass the ponderous battleship Illinois floating like a monster of the deep, ready at any moment to belch forth its thunders. In calm satire the Manufacturers' Building, covering over thirty acres of ground, crowded with the treasures of every land, breathes its beautiful message of peace—a thousand times more potent than all the battleships of the nations. Beyond the Manufacturers' Building my steps linger by Music Hall, where glorious faces of immortal memory look down upon the traveler. I imagine myself a Greek as I wander amidst the graceful columns of the peristyle. It seems an endless colonnade, but by and by I reach the beautiful Casino, and thence enter the Agricultural Building, and glance at its marvelous display, and in the twilight view the great basin of the lagoon, the fountains and the golden statue. I then enter the great rotunda of the Administration Building, and slowly climb to the topmost balcony of the immense dome, and here I rest my weary feet and wait for darkness to come and the great flashing lights of the electric currents waiting to be let loose in ten thousand jets. The view from that lofty point is one of the most majestic in the whole panorama of the Fair grounds. Beneath is the great basin—ten acres of smooth brilliant water. Right below me are the three fountains and the Columbian statues. Softly and beautifully flow the waters over the white splendor of the marble fountains. Right across is the Republic's golden figure—and the peristyle on whose roof are the grand marble symbols of the States, and beyond is the vast glory of the lake. To the left is Machinery Hall, with its noble towers, and Agricultural Building, with the naked Diana, bow and arrow in hand, glancing in the swift chase, on its pinnacle. To the left is Manufacturers' Building. I sit here for three hours while day disappears and night comes, and near a hundred thousand people gather together and roll like a sea over the smooth pavements. Gradually the electric illuminations appear—first the white lights and then in one sudden flash an intense golden fire rolls all about the basin, and flings a yellow tide almost to the center of the effulgent waters, along which dash the painted gondolas and pavilion boats. The Iowa and Cincinnati bands alternately pour forth swelling strains to increase the enchantment of the glittering scene. Right over my head flare the great gas torches, while the dome lifts itself like a mountain of fire. From the roof of the Manufacturers' Building, as a blazing cornet, far into the night protrudes the "search light," like a vast inverted cone seemingly pulverizing the darkness into luminous dust, which as it curves from point to point invests the various objects with extraordinary brilliancy. So for hours the illuminated panorama changes, fountains flowing, music sweeping, waters glancing, boats flying, crowds rushing, colors mingling, and as one might say, night is dethroned and man enthroned in a glory of his own making. No temple, no cathedral, ever shone with such hope as this great festival of science and humanity.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Miscellaneous Comment.

MR. EDITOR: It is not often that I find occurrences which are, according to the teachings of the church, in accordance with the divine will, that with my sense of justice I can "unite" with; but in the exit from earth to heaven recently of Col. Elliott Shepard, I certainly feel a "holy acquiescence in the divine will." What supreme happiness he will enjoy in the long-continued Sunday; only as all the inhabitants of that favored country to which he has gone are supposed to be satisfied with the perpetual Sunday, half his enjoyment will be lost, because he can find no one whom he can compel to do his bidding—'tis such a delight to a Christian to exercise authority. And I think I am in no mood to question the way in which the "man of power" departed this life—it was certainly orthodox, as the doctors employed were of the real "pathy" and licensed by law. We have had a woman in this city in the last year or two who report says has performed some cures that the regulars had failed to effect; but that would not answer, so she was prosecuted, fined, and driven out of the city, not because she killed people by etherizing them, but because she cured them, and was paid for it. Great is law, and the officers who are paid for attending to the law's business. There has been in this city the past winter preaching that for ignorance, lying, indecency, I believe has never been excelled; of course I know nothing of it save the reports in the daily papers, as the infirmities of age make me a close keeper at home; but if I had the strength I once had, I would attend one of Rev. Myer's meetings and confront him with his ignorance. I send you one of the reports of the papers. Another reverend of Syracuse has located heaven and hell, and told his hearers the occupation of the residents of each place. Alas! alas! that people will listen to and pay for such stuff. "Wigglesworth's Last Day" is mild compared to some of this reverend's ravings, and this is the evening of the "nineteenth century." I am very glad that we are to have missionaries sent among us from the Mohammedans. I hope we may have them from India and from China, and compare their holy books with ours. But Mohammedans are bigamists! What are Christians, I pray you? Doesn't the Bible teach licentiousness on many of its pages, and bigamy by the seven hundreds, and the seven hundred not sufficing, three hundred bedside companions without marriage. I must stop lest I take up too much space in your valuable paper. I would like to say how indignant I feel at this effort to make the divorce laws so stringent that once married there is relief only from the brutality of the wedded companion, be it wife or husband.

I am in all sincerity yours for knowledge and Liberty,
LUCY N. COLMAN.

March 28, 1893.

Letters of Friends.

Proves By Acts a Desire to Free Mankind.

TACOMA, WASH., May 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find post-office order for $5, for which please renew my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER for one year, and the balance apply as you think best.

CHAS. R. MOYER.

P.S.—Please send one copy of "Crimes of Preachers."

C. R. M.

The Sunday Monopolists Crushing Infringers on Their Prerogative.

CHESTERTOWN, MD., May 9, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In this town, Mr. John Judefine, a highly respected and worthy citizen, is now confined in the jail for thirty days. The only crime committed is, he was seen by a Methodist preacher husking a few ears of corn on Sunday. Is this a remnant of the old Blue laws which fined a man for kissing his wife on Sunday, or turning the head to the right or left going to church? Many of our citizens think it an outrage.

E. L.

Is Afraid Only in the Presence of Ignorance.

NORWOOD, MO., May 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please send me a copy of "Infidel Death Beds," by G. W. Foote. I have read "Men, Women, and Gods," and "Travels from Faith," and several other books. I believe if the clergy of the United States would read them as I did they would turn from their wicked ways and enjoy the pure air of intellectual freedom. I know that reading these books has done me a great deal of good. I no longer fear the devil, and feel safe anywhere when not in the presence of Ignorance. I shall order several more books soon.

H. H. BALL.

Ready for All Good Gods.

NEWARK, N. J., May 21, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I write to inform you that I have the herein-named friend's subscription for one year. We are both old brother Masons, and we are not ashamed of owning that we are both Liberals, and we both believe in all good gods. We care nothing in regard to size, whether they are short or tall; but people do say the best of goods comes in little parcels. But my brother and your humble servant care nothing about public opinion. We size up gods and individuals according to their worth.

W. W. MORRIS.

Who Has Brought the Country to Its Present State?

OLYMPIA, WASH., May 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: If you will allow me space in your valuable paper, I will congratulate Laura Knox, Mrs. R. Kuffel, and others who have defended woman so ably. I think that Mr. Sandberg gave the fair sex a bold slap in the face when he came out as he did. He certainly thinks the country in a bad state if women could ruin what little liberty there is left. What has brought the country to what it is? I suppose Mr. Sandberg, Adam-like, would like to lay that on the women; but, thank goodness, we had nothing to do with the ruin of this country—if it is ruined. Mr. Sandberg is like most of the olden prophets, a false prophet. He had better turn his mind in a better direction.

Yours for liberty to all,

KATHERINE CLYDER.

Hopes a Religion of Humanity.

VERMONT, IND., May 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5 for the renewal of my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and one new subscriber, who begins with the 1st of May, as he wants all of Putnam's letters from the World's Fair. We are making some advances here in this church-ridden country, but have to bear abuse and slander—but less as years advance, and I live in hopes that at some time Christianity will be a thing of the past, and a religion of Humanity be established. To do this I will do what I can.

I have quite a number of pamphlets and lectures which I lend out and keep them going as much as possible.

I think the most important part is to educate the rising generation to think and read, and if every Liberal would do likewise instead of keeping silent for fear of losing popularity and being called an Infidel, we would soon bring about the desired result.

May you live long and continue your good work.

Your Liberal friend,

W. S. TROYER.

It Is a Curse, a Disease, and a Lie.

BRAXTON, N. Y., May 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I herewith send you $2 for as many of Samuel P. Putnam's books as you can afford for the money—"Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie." I want to send some to my friends to enlighten them and blot out the fear of God and hell-fire, and cool off the flames with a little cool water mixed with reason's precious jewel. My age is nearly eighty-eight years. My brother said in a composition for me that I never was troubled with grace, and this I affirm as being the truth. Mr. Putnam has made himself liable, as did Thomas Paine when he wrote the "Age of Reason," to slander and abuse by the holy gods by knocking out their underpinning which they stood upon for their bread and butter, lazy dogs. Mr. Putnam has won a glory that will last when he is hidden by oblivion's dark shades.

Now, here I will close with a vivid recollection of the days that are accomplished. Ever a friend to THE TRUTH SEEKER, ASA W. BRAYTON.

A Small Sufferer from the Bible in the Schools.

SKOHEGAN, ME., May 14, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I go to a schoolteacher who is a Methodist minister's daughter, which I suppose will account for her wishing us to read the Bible each morning. I refused to read, and she kept me one evening to explain my reasons. She kept about thirty other scholars for other things. I went up to the platform before the scholars and gave my reasons. I told her I had read it, and the more I read the more I became disgusted with it all. I told her it was no school-book, and she could not compel me to read it. After she had lectured awhile I said in a surprised tone, "Oh! I supposed you knew my folks did not believe in the Bible." There was the most comical look on her face for a while, and then she said, "I am sorry such a thing could be. I should like you to read the Bible, and come to Jesus and be saved. Won't you come to Sunday-school and try?" I then gave her a few more good pointers, and then good-day, amid the laughter of the scholars in the room. The superintendent said I need not read it unless I wished to, but Miss B. still keeps giving small hints.

From a little heathen, LUCY BIGELOW.

"Evidences in Favor of Christianity Tested."

GRINNELL, IA., May 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Franklin Steiner, of Des Moines, Ia., gave three lectures in Grinnell, Ia., Saturday and Sunday, May 13th and 14th. The first was on "The Principles of Secularism; or, Morality Without Christianity." A fair audience listened with profound interest. The meeting Sunday at 3 P.M. was a rouser. The large hall was well filled with an appreciative audience, and quiet and good order prevailed. The subject was, "Popular Evidences in Favor of Christianity Tested." Mr. Steiner, although young, is one of Iowa's progressive thinkers, and is bound to rise. He is a plain, fluent speaker, and is master of his subject. A fair audience greeted him Sunday evening at 8 P.M. for his third and last lecture—subject, "Inspiration of the Bible." At close of the lecture, liberty was given anyone to ask questions. Immediately a Christian arose and asked several questions, which had been thoroughly answered during the lecture, but he had failed to appreciate it. The speaker answered his silly questions in detail, but all to no purpose, and he closed by saying: "I know the Lord made the world out of nothing, for he said so." Grinnell has many Freethinkers, and scores of others on the road in all stages of progress. Thus the good work goes silently on.

A. T.

Missionary Tracts for Heathen Methodists.

CHILLIWACK, B. C., May 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find postal order for $3.25. For the sum of twenty-five cents please forward to my address one copy of "Crimes of Preachers." For the remaining $3 please forward to each of the following addresses one copy of the cartoon which appeared on the first page of THE TRUTH SEEKER for March 25th, showing what Christianity has borrowed from the pagans, and as the Methodists will hold their annual camp-meeting about the first of June, I want you to inclose with each cartoon a leaflet or tract costing a cent each or so which you think appropriate for the occasion. Please inclose cartoons and leaflets in plain unsealed envelopes or many of them may not be opened, for the mere mention of THE TRUTH SEEKER scares some of our Christian tenderfeet. I want to show my Christian friends from what sources Christian robbers stole their rotten rubbish to be used in the manufacture of their stale dogmas and moldy creeds. If enough money has not been sent, please curtail the list; if more, use the balance in any way you choose for the advancement of Freethought. Please forward as early as possible.

JAS. H. CHAPMAN.

Will Not Give the Preacher a Club to Break His Head.

DALTON, GA., May 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: There are a goodly number of persons around here, notably among the intelligent, who do not believe all the nonsense in the Bible; but they have not got the backbone to express their honest convictions, so they pander to the church for patronage. The church rules everything down here. There is a vast amount of ignorance in this part of Uncle Sam's dominions.

The negroes are nearly all religious, especially the meaner portion. They do not appear to think it anything wrong to steal from a white man. In slavery times the worst negro on the plantation was the negro preacher. The negroes are very superstitious, and the preachers vote them all, so if a man wants the negro vote he has to buy the preacher.

As to woman suffrage, whilst it may be women's right in the abstract, it is my opinion if we give them the right to vote we will put ourselves in a worse condition than we now are in. Because the vast majority of them will vote as the parson dictates, and, as self-preservation is the first law of nature, I am not willing to give the preacher a club to break my head.

I show my papers around, and have been trying to get you some new subscribers for a long time, but have failed so far, but will keep trying. I live on a farm, and make my living by hard work, and express my honest sentiments on all proper occasions.

Wishing you and THE TRUTH SEEKER may prosper, I remain,

Your friend, J. H. HAMILTON.

A Freethinker's Summer Resort.

CANNING, NOVA SCOTIA, May 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am still alive down in the small and obscure village of Canning, Nova Scotia. This town is on the Habitant river, a tributary of the Basin of Minas. There are two notable places to which tourists from all parts of the United States in a small way resort. One of those places is the Look-off, so called, and the other is Cape Blomidon. The latter has been made immortal by the poet Longfellow. I keep a small hotel here. It is three miles from here to the former and twelve miles to the latter place, and, as it is the nearest point accessible by rail, I get quite a few people in the summer. They are surprised to see THE TRUTH SEEKER down here, and the most of them—I should say about nine-tenths of them—seem to be delighted. I don't try to force my ideas on anyone, but 'tis surprising how soon those people and I and my wife get acquainted. I keep teams, and take a good deal of pleasure in driving them up to those mountains and explaining to them what little I know about them. After seeing those places, I drive them across to Grand Pre—about twelve miles distant—where they can take the train for Halifax or go back by the Yarmouth line home again. I am in hopes to see a good many people this coming summer, but suppose the World's Fair will take most of the pleasure-seekers away to it. But this I can assure anyone coming down here to get a breath of the old Bay of Fundy air and a grand look of the water and land of this place from these mountains, that there will be no Sunday-closing here, for that is the day above all others I take for enjoyment and worship. Hoping to see some of the Freethinkers of New York, as well as Massachusetts, here this summer,

I remain yours, very truly,

A. B. BAXTER.

No Doubt the Lady Is an Estimable Wife—Only, Her Religion Is Bad.

WHITEHALL, WIS., May 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: A friend of mine, to whom I loaned a copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER, returned it to me together with the following expression of his feelings after having read the letter to you by Mrs. Dr. N. W. Stroup:

EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: I noticed in your issue of May 6th an epistle from Mrs. N. W. Stroup, in which it is intimated that there is such a place, and that you are going, but she objects to your dragging others with you. Now, if it is a fact that you intend making the trip, please inform a few of us old stand-bys when you are to start. When the time comes I don't want to be dragged. Oh, no, I'll go right along peaceably, and maybe the Doc. would like to go along too. I have heard of such cases before now; possibly a change of climate would be a relief to him. I mean just what I say. Were I in his place I think that I should like to make the change, if it were possible to have THE TRUTH SEEKER sent to the other hell. I would prefer being a doorkeeper in a hell, multiplied by a millennium of hells throughout a millennium of eternities, than to dwell in a tent in paradise with a Jezebel or a virago. So, Mr. Editor, when you are ready to start just drop us a card and we will have our post-office address changed, "if it costs us a thousand dollars."

In the same issue I noticed a letter from our friend R. B. Platt, of St. Nicholas, Pa., in reference to the unclaimed letter of Chas. T. Blackburn, of Seattle, Wash., and would suggest that it be sent to Boonton, N. J., and failing there try Brooklyn, N. Y., care Rev. (Revenue) T. DeWitt Talmage.

Yours truly,

E. P. LURIBUSUNUM.

Perhaps the above will be a little too tough on the lady to publish, but it will show you at least what some of us up here in the bush think of such a fanatical sentiment as she exhibits.

CHAS. A. FCKER.

Atheism as Foolish as Theism.

ST. PAUL, MINN., May 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I think you are very kind to allow so much room in your paper to Augusta, who is so anxious to show Mr. Wettstein her nice little God, but I suppose you feel some regret that you cannot give her room enough so she can maneuver all her artillery, so if possible she could blow away that old confounded Infidel fog from Otto's vision, so he could take a look on her God. I do not doubt that Augusta has a God or two, but if it is a real God why doesn't she trot him right out so we all can see him? But if he is one of the old trick Gods, who can only work in darkened rooms, or under tables writing on slates, then we don't want to see him. But, Mr. Editor, if you can't give her room enough in your paper so she can make the battle decisive, was it not best to get Otto down there inside the range of her concentrated fort ordinance, so she could aim all her heavy guns to bear on that old invulnerable Infidel? But I will bet ten to one, when Augusta has exhausted all her precious ammunition Otto will be the same old hardshell Infidel as ever. But, Mr. Wettstein, are you not afraid that Augusta can convince you that you are worshipping a God, or Gods, yourself? I do not think I am wrong if I say that you are worshipping the common god of America, the golden eagle. For gods and idols are nothing else than some passion or desire which man is striving to satisfy.

But when you say there is no God, I understand that you mean that there is no almighty originator of worlds. Well, sir, will you allow a sixty-years-old crank Infidel to ask you a question? Do you have a telescope so sharp that you can explore all the planets or worlds which are circulating in space? Have you searched all the universe so through and through that no almighty can hide himself there? Then you can let Augusta take a peep through your tube, and let her satisfy herself that there is no almighty. But suppose that it is about seven thousand years since he was down here, and maybe he has been a billion miles beyond Neptune creating another world—for you know that it took six days to create this world, and you know that a thousand years are for the Lord as one day, and you know that when he has created a world he needs one day to rest on—now, sir, if it should so happen that when you and Augusta were looking in the tube it was just the Lord's time, after the seven days that he had been away, to come and see how we are getting along, then what? Now, Brother Wettstein, if you cannot give a perfect answer to this question, then do not trouble yourself to prove to Augusta that there is no almighty God but let her have all the trouble to prove it to you. Let us only prove that all the gods are old fables, and if there should come a good god that will give us what we want, let us accept him. When we have done that, then if they will pass some other gods on us and we find that they are not good, we will do away with them too. But if we find they are good gods, then we will accept them.

I think that it is just as foolish to try to prove that there is no God, as it is to prove that there is a God, for it is absolutely impossible to prove any of it.

Yours truly, S. P. LINDAHL.

The God of the Bible-makers.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: It would be very gratifying to me if you would allow this letter a place among your "Letters from Friends," for I should feel highly honored at having a place assigned for anything written by me in a paper of the high class to which THE TRUTH SEEKER undoubtedly belongs.

I wish to emphasize a particularly fine cartoon of Mr. Heston, that merciless pen and pencil iconoclast. It is the one which appeared on the last page of THE TRUTH SEEKER of May 6, 1893. Pardon me if I set out the extracts from the holy(?) scriptures upon which Brother Heston founds his splendid cartoon.

From Jer. xxxii, 27, is taken: "Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh: is there anything too hard for me?"

From Judges i, 19, is taken this: "And the Lord was with Judah; and he drove out the inhabitants of the mountain, but could not drive out the inhabitants of the plain, because they had chariots of iron."

To my mind there is but one explanation for such a startling contradiction as this, outside of that stale explanation so frequently given by Christians, "With God all things are possible." I see in this striking parallel only one more confirmation of the view I have long held about the Old Testament. I think that it is simply a record of the development of the Jewish nation, in matters spiritual as well as in those temporal. It is a well-known principle, or fact, that nations in their earliest stages of development hold very crude and simple ideas about religion. Ignorance and religion go hand in hand. Educate a man and he loses all taste for religion. Now, the Israelites, in common with other peoples, thought of God in an anthropomorphic way; that is to say, they thought of him as having the form of a human being as well as human attributes. The Jehovah, or Jahveh, of the fore part of the Old Testament, possesses all, or nearly all, of the passions that ran riot in the breasts of the worst of men. He was revengeful, lustful (see Gen. vi, 2—"Like father, like son"), bloodthirsty, deceitful, and so on. Besides these mental characteristics which he possessed in common with the children of his own creation, he possessed the power of locomotion, the power of wielding a sword, of shooting arrows, and other powers which were doubtless frequently exercised by the fierce and warlike Hebrew nation. At the time this verse in Judges was written the Hebrews were in that early stage of progress in religious matters, and thought that God, being so much like unto a human being in other respects, must necessarily have some limit to his power; hence it is said that chariots of iron prevailed against a man who had God on his side. However, after the Hebrews had become a great nation, had acquired vast territory and wealth, had mingled with other nations and absorbed their ideas about religion and about God among other things, their notion of God became broader and more spiritual, and we see this bombastic sentence penned by one of these latter day religionists among the Old Testament Hebrews: "Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh: is there anything too hard for me?" Verily, their God has grown wonderfully. From a poor, weak, manlike deity, who was afraid of chariots of iron, he branches out into a majestic God, who can put this power-displaying question, "Is there anything too hard for me?" to mortals. Keep on becoming more spiritualized and attenuated, thou ancient Jewish bugaboo of the sky, and mayhap at no distant day thine image will barely rise above man's mental horizon like "a cloud the size of a man's hand," the last vestige of an exhausted storm.

A significant fact in this history of the Hebrew race, which shows that they rose like other nations and in the same manner fell, is that they, too, fabricated a miraculous beginning for themselves as a nation in order that the fair (?) pages of their history might not be sullied by a shameful tale of a lowly birth. When the Jews first crossed the Red sea they went through a shallow place in that sea which remains to this day. No mighty hand reached down from above and parted for them the great volume of water. No pillar of cloud went before them by day, nor did any pillar of fire greet their eager eyes in the night watches. Theirs was as weary and painful a march as ever a human army was forced to make. But when they grew into a powerful nation, that reached out and overwhelmed and absorbed surrounding nations; when their wealth was so immense that the magnificent Temple of Solomon was made possible; when they had grown in learning so much that they excelled among all the known nations of men for their literature, their art, and their wisdom; then they became ashamed of their humble beginning, even as did the ancient Romans, and revised the account of the exodus and of their succeeding fortunes so as to make them harmonize with their lofty position among the kingdoms of the earth. They invented the tale about God parting the waters of the Red sea; about the pillars of cloud and fire; about the miraculous feeding in the wilderness; about the wonderful wholesale clothing store which the almighty started up in the desert for their own especial benefit; and all the rest of that wonderful collection of stories too wild for us of the nineteenth century, who can look back from our position of vantage upon the history of the past and pick out the false from the true, to believe for one moment. It seems strange that anyone can discuss these miracles seriously, for never has the brain of man in its most disordered state conceived of more ridiculous, more stupendous events than follow close upon each other like the various scenes of a swift-moving panorama.

But enough on this subject. In closing I want to add my feeble voice to the host of other voices more powerful that are urging on the victorious army of Free-thought to renewed successes. Hasten the day when all men will be educated to rely upon themselves and cease to stretch their eyes toward heaven in vain attempts to catch a glimpse of a tender and merciful God. O that all men would learn that if there be a God at all in the heavens above us he has no eyes for mortals' woes. Then we would all be striving toward the attainment of one grand end, that of making this world a splendid place to live in. Then man would look about him constantly to try to discover what duty he owes to his fellow-man, without the slightest fear that he will fall short of his duty to a God whom he can detect by none of his God-given (?) senses but whom he must accept solely on faith in what others have said and written, others who were in no better position to learn of God than himself.

With hearty good wishes for Brother Heston, along with the noble man at the head of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and all others who are in the vanguard of the grand army of Free-thought, I am, Faternally, HARRY W. PHILLIPS.

A Letter to the Editor of a Prohibition Paper Which the Editor Wouldn't Publish.

PORT HURON, MICH., Apr. 15, 1893.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE Beacon, Dear Sir: I received your sample copy, and you are well aware that I am opposed to your Prohibition ideas, for the reason that the church creeds are the cause of all this misery which you are so vehemently trying to obliterate. I do not question your honesty in this matter, and hope you will extend the same sympathy to me. I acknowledge a power (that no man can comprehend) that is forcing humanity onward to a higher state than we now enjoy. I am no saloonkeeper, as you once stated, but an attorney-at-law—a temperance man from head to foot, and an infidel at that. I like the taste of liquor better than new milk, could not use it as a beverage without becoming a common drunkard. Why is this so? Because the object of life is to build a pure body for another existence; and every human creature has temptations of some kind placed along the path of life for the purpose of developing the will power, so that they can attain a higher sphere in the world we are journeying to. The teachings of the church are against the laws of nature. It punishes the innocent that the guilty may escape the penalty of their own acts, and the result is that the criminal class is steadily increasing, hence the unknown power has called the saloon into use to kill off this class; therefore it is useless for you to try in any manner to set aside the working of this law. I am willing to admit that it kills sixty thousand every year, but it never destroyed a man worthy to live; and there is no escape from this conclusion, for the man who will not cultivate his will power, be a man amongst men, the law of nature says must go under the sod and make room for those who will exercise this faculty, which is a part of every human being. The suffering of women and children is to be deplored, but there is no sympathy in nature. Her command is, Obey my laws, or be punished. It is unwise to attempt any modification of the edict. Man will only learn through suffering from his own mistakes and folly.

I oppose the churches because they have made the laws for the past seventy-five years and have not been able to prevent the crime of murder in your state, but actually pay a premium to breed thieves, prostitutes, and feeble-minded children. The people who raise children who are a credit to themselves and the state, are classed as trash, and the church is master of a show where rotten apples take the prize and sound ones are of no account. Mr. Thompson, you are a man of brain power, your father and mother were respectable people, and just ask yourself how much the state gave your parents toward the expense of educating, feeding, and clothing you until you arrived at the age of twenty-one years. I will answer the question for you—not one cent. Now, under the church law, if anyone has a boy who can be proved a thief the state will take him, feed him, educate him—fill his mind with the slush, "Jesus paid it all," "Seek the kingdom of heaven and all things shall be given you"—and at the age of twenty-one years he is given $5 and a suit of clothes and sent into the world with polished manners and told to make his living. He finds all avenues closed, providing he tells where he came from. Bread must be had. Even church people will not employ him. The pious bank director would nearly faint away if he asked for a position in his moneyed institution. And the result is, he becomes a thief or a gentlemanly burglar, while the church people hold up their hands and exclaim, "Whisky caused his downfall." Now, the liquor had no more to do with it than the beefsteak he ate for breakfast. The girls who are sent to the industrial school are on the same plane and are forced to live a life of shame, for they find out that the sky-pilots have told them falsehoods, and not being able to live until they can overcome it, they go down to degradation as the fruit of church steeples!

The Prohibition church is trying to get control of the government by denouncing the liquor traffic, and the Catholics are on the same track, but are more dangerous, as they have double the money of the Protestants and threaten to destroy the nation by establishing parochial schools, which means destruction to our public system of education, as the two cannot exist together.

There is a remedy for all of this evil, and I ask that you advocate it in your paper, as it will accomplish just what you are working for, and in fifty years there will be no liquor used as a beverage, no saloons, no children crying for bread over the brutality of a drunken wretch who has been married by the church to the fairest flower on this planet, a maiden; and you must admit the treatment I advocate will accomplish all that you are working for, providing you have the moral courage to publish this letter. Dare you do it? This remedy will destroy all priests, preachers, churches, jails, prisons, and gibbets and electric chairs for murdering the human family. All would be obsolete in seventy-five years from the time it was put in force. The remedy is in accordance with nature's law. And it is to simply castrate all criminals who are sent to the state prison within twenty-four hours after their arrival at that institution, and after they have served six months allow the officers of the prison to discharge them; and in no case keep them over one year. This kind of treatment will breed a new set of human beings in seventy-five years. An honest man will have something to live for. Happiness, peace, and prosperity will be in the ascendency. The crime of murder will be known no more. And it will solve a thousand problems that afflict humanity at this date. You may ask, why has this not been done before? I will tell you. The king has always wanted soldiers, the priest wanted dupes, and both of these pests of the human family have never had enough of these creatures to satisfy their selfishness. I know this is nature's plan and the only way to get rid of the criminal class, as the black squirrel lays nothing up for the winter, hence must steal while the snow is on the ground, while the red squirrel provides for the winter, has plenty to eat, and when himself and mate catch the black thief stealing their stores they do not kill him, but nature tells these little animals what to do and they simply castrate him with their sharp teeth and let him go as a walking monument of his own disgrace. The result is, hardly a black squirrel in the state of Ohio. The sad spectacle of ten thousand Christians around an elevated platform torturing a human being to death with red-hot irons, then burning his body, will be known no more when criminals are treated as nature demands.

Now, if you wish me to take your paper, give this letter a place in your columns, which will prove that you will do as you state, "discuss all live questions," and I will send you four years' subscription, and your paper will be a live one. I would ask that you send a copy of the paper to a man by the name of Leonard, who is scattering seeds of misery through the state of Ohio and does not know what he is doing—imagines it is a great good to tell how an innocent man was killed so that a lot of rascals might live forever. The time must come when he will acknowledge the foolishness of his present work. Christianity is a fraud, as it punishes the wrong party, worships yellow dirt, is the essence of selfishness, prevents the progress of the human family, and refuses to stop breeding criminals, and will style the writer of this letter a crank. I have told them the truth, and it will never perish; and they will have to stop their work, and pass on as other swindlers and frauds have done before them. Now, with kind feelings to all, and hoping you will publish my letter, I remain,

Your obedient servant and well-wisher,
WM. E. LEONARD.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

May.

Smiling sweet, all hearts addressing
By thy joyous, gay caressing;
Never mournful, ne'er depressing,
Filled with fresh and fragrant blessing,
Bonnie, blithesome May.

Gay sunshine gilds the vale and hill,
And glistens on the dancing rill,
While hyacinth and daffodil
The wholesome air with sweetness fill,
Bonnie, blithesome May.

Blue violets to life are stirred
At Nature's low, commanding word;
And we, with blossom, bee, and bird,
To thee all love and praise accord,
Bonnie, blithesome May.

A Present Instance.

The evergreens met in council,
And the tulips heard them say,
"There must be a Sunday closing,
They would desecrate the day."

But the flowers in orient mantles
Got leave of the queen of May,
And opened toward heaven on Sunday,
Whoever might say them nay.

L. S. G.

Legend.—Continued.

"And buried, gentle Tyrrel?" said Richard III. of the murdered infants in the Tower.

"Brother Seth," said Jane, "the poor might as well be buried. The church of Christ is supposed to be kind and self-denying, although they trample on the poor, corrupting their food, that they may live in luxury. Christians wish to teach the Sandwich islanders the thieving practice of adulterating—or, as they call it, of refining—sugar. Church-members who live in palaces send horrible plates of scraps to the poor, causing Infidels who meet them to exclaim: 'Is that dish going to the cow? The poor animal will refuse it, I know.'"

"O Jesus, how I love thee!"

Ella Wilton came in as pale as death, saying: "A society of ladies have lowered my prices to nothing for the most elegant work, and are now talking of establishing the deadly, tyrannical factory, when we will be able to get eight cents for making a shirt."

"Those Christian ladies who wish to vote and hold office belong to grand societies, and have no platform in which they can show how they regard the great line of Terence commencing with 'Homo sum.'"

"Nothing which concerns the human race is a matter of indifference to me," said Seth. "No enterprise should be engaged in without a glance at the interests of the most lowly human being. Nothing should be overlooked in their platform that would raise the fallen or encourage the industrious."

"The remark at a business meeting, that our great Constitution could be ignored by Congress, should arouse the indignation of religious women, who, if they possess the wisdom of great and good statesmen, would never sacrifice great interests for small and doubtful advantages—like tearing down a building to obtain a picture in the third story."

"Do statesmen," said Seth, "pretend to keep up asylums, having everything in beautiful order, while the inmates are starving and; though aged, are brutally insulted by wealthy women because their dress is poor and wretched?"

"The good interpolations found in the Bible are not noticed by Christians. Selfishness is not holy kindness. A proud look at the communion, a lying tongue, gluttony, and stinginess, these do not, I hope, belong to the church of Christ. Will that reform the world? On the contrary, the world reforms the church. A lady immensely wealthy carried a picture, brilliant and gaudy, to a wretchedly poor woman, sending her also five cents' worth of rancid and stale provisions (true). Another, or rather a church, allowed a poor woman, eighty years of age, fifty cents a year, while the wrath of the very elements thundered forth their accusations, explosions and cyclones, destroying their 'golden streets,' their 'disgusting luxuries.'"

"Lastly. Blessed are the professors, who refuse to devour locusts stewed together with terrapin, who declare that there is no thought without heat, or the combustion of phosphorus, which do not conduct us to a future state."

"Blessed, also, are atoms which are not the gate of death to the human system."

"Diseased substances may be the habitat of bacteria, but it is the atom, not the insect, which poisons us."

Seth was murmuring from "Measure for Measure."

"And those eyes, the break of day, Lights which do mislead the morn."

ALHAZA.

Lexington, Ky., April 29, 1893.

Correspondence.

CROMWELL, IA., May 17, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to the Corner for the first time. I am thirteen years old. I go to school in the winter and help on the farm in the summer. There are not many Freethinkers around here. Most of the people are religious. I have two sisters and one brother, who are all Freethinkers. If this escapes the wastebasket I will try and write again. Yours truly,

CHARLIE H. MOORE.

GILLESPIEVILLE, O., May 12, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. I went to school every day for eight months. I got a prize for it, and also I got one for head marks. I am eight years old the 26th of this month.

I got the first prize for spelling. My sister and brother and I are the only Liberals in the school.

I am your little Liberal friend,
GENEVIEVE ERMINE CRYDER.

CENTRAL POINT, ORE., May 3, 1893.

MY DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner.

I am fifteen years old, and am staying with my brother, who takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and we look forward with great pleasure for the coming of it each week. There are several TRUTH SEEKERS that come to Central Point.

I like to read Colonel Ingersoll's lectures, and also Bennett's works.

We are having beautiful weather. All the trees are in full bloom.

Well, as this is my first letter, and I am afraid it will go in the wastebasket, I will close. Yours sincerely, BELLE HALL.

GILLESPIEVILLE, O., May 12, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first attempt to write to the Corner. I am ten years old. I study all the common branches. I went every day to school for eight months, and got a prize for it, and one also for spelling in the A class. I like to go to school. We had Mr. Charlesworth to lecture for us last fall. I liked both of the lectures very much, but I liked the first one best. We expect to have him again in June. I like to read the Corner. Some of the neighbors call me a "little Infidel devil." I wrote a little poem, which I will send you:

"Pinkie winkie porlie bell,
Don't you wish there was a hell?
That's where you would like to go,
Then you'd wish for a little snow."

When you'd jump in the burning lake,
Then you'd burn to a little flake;
Then you'd wish you were out here
Where the snow's on half the year.

Your little Freethinker,
MAUD E. CRYDER.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Apr. 26, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I heard about you from papa. He said I should write a letter for the Children's Corner. I am ten years old and have two sisters, one eight and one four years old. Papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, Investigator, Secular Thought, and the Freethinker's Magazine. We have the "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." I like THE TRUTH SEEKER. Papa does not care to have us read the Bible. We came to Minneapolis because papa had the rheumatism. Now we are going back to our own home in Vancouver, B. C. Mamma was the first corresponding secretary of the Vancouver Freethought Society. I like Vancouver better than Minneapolis. My teacher here said we were wicked people, because we did not read the Bible. I send best wishes to you and all friends.

Your friend, SUSIE COX.

[We would like to hear from Susie again when she gets to Vancouver.—Ed. C. C.]

CALISTOGA, CAL., May 6, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: It has been such a very long time since I last wrote to you that no doubt you have forgotten that such a person as I ever existed. I do exist, however, as you now see.

I thank you very, very much for the lovely letter that you wrote to me last year. I was so glad to get it, and I hope that if you can spare the time you will write again. Your letters will always be appreciated, I assure you. I presume that your time is pretty well occupied though, is it not, with your various duties?

To-day has been dreadfully hot—the hottest day this year, so far; and this morning the north wind was blowing quite a gale; so you may imagine what an unpleasant day this has been.

A lady medium visited Calistoga for a couple of days this week and a number of Calistoga people went to see her. My sister and brother also went and she told them ever so many things that weren't so.

She told Arthur (my brother) that he was very religious in his mother's presence and that he was a gambler. The idea! She also told Arthur that the spirit with whom she conversed was his (Arthur's) father's. Such a thing to say, for papa is not dead.

Do you believe there is anything in Spiritualism? This lady Spiritualist was not of much account evidently.

Our school has vacation for the next two weeks. School closed yesterday. I have not been attending for the past two weeks on account of a bad cold.

Shall you go to the World's Fair, Miss Wixon? I am not going, and have no curiosity to go either.

We have a very cute pug-dog now. He is pure white and he has such a funny curly tail. His name is Trefel. It is a German name, and means the "devil." Do you know the correct pronunciation of the word? Is not the t sounded like d and the f like v? I think that is correct, but I'm not certain.

Our flower garden is lovely now, we have so many lovely flowers, especially roses. Are you not fond of them?

The strawberry patch is looking finely too. There are any number of green berries in it and quite a few ripe ones.

I have a vegetable garden this year, and so far it is very good. I expect some plants soon which I sent for for it—some cauliflower and celery and a little cabbage. I expect the plants will arrive by this evening's express.

I had company this evening and after it had gone I sat me down to write to you. I have been so very neglectful. Please forgive me, won't you?

Papa has gone to town this evening to attend the Farmers' Alliance, of which he is president.

I wrote you a great long letter several weeks ago and then neglected to mail it. I have it yet; so if you want me to, I'll send it to you, even if it is stale.

Well, I will close now. It is quite time, I think, for me to tumble into bed, for it is now half-past twelve.

You need not print this letter, Miss Wixon, unless you really wish to, as I am not at all particular.

With much love to you, I am,
Affectionately your friend,
LOLA GRIGSBY.

[The editor of the Corner is quite busy, and has little time for friendly correspondence. She is always pleased to hear from her friends, and among them she counts Lola.—Ed. C. C.]

GOLD. SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE.

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL. MINERAL.
3mo14

LITTLE FREETHINKER.

Friends, please try our LITTLE FREETHINKER, the only paper published for the young free from superstition, 10 cents a year. I will send it and Foote's Health Monthly for 50 cents; or it and "Little Lessons" for 75 cents; or and THE TRUTH SEEKER for $3. Address

ELMINA D. SLENKER, Snowville, Va.

3t20

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 333 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and exposed the falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, 15 cents

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, 10 cents.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt-lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stipiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardner's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason" it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America. Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	10
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear. Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired. Single numbers sold at prices quoted. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS

CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

(Are We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?)

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquiring Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquiring Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Graeco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c.; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. F. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. BART.

Price, 25 cents.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.
One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It
and
Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.
Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Force and Matter;

OR,
Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:
Force and Matter. The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology).
Immortality of Matter. Nature (Teleology).
Immortality of Force. Man.
Infinity of Matter. Brain and Mind.
Value of Matter. Thought.
Motion. Consciousness.
Form. Seat of the Soul.
Immutability of Natural Laws. Innate Ideas.
Laws. The Idea of God.
Universality of Natural Laws. Personal Continuance.
Laws. Vital Force.
The Heavens. The Soul of Brutes.
Periods of the Creation. Free Will.
of the Earth. Morality.
Original Generation. Concluding Observations.
Secular Generation. tions.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Gems of Thought.

BETTER to fall for right
Than flourish by wrong.
—Buddhist sacred writings (Soweda Sangrahaya).

BETTER to fling away the world
Than fail to do thy duty in it.
—Ibid (Ta-chwang-yan-kinglum, sermon 44).

WHEN the soul is ordered aright,
The body will then be rightly ordered.
—Ibid (Fo-sho-hing-tsan-king, v. 527).

HELL is for fools;
Heaven is for the wise.
No man can damn another,
Each man must save himself.
—Ibid (Dhammapadda, v. 126, et al.).

DOUBTS will exist ever in the mind;
Yet ever, ay, ever, pursue the way of virtue;
Over the rugged path along the precipice,
Pursue it in faith and truth.
—Ibid (Siau-chi-kwan, sec. 3).

To aid mankind, or any one man,
This is infinit merit.
There is no merit in babble,
That babble about the heavens and the specters
Hidden from man's knowledge and vision.
—Ibid (Sutra of Forty-two sections, sec. 10).

THE masters of literature are universal explorers and adventurers. They do not deliberately beat about forever in a little creek or inlet and call that navigating the world. —Wm. Watson.

REASON teaches us that the church ought to contribute to the expenses of the nation in proportion to its revenues, and that the body set apart to teach justice ought to begin by giving an example of it. —Voltaire.

The third claim which Professor Pearson makes for science is the obvious one that its suggestive discoveries afford means for the improvement of all the material conditions of human life. Many of the greatest practical triumphs of science in the present age have flowed from discoveries or observations which at the outset it was hard to link, even in imagination, with any important practical result. In the words of our author, "The frog's legs of Galvani and the Atlantic cable seem wide enough apart, but the former was the starting-point of the series of investigations which ended in the latter." In like manner, it is suggested, the recent discovery of Hertz, that the action of electromagnetism is propagated in waves like light, and that light, as conjectured by Maxwell, is only a special phase of electromagnetic action, may in a generation or two do more to revolutionize life than even the discovery of Galvani as developed in the electric telegraph. —Professor Youmans.

ONE of the chief strongholds of those who ascribe the genesis and preservation of the world to an all-ruling and all-organizing creative power, has been and still is the so-called fitness in Nature. Each flower that unfolds its many-colored petals; each gust of wind that chases away a cloud; each star that lightens the night; each leaf that flutters in the air; each wound that heals; each thing, each phenomenon of Nature; all these afford the teleologist or the seeker after fitness an opportunity of admiring the unfathomable wisdom of that Higher Power. Modern investigation and natural philosophy have shaken themselves tolerably free from these empty and superficial conceptions of design, which unfortunately still obtain in school and church to the detriment of truth and of science. If matter, as has been shown in our earlier chapters, cannot exist or be thought of without force, motion, and form, it stands to reason that the genesis and destruction of individual forms, existences, and institutions of nature are a necessary and obvious result and product of physical existence or of the interaction of natural forces. Not less obvious and indubitable must it appear that these natural forces, by their mutual millionfold reactions, must determine and limit each other, so that at length an apparent order and design must have arisen, which if we look at it with human eyes and measure by the standard of human institutions, without taking into consideration its original causes, must necessarily appear to have been extrinsically called into being by a conscious reason ordering things with perfect consciousness. We omit to note in limine, that there could be no other result, owing to the very nature of the case, and that inapposit and unfitting things and institutions, or even attempts at creating such, must have perished by their own inherent defects in course of time; or, in other words, that an apposit institution is only one case among a thousand inapposit or less apposit ones, which, from their very unfitness, were incapable of surviving. —Buchner.

Scientific Works.

Three Introductory Lectures on the Science of Thought. By F. Max Müller. 1. The Simplicity of Language; 2. The Identity of Language and Thought; and 3. The Simplicity of Thought. With an appendix which contains a correspondence on "Thought Without Words," between F. Max Müller and Francis Galton, the duke of Argyll, George J. Romanes, and others. Neatly bound in cloth. Price, 75c.

Three Lectures on The Science of Language. By Prof. F. Max Müller. The Oxford University Extension Lectures. With a supplement, "My Predecessors," an essay on genesis of "The Science of Thought." 112 pages; cloth. Price, 75c.

The Psychology of Attention. By Th. Ribot, professor of Comparative and Experimental Psychology at the College de France, and editor of the Revue Philosophique. Authorized translation. Treating of the following topics: 1. Spontaneous, or Natural, Attention; 2. Emotional states; 3. Physical manifestations; 4. Surprise; 5. Voluntary, or Artificial, Attention; 6. Its mechanism; 7. Inhibition; 8. The feeling of effort; 9. The Morbid States of Attention; 10. Distraction; 11. Hypochondria; 12. Fixed ideas and ecstasy; 13. Idiotcy; 14. Attention in sleep and hypnosis. Cloth, 75c.

Fundamental Problems. The Method of Philosophy as a Systematic Arrangement of Knowledge. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.

The Psychic Life of Micro-Organisms. A Study in Experimental Psychology. By Alfred Binet. Translation from the French with the sanction of the author. Treating of the following subjects: 1. The Psychology of the Cell; 2. The Structural and Psychological Character of Proto-Organisms; Motory and Sensory Organs. 3. The Psychology of Nutrition: Holophytic, Saprophytic, and Animal Nutrition; Predatory Habits of Certain Animals. 4. Colonies of Unicellular Organisms. 5. Fecundation of Proto-Organisms. 6. Fecundation of Higher Animals and Plants. 7. The Physiological Function of the Nucleus. 8. Correspondence between Alfred Binet and Ch. Richet (professor of physiology in the Faculty of Medicine at Paris) respecting cellular psychology. 10mo, 135 pages; cloth, 75c; paper, 50c.

Wheelbarrow Articles and Discussions on the Labor Question. Including the Controversy with Mr. Lyman F. Gage on the Ethics of the Board of Trade; and also the Controversy with Mr. Hugh O. Pentecost, and others, on the Single Tax Question. Elegant cloth binding, portrait of the author, and autograph letter. Price, $1.

The Idea of God. By Dr. Paul Carus. Being a disquisition on the development of the idea of God in human thought and history; discussing: 1. The Nature of Ideas. 2. The Etymology of The Word God. 3. God an Abstract Idea. 4. The Conceptions of God (Polytheism, Monotheism, Pantheism, Theism, and Atheism). 5. Definitions of the Idea of God. 6. Entheism, the Monistic Conception of God. Price, 15c.

Epitomes of Three Sciences. 1. Comparative Philology: The Study of Sanscrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg, of the University of Kiel. —a. Sanscrit Research; b. From Jones to Lassen; c. The Discovery of the Veda; d. The Interpretation of the Veda; e. The History of the Vedic Epoch. 2. Experimental Psychology. By Prof. Joseph Jastrow, of the University of Wisconsin. —a. Aspects of Modern Psychology; b. Psychology in Germany; c. Psychology in France and Italy; d. Psychology in Great Britain and the United States. 3. Old Testament History: or, The Rise of the people of Israel. By Prof. C. H. Cornhill, of the University of Königsberg. —a. The Traditions of the People of Israel; b. The Migrations of the Tribes of Israel; c. The Conquest of Palestine and the Kingdom of Israel. With special introductions by Professors Oldenberg and Cornhill, and prefatory remarks by the editor of the Open Court. Elegant cloth binding. Price, 75c.

The Ethical Problem. By Dr. Paul Carus. Three Lectures, delivered before the Society for Ethical Culture of Chicago at the invitation of the Board of Trustees: 1. Ethics, a Science; 2. The Data of Ethics; 3. The Theories of Ethics. 112 pages, cloth. Price, 50c.

On Double Consciousness. Experimental Psychological Studies. By Alfred Binet. Table of contents: 1. Introductory; Experimental Psychology in France. 2. Proof of Double Consciousness in Hysterical Individuals. 3. The Relations between the Two Consciousnesses of Hysterical Individuals. 4. The Hysterical Eye. 5. Mechanism or Subconsciousness? 6. The Graphic Method and the Doubling of Consciousness. 7. The Intensity of Subconscious States. 8. The Role of Suggestion in Phenomena of Double Consciousness. 9. Double Consciousness in Health. 93 pages, paper. Price, 50c.

The Lost Manuscript. A Novel. By Gustave Freytag. A handsome, elegantly bound edition of this famous and popular German romance. The author writes as a motto for the American edition: "A noble human life does not end on earth with death. It continues in the minds and deeds of friends, as well as in the thoughts and the activity of the nation." In two octavo volumes; boxed. Price, $4.

Diseases of Personality. By Th. Ribot. Authorized translation. Treating of the following subjects: 1. Nature of Personality and consciousness. 2. Organic Disorders. 3. Emotional Disorders. 4. Intellectual Troubles. 5. Dissolution of the Personality. Cloth, 75c.

The Soul of Man. An Investigation of the Facts of Physiological and Experimental Psychology. By Dr. Paul Carus. With 152 Illustrative Cuts and Diagrams. Price $3, pages 480. Printed on extra fine paper, handsomely bound in cloth. The subject-matter of the work is divided into the following sections: 1. The Philosophical Problem of Mind. 2. The Rise of Organic Life. 3. Physiological Facts of Brain-Activity. 4. The Immortality of the Race and the Data of Propagation. 5. The Investigations of Experimental Psychology. 6. The Ethical and Religious Aspects of Soul-Life. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. 40 cents.

DROPSY TREATED FREE
Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called Dropsy from first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

IN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.
WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.
By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, 15 cents

Materialism: Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.

Paper, 12mo, 35 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—
Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament. THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, $1

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.
Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, 75 cents

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—
Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL
The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—
AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
Cloth. 75 cents.

Christianity a Fiction.

THE
Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.
Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.
6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During American Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Port. Pap., $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 50c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING
THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS,
HISTORY,
STATISTICS,
AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF
THE ARTIST

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
WITH PORTRAIT OF
THE DESIGNER

The illustrations are classified as follows:

26 represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2 represent	Samples of Christianity's Work
1	The Church Robbing the People.	1	Missionaries.
1	Thanksgiving.	1	The Lord's Instruments.
1	Sabbath Laws.	25	Bible Doctrines and Their Results
1	Children and the Church.	1	The Church and Slavery.
1	Woman and the Church.	2	Priests and Politics.
1	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	Ireland and the Church.
1	Studies in Natural History.	2	Church's Idea of Civilization.
1	The Bible and Science.	1	The Uses of the Cross.
1	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	Pietism in Our Penitentiaries.	9	Persecutions of the Church.
1	The Atonement Scheme.	12	Some Allegories.
1	The Lord and His Works.	3	Heaven.
1	Prayer.	6	Hell.
1	The Creeds.	7	Miscellaneous.
1	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

POPE'S AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Viceregents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By
G. W. FOOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendree, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
Price, 25 cents. Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scriptural Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE
Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1	Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
2	Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.....	5
4	Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood.....	25
7	Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller.....	10
8	Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison.....	15
9	Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall.....	10
10	Epidemic Delusions. Marvin.....	10
11	Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin.....	50
12	Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.....	25
13	Essays on Miracles. David Hume.....	10
14	Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
15	Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
16	Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
17	A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh.....	10
19	Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.....	5
20	Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake.....	5
1	Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts.....	5
23	Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts.....	5
21	The Christian Deity. Charles Watts.....	5
24	Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts.....	5
25	Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts.....	5
26	Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts.....	5
28	Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake.....	5
29	Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake.....	5
30	Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts.....	5
38	Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
39	Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
40	Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.....	10
42	Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts.....	10
43	Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts.....	5
44	Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake.....	10
47	Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5

MANNA SERIES.

1	Original Manna for "God's Chosen.".....	5
3	New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
5	20 Questions Without Answers.....	5
6	Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin.....	10
7	Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian.....	10
8	Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake.....	5
9	New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh.....	5
1	A Few Words about the Devil.....	5
11	New Life of Jacob.....	5
12	Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake.....	10
13	Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake.....	10
14	Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.....	10
15	Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H.....	10
16	Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
17	Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh.....	5
18	What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.....	5
19	New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
20	New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
21	A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz.....	10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

$150 AMERICAN WATCH

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 30 days; is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.

It has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lantern Pinion, 240 beats to minute; No key required to wind and set; weight 4 oz., exactly like our Patent for $1.50. $3 for $4.00, 12 for $15.00, by express. Mention paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CHARM. AGENTS & Storekeepers send for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO.,
65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. RAFCOCK.

Price 10 cents.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL
Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons.	Oxidized.	each $2.50
"	10 ounces per doz.	"
"	Oxidized,	3.00
"	14 ounces per doz.	"
"	Oxidized,	3.00
"	gilt bowl,	"
"	10 ounces per doz.	"
"	Oxidized,	3.50
"	sectional gilt,	"
"	10 ounces per doz.	"
Orange "	Oxidized, plain bowl,	2.75
"	gilt "	3.25
Sugar "	" satin "	3.00
"	" gilt "	3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy I Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Bags, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer. (If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.
Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST,
For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,

Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABLETS.

THE LORD HIDETH JERRY AND HIS SCRIBE.

But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son of Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to take Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet: but the Lord hid them.—Jer. xxxvi, 26.

S. P. Putnam's Latest Pamphlet.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1892, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Free-thought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for His Processes Are Egregiously Slow, They Are Egregiously Wasteful, They Often Serve No Use, They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church: Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. Bennett. 8vo, 1,119 pages. Moroccco, gilt edges. Price, $4.50.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

EAGLE BRAND.

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO.,
Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.

13t18

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

WIZARDS MAGIC PURSE.

The most bewildering illusion discovered in this century! A very strong purse of the finest dressed kid strongly sewed and beautifully embroidered. (Regular goods of equal quality sell for 50c. to 75c.) Comprises 3 pockets, which we GUARANTEE no one can open in 3 hours without knowing the secret. It has baffled all experts in puzzling. A great novelty, a wonderful mystery and a useful article, all in one. Your money and secrets are safe inside this purse! Satisfaction Guaranteed. Sample with secret in sealed envelope post paid with Catalogue of 1000 useful articles, 25c. 3 for 60c.; 6 for $1.00, $1.50 Post. R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 Cortlandt st., N. Y. Steow20

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

News of the Week.

WANAMAKER is spoken of as a nominee for the next presidential term.

THE czar has given the pope, in observance of the latter's jubilee, two superb vases on mother-of-pearl pedestals.

AT Lampasas, Tex., last Sunday, a Providential judgment was manifested in the falling dead of Rev. James Mackey in the midst of a sermon.

DEACON WADHAMS of Talmage's Tabernacle predicts the coming of Christ within a decade, grounding on passages in Isaiah, Matthew, and Revelation.

THE Russian government has issued a ukase expelling Jews from the Asiatic provinces of the empire. The decree will cause wide-spread suffering.

COL. R. McMAHON offers $25 in gold to the student of the West Virginia University who shall write the best thesis on "What was Shakspeare's religion?"

HEBREW citizens of New York city have called on Secretary of State Gresham and asked that the government solicit Russia to mitigate her edicts against Jews.

THE Italian government has closed the provincial council of Pergamo because of its declaration that the pope's temporal rights are superior to the unity of Italy.

BUSINESS men and laymen in general are criticising the settlement to which the builders of Talmage's great new Tabernacle have been forced to accede, of twenty-three cents on the dollar.

THE Sabbath-closing crusade in Belgium and Germany has grown powerful and successful. The Belgian government has issued a postage-stamp with a label attached which may or may not be torn off, inscribed, "Not to be delivered on Sunday."

ELEVEN peasants in the Austrian village of Muszina, actuated by a superstition that the late frosts were the work of a vampire which had entered into an old man who had lately been buried, opened the grave, beheaded the body, and pierced the heart with a stake.

THE New Jersey statute fining Sunday fishers $2 having become obsolete by non-enforcement, a law fining such offenders $20 has just been passed. As one-third of the $20 goes to the complainant and another third to the person furnishing the evidence, a rich harvest will be reaped by some individuals.

AT Newark, N. J., the superintendent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has heard that a young girl named Lizzie Hallam has been imprisoned in a damp back room on bread and water seventeen days because she refuses to change her Protestant faith at the demand of a Catholic stepmother.

MR. LEWITZKY, a hosiery manufacturer from Russia now located at Newark, N. J., when brought into court on a charge of bigamy said: "Yes, I have another wife, but I supposed this was a free country, and that a man could have five wives if he wanted them." "Its freedom does not run in that particular direction," returned the justice, as he ordered the new-comer under bonds.

AT Trenton, N. J., Dr. Hawke is suing Rev. Jos. Sedgebeer for libel. Dr. Hawke with companions had held a mock prayer-meeting in an empty store near the Methodist prayer-meeting, making mock prayers and using whisky as mock wine. The parson, in a sermon warning people not to associate with Dr. Hawke and his friends, used language which the doctor declares libelous.

ON the 24th ult Mayor Horton of Newport, R. I., was visited by a large delegation of citizens, for whom Ex-Lieut.-Governor Honey as speaker declared that clergymen, singers, organists, druggists, coachmen, and railroad and steamboat men violate the law by following their regular callings on Sunday as much as the newspaper and soda-water dealers who had been arrested. Witnesses ready to swear to each of these violations were brought, and impartial enforcement was demanded.

IN the legislature of the province of Hungary, Austria, a bill to make Judaism a legally recognized religion has been introduced. One provision is that conversions from Judaism to Christianity be recognized. Heretofore Christians who on leaving Hungary became Jews and were married with Jewish ceremonies found on return that their marriage was not valid and their children were illegitimate. The preamble to the bill declares it high time that the state should receive its seven hundred thousand Hebrew members on the same footing with others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 23. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 10, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE ORTHODOX PIGMIES AND THE MODERN SAMSON-FREETHOUGHT.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

By WATSON HESTON.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor.
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice—
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers: "Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impatched; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution."

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN. Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE!

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.
The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.
The Muscular Tissues.
The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,
In General.
By the Lungs.
By the Skin.
By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables {Gateways to Knowledge.
Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The

Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN.

Price 25 cents.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" (3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

For $7.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and the "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times" ($5.00), by D. M. Bennett. In two volumes. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 23. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 10, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - JUNE 10, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

A Half-way Heretic.

On the 29th ult. the Presbyterian clergyman Dr. Briggs was placed on trial for heresy before the general assembly sitting at Washington, D. C. This trial was on appeal from the one to which he was subjected by his local presbytery of New York. This local body, it will be remembered, delivered the curiously inconsistent verdict that they acquitted the accused but were not to be understood as "expressing approval of the critical and theological views embodied in his inaugural address."

Each of the trials attracted great attention throughout the country. Freethinkers have now imbued with modern views of religious matters such a considerable proportion of church-members and clergymen, that an explosiv outspeaking of these views which would badly shake the Presbyterian church, and perhaps split it in halves, has for some years been expected. This expectation it was thought had met its fulfillment in the case of Professor Briggs.

One characteristic of the case that lent it added consequence was the intellectual eminence of the man to be tried. The venerable Dr. Duffield—as he is spoken of—of Princeton College, says that he has the highest esteem of the defendant's scholarship. "If Dr. Briggs's logical faculties were equal to his scholarship," says this reputedly venerable parson, "I do not know his equal in the intellectual world of America." To be sure, Freethinkers will be prone to count Mr. Briggs's intellect remarkable only in scholarship; they will not allow him credit for much excellence in those departments more important of reason and common sense.

And they will not accord Mr. Briggs much claim on esteem as a courageous or as an honest man. For his conduct has been very far from the ideal of plain-spokenness and directness that the true Freethinker admires.

But Dr. Briggs counts as great among the preachers, and hence his trials have received attention beyond what would fall to the lot of an humbler brother.

The charges as rehearsed by Dr. Birch, chairman of the prosecuting committee, related:

"First—To the question as to the supreme and only authority in matters of faith and practice.

"Second—To the question as to the inerrancy or truthfulness of the inspired word of God.

"Third—To the historical validity of the Old Testament.

"Fourth—As to the fulfillment of messianic prediction, a question of supreme importance in its bearing upon the view which is taken of the truthfulness of scripture and of the truthfulness of God.

"Fifth and last—There is the doctrine of redemption, concerning which it has been alleged that Professor Briggs's teachings have been especially erroneous and hurtful."

The charges will be found brought up in a different shape in various parts of the trial. They usually appear cast in the form of ten specifications.

Dr. Briggs had already, four or five days previous when the assembly had considered whether they should try him or not, made the following deliverance:

"I wish to make an explicit denial of the charge that I preached doctrines against the fundamental doctrines of the church. I affirm that I believe the holy scriptures to be the word of God.

"I hold to the whole doctrine taught in the first chapter of the Westminster Confession. Anything I may have said that may conflict with these statements was due to misinterpretations."

This utterance took aback those Liberals and very advanced Christians who had been hoping for radical and flat attacks against the inmost life of the church. These persons will find themselves alternately pleased and given hope, and then damped and disappointed by such sentiments as the above, throughout the whole course of the trial.

Dr. Lampe, opening for the prosecution, condemned the lenient handling of the defendant by the local presbytery. That the charges were proved, he said, becomes still more evident from the statement made in the verdict rendered by the inferior judicatory, to the effect that in acquitting Dr. Briggs the presbytery is not to be understood as "expressing approval of the critical and theological views embodied in his inaugural address." For those critical and theological views Dr. Briggs was put on trial. He not only approves them, but diligently propagates them. And it was the duty of the lower court, by a calm and impartial investigation, to "ascertain whether or not those critical and theological views are in harmony with the holy scriptures and the standards, and to condemn them if they did not find them in harmony with those authorities, and thus to check their spread and influence in the most effective way." A foolish method of that local presbytery, Dr. Lampe continued, was, in their own words, that of "crediting his affirmations of loyalty to the standards of the church and to the holy scriptures as the only infallible rule of faith and practice." This can only mean, declared Dr. Lampe, that they have taken Dr. Briggs at his own word. By their own confession, therefore, they have not decided the case upon the law and the evidence.

The presumption of Dr. Briggs in affirming himself orthodox while at the same time making statements irreconcilably antagonistic to orthodox tenets, next drew Dr. Lampe's comment:

"It is well known that Dr. Briggs entered a plea of 'not guilty;' that he claims to be orthodox, and that he subscribes to an orthodox creed. But in spite of all that, he has made, and persists in making, the statements for which he has been called in question, and which have alarmed the whole church."

The miscellaneous and vastly varied character of Dr. Briggs's heresies appears in the following utterance of Lampe's. From this we learn that the defendant has even been affected toward Catholicism, and perhaps would unite the Roman and the Protestant churches.

"Dr. Briggs's teachings conflict with both scripture and the standards; they touch matters which are vitally essential to Presbyterians whose faith and practice are based solely on the authority of holy scripture, and that according to these views we must recognize the church of Rome as a great fountain of divine authority, able to give men, without or above the Bible, a saving knowledge of God and divine assurance. This would be a complete abandonment of the Reformation position; and for the Presbyterian church it would mean denominational suicide. Whether or not Dr. Briggs would regard this as in any sense a calamity could not be determined with certainty, for he regarded it to be the duty of the hour to destroy all denominational barriers which separated Protestants, and to form an 'alliance between Protestantism and Romanism and all other branches of Christendom.' (Quotation from the writings of Dr. Briggs.) The positions taken in his inaugural certainly entitle him to the dignity of chief apostle in such a movement."

Taking up the charge that Dr. Briggs had taught that errors existed in the Bible, Dr. Lampe discussed it at length, and summed up his contentions as follows:

"It is preposterous at this late day to advance the claim that insisting on the truthfulness of the Bible is tantamount to setting up a new test of orthodoxy. The church has never believed anything else. Especially is this true of the Presbyterian church. It will not be possible to point to a single Presbyterian divine, from the Westminster period down, and especially among American Presbyterians, who has taught the doctrine of the errancy of the holy scriptures. All sides, parties, and schools in our church have been agreed in affirming the inerrancy of the word of God."

At the afternoon session Dr. Lampe continued his arraignment. He said that the declarations of Dr. Briggs in casting doubt on the authorship of the Pentateuch and of Isaiah created distrust of the entire Bible.

Passing to the charge that Dr. Briggs taught that the processes of redemption extended to the world to come in the cases of many who died in sin, Dr. Lampe made quotations from the writings of Dr. Briggs, in which the latter accused Protestants of the fault of not extending the process of redemption to the vast periods of time in the middle state between death and resurrection, in which he called a judgment immediately after death a "hurtful, unchristian error," a "bugbear which makes death a terror to the best of men," and terms the statements of Dr. Dorner, concerning the possibility of repentance in the next world, "excellent thoughts." Dr. Lampe continued:

"The whole contention of Dr. Briggs in his defense is that the Bible and the standards favor the view that the work of making believers pure, morally perfect, and holy is accomplished by means of progressive sanctification after death. This doctrine is an offense according to the Book of Discipline for the following three reasons:

"1. The doctrine is contrary to the Bible and the standards. It is injected into them at the behest of a naturalistic principle of psychology and ethics according to which the instant change of a saint of God at death to perfect holiness by the divine spirit is declared to be a magical illusion.

"2. It is separated from the Roman Catholic doctrine of purgatory by so frail a barrier that it will easily pass into it.

"3. It will lead to graver departures from the faith. The doctrine of redemption after death is advocated at present principally in the interest of the doctrine of second probation. Dr. Briggs entertains the largest hopes in respect to the possibilities of redemption in the middle state."

In conclusion Dr. Lampe appealed to the assembly to reject the verdict of acquittal by the New York synod, and to set the church right before the world.

Dr. Briggs in reply said that he had incorporated into the record the opinions of many scholars which furnish irrefragable proof of the correctness of his teachings. He introduced the opinions of "one hundred and twenty-four scholars now living and of twenty-three who, although dead, lived within the twenty-five years in which the defendant studied in Germany and has taught in the seminary. And the attempt of Dr. Lampe this afternoon to assail them as rationalists was wholly unwarranted. Many of them are as thoroughly Christian and orthodox as himself."

Taking up one of the specifications, Dr. Briggs said that he had been accused of teaching that many of the Old Testament predictions had been reversed by history, and that the great body of the messianic prediction had not been and could not be fulfilled, which was contrary to the essential doctrine of holy scripture and of the standards of the church that God is true, omniscient, and unchangeable. This he had repudiated, and would ask the assembly to hear exactly what he had said, but which the committee on prosecution had omitted. He had said this:

"Kuenen has shown that if we insist upon the fulfillment of the details of the prophecy of the Old Testament, many of the predictions have been reversed by history, and the great body of the messianic prediction has not only never been fulfilled, but cannot now be fulfilled, for the reason that its own time has passed forever.

"All depends on the word 'if,' which the committee omitted. I disclaimed this charge before, and disclaim it now. I also disclaim that I am guilty of teaching, as charged in Charge 7, that the processes of redemption extend to the world to come in the case of many who die in sin."

The doctor read from his book on "Messianic Prophecy" to establish his teaching as to the fulfillment of predictive prophecy, error in which was alleged in the fourth charge. This book, he said, had received the approval of such an eminent man as Gladstone, and of such an orthodox Christian as Delitsch, of Berlin. He asserted that the work antagonized the teaching of Kuenen, the Rationalistic and well-nigh Infidel Bible scholar. From the summing up of the book Dr. Briggs read the following:

"In Jesus of Nazareth the key of the messianic prophecy of the Old Testament has been found. All its phases find their realization in his unique personality, in his unique work, and in his unique kingdom.

"Hebrew prophecy vindicates its reality, its accuracy, its comprehensive ideality as a conception of the divine mind, as a deliverance of the divine energy, as a system constructed by holy men who spoke as they were moved by the holy spirit. The messiah of prophecy and the messiah of history, the redemption of Hebrew prediction, and the redemption of Christian possession are not diverse, but entirely harmonious in the lamb who was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times of its history. For it was the same divine being who devised the redemption of the world, who revealed it in prophetic prediction, who prepared for it in the development of history, who accomplished it in time and eternity. Hebrew prophecy springs from divinity as its source and overflowing inspiration, and it points to divinity as its fruition and complete realization. None but God could give such prophecy; none but God can fulfill such prophecy."

During the reading of these extracts from the defendant's book on messianic prophecy, the first really favorable impression was made by him upon the commissioners. It was when it became apparent that his book, instead of being a reproduction of the views of the German Rationalist, Kuenen, was really an answer to him, while the concluding paragraphs were an impassioned tribute to the divine authorship of Hebrew prophecy. "Adjudge, then, my brethren," he said, "whether I am justly accused in this regard." An attempt was made by Elder McDougall, of Cincinnati, to break the force of this impression by interposing a question regarding the fulfillment of the details of prophecy, but in this he did not entirely succeed.

Certainly the above-quoted rubbish will chill the hopes of the Freethinkers who have been preparing to welcome into their fold one whom they supposed a rapidly preparing convert.

Here occurred some cavils by Dr. Briggs over such points as the division or non-division of charges, and whether charges not deemed advisable for consideration by the local synod ought now to be touched, and a number of petty and technical points. Very different are these quibbling, shuffling attempts to evade the necessity of speaking what he really thought, from the ready, honest outspokenness of the typical Freethought hero—say such a man as Thomas Paine or Robert Ingersoll. Dr. Briggs is not a suitable exemplar for Freethinkers' admiration.

Dr. Briggs also disclaimed that he was guilty of teaching, as charged in Charge 7, that the processes of redemption extended to the world to come in the case of many who died in sin, stating that he "had repudiated the Roman Catholic doctrines of purgatory, also the doctrines of future probation and regeneration after death, or any beginning of Christian life after death."

The defendant had, he said, admitted that he taught that errors may have existed in the original text of the scriptures; that Moses is not the author of the Pentateuch; that Isaiah did not write more than half his book; that sanctification is not complete at death. He had not admitted the other things. The defendant held to as essential and had always taught four of the seven doctrines charged by the prosecution to have been attacked. He admitted the truth of and accepted two of the others, but did not regard them as essential.

The prosecution had, continued the defendant, given no proof that his own interpretation was wrong and that their own was right. They seemed to hold the opinion that holy scripture was the supreme judge. The Confession taught that it was the Holy Spirit; that spirit spoke to the reason through holy scripture. He had never taught any other doctrine. He had not said that the spirit spoke the final word through the reason, to which the Bible must yield. He was no Rationalist. The Holy Spirit united the scriptures and reason in an infallible bond.

Dr. Briggs next said that he would show from the Confession and from the scriptures that the church was also a fountain of divine authority as well as the scripture. It was incredible—it would not be believed by the Puritans—that any presbytery could so far abandon the faith of the Puritan fathers and permit the prosecution of a minister on a charge of heresy for maintaining that there was divine authority in the church. He had not said in his inaugural or in any of his writings that he co-ordinated the Bible, the church, and the reason, as equals in authority, nor could it be rightly inferred that he did so.

When Professor Briggs resumed his argument at the morning session, he took up Charge No. 4, that he taught that errors may have existed in the original text of the holy scripture as it came from its authors. He admitted that the allegation was fairly accurate. Going on to say that the only errors he ever found or ever recognized in holy scripture had been beyond the range of faith or practice, and therefore did not impair the infallibility of holy scripture as a rule of faith and practice, Dr. Briggs said that it was claimed that if he recognized errors in matters beyond the range of faith and practice he excited suspicion as to the infallibility of holy scripture within the range of faith and practice. His accusers were entitled to that opinion for themselves, but they had no right to force their opinions on him. He insisted that fallibility in the Bible in matters beyond the scope of the divine revelation did not impair the infallibility in matters within the scope of divine revelation. His exact views he said were these:

"The sacred writings were not composed in heaven by the holy spirits; they were not sent down from heaven by angel hands; they were not committed to the care of perfect men; they were not kept by a succession of perfect priests from that moment until the present time. If these had been the facts in the case we might have had a Bible infallible in every particular.

"But none of these things are true. God gave his holy word to man in an entirely different way. He used human reason and all the faculties of imperfect human nature. He used the voice and the hands of imperfect man. He allowed the sacred writings to be edited and re-edited, arranged and rearranged, and rearranged again by imperfect scribes. It is improbable that fallible men should produce a series of writings infallible in every respect. It was sufficient that divine inspiration and the guidance of the Holy Spirit should make their writings an infallible rule of faith and practice, and that the divine energy should push the human and the fallible into the external forms, into the unessential and unnecessary matter, into the human setting of divine ideals.

"It is evident that holy scripture is the only infallible rule of faith and practice, and yet that there are errors in holy scripture in matters that do not in any way impair its infallibility in matters of faith and practice."

Leaving the above ridiculous view to such smiles as it may provoke, we will take up the next point. With regard to the charge that he taught that Moses was not the author of the Pentateuch, Dr. Briggs made the same defense he made before the presbytery of New York, and summed up his arguments in this way:

"The Westminster Confession of Faith nowhere states that Moses wrote the Pentateuch or that Isaiah wrote the whole of the book that bears his name. Therefore, there can be no lawful case against me in the Presbyterian church.

"The testimony of holy scripture in the passages adduced does not show that Moses wrote the Pentateuch and that Isaiah wrote the whole of the book that bears his name. Therefore, my statements are not in conflict with holy scripture, and there is no valid case against me on the ground of holy scripture.

"Holy scripture makes it evident that Moses did not write the Pentateuch, and that Isaiah did not write half the book that bears his name. Therefore, my statements are true, and the prosecution are in conflict with holy scripture."

Passing to the charge that he taught that sanctification is not complete at death, Dr. Briggs said that his doctrine was clearly stated in the following words of his inaugural:

"There is no authority in the scriptures or in the creeds of Christendom for the doctrine of immediate sanctification at death. The only sanctification known to experience, to Christian orthodoxy, and to the Bible is progressive sanctification. Progressive sanctification after death is the doctrine of the Bible and the church."

Dr. Briggs claimed the authority of the larger catechism as showing that there are three states in which communion with Christ is enjoyed, namely, this life, immediately after death, and at the resurrection and day of judgment.

Dr. Briggs next said he would endeavor to show that his views were not inconsistent with the Westminster Confession. He set forth:

"I now wish to bring forth my position. I shall adhere to the policy which I have thus far followed with regard to errors in holy scripture. I have refused to accept the dogma that the original autographs were inerrant. I have maintained that there are errors in the texts which we have, in the best texts we can get by the science of textual criticism, and that it is improbable that the original texts, if we could discover them, would be much different from those we have in that regard. But I have refused to affirm that there were errors in the original autographs, because it is unscientific and it is unscholarly, and it is against the truth-loving spirit of Christianity to make affirmations of dogma where we have no certain evidence. I have always refrained, as far as possible, from pointing to errors in the present text of scripture. But every biblical scholar admits them.

"The doctrine of progressive sanctification is in accordance with the laws that God has established in the ethical constitution of man. The church and the Bible give their potent aid to the conscience in the ethical elevation of humanity. Shall all this ethical training cease at death, all the varied stages of progress in the different periods of life, of culture, of racial and national advancement, be reduced to a common level and made of none effect by a mighty transformation that will deal with the race, father and child, mother and babe, master and scholar, self-sacrificing missionary and pagan convert, the devoted evangelist, and the thief and murderer [here Dr. Briggs shouted his words] turning in his last hour to Christ from the shadow of the gallows—all in one undistinguishable mass? Such a doctrine strikes a deadly blow at the moral nature of man, the ethical constitution of society, the historic training of our race, and the moral government of God."

On many of the points our readers will find it hard to make out just what this sorry sort of heretic does believe. So the members of the assembly found it. So it would be found, we believe, by said petty heretic himself.

As to the conception that ethical advancement should be regarded as a result of prolonged endeavor rather than of instantaneous magic transformation at the Presto! of Jesus, we have for it some approval. It is the straggling shoot of a plant which in the Rationalistic garden we find developed in full and beneficent proportions.

Colonel McCook now rose to close the case for the appellants. He regretted that at a late hour the defendant had stood here and said: "Yes, the words are mine, but I do not admit the facts stated therein." This was paltry quibbling. Colonel McCook said he would cite but one instance of this. In Charge 8 the committee alleged that Dr. Briggs had taught "that sanctification is not complete at death, which is contrary to the essential doctrine of holy scripture and of the standards of the said church; that the souls of believers are at their death at once made perfect in holiness." Dr. Briggs had argued by the hour that the words "at once" were not the equivalent of "immediately" in the answer to the eighty-sixth question of the larger catechism.

On the 31st ult. several parsons wielded their holy tongues most scourgingly against what they dubbed "the fearful doctrine taught by Dr. Briggs." Dr. Leftwich, of Baltimore, declared that a Bible that could be affirmed to be inerrant only in faith and morals and errant as respects other matters left the Presbyterian church and the Christian world upon a sea of doubt in the darkness of night, with no star to light the way. Elder Stratton, of West Jersey, held up a copy of Paine's "Age of Reason," which, he affirmed, contained the very views championed by Dr. Briggs. There was nothing new, he said, about the matter, except that a Presbyterian minister had taken it upon himself to proclaim those views. Elder Thomas McDougall, of Cincinnati, precipitated a lively row. "If it be in order," he said, "in a Presbyterian assembly, in this high court, I would like to ask if the omniscience, the veracity, the character of God almighty, of the Lord Jesus Christ, may be questioned? God almighty has said that Isaiah said thus and so. Dr. Briggs has said to God almighty that Isaiah did not write half the book that bears his name. The Lord Jesus Christ said in the New Testament that Isaiah wrote the book bearing his name. Dr. Briggs says"—Here Brother McDougall was interrupted. After many words flying back and forth, Dr. Storrs cried, "But Mr. McDougall says Dr. Briggs said God was untruthful, which is blasphemy and unpardonable." "I said," the elder replied, "that God said that Isaiah said thus and so, and that in the New Testament the Lord Jesus Christ said Isaiah said thus and so, and Dr. Briggs said that Isaiah did not write that part of the book in which these quotations are found. Christ said no man can come unto the Father but by me. Dr. Briggs says that Martineau found God through the reason and that Newman found him through the church. Whom will you believe—Christ or Dr. Briggs?"

The vote was now taken. It was: to sustain the appeal from the local presbytery, that is, to hold Briggs prosecutable despite the acquitting verdict of that body, 375; not to sustain, 117. It remained to express the sense of the assembly as to the action that should be taken upon the judgment of the local presbytery—whether it should be reversed or modified—and what penalty should be imposed upon Dr. Briggs, if any. There are five things the general assembly can do in such a case. They can admonish; they can rebuke; they can suspend; they can depose one from the ministry, or they can expel him from the church. On the next day, June 1st, action on this point was taken. The decision of the local presbytery was reversed, and Dr. Briggs suspended from the ministry, on the following grounds:

"First: We find that the doctrine of the errancy of the scriptures as it came from them to whom and through whom God originally communicated his revelation, is in conflict with the statement of the holy scriptures itself, which assert that 'all scripture,' or 'every scripture,' is given by 'inspiration of God.' 2 Tim. iii, 16: 'That the prophecy came not of old by the way of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.' 2 Pet. i, 12; and also with the statements of the standard of the church, which assert that the holy scriptures of the Old and New Testament are the Word of God. Larger catechism, question 3. 'Of infallible truth and divine authority.' Confession, Chapter I, section 5.

"Second: That we find in this case involved the question of the sufficiency of the human reason and of the church as authorized guides in the matter of salvation. Your committee recommend that this general assembly declare that reason and the church are not to be regarded as fountains of divine authority; that they are unreliable and fallible, and while they may, and no doubt are, channels or media through which the Holy Spirit may reach and influence for good the human soul, they are never to be relied upon as sufficient in themselves, and aside from holy scriptures, to lead the soul to a saving knowledge of God. To teach otherwise is most dangerous and contrary to the word of God, and our standards and our ministers and our church-members are solemnly warned against them.

"Third: We find involved in this case a speculation in regard to the process of the soul's sanctification after death, which in the judgment of this assembly, is a dangerous hypothesis, in direct conflict with the plain teaching of the divine word and the utterance of the standards of our church. These standards distinctly declare that 'The souls of believers are at their death made perfect in holiness and do immediately pass into glory, whilst their bodies, being still united to Christ, do rest in their graves until the resurrection.' Shorter catechism: Question 37, 2 Cor. v, 8; Phil. i, 23; John xvii, 24."

This deliberate affirmation of the Presbyterian church in the year 1893 will be found a very useful thing for those who wish to know in their war upon Presbyterianism just what to attack. Some Presbyterians have been pleading when assailed that their church has become modernized out of the above severe doctrines, but we now know just what to pin them down to and hold them responsible for.

It is speculated that Dr. Briggs may start a new church and split Presbyterianism.

We will close by remarking that while Dr. Briggs is perhaps doing the best he can, he makes at best but a poorish figure of a heretic, and it is mighty slow work enlightening a preacher.

Down With the Priests' Day!

On the 29th ult. the suit of Charles Clingman, a stockholder in the World's Fair, to have that exhibition open Sundays so that he might not thereby suffer pecuniary loss, was heard in an Illinois state court. Judge Stein granted the injunction against Sunday closing that Mr. Clingman asked. As to the point of a contract relating to the question, the judge said that while one had once been made, it had been invalidated by Congress having deducted $570,000 of the money it had promised. As to the point of state law forbidding Sunday disturbance, he held that the lawyer of the Sabbatarian side had failed to prove any disturbance. He held that an open Fair is powerfully conducive to a better observance of the peace, and added that he could safely remark that it is conducive to greater and higher education. As to the point that this is a Christian nation, Christianity our national religion, and any action violative of that religion's observances illegitimate, he mentioned that there was a great sect of religious people who celebrated Saturday as their Sabbath, and so far as this point was related to the law, Article II of the constitution of Illinois gives to every citizen the right to the free exercise of his religious beliefs, irrespective of constraining provisions.

On the 31st ult. another suit was begun. This was not in a state but in a United States court. In the United States circuit court at Chicago District Attorney Milchrist asked an injunction restraining Sunday opening. The interest felt in the matter was testified by a great crowd of spectators. Among these, many parsonic black coats, including those of several editors of religious papers, were observable. The Sunday closers' chief argument was that the Fair is under the control of the national government and not under that of the local body. They said that the state court had no jurisdiction in the case, and thus Judge Stein had had no right to issue such an order as that given above. The question was for the federal court alone. The Fair being under control of Congress that body could open or close it just as it pleased. It is right that it should now close it by virtue of its police power. Among other things, they represented that if the court rendered a decision that the government had not the constitutional power to conduct the Fair it would be destructive to great and valuable interests. Such a decision would strike down the Smithsonian Institution, the National Museum, the National Observatory, and others of the great educational institutions of the government. Such a decision would compel the government to remove its exhibits from the Fair to a place over which it has constitutional control. The Sunday closers also called attention to the fact that the directors "had attempted to placate the public by announcing that religious services would be held at the Exposition and sacred concerts in Choral Hall. By those concessions the directors had admitted that there was a sanctity in the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, which should be observed." On the other hand, Counsel Walker for the local directors urged, among various arguments: "While I admit that this is a Christian nation, I claim that I have the privilege to exercise my right to a free conscience without dictation from any outside agency. Congress did not pass a law closing the Fair on Sunday. Congress knew such a law would have been unconstitutional and repugnant to the principles of the Constitution." In concluding his remarks Mr. Walker declared that Congress has no right to make laws regulating or interfering with the police powers of the state. The police control of parks is with the state. The judges, after hearing these arguments three days, pronounced the case so important that they could deliver no decision till Thursday of the following week, the 8th inst. The Sabbatarians at once clapped in with a prayer for a temporary injunction forbidding opening on Sunday the 4th, while the final decision was being prepared. This was refused.

Accordingly, the Fair was open last Sunday. A storm, with great heat, detracted from the attendance. Still, the number of visitors was large. When Sunday opening has become an established fact the railroads will get up excursions and bring multitudes. As all museums, art galleries, etc., show a Sunday attendance at least double that of week-days, it of course is to be supposed that the World's Fair will do likewise. The attendance on the previous Sunday later reports show to have been only 100,000 to 140,000, of which number 69,000 to 90,000 were paid visitors. The Sabbatarian leaders are chuckling over the attendance being less than was expected. They delight that but so moderate a number of their fellow-men succeeded in enjoying and educating themselves, in contravention to their, the preachers', desire that they shall be miserable and learn nothing. A dispatch says in description of last Sunday's attendance:

"Wherever the people went they preserved their silence and solemnity. These two characteristics of the Sunday crowds have been manifest to all. There has been more noise and jollity on week-days than on Sundays. Even the foreign people follow the custom. There has been nothing about the crowds to remind one of the continental Sunday. . . . These men doubtless enjoyed themselves to-day, even if they did not show it. Most of them had their families with them, and one of the daughters would read from the guide-book while the others listened. Thus they passed about from building to building, taking everything in with great seriousness. Not even the Midway Plaisance could tempt many smiles or expressions of opinion."

During all this time, the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and other denominations are most diligently protesting against Sunday opening. They are also arranging to cover or remove their exhibits if the Fair be open. And they will, moreover, in case of opening preach a boycott from their pulpits throughout the land. That is, their governing assemblies have decided that the preachers shall do so, and the order while neglected by some will be observed by others. The American Sabbath Association will spend considerable money in distributing pamphlets giving the history of the case and presenting Sabbatic arguments. These, they say, even if they do not effect the closing of the Fair will do permanent good. The utterances of these Sabbatarians teem with frantic denunciations of the opening advocates as everything that is thought to be abominable, such for instance as this by the New York Methodist Book Concern: "The directors of the World's Fair are Anarchists, working for Anarchists' principles and for the disestablishment of the American Sabbath." We will close our summary of these enlightened doings by adding that John Wanamaker is among the doers, he having publicly advised boycotting the Exposition if it opens Sundays.

The clergy want to have such attractions as the World's Fair forbidden Sundays solely that their own contribution-boxes may not lose any coins. Their motive is detestable selfishness and greed. Many lovers of a fair field and no favor should not rest till all trades and professions have been set on an equal footing, with permission given no calling to close up its rivals on any day and engross all traffic to itself. Down with the priests' day!

Communications.

Ezra Hoar Heywood.

SOMETHING MORE OF HIS LIFE, WORK, AND PERSONALITY; THE FUNERAL SERVICES.

The news of the death of E. H. Heywood came with a shock of surprise to his many friends and acquaintances. Of course all knew in an indefinite way that his health had been seriously impaired by his prison life but none except his nearest associates realized how the fiber of his physical being had been dry-rotted by those two wretched years in Charlestown penitentiary. Those of us who had the pleasure of participating in the reception tendered him upon his release could not fail to perceive that, while the mind was unclouded and forceful as of old, the bodily stamina of this defender of free speech, press, and mails was sadly and irremediably depleted. But none, I think, expected the end to come so quickly.

He was earnestly engaged to the last in the work to which he had given so many years of his life. Early in May he went to New York to conduct the twenty-second annual convention of the American Labor Reform League, an organization owing its existence chiefly to his initiative and tireless fostering care. On this trip he contracted a slight cold, which clung to his torture-weakened system and rapidly augmented in virulence after his return to Boston. He held out against the attack for a few days, but at length he had to yield and take to his bed, where he was under the medical care of Dr. Davis, and was tenderly and assiduously nursed by his daughter, Psyche Ceres, and his sisters-in-law. But skill and loving care were all in vain. On Monday, May 22d, at 5:30 in the afternoon, Ezra Hoar Heywood wearily but in perfect peace laid down the weapons of mental warfare, weapons which had in his hand been the unstained tools of industrial and social evolution.

His serious illness had not been known, I think, outside the circle of his nearest relatives and their associates.

To THE TRUTH SEEKER's vivid and timely sketch of his life I may add some interesting items of information which will be appreciated at this time.

Ezra Hoar Heywood was related to United States Senator Hoar, and this calls to mind the fact that the uncompromising editor of the Word was born Hoar, not Heywood. How he came to be known by the latter name is an interesting bit of biography, and illustrates anew and most forcibly the well-known fact that members of the same family may be irreconcilable opposites in temperament, sympathies, and habits of thought. Subsequent to the death of the father of the subject of our sketch, his elder sons, including Samuel R. Hoar, had the family name changed from Hoar to Heywood, against the protests of his mother, who refused to adopt the new name and continued to be known as Mrs. Ezra Hoar. The late Ezra H. Heywood, as junior brother of Samuel R., and the others, was powerless to prevent the change, which was made because the latter thought that Hoar was altogether too suggestiv a cognomen. E. E. H. contemplated retaking his father's name.

The story of E. H. Heywood's imprisonment in 1878 in Dedham jail may be summarized here very briefly. He was sentenced by Judge Clark to two years' incarceration for having sent "Cupid's Yokes" through the mails. Petitions were circulated in his behalf, and seventy thousand signatures obtained. Armed with these and certain valuable letters, including one from Judge Cuppy, the gifted Laura Kendrick repaired to Washington. She laid siege to Rutherford B. Hayes and conducted her delicate and difficult mission so determinedly and skilfully that after he had served six months of his sentence E. H. Heywood's prison gates opened at the touch of the president's "pardon." But this act of executive "clemency" alarmed and aroused to action the party of proscription, and when D. M. Bennett subsequently was sent to Albany penitentiary thirteen months for the same offense, two hundred thousand names could not avail to touch the heart and move the hand of the obedient husband of priest-bound pious Lucy Hayes. So the victim editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER served his full sentence, and in so doing laid the foundations for the disease that killed him, in what was otherwise his intellectual and physical prime, just as E. H. Heywood was later to die, murdered by men who knew not, or, knowing, cared not, how much suffering they caused so only they might force their opinions on those who could not accept them voluntarily.

In July, 1890, for mailing copies of the Word, Mr. Heywood was sentenced by Judge Carpenter (who conducted himself more like a ruthless pervert from civilization than like an ordinary savage) to two years' confinement in Charlestown penitentiary, where he remained to the end of his term, less time deducted for good behavior. Mrs. Dr. Gilbert went to Washington in behalf of the persecuted reformer, but of course she could do nothing with Harrison. The man whose pen was to sign the Chinese exclusion law and the World's Fair Sunday-closing edict could not, consistently, release from punishment a man who did not know how to compromise with his conscience for popular applause and votes. Harrison reserved his pardons for wealthy or well-connected embezzlers.

Upon Mr. Heywood's release from Charlestown prison, May 13, 1892, he was tendered a reception at the Quincy House, Boston. Captain Robert C. Adams presided most acceptably and addresses were made by the guest of the evening, the chairman, S. P. Putnam, J. A. J. Wilcox, Dr. A. E. Gilbert, Martha Luce, and others. Letters were read by Jay Chaapel from Ellen M. Bolles, Parker Pillsbury, George Schumm, Ernest Mendum, Alfred H. Love, A. L. Rawson, E. B. Foote, Sr., Frank K. Foster, C. S. Swartz, B. O. Flower, Mrs. H. S. Lake, L. V. Pinney, and many more. One year and eight days from that hour nearly all those there assembled, with many others, stood by the bier of the man they had welcomed from the prison shadows.

THE FUNERAL.

Services in honor of Mr. Heywood were held in Boston and Princeton; the first in the rooms of Josephine S. and J. Flora Tilton, at 202 Huntington avenue, Wednesday, May 24th, at 5 P.M., and the second at his house in Princeton, at 3 P.M., Thursday, May 25th.

The Boston Globe introduced its account of the Boston services with these paragraphs:

It was not a funeral, in the common meaning of that word.

There were no habiliments of woe, no signs of mourning, save the tear-stained eyes and sorrowful faces of relatives and friends. And the absence of all formality made the simple services all the more impressive.

Reclining on a couch, as if in sleep, lay the body of the deceased, wrapped in a white robe. The finely-chiseled and handsome features were as natural as in life. The hands were folded over the body, and in his left was a copy of the Word.

Baskets of laurels, with smilax and wisteria, violets, roses, and ferns seemed to take from the chamber of death its gloomy terrors.

A notable and most interesting assembly it was that gathered in hallway and rooms of the apartment.

The near relatives present were: Angela T. Heywood, with her children, Vesta Vernon, Hermes Sidney, Psyche Ceres, and Angelo T. Heywood; her mother, Lucy M. Tilton; her sisters, Josephine S. and J. Flora Tilton, and S. R. Heywood, brother of the deceased. Another brother, Joseph, having left the hospital only the day before, was unable to attend, and was deeply affected by his loss, and this was additional deprivation. The other absent near kinspeople were Dwight Heywood, residing in Omaha, and Mary and Delia Heywood.

Reformers were present in large numbers, all classes, divisions, and subdivisions being represented. Among these were seen John Orvis, A. A. Miner, A. W. Stevens, George Schumm, Henry Appleton, T. C. Brophy, William Melvin, Emma Heller Schumm, A. H. Simpson, E. C. Walker, James W. Harris, John Orth, E. B. McKenzie, Dr. C. Hubbard, M. A. Warren, of Hudson; Dr. Wellington, Mrs. Dr. Gilbert, James L. Locke, Carl Friede, Frank Ranigan, William Denton, Winifred Denton, John Daviess, Ferdinand Dewey, Ellen Batelle Dietrich, Belle C. Schull and daughters, Ella and Metta Shull, of Findlay, O.; Jennie Rhind, Della Davis, James F. Pickering, J. A. J. Wilcox, Martha Avery, Etta Cheney, James W. Stillman, Mrs. Case, of Providence, R. I.; James H. Martin, Arabella Nichols, J. L. Buxton, of Milford; Blanche Toohey, E. P. Miller, of Hartford, and Josephine Stirling.

The Beethoven Quartet sang "Still, Still with Thee," and then John Orvis announced that the services would be wholly informal—that anyone who wished might participate. He said, in part:

We are not here to pray—he is beyond our prayers, he is beyond the world's censure. Ezra H. Heywood seemed to me, among all the men I ever knew, to be a man, and with loftier conceptions of duty. I will not except even William Lloyd Garrison. With him the perception of a truth was a conviction of duty. He never knew fear, never could know fear, with that conscience behind him. His eye was to the sun, and that eye, like the sun, penetrated to the evil recesses of society. He was devoted to what he held to be right. That was the secret of E. H. Heywood's doing what the rest of us have not dared to do. We have seen the evils of fettered love, but we have not spoken and acted. Woman as woman and woman as mother were sacrificed.

He saw and denounced the evils of rent, interest, and profits. He was almost the first man since Jesus who said they were robbery. For his position on all these questions he has been cursed and persecuted—these truths have been crucified in the person of E. H. Heywood.

When men have settled the true relations of men and women, womanhood and childhood are made sacred.

J. A. J. Wilcox spoke briefly. "My sense of personal loss," he began, "and the bereavement of those nearest and dearest to him impel me to give my testimony to the worth of E. H. Heywood. We are his debtors for the work he did for us and for the cause with which we sympathized, but for which we did not work as he worked."

At the conclusion of Mr. Wilcox's remarks the quartet sang "He Is Risen," and then Ella Schull read letters from Ed. W. Chamberlain, the daughter of Elizur Wright, Robert C. Adams, Elizabeth M. F. Denton, and others who could not attend.

Rev. A. A. Miner was the next speaker. Among other things, he said:

My personal acquaintance with Mr. Heywood was relatively slight, but it was sufficient to impress me with his sincerity.

I was the guest of his family in Princeton on two or three occasions, and I was forcibly struck with the democratic spirit that ruled in that home, with the self-respecting devotion of the members of the family to one another, with their courtesy to strangers. It was a most beautiful home life.

While in Princeton I discovered something of the feeling in that community toward Mr. Heywood, which led to his arrest and conviction.

I cannot say how far, had I known him better, I might sympathize with his peculiar views, or how I might have been convinced by his philosophical defense of them. But I did sympathize with his honesty of purpose, and I did strive to use what influence I had to secure a mitigation of the severity of his sentence.

The more I study human affairs the more am I convinced of the inadequacy of any human tribunal to judge a man's motives, and to mete out justice.

In a general way I would say I have learned the utter incompetency of men to judge men; of human tribunals to decide the deeper problems of society. A fact is proven; a term in prison follows, but no relation between the two is established. Two men disagree; tempers become aroused; a physical conflict supervenes; one falls under a chance blow. The authorities wait to see if the injured man will recover. What difference does that make? How does that settle the question of motive?

If this is true of such a comparatively simple affair, what of the relations of society and men's views thereon? of the difference of opinion as to the needed restriction or the lack of it? We are coming to broader toleration of discussion of these questions. Why was our friend imprisoned for seeking to extend the limits of free speech, press, etc., while nothing was done to restrain those who would limit all these?

M. A. Warren read a poem, and following this Martha Avery said, among other equally good things:

So dear a right is free speech, so fundamental a necessity to us as women, can we afford to remain silent? It is time we spoke of the sex question. I would not free woman from man, but woman with man. I give my heartfelt tribute to this great man who dared speak his honest conviction. Morality is the relation between man's ideal and his conduct.

Song by quartet.

Jennie Rhind was the next speaker. "We testify," she remarked, "for this good man whose lips are sealed in death. He was my personal friend and Mrs. Heywood is my friend. The time is coming when laurel will crown the brows of such as this man. The world must give place to advanced ideas in all directions—social, political, economical. I know Mr. Heywood has planted seed which will bring forth in due season and abundantly. No sower of reform seed has reaped the fruit, but those who came after. We must water what Ezra Heywood has so nobly sown."

A. H. Simpson followed with a quite extended address intended to show what it was that Mr. Heywood contended for through all his life, the relation of his work to that of other reformers of his generation, and what bearing it all had upon the principles at stake and the work to be done at this time. I give here as clear and extended a synopsis as I can of his address and as nearly as possible in his own words:

We should try at least to make his personality shine out and dominate this meeting. He was one of the old individualists, of whom Elizur Wright and A. A. Miner are other types. His record is not a modern one. He was an Abolitionist before many of those whose names have gone down in glory were Abolitionists. It was in his nature, essentially. An old peace man, he did not go with the clamorers for war. He kept his conscience for the individual. He stood for self-sovereignty. He saw that it must be carried through all phases of life. The right of the black was the right of woman. The burden upon him was due to those Comstock moralists who violated the principles for which he had always stood. They are trying to enforce morality. This is the essence of immorality. You are as immoral as Mr. Heywood himself, if by your presence you sanction the claim to honesty here made for him. Should Comstock come here and disperse this meeting he would be no more criminal than when he prevented Heywood from mailing his books. Both are denials of the right of publication and freedom of utterance.

So devoted was he to the principles he advocated that to say he could not outraged his sense of justice and made him immovably determined to do what was forbidden.

At the banquet it was seen he was broken in body but not in spirit. He was actually done to death by the society at the head of which is Comstock, the society of organized moralism.

William Melvin said that he had seen all the Heywood family grow up, and in that home and printery he had "learned more in three years than in eighteen years at school. Perhaps from a worldly standpoint it has been to my disadvantage, as in his case. E. H. Heywood was the same in private as in public—unflinching. He knew nothing of expedients. The outside world did not know him. Wherever honor is done to Mr. Heywood I want to put a wreath on top myself, no matter how small it is."

James F. Pickering was the last speaker, and as his remarks were written I can give a fuller report of them than of those of most of the others:

Ezra H. Heywood was a man of thought, and his sole desire was to make the world better. His purpose was to promote purity, to make clean minds and thus to secure pure and right actions.

He knew the temper of the age in which he lived. He was not an unintelligent enthusiast. He was an able scholar, and during all his life he was a hard student.

Few men have brought to the study of the pressing social questions of the day the ample preparation and the mental equipment which were his.

Beginning his active public career as an Abolitionist of the school of Garrison and Phillips, he maintained his consistency and did not abandon his principles to become a war Abolitionist.

In his study of the labor question he found the position of woman in the world, in the field of labor, in the family and in society at large, must be taken into account, and this led him to the study of deeper and more difficult social questions.

The final outcome of this was that he became boldly and openly an advocate of "free love."

But as there are many men and women in the world who conceive love to be lust, and therefore think free love must be free lust, Mr. Heywood was, by such persons, looked upon as the subverter of all morality and virtue.

In fact, he favored love—free, untrammelled love, that thereby free lust should be suppressed.

There has never been a firmer friend of morality, virtue, and purity than this man, who gave his life to the advocacy of free love, and, who, to maintain the public right to disseminate one's opinions, received persecutions and imprisonment as his reward.

LETTERS FROM ABSENT FRIENDS.

111 WEST 142D STREET, NEW YORK, May 23, 1893.

MISS JOSIE S. TILTON—Dear Friend: Nothing has so shocked and grieved me for many a day as the receipt of your unexpected telegram this morning announcing the passage of Heywood. I hope to hear from you as early as a day as your convenience will permit some detailed account of the last days of my heroic friend, who has left to his friends and his country the recollection of a sublime, sturdy integrity. The deepest impression he ever made upon me, and which I shall always retain and cherish with pleasure, was when I parted from him after Judge Carpenter's brutal outrage. He repeated several times, "I have nothing to regret." As he appeared then, so will my remembrance of him be hereafter. I hope to learn that the clear intellect which directed such grand purposes remained unclouded to the end.

Yours sincerely,

ED. W. CHAMBERLAIN.

Mr. Chamberlain was the attorney of E. H. Heywood in the last battle with Comstock and his assistant, Judge Carpenter.

WELLESLEY, MASS., May 23, 1893.

MY DEAR JOSEPHINE: I am greatly shocked and pained by the sad intelligence contained in your note of last evening, just received. It is so unexpected—and it is seemingly so wrong that it should have been so! But Mr. Heywood had nobly earned the right to be relieved from further service, however much we may need him, and the spirit of his life and his works still live with us.

Ever faithfully yours,

ELIZABETH M. F. DENTON.

WINSTED, CONN., May 24, 1893.

DEAR MRS. HEYWOOD: News of Mr. Heywood's transition reached me ten minutes ago, and I hasten to express to you my deep sympathy and kindest wishes for you and your children. You will miss and mourn him much, but your great fortitude and profound philosophy will bear you up. He is beyond the reach of society and the law, and if there is a future life his condition now is glorious beyond expression, and made so by a life of toil and suffering, persecution and ill-treatment, endured for the sacred cause of human liberty and faithfully pursued to the last. A great man hounded to death by ignorance and superstition; a blameless life lived for the welfare of the human race; a martyr to principle who faced poverty and ignominy, imprisonment and death for a great idea; a noble nature that scorned falsehood and deceit; a beautiful character that held love sacred, and Liberty above all price—this is our loss and the world's loss, and for this we sorrow. All honor to the memory of your gifted and noble husband, and may you be comforted with the knowledge that death is the renewal of life for him, and that by his good works his perfect heaven is gained.

Truly and sincerely yours,

L. V. PINNEY.

MONTREAL, CAN., May 23, 1893.

DEAR JOSEPHINE: Your telegram has brought me the sad tidings that Mr. Heywood's personal work in the body has ceased, though his words will go marching on, and if spirits do get a chance to work it is certain that his indomitable energy and zeal will makethemselves manifest.

I deeply regret that the cause of freedom has lost his aid. It was to be hoped that for many years yet he would have labored for Liberty, but persecution has done its work. However, he said enough to give the death-blow to bigotry and tyranny. His pamphlets must be collected into a book and a biographer must be found to at once put his life before the public in its true light.

Yours sincerely,

ROBT. C. ADAMS.

BREWSTER'S MUSEUM, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.,

May 23, 1893.

DEAR HERMES: It was with surprise and sadness that I learned by this morning's paper of the death of your dear father. I was not aware that he was ailing, and although he looked thin and careworn when I last saw him at the station in Wellesley, yet he seemed so cheerful and in such good spirits that I supposed he was in the best of health and would live to a good old age.

Whether I agree with all his views or not is of little consequence. I always have and shall still continue to reverence his name for the noble stand he took, and even defended with his liberty, in his efforts to instruct and uplift the human race, and in my opinion the time will come when his greatness will be known and appreciated by his persecutors (the masses of the people), as it is now by a few of his bereaved friends.

Dear Hermes, please convey to your mother, brother, and sisters the sincere sympathy of wife and self, for I know she would join me did she know I was writing.

Sincerely yours,

SHELLEY W. DENTON.

120 LEXINGTON AVE., N. Y., May 24, 1893.

DEAR JOSIE: Your telegram of the 23d was received last evening. I need not tell you it was a very great surprise to me, for I had a few moments' conversation with Mr. Heywood when he was here last, and I thought he was looking unusually well.

If Mr. Heywood's views were correct in reference to the influences exerted by the spirits of the dead upon the minds of the living, he will probably make himself just as much felt in the new situation as heretofore; but with my own views less clear on this point, I very greatly regret that Mr. Heywood has left us. I wish you would say to all Boston friends that we feel very great sympathy with all of you in this bereavement.

Yours truly,

E. B. FOOTE.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 29, 1893.

DEAR FRIENDS: I am surprised and pained to hear of Mr. Heywood's death. I regard it as a great loss to all of us, for any man who does his own thinking and is true to it is of benefit to mankind, especially one who has been so brave and endured so much as Mr. Heywood. I give you and all his family my deepest sympathy. With all best wishes,

Yours ever,

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The body was accompanied to Princeton on Thursday, May 25th, by the family and William Melvin, J. L. Buxton, of Milford; W. B. Wright, M. A. Warren, of Hudson; Mrs. Dr. Gilbert, Belle C. Schull, Dr. Sims, and Carl Friede.

In the spacious rooms of the home at Princeton assembled the resident and visiting friends, and the few orthodox neighbors whose curiosity or sympathy was stronger than their prejudices and fear. Mr. Call, an orthodox minister, came and spoke with Mrs. Heywood and the children as they sat by Mr. Heywood's head.

All of the arrangements were of the simplest, and were in perfect harmony with the position of the family and with the views and life purposes of the dead man.

Dr. C. H. Sims delivered this eulogy:

We have met to pay a last tribute of honor and respect to the remains of Ezra Heywood; but, as long as the name and works of this unique scholar and philanthropist are remembered, our coming together will be an occasion of honor to ourselves.

In him liberty, love, and light have lost their most zealous friend. His utterances and deeds were rich, ripe fruits of wisdom, patience, and charity. In the midst of wicked persecutions he maintained that liberty, reason, and right must prevail against force, oppression, and wrong. He said: "Right lives through moral suasion, and evil dies with the conditions which produce it." He knew that persecution and punishment fail in good results—that truth and virtue can be jailed neither in nor out of the world.

The state which has blackened his reputation and robbed him of liberty time and again must some day acknowledge his worth and do him honor.

He preached eight hours a day, and worked sixteen. He believed in peace and plenty, but toiled in the cause of liberty through difficulties and poverty for himself and family. He was the disciple of love and liberty, the victim of hate and oppression. Some one said he is beyond our prayers, and I join his little daughter Psyche in the reply: "He is beyond our prisons, don't need our prayers, nor even those of his pious persecutors."

Josephine S. Tilton, standing at the head of the casket, said:

I must, before I part with my brother, rebuke Princeton folks for permitting Mr. Heywood to starve to death.

The body was laid away in the family burial-ground.

Josephine Tilton writes: "Heywood is not 'at rest,' but let us believe that his spirit is rejuvenated."

E. C. WALKER.

River Station, Boston, Mass.

The Resurrection.

"And when Abraham said, O Lord, show me how thou wilt raise the dead; God said, Dost thou not yet believe? He answered, Yea; but I ask this that my heart may rest at ease. God said, take therefore four birds, and divide them; then lay a part of them on every mountain; then call them, and they shall come swiftly unto thee: And know that God is mighty and wise" (Koran, Chap. II).

Abraham, the legend saith,
Musing on the theme of Death,
Iblis came with sad suggestion

Of a faithless, vexing question—
"How can he whose flesh at last
Rides as dust on every blast,
Hither, thither, far and wide,
Be as though he ne'er had died?"

Vexed, perplexed, and touched with doubt,
The patriarch could not quite make out
How the scattered atoms can
Be restored to form of man.
So unto his Lord he went
In his dark bewilderment,
Saying, "God, thou wisest, best,
Set my troubled mind at rest;
Show me how the dead can rise—
In what manner and what guise."

Allah, gently chiding, said:

"Iblis's lies have filled thy head;
Yet, thou doubter of my words,
Take, behead four different birds,
Mince the bodies all together,
Mingle flesh, blood, bone, and feather—
Save their heads and nothing more—
Parting then the mass in four,
North and south four mountains seek,
Lay one part upon each peak,
Homeward then returning, cry,
'By the power of God most high,
Birds, fly hither, hither fly.'"

Then chose the patriarch from his stock
A pea-fowl, raven, dove, and cock.
Each head was from its body shorn,
Each body into fragments torn,
And flesh and feathers, blood and bone,
Were shredded, pounded, mixed in one.
Dividing then the mass in four,
To separate peaks each part he bore.

Returning homeward then, he cried

To each bird that thus had died:
"By the power of God most high,
Pea-fowl, hither, hither, fly!"
And as thus the patriarch said
Forth he held the pea-fowl's head,
When the headless body flew
And was joined at once thereto,
And the pea-fowl in its pride
Stood as just before it died.

Then again the patriarch cried

To the bird that thus had died,
"By the power of God most high,
Hither, hither, raven, fly!"
And as thus the patriarch said,
Forth he held the raven's head,
When the headless body flew
And was joined at once thereto,
And the raven croaked and cried
Just as though it ne'er had died.

Yet again the patriarch cried

To the dove that thus had died,
As he held its head above,
"Hither, hither fly, O dove,
By the power of God most high,
Hither, dove, oh, hither fly!"
Floating onward from above,
Instantly, this headless dove,
With its head, itself supplied:
Perfect as before it died.

Yet again the patriarch cried

To the cock that thus had died:
"God is God, there is but one;
By his power, come hither, run!"
Then the headless body sped,
Joining to its former head;
Flapped its wings upon its side,
And crowed as though it ne'er had died.

Thus Abraham's heart at rest was set,
But mine is troubled even yet.

Harlan, Ia., Apr. 20, 1893.

J. K. P. BAKER.

A POPULAR orator is telling a story about an Irishman who bowed low before a bronze figure of Jupiter and remarked: "I am told ye'es was wance king of heaven. Ye're pretty low now, but av ever ye'es get back to heaven again ye must not forget that I wasn't too proud to shake hands with ye'es when ye'es was down." Even so; the course of godship never did run smooth. It sometimes potholes us poor mortals no little to keep posted on the occupancy of the heavenly chair and pay our obeisance in the proper quarter. Perhaps the liveliest jumping about to effect this end that any of us God's-worms ever had to do was that of the English a few generations ago, when alternate enthronings of Jehovah with his Bible on the one hand, and "the pope, the devil, and the Virgin Mary" on the other, kept those who retained an affection for their heads as briskly employed as peas on a griddle. Nowadays each god and god-ling seems to enjoy a longer term in office, and hardly a human subject of average life is required to harrow up his soul with treasonous unsettlings; unless he be a traveler, in which case he may hap to find an occasional change of deity as contributive to his health as the change of climate.

Prayer and Weather.

Elder Berry: "Joblots is anxious to have our theological students take a preliminary course in the weather bureau."

Dr. Thirdly: "What for?"

Elder Berry: "He says there is a lot in knowing the proper time to begin praying for rain."

A Wage Question.

Elder Berry: "Where the wages of sin are death there will be no striking for an increase."

Joblots: "Certainly not; the demand will be for shorter hours."

Editorial Notes.

J. E. Remsburg delivered thirty-five lectures during the month of May.

Those who knew John Duncan will be grieved to know that seafaring people have given up all hope of the White Star steamer Naronic, which left England last January, since which time she has not been heard from. Mr. Duncan was chief engineer. He was a sturdy Freethinker, a brave and sensible man, and whatever fate befell the ship we feel sure he acted his part nobly. He leaves a wife and children in Liverpool.

Mr. D. S. Johnson, of Sioux Falls, S. D., made us a pleasant call on his way to Norway, where he will remain a year. Mr. Johnson is one of the active pushers of Freethought in his neighborhood, particularly among his countrymen, and has translated several Freethought articles into Norwegian for their benefit, printing them in small pamphlets which can be had during his absence by addressing Olaf Haugtro, Sioux Falls, S. D.

The friends of Samos Parsons, of San Jose, Cal., neglected to notify us of the death of that brave old man, and we only learn the news from the Investigator. Mr. Parsons was in his ninetieth year when he died, and until a few weeks before his death had the possession of his mental and physical powers to a wonderful degree. Two months ago he commenced to break down and failed rapidly until the 15th of May, when he was stricken with apoplexy and in twenty-four hours he was no more. He realized for weeks that his end was near and said repeatedly: "My time is about up," "I shan't hold out much longer." Also, "I have no fear of death," "I begin to think the grave is the best place for me, for I seem to need nothing now, but rest, rest." Mr. Parsons was one of the most generously persistent supporters of Freethought in the country, giving largely of his means each year, and bestowing good advice with fatherly freedom. His frequent admonishments made us love him, for the honesty of purpose and sincerity of desire to do good which pervaded them. He was good all through, and everybody will miss him. He should rest well.

The debt on Talmage's new tabernacle has been satisfied by the payment of twenty-three per cent of the amount. It was a sharp piece of financial work on the part of Mr. Talmage. He declared that unless that amount was accepted he would leave the church. The creditors knew that without the clown a circus does not draw, and therefore does not pay, so they accepted it. Our contributor, Owen Jones, breaks into song in the Sun about the glad event and honorable transaction in these melodious verses:

"TALMAGE TRIUMPHANT!!
 " Dei gloria in excelsis!
 Swelled six thousand voices bleat,
 While the giant organ thundered
 'SAVED BY TWENTY-THREE PER CENT!'
 "Talmage smiled with heavenly rapture,
 Triumphs crowned the glad event:
 The Tabernacle now is saved!
 Saved by twenty-three per cent.
 "Did the guileless man of Nazareth,
 Who suffered death and homeless went,
 Inculcate these church-building projects
 Based on twenty-three per cent?
 "When the trump of doom shall echo
 And asunder graves are rent,
 Will the stern recording stylus
 Point to twenty-three per cent?
 "To the mammoth temple builded
 With skill and honest labor spent,
 Were gathered in the saints who paid on Church debts twenty-three per cent?
 "Bidding church contractors chuckle
 With joy serene and sweet content,
 For treasured in the realms eternal
 They'd find their seventy-seven per cent."

World's Fair Notes.

Jubilate! jubilate! the World's Fair is open on Sunday. A great and a brilliant triumph has been won over bigotry. It was a happy day for thousands and thousands of people. How they thronged from every quarter, a quiet, orderly, and appreciative multitude—working people most of them apparently, for they had their lunches with them and sat down on boxes and benches in cosy nooks and enjoyed the feast in plain and economical fashion. They didn't spend much money in amusements, but roamed around, whole families, seeing all the wonders they could for the admission fee and not paying for extras. A large number it seems had not been present before, for constant inquiries were made of the Columbian Guards as to this and that building, etc. So the Fair this Sunday has been a blessing to the very people it was intended for—those who can't afford luxuries; who must be careful of their expenditures, but still out of their sparse incomes can afford the fifty cents necessary to enter the grounds and for once in their lives see the greatest of human achievements. It was a grand festival occasion for the common people; one of the grandest days that in pomp and music has ever passed over this planet; a day full of meaning; an onward day, pointing to a bright and beautiful future; a day of hope; a day of justice; a day of liberty. Never has the ancient tyranny received a keener blow. Never has there been a more glorious rebuke to intolerance and bigotry. I enjoyed it to the utmost as I wandered through these magnificent scenes, as I watched the flowing crowd and studied the innumerable faces—saw the gay ranks of children, the glory of nature and of art, the bright unsalted sea, and the boundless sky. It was a combination and a form indeed which filled the heart with rapture. It was a poet's dream, this gala time, and it was worth many a day of toil to witness this peaceful and splendid victory over a dark and cruel foe. And I know that while many wide and manifold influences have contributed to this auspicious hour, not one word ever spoken for freedom has failed to help this mighty result. Wherever that word has been spoken it has been a part of the onward force that has at length compelled bigotry to hide its diminished head. Not one but a thousand things have rolled on to this happy consummation.

Quite a number of Liberals from East and West were together and shook hands beneath the flag and exulted in the gorgeous triumph; and a gorgeous triumph it was, with music and flags and every color under the sun mingling in splendid array. Through Italy and Germany we wandered and the glories of France. The electric lights flashed, the fountains played, and the great dome was illuminated. The Art Palace glowed with its thousand pictures. Over the lagoon swept the gaily decked vessels. The Midway Plaisance was crowded, and all the religions of the world met without a clash. The melodies of the East, strange and ancient, mingled with the noblest strains of to-day with a fantastic discord and harmony. Even the animals seemed to enjoy the spirit of the occasion and the lions sported gently as the lamb. All was life and motion save the machinery, which was "heavy and solemn" amidst the universal gladsome hubbub. Bigotry had a "cinch" on that. Not a wheel stirred. And the Government Building was bolted and barred in ominous silence. Not a flag floated. It should have been clothed in mourning. Poor Uncle Sam has not won his liberty and could not join with the jubilant throng. The chains were about him and he must preserve a melancholy decorum and sit in sackcloth and ashes while the world rushed round about him in delightful medley. Poor fellow. I wonder if he will ever awake to a realizing sense of his ridiculous position.

Let us understand, however, what this triumph means. It is not so deep and permanent as I could wish. It is a triumph to the eyes and to the heart; but not to the intellect. It is a splendid thing so far as it goes; one of the best things that has ever happened. It is a victory mainly on the surface, but that counts a good deal as the world now is. It is not a victory of ideas so much as of sentiment; but a victory of sentiment is at times one of the worst blows that the church can encounter. Never have the old dogmas received a more telling defeat than this Sunday opening.

It is in the first place, I admit, a triumph of the almighty dollar over almighty God, which shows that God is not quite so almighty as he used to be. I am glad for the dollar. It has always been my good friend. It has helped in many a tussle—given me a good square meal, a night's lodging, and covered my bare back. The dollar is not to be sneezed at. When it quits you it leaves a blessing behind. It is always welcome and never stays too long. It fills our home with light, and when we travel it bears every burden. I like the dollar, silver or gold or paper: I care not what it is, so long as it's a dollar. As Dr. Sam Johnson says, "Nothing is more innocent than money-making. The man who makes money is doing the world a benefit." Now, the gates of the World's Fair are open because there's money in it, and wouldn't be open if there wasn't. It's no use to deny this. The almighty dollar is our most potent ally, and I am not ashamed to acknowledge the fact. If the almighty dollar can smash bigotry and superstition, I'm glad of it. It betokens an immense change. Time was when the dollar was the servant of the church absolutely. It flowed into the coffers of the church. It glittered at the feet of popes. The church ruled even the money-making man, and made him keep holy days when he would rather be at work. The church for its own prestige could thwart any enterprise of wealth. The dollar is now free from that bondage. It snaps its fingers in the face of the church. It says business is business and don't you forget it. Time was when a million dollars couldn't violate a church ordinance. What cares commerce or trade to-day for a church ordinance? In business matters the church must step aside. It can still baptize and marry and bury, but it can't any longer "bull" or "bear" the market. On Wall street it is an absolute nonentity. The dollar patronizes the church, but takes no notice of its edicts.

The dollar has opened the gates of the World's Fair right against the enormous clamor of the churches, and the dollar never did a better service to humanity. The very dollar upon which the churches have engraved "In God we trust," that very dollar has knocked their God into smithereens. He disappears from the World's Fair. He may bolt and bar the gates of Eden, but not the gates of Jackson park. The dollar says open sesame, and the dollar wins, and as between the dollar and the God of the Christians I take the dollar every time, and rejoice in its signal victory. The churches may howl as much as they wish against Sunday opening as a money-making scheme. This won't diminish the bitterness of their defeat. It simply shows that their once-willing slave is now their master. Why not rejoice amidst these glorious scenes? It is the triumph of one of my best friends over one of my worst foes.

It must be remembered also that for this Sunday opening there is a tremendous public opinion which has actually set at defiance an act of Congress. I do not know that anything like this has occurred in our country before. Generally there is respect for law, no matter how bad it may be. That is the characteristic of the American people. It is supposed that they themselves make the laws, and hence the profound regard for a legislative act. So mighty, however, in this case is public opinion that it actually sets aside a Congressional enactment. Of course the enactment is unconstitutional, but it has not yet been so declared, and probably will not be by a legal process. It has been set aside by the force of public opinion in an unprecedented manner. Never has an act of Congress been so trampled upon, so utterly despised, as this. Never has the cowardice and hypocrisy of politicians been so thoroughly rebuked. Everyone who voted for Sunday closing must hide his head in shame. Even with all the reverence for law which exists in the minds of the people, this act has been annulled without legal formality. I am glad of it. I am glad that a law so bad has been so royally set aside by the will of the people, a law so bad that without any appeal to courts for justification it is spit upon and disdained, while the bigots howl in helpless wrath with a whole government to back them up. Although the churches cry for it, yet the government dare not bring out a single soldier to enforce its own enactment. If it did there would be a revolution at once, for the people of this country would not endure an armed array in support of a law so odious. Public opinion oftentimes overrides an old law without waiting for its formal repeal, but I do not know of any case where a law of Congress, within less than a year after its passage, has been so overwhelmingly sat down upon, and with such a joyous recklessness, by the people. It shows what a trivial support it had in the hearts of the masses, and that they would not endure this impertinence on the part of Congress. I believe in the referendum, and the referendum has been applied here in delightful fashion—rather irregular, perhaps, but effective all the same.

The churches must see how vastly public opinion is against them when even with the law upon their side they must haul down their flag. To me it enhances the glory of the victory we have won. It would have been a great thing to have had public opinion open the gates anyway, but to have public opinion open the gates with an act of Congress arrayed against it speaks volumes as to the extent and depth and earnestness of that public opinion—that it is not a momentary feeling, but a permanent conviction. Still a long political battle is before us. The World's Fair will come and go like a gorgeous vision, but the government abides, and the government is against us—the government which we support; the government which is our representative. In that which concerns our dearest rights we have been defeated. The churches are entrenched in national legislation. They have Congress and the Supreme Court. Legally, they may win yet, but whether the injunction is granted or not, it still remains that we are politically declared to be a Christian government and a Christian people, and our liberties are in greater danger than ever before. This surface victory, good as it is, must not blind us to the deeper issues whereon we have suffered a loss of freedom. The vast educational influences of the World's Fair will help us. The Sunday opening will be a beautiful lesson. Our spear is wreathed with flowers while it strikes deep, but let us not forget that the enemy is entrenched in the law of the land and that an arduous and prolonged contest is before us and that this victory will be worse than useless if we don't follow it up and dislodge the church from its political power. Superstition lowered and gloomed at us from the Government Building last Sunday—it looked like a sepulcher. We must open that building and fill it with sunshine every day, and until we do so our work is far from being accomplished.

THE ART PALACE.

The Art Palace is the paradise of the Exposition. One might linger for a day and a year in these many halls, and never grow weary of the expressive scenes any more than we could grow weary of so many living friends, for these pictures speak in the thousand forms that appear amidst nature's variable and vivid aspects. What glory of form we see, so lithe, so strong, so graceful, quivering with every emotion that the human heart has ever experienced. What a world of passion is about us in king and peasant, in soldier and priest, in fair maiden and royal woman, in lover and hero. The battle-field surges; the ship is in the storm; the sea shore stretches away; the forest, with glints of light, extends measureless; the harvest fields glow; the river glimmers in a landscape of soft color; the mermaid on the rock watches the glittering billows; the child sleeps in the shadows of the greenwood; the morning and the evening meet each other with contrasting beauty, while mountain and shore, in ever-varying, and ever-entrancing prospect, lead one on a boundless journey.

There are also angels with wings; but I have no liking for such strange, abnormal, impossible affairs. I see no beauty in them, and they are rapidly disappearing from the realms of art. The great pictures in this collection are those which represent life, and generally lowly human life.

It is the mission of Art to unfold reality—what is in our every-day surroundings. The pope is here in brilliant colors; but what is he compared to a blooming little child? It is the picture of humble scenes of life upon which we look with the greatest admiration. The crowds do not linger about the portraits of great men, and displays of palatial grandeur; but about some garden or meadow, or thatched cottage, or fireside, where bits of human nature make the jewels of the scene. Art is thoroughly democratic to-day and disdains not the common path of toil and excellence.

There are thousands of pictures here and hundreds of statues in bronze and marble, and one might travel miles before he could become familiar with the masterpieces and be able to describe them. There was never so vast a collection before and so many superior productions. I can only give the barest sketch of what I see—only impressions, not delineations. Like the hues of sunset float these entrancing pictures in my mind. I study and brood over the "Sale of a Slave," where a beautiful naked woman is exposed to the gaze of a rude but royal purchaser; the "Passing of a Ring," where a group of children are engaged in that merry game; "The Fishmonger," with his wonderful display of fishes, most accurately painted; "The Horse Fair at Rotterdam," "November Sunshine," a lovely landscape view; "Alone in the World," where an old man sits by the bedside of his dead wife; "Miners on Strike," a pathetic, turbulent scene; "The Outpost," a military picture; "South Duxbury Clam Diggers," a vivid sketch of shore life; "Washing Day," the woman laboring at the tub and the little baby playing about; "Glad Spring," a brilliant view of "the ethereal mildness;" "The White Sail," a ship glimmering on bright, silent waters beside a wooded shore; "The Interior of a Cow House," the buxom maids at the milking-stool, the patient animals in the stalls, a Swedish scene, with fine coloring; "The Grandfather," an old man walking with a little child; "The Yarn," a rugged sailor telling stories to a squad of boys and girls; "The Maidens' Race," a circle of fair contestants in bathing costume apparently ready for the start; "A Forest of Beech Trees," an exquisite woodland scene; "Flower-Gathering in the South of France," where real roses seem bursting into bloom; "Children at Play," in which the cat takes part with the little folks; "The First Born," a mother and tiny infant in her arms; "Early Snow," a shining winter landscape; "A Good Haul," a fisherman's crowd happy at their luck; "Once Upon a Time," a venerable story-teller among little children; "A Fisherman's Home," in which all the paraphernalia of his occupation is gathered about him as he sits and smokes, after supper I suppose.

Chicago, Ill.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

A Card.

While Liberals are thoroughly united as to principles, there are oftentimes differences of opinion as to the best methods of carrying out these principles, but so far as the Freethought World's Fair Congress is concerned these differences have been happily adjusted, and there is now harmonious action. I have conferred with the directors of the American Secular Union and it has been arranged to hold a united International Freethought Congress at Chicago October next, under the auspices of the Freethought Federation of America, the American Secular Union, and the Canadian Secular Union, and I have no doubt that a most successful Congress will be held, and that thousands of Liberals will be present from all parts of the world. We Americans who have the noble privilege of conducting this Congress must give a generous welcome to our foreign allies. I am sure that no one will be remiss in this matter and that the friends and supporters of the Federation, of the American Secular Union, and the Canadian Secular Union will rally to this common work and each do his level best. Under this arrangement Mr. John R. Charlesworth will remain secretary of the Federation. Mr. Gustave Nelson will act as foreign corresponding secretary and in conjunction with the officers of the American Secular Union and Canadian Secular Union we shall all labor unceasingly for the success of this great and united Congress of the Liberals of America.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

International Congress of Freethinkers.

That unity of action, so much desired by the Freethought organizations of the United States and Canada, that union of forces that shall secure the success of the forthcoming Congress, has now been formulated and ratified by the officers of the Federation and the American Secular Union, who met in joint conference for this purpose at the rooms of Dr. Grier on the 31st ult. It was felt by all present that a joint Congress would be attended by far greater results, than to have two separate Congresses at different times and places. After a short discussion over the situation of affairs, the following resolution was drawn up and presented to the conference, the same being unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The American Secular Union has been making arrangements for a joint Congress with the Canadian Secular Union, and as the Freethought Federation of America is arranging for an International Congress of Freethinkers to be held in September next. Therefore, be it Resolved, That an International Congress, under the auspices of the Freethought Federation, the American Secular Union, and the Canadian Secular Union, shall be held as a substitute for the two aforesaid Congresses, to be presided over by the presidents of the three societies on alternate days or sessions; and that all the arrangements for the said Congress shall be made by the officers of the three said societies and such other persons as they in joint committee may agree upon.

This paved the way for a consolidation of our ranks. The two Congresses will now be merged into one, and with the harmonious action of all parties concerned we are now assured of the greatest and grandest meeting that has ever honored the cause of human freedom in matters where religion and religious influences are concerned.

The following committees have been appointed to carry on the work of the Congress and arrange the matter in detail:

Committee of arrangements: John R. Charlesworth and E. C. Reichwald for the Federation; Judge Waite and Mr. Freeman for the Secular Union, with such other persons as the Canadian Secular Union may hereafter name and appoint.

Committee on finance: Geo. L. Robertson for the Federation, Dr. Greer for the Secular Union, with such other persons as the Canadian Secular Union may hereafter name and appoint.

These committees will meet regularly and frequently, as the greater number of them are already in Chicago. They are well known by the Liberal public as earnest workers in our cause, and they should certainly gain and be guaranteed the confidence and support of all Freethinkers. Each society will maintain its own identity and will contribute its share toward the general and all necessary expenses incurred. This movement, I know, will meet with the approval of all Free-thinkers who are interested in the better success of the cause of Freethought.

The Federation now strongly urges its members and friends to do all they can to help us along. Let there be no more delay, but realize that now is the time for action. As the church parsons tell us, "Now is the accepted time for salvation," and, friends, the Federation may add, "Now is the accepted time to save yourself from that system which gives unnecessary wealth to the sleeper, while it does not give sufficient to the worker to sustain his strength."

In response to our appeals for help the following donations and letters of encouragement have been received:

NEW YORK, May 29, 1893.

MR. JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH, Dear Sir: I read with pleasure your announcement in the last TRUTH SEEKER relating to the International Congress of Freethinkers, and I hope that Freethinkers throughout the United States at least will not only respond with the necessary funds to carry forward the project, but also honor the occasion with their presence if possible. I desire to contribute $25 toward the Freethinkers' Congress, and as I have no ambition at all for official honors, I wish you would put in place of my name on the list of vice-presidents the name of Prof. J. H. Cook, of Columbus, Kan. Professor Cook can hardly spare from his limited means a contribution, however small, and this is largely owing to the sacrifices he has made of his material interests to the cause of human progress. I wish too that the name of our friend Hacker might appear in the list of vice-presidents. Perhaps some Liberal with a plethora pocket-book will pay the $25 necessary to give him the prominence he so greatly deserves for his long life of work in the cause of humanity. E. B. FOOTE.

Dr. Foote's generosity and timely assistance to the Freethought cause for years past is too well known among the Liberal community to need further comment from me. His pen has done valuable service for mankind, while his genius and his purse have ever been free and open when needed. It is needless to say that Dr. Foote's wishes shall be gratified.

We have also received the following from New York city:

NEW YORK CITY, May 29, 1893.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH, ESQ., Secretary Freethought Federation of America, Dear Sir: Inclosed is a check for $25, my contribution to the objects of the Federation. Yours truly, HENRY M. TABER.

Thos. F. Vanasek, of New Prague, Minn., has also sent us $2, and desires two of the Federation buttons mentioned in our previous letter.

Thus the necessary means are being generously given to the good cause, and we trust that our friends will give us all the support they can and help us in this worthy cause.

The committee of arrangements will hold its next meeting on the 6th inst., when the program will be arranged and the list of speakers made out for publication.

Many Freethinkers have already visited Chicago and the Fair. Each day brings some enthusiastic soldier to the headquarters of the Federation, and calls to give us words of hope and encouragement.

These have announced their intention of coming again to attend the Congress.

An attempt will be made to secure a hall in the Art Institute, and the date of the Congress must now be guided by the exigencies of the occasion.

All particulars, details, and information relative to the newer arrangements shall be published as soon as the committee have decided thereon.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,

Sec. Freethought Federation of America.

345 W. Randolph st., Chicago, Ill.

What Mr. Griswold Thinks of Mr. Putnam's New Book.

ELMIRA, N. Y., June 4, 1893.

MR. E. M. MACDONALD: Last Sunday and this Sunday I have very carefully read and reread "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, and Religion a Lie." Briefly I want to say just here and now it is one of the most religion-destroying publications ever published since the writing of the "Age of Reason." I hereby proclaim Samuel P. Putnam, in behalf of this most magnificent production, the Thomas Paine of this decade of the nineteenth century. One million copies should be circulated in this country at once, and through the whole world. What can you furnish me one dozen copies for? I have already a few copies spoken for. L. D. GRISWOLD.

[We will supply the book by the dozen for $2.—Ed. T. S.]

Geo. W. Childs Seems to Approve Mr. Bell's Work.

From the Public Ledger.

The Truth Seeker Company, No. 28 Lafayette place, New York, publish a "Hand-book of Freethought," a condensed and systematized mass of evidence against ecclesiastical superstition. The extracts have been selected by W. S. Bell, from the works of Draper, Buckle, Gibbon, Herschel, Sir William Thompson, and Gladstone. The arrangement of the material is excellent. The same company publishes "The Resurrection of Jesus," an Agnostic's view, by Don Allen.

Please renew your subscription and obtain another subscriber.

Letters of Friends.

A Victory Shout.

ELMIRA, N. Y., May 17, 1893.

To E. M. MACDONALD AND THE LIBERAL WORLD: Hurrah for an absolute Sunday opening. The Sabbatharians have been routed and now "refuse to be comforted."

Yours for Justice and Liberty,
L. D. GRISWOLD.

A Boy Who Will Help Push the World Along.

ASPEN, COL., Apr. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I send subscription and twenty-five cents for "Crimes of Preachers." My son Oscar said, "Papa, don't stop THE TRUTH SEEKER."

E. J. KINDRICK.

It Stands Four-Square to the World.

PLYMOUTH, MICH., May 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have taken your paper since Mr. Bennett first published it in the West, and cannot get along without it, as the paper has always stood four-square to the world. Yours truly, A. BLACK.

Don't Be Afraid of Your Wives.

LEACHBURG, PA., May 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Everybody who sees THE TRUTH SEEKER would like to have it. Some are afraid of their wives, etc., but I think we will have some more of these people subscribe for it soon. The name I send is of a good man, and one of the most intellectual men in this town, a Freethinker out and out.

Z. W. TINKER.

Cheating, and Then Praying Out of It, Is Growing Unpopular.

SIDNEY, O., May 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5-$3 for renewal to THE TRUTH SEEKER, the grandest paper ever printed, and the only one suitable to train the human mind; the balance for Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," in cloth, and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Lying, cheating, and stealing, and then praying out, is about played out.

Yours for liberty, A. H. EMLBY.

High Praise of Putnam's World's Fair Letters.

KNIGHT'S FERRY, CAL., May 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find two years' subscription.

Putnam is doing a grand work. His first letter on the Fair is well worth a year's subscription to your paper. I place every copy where it will bear fruit. I am surprised to find how many silent Liberals there are, who for fear of being boycotted in their business will not show their hand.

Success to your good efforts.

Yours fraternally, H. R. SCHELL.

Would Use Vanderbilt's Wealth for the Cause.

RAVENNA, MICH., May 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am and always have been a Liberal, and am anxious to help the cause of Freethought, and if I had the wealth of the Vanderbilts I would spend the bulk of it in helping the cause. But with my income of daily wages I cannot do very much; but will inclose a list of three-months subscribers to the amount of $6. Our people here are mostly Liberal, but think the cause is coming out best and do not interest themselves in regard to it further than in their own social chats.

JAMES F. TIBBITS.

Wishes Failure to a Tyrannically Governed Fair.

WHATCOM, WASH., May 23, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: On the 20th of this month the report arrived here in Whatcom that the gates of the Fair should be closed on what the gulls call the Sabbath, and the consequence is, in this part of the sphere there are seventy-two, up to this date, that intended to visit the Fair, that will not go on that account, and myself and wife are of that number, and I think that at least one hundred and thirty that would have gone in June and July will not go, and two-thirds of the above now hope that it will be a failure as far as visitors are concerned.

J. Y. COLLINS.

Don't Hire Out Your Thinking to a Class Opposed to Progress.

OCALA, FLA., May 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1.50 for six months' subscription commencing from the date when my former subscription expired. The paper pleases me. You are doing good work in publishing THE TRUTH SEEKER, which in turn is enlightening and freeing the minds of people susceptible to reason and opposed to ancient superstition in this age, calling on the people to think for themselves and not to delegate it to priests or preachers, and not to have a paid and privileged class, mostly opposed to human progress and entirely out of date.

Please send catalog of publications of the Truth Seeker Company.

JOHN M. HOWARD.

He Works for Human Advancement as Much as for Pecuniary Return.

KIRKVILLE, MO., May 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: J. E. Remsburg has been here, and while here delivered three lectures, entitled "False Claims," "The Sunday Question," and "Bible Morals." His audiences were good. It would be useless for me to speak of his ability in the field in which he is employed, for his ability as a worker in the Liberal cause and in the line of Human Advancement is well known to the readers of your paper. If encomiums were an injury to the man he would have been ruined long ago. I cannot conceive how he can travel over the country from point to point, with such great distances between, for the small sum for his services which he asks. It is evident that pecuniary gain is not his only object. His work is of great benefit to Humanity, and he should be kept constantly employed and well paid.

Fraternally, WM. HART.

Explanation Wanted of a Holy Mystery.

NEW YORK, May 28, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: My attention has been drawn to a sermon preached the other evening in the Universalist church at Rochester, N. Y., by the Rev. Mr. Waldron, wherein he said, "It seems to me that the doctrine which represents God as crucifying himself in atonement for the sins of man is a terrible one." He also said, "I have adopted another principle, and that is the principle of reason and conscience." Such sentiments show the progress of Freethought.

It has been a mystery and a stumbling-block to me, as well as to many, how one God could be three persons—Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. As I am ignorant in such matters, cannot some of your able correspondents in "Letters of Friends" shed some light on the subject? In John x, 30, Jesus says, "I and my father are one." If that be the case, God was crucified. These questions should be answered or explained for the edification of the ignorant.

S. R. THORNE.

Fights "God-Agents" and "Hell-People."

MIDDLEBORO, MASS., May 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $2, for which send me THE TRUTH SEEKER for four months, and "Hard Knocks at Christianity," "Infidel Death-Beds," "Infidels and Charity," "Crimes of Preachers," and "Bible Morals."

During my stay in Lowell last winter I made it pretty hot for several reverends. Besides public discussions in some churches and through the press I made it a point to tackle these God-agents after every meeting I could attend, where at least some twenty or twenty-five would gather to hear what was going on, and thus would reap some benefit. I always took their orthodox text, or some statement that they had made, and stuck to it till they had to admit that the eye of common sense could not see it, it required the "spiritual eye" (of superstition). I find this a better way than to say a little on each one of their points of faith, for the moment you break a link in their creed the whole thing falls to the ground. I shall be in Fall River for some time to come, and intend to make it still hotter for these hell-people.

I am a young French Canadian of twenty-one years. I have been "converted" to my present faith by the study of theology. Instead of turning out to be a minister for a God and hell, I have and shall be as long as I live a minister of humanity. My education in two languages will give me two strings to my bow. I will not forget my race.

A. AUGER.

Wants to Prosecute Disturbers of His Sabbath.

CROOKSTON, MINN., May 21, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find postal note for $3.50, for one year's subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER to be sent to the new subscriber inclosed, and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," to be sent to me.

I am very well pleased with your paper. It is simply "immense." Long may it wave. I have followed the Chapman-Wettstein discussion with a great deal of interest. They both argue their case well. I of course have to side with Wettstein, as I have only five senses and cannot see spirits yet. To prove that nothing is something will not work by common sense or five senses. Faith, or the sixth sense, is a necessary factor to use when one undertakes to prove that an impossible thing is possible.

Your paper generally reaches me Sunday morning, and I sit down at home in my easy-chair and finish it at once, though somewhat disturbed by the tolling of a church-bell near by. Don't you think I ought to arrest them for breaking the Sabbath?

ELIAS STERNERSON.

The American Eagle is Sitting on Puritanical Eggs.

HANOVERTON, O., May 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I send you $3 to renew my paper, and twenty-five cents for Mr. Putnam's pamphlet entitled "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie"—every word of which is true. And thousands of people know it, but I believe that Mr. Putnam is about the only man in the field who has the stamina to tell it. And then he does it so lucidly, and proves it beyond the possibility of doubt. Hurrah for Putnam! He is a brave and a fearless champion, a little giant.

I hope the voting Federation will soon be in working order. There is nothing that will disconcert the enemy so much as a good large vote against their trickery. When we can roll up a vote that gives us the balance of power we shall have effectively spiked their guns. We must knock the props from under them by political action. It is useless to argue with a man who has swallowed hell-fire and brimstone and the rest of the Bible rot. And then the American eagle is sitting on puritanical eggs which will tend to embolden the hypocritical dukes and increase their propensity for debauchery and crime.

J. T. JOHNSON.

Are Most Physicians Infidels?

RENNSELAER FALLS, N. Y.,

May 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose a letter from the Medical Brief, and my reply thereto.

C. C. VAN WATERS, M.D.

ARE A MAJORITY OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS INFIDELS?

PILLSBURY, MINN.

From time to time statements appear in the public prints, especially those of a certain class, claiming that a vast majority of the medical profession are not only non-professors of religion, but unbelievers in the doctrines of the Christian religion. I believe this to be a gross libel. To the extent of my acquaintance, the majority is greatly the other way.

I would like to have the question settled so far as the thousands of readers of the Brief are concerned. Will each physician who reads this at once write me a postal card answering these questions:

1. Do you believe in the Christian religion?
 2. Do you profess it?
 3. Are you a church-member?
- The facts, without the names, will be reported for the Brief.

J. F. LOCKE, M.D.

RENNSELAER FALLS, N. Y.,

May 29, 1893.

J. F. LOCKE, M.D., Pillsbury, Minn., Dear Sir: Respecting your three questions about the Christian religion, I can answer them all with a big No.

Reason: The pillars of Christianity are mythical, to wit: Creation of Adam, rib taken from side and Eve made, fall of man through snake talking with Eve, saved from fall through Christ as God (but who was he? Of virgin birth, reported by dream to have been begotten by a ghost, Mary was the mother of God, but who was his father?).

These are interesting problems for the nineteenth-century medical man to solve.

They sound absurd; but they must be believed. "He that believeth not shall be damned." C. C. VAN WATERS, M.D.

How to Promise Money to the Church.

CANTRIL, IA., May 6, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: My subscription is out. I send you $2-$1 to go on the paper and the other for "The Brain and the Bible," by C. E. Beall. I like your paper very well. I like the independence of thought and liberty.

I will state a little argument I had with a member of the Methodist church here in Cantril. The church has been built for several years and not paid for until this last February, when this member of the church was around with a petition to get people to subscribe so much money payable in ten days. He asked me for $10. He could not get that. Then he said he would take $6, but if I could not give that he must have $5 anyhow. "Well," said I, "I will tell you what I will do." "Well," said he, "what is it?" "If you will get your minister next Sunday to read the thirty-eighth chapter of Genesis to his congregation before he commences his discourse I will give you $5." "All right, I will have him to do it." But he has not read it yet, and I do not think he will. This member, understand, has belonged to the Methodist Episcopal church forty years and had never read this chapter, and I think there are lots of others that have done the same thing. And still if you ask them if they believe all that is in the Bible, "Why, yes, certainly I do." And when you pin them down to it then they will own up that they never did read it through. How can they understand what is in the Bible when they never read it? I doubt very much that they understand what they do read.

This hell-fire theory is cooling down some in places. It depends on the latitude where a man lives. Down south the preachers teach that hell is seven times as hot as a smelting furnace, but up north in a cold climate the preachers teach that hell is so cold that a man will freeze to death in five minutes. So you see it depends altogether on the latitude a man lives in as to the warmth and coldness of religion.

ALEX. FIX.

An Ex-Catholic's Thoughts As He Thinks for Himself.

VILLA GROVE, COL., May 23, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I received all the books I sent for. I am so glad to get such a good lot of books. Thank you enough I can not. But your paper is above the rest of this world in truth and reason and justice—with your Picture Books—and I do hope and believe that you are going to save this world from old creeds and superstition.

I was raised a Catholic in Scotland, and was a kind of a one till five years ago the doubt struck me that there was no God. I borrowed a Bible and read the Revelation of St. John. I read it all through, and became an Infidel and Freethinker for as long as I live. I believe in spirits and that I have a soul that never dies.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is the grandest paper that ever was printed for showing the error of Christianity.

Sir, I am going to tell you what I believe and what I do not believe. There is no creator, no supreme being, only force and matter. And I believe force and matter could not make a world alone without fire from some place, for the reason it would not be hard or solid enough like this world of ours. Fire must take place to burn it in the center to make the first sun. Force and matter attracted all atoms to themselves. Supposing a spirit of some kind grew out of the fire with a will and mind of his own like the animals round us all the time, that beast or spirit with the help of force and matter might first make the world out of the sun, and continue all the time, and when animals and man grew out of matter, as Darwin says, and that spirit grew out of the fire, commence to punish all creatures that live on earth, and man worth more than all the rest. To deceive mankind is all he wants—to make them believe he is a God and creator of the world. I believe he is the fire and sun making worlds, and made the worlds of our solar system in two atoms, he and she.

I believe our sun is dying, and the beast or spirit and a devil or Satan are trying to conquer this world of ours to make it a world of devils in place of angels. The Freethinkers of this world must be up and doing all they can for liberty and freedom to save the world from Catholics. That is all the danger, and Protestants. I believe the Truth Seeker Company are doing all they can. Helen H. Gardener's books are the best I ever read. I need not mention any more of THE TRUTH SEEKER's books. They are beyond praise, only that the Editor, E. M. Macdonald, and Watson Heston are unparalleled.

There are different names for Gods in this world. Jesus the Christ is the head devil, God and Satan in one, with three spirits, devils, one on the earth, one in the air, and one in the sea; the black from the earth, the gray the air, the red from the sea. They work together lying and deceiving. They want to let no one out of Christianity. They will steal his money if he has any. They will try to make him poor all they can and make him commit suicide or kill him.

Your friend in truth and liberty forever,
DUGALD McDONALD.

An Appeal to Women.

SISTERSVILLE, W. VA., May 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Bigotry still survives. Last Thursday, May 11th, the Methodist preacher of this place and five of the sisters approached an apple and lemonade stand, which a little crippled boy had opened on the street a few days previous, and called for lemonade. While the little cripple was filling the order, the preacher inquired: "Well, boy, you don't mean to keep your stand open Sundays, do you?" "Why, yes," answered the boy; "I intend to keep it open every day when I can sell my goods." "Well," said the preacher, turning to the sisters, "let us go down to that other stand; this boy intends to keep his stand open Sundays." So saying, the reverend gentleman (?) turned away without the lemonade he had ordered, and the five women followed him like a group of slaves following their master.

What narrow-minded uncharitableness and contemptible, short-sighted bigotry that act showed on the part of the preacher; and what unwomanly fear and submission, and cringing, slavish obedience on that of those women!

Would that lemonade have tasted better or been more nourishing if the boy had promised to close his stand on Sunday? Or, if those ladies had drunk it, would their health or their "souls" have been in peril when the boy opened his stand the following Sunday?

O that our female friends would place their foot upon the neck of the viper (preacher) that has so long entangled them in its poisonous folds, and made them cringing menials and ignorant slaves!

Now, I wish every female Freethinker who can write (and I think there are none who cannot) would take her pen and give to the world her honest convictions upon religion, and her reasons for such belief. There are thousands of Liberal ladies in this country who could, by a little writing, make a deeper impression on the hearts of their religion-cursed sisters than was ever made by the pen or eloquence of man. They would command more confidence and their writings would be more trustingly read than are those of men. We have some ladies in our ranks who are doing noble work, for which we should all feel grateful, but we want more.

The writings of men are all right for the conversion of other men, but they cannot reach the female heart, and those very men who are doing their utmost to free our women from clerical bondage are looked upon with distrust or hatred by the very ones to whom they have dedicated their lives.

Another drawback is, that nine-tenths of the men who, in their hearts, are confirmed "Infidels" refrain from expressing their opinions, because, at the present time, it is not so popular to be an ont-spoken "Infidel" as it is to be a pretended Christian.

That is wrong. Let every person who entertains Liberal ideas express them. We have the same right to do so that the Christians have; and the sooner the world at large knows our real strength the sooner the church will lose its influence, and the sooner we will be on the popular side.

In this town, Sistersville, of about twenty-five hundred inhabitants, where every third or fourth man is a "silent" skeptic, I know not a single woman who is an avowed "Infidel," and the men are willing to silently sacrifice conviction to popularity.

The men will not go to church, neither will they defend their views when assailed, but manage to affect a disgusting silence.

The church congregations are almost entirely made up of women and children, and wherever a man can be pointed out among them, he is either an old blockhead, or else a young gallant in company with a lady friend.

The goody-goody boys, of course, must be excepted, but we do not expect anything of them, nor could we use them if we had them.

GEORGE H. TURNER.

Comprehensive Account of Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 26, E. M. 293.

MR. EDITOR: Although this portion of nature's domain is seldom represented in THE TRUTH SEEKER's columns, you and your many readers would not be justified in supposing that all is orthodoxy here. It cannot be denied that superstition, in all its variant forms and phases, is well established and flourishing in Kansas City. On every eminence towers the massive spire of either a Protestant or a Catholic church, and at stated periods throughout each day the public is reminded by the solemn clangor of bells that religion still lives.

Thousands of our best men and women have been inveigled into the clutches of the church and are devoting their lives and money to the propagation of superstitious dogmas. The Sunday-school prospers on every side, instilling into the callow mind of youth insipid sentiment and false philosophy. The Young Men's Christian Association, in its pretentious edifice, and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, with its fallacious ideas of reform, lose no opportunity for conspicuous parade. The Christian Endeavor Society, in full possession of the brains of unsophisticated young women and soft-witted young men, fosters its Jesuitical schemes and harnesses the unwary into the service of ancient error. The workman at his bench is beset by white slaves, misnamed "sisters of charity," and begged to divide his scant earnings for the support of Catholic institutions. The embodiment of hypocrisy and meddlesomeness, the preacher, is always at the front with his petition for Sunday laws, and his readiness to accept half-fare railway tickets and ten per cent reductions at the stores.

Notwithstanding the presence of the well-organized and apparently invincible hosts of supernaturalism, there is a large though not aggressive Liberal element here. There are many outspoken Infidels, and thousands whose minds are ripe for Freethought, needing only to hear a lecture or read a Liberal book in order to break their theological fetters.

There are good prospects for the organization of a Secular society in Kansas City in the not distant future. Many Freethinkers favor the proposition and several eloquent men have promised to become members and contribute to the cause. A prominent and responsible architect informed me recently that he cherished the hope of seeing a Freethought hall and library in this city, and that it was his intention to build the hall himself.

The Spiritualists have a large and active organization here, and it must be admitted that they are accomplishing much good in estranging people from the church. Their meetings are attended by large audiences and they are enabled to engage the best talent which the Spiritual philosophy affords.

Last month the Liberals procured the services of Mr. J. E. Remsburg for one lecture. His subject was "The False Claims of the Church." A heavy rain prevented the attendance of a large number of people, but those who were fortunate enough to hear the address went home well pleased. Mr. Remsburg is an able man and his services are invaluable to the cause of Liberty. He is a genuine reformer. His quiet, gentle, and unassuming demeanor, and his earnest, tender, sympathetic look, are characteristics which impress themselves on one's mind. A mere acquaintance with the man is stimulating and promotive of high resolve in the hearts of those who love humanity. We expect to have Mr. Remsburg here again.

Mr. Thomas J. Dickson, a well-known and highly respected lawyer of this city, has been a Freethinker for many years and has devoted much time to the investigation of religious and scientific questions. Recently he formulated his conclusions on these matters into the shape of a lecture, entitled "Agnosticism." He has delivered this address before three appreciative audiences, and the press speaks of it as a scathing criticism of Christianity. I understand that he is preparing another lecture which will be entitled "Jesus Christ—Was He a Man or a God?"

Yours for thought, freedom, and justice,
THOMAS J. TANNER.

A Wage-Earner Cannot Save a Dollar a Week.

OXANNA, ALA., May 28, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I see that my letter in THE TRUTH SEEKER of May 20th has stirred up a sharp critic out in the Grasshopper state. He shows himself to be just the same kind of man we had to contend with back in the days of the agitation of slavery. The standing argument then was "damned Abolitionist;" now his clinching argument is "poor fool." After showing, as I did, that it would be impossible for sixteen million wage-earners to save out $1 a week for a year without taking so much money out of circulation as to bring in a panic, he says I don't claim that wage-earners would be unable to save $1 a week; there is logical intelligence for you.

He says anyone with common sense knows that all the wage-earners could save $10 a week for ten years and not take one dollar out of circulation. More fallacy could not be crowded into the same number of words.

He says I seem to forget that all the money in circulation is the savings of some one. Now, I had supposed that everyone knew that when the British and American bankers caused the burning-up and destruction of the greenback money, and established the national banking system, the government gave the banks ninety per cent of the bonds deposited, in bank currency, to loan back to the people at interest, not one dollar of which was earned by anyone. There is another specimen of the intelligence and accuracy of statement of our wise critic.

When wage-earners start in to lay by a sum of money for any special purpose, they take what they can spare, or have left after paying current expenses, and either keep it in the house or take it to a bank, where it is out of circulation in the channels of commerce, till some one borrows it, and goes in debt for it, and debt is a curse to the individual, the country, or the nation; and the interest of that borrowed money comes out of the earnings of the wage-earner in the end; and that is another reason why it is impossible for the wage-earners to ever save up enough to get them a home. And that is not all—the money-changers who control the money in every country in the world do not intend that they shall have any homes. The money-changers filch from labor in the shape of interest and rent; and, as they said in the "Hazzard Circular," rob labor by controlling the money.

I would ask it as a favor of Mr. Davis, that he waste none of his sorrow on me because of my lack of brains; but give it to the victims of the money-lender in his own state, whose farms and homes are mortgaged to the extent of over $17 per acre for the entire state; and that, too, under such conditions as make it impossible that they will ever be able to get out of the grasp of the money-lender.

Let us take a backward glance at the condition of England at the close of her great war, when she had her millions of paper money in circulation; when the people were prosperous and happy; and when, after the war, she forced the country back to specie basis for the benefit of the money-lender, just as now our glorious government is going to close the gates of the World's Fair at the point of the bayonet, if need be, in the interest of the priest. At that time England's lands were in the possession of three hundred and sixty thousand owners; but not long after the destruction of the paper money, and the saddling of the so-called bonded debt on the people, the ownership of her lands shrank down to only thirty thousand; thereby dispossessing three hundred and thirty thousand people of their farms and homes. How was that done? Why, the "Hazzard Circular" tells it in a nutshell: "We rob labor by controlling the money."

A parallel case was our own country at the close of the war of the Rebellion. We had about $52 per capita in circulation, and the laboring people were prosperous, and could and did acquire homes; but, unfortunately for our voting cattle, the money-changers of Great Britain had their eye on us from the beginning, and, when Congress issued sixty millions full legal-tender greenback money, which was at a par with gold from that day to this, the British money-changers took the alarm, and were quick to see that if the American people were allowed to have a money of their own, and enough of it to supply the needs of commerce, their game of robbing labor was up; they then besieged Congress like buzzards over a dead horse, and paid out their millions to defeat all subsequent issues of the greenback money; no more full legal-tender was issued after that; but the scheme was concocted for carrying out the same game in this country after the close of the war as they played in England after the close of her war, and the consequence is that they have had control of the finances of our country till they have got it so far under mortgage that, as long as they continue to keep control of it, the paying of the mortgages is an impossibility.

The two old twin dogmas, specie money and original sin, were invented by, and are in the interest of, the priest and money-changer; and those two old dogmas are so thoroughly imbedded in the people's brains that they become willing slaves; and three per cent of the so-called civilized world rob and rule the ninety-seven per cent. The priest is able to shut the gates of the Fair on Sunday, depriving hundreds of thousands from seeing the show on that day; and the money-changer has made money so scarce among the people that millions are not going to be able to see it on any day.

And then there is the great railroad monopoly, which charges one hundred times the actual cost of carrying passengers, which will keep still other millions from seeing the Fair at all.

But the victims of all this tyranny have one consolation—they can vote. Only the misfortune is that the average of them do not know any more about what they vote for than a horse. The average voter is just as dogmatic, and mulish, and bigoted, and sectarian in his politics as he can possibly be in his religion; especially so on the money question.

There is no one subject on which so much nonsense has been talked and written as the money question, except that of original sin. The latter and the dogma of intrinsic money are off the same piece, and both in the interest of that class who "toil not, neither do they spin," but yet filch from those who do toil and spin to such an extent as to keep the toilers and spinners in poverty all over the world.

And now, since Mr. Davis has indulged in some plain talk, if he will excuse me I will close with a "few remarks." It has been a matter of wonder to me for some years past how it came to pass in this last quarter of the nineteenth century that a governor of the state of Kansas could issue a proclamation for the people to assemble and pray to their God to kill off the grasshoppers, or drive them into the adjoining states; but if he considered his constituency as intelligent on the grasshopper question as Mr. Davis shows himself to be on the money question, it is no longer a marvel.

GEO. GIER,

GOLD. SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL. MINERAL.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's
ARGUMENT

IN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and exposed the falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 38 pages, $3.
Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.
The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.
Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.
Universe Analyzed. $1

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.
Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature—i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

LITTLE FREETHINKER.

Friends, please try our LITTLE FREETHINKER, the only paper published for the young free from superstition, 10 cents a year. I will send it and Foote's Health Monthly for 50 cents; or it and "Little Lessons" for 75 cents; or and THE TRUTH SEEKER for $3. Address

ELMINA D. SLENKER, Snowville, Va.

3621

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 64 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Agnostic Annual

—FOR—1893

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:

The Moral Sanction, Leslie Stephen; Reverent Agnosticism, Amos Waters; The Mother Nature: A Poem, Gerald Massey; Dogmatism in Theology, Alfred Mommie; Sermons on the Mount, Samuel Laing; The City of the Dead, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin); On the Duty of Honesty in Our Convictions, C. E. Plumtre; Scientific Religion, R. Bithell; The Blight of Superstition, Charles Watts; Anthropology and Orthodoxy, Edward Clodd; The Disappearance of the Nether World, F. J. Gould; Religious Ideas: Their Origin and Development, Frederick Millar; Signals with Mars: A Poem, G. H. Martin; Materialism and Idealism Harmonized, Lucian Armstrong.
Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.
Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Christianity a Fiction.

THE

Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Scientific Works.

Three Introductory Lectures on the Science of Thought. By F. Max Müller. 1. The Simplicity of Language; 2. The Identity of Language and Thought; and 3. The Simplicity of Thought. With an appendix which contains a correspondence on "Thought Without Words," between F. Max Müller and Francis Galton, the duke of Argyll, George J. Romanes, and others. Neatly bound in cloth. Price, 75c.

Three Lectures on The Science of Language. By Prof. F. Max Müller. The Oxford University Extension Lectures. With a supplement, "My Predecessors," an essay on genesis of "The Science of Thought." 112 pages; cloth. Price, 75c.

The Psychology of Attention. By Th. Ribot, professor of Comparative and Experimental Psychology at the College de France, and editor of the Revue Philosophique. Authorized translation. Treating of the following topics: 1. Spontaneous, or Natural, Attention. 2. Emotional states; 3. Physical manifestations; 4. Surprise; 5. Voluntary, or Artificial, Attention. 6. Its mechanism; 7. Inhibition; 8. The feeling of effort; 9. The Morbid States of Attention. 10. Distraction; 11. Hypochondria; 12. Fixed ideas and ecstasy; 13. Idiocy; 14. Attention in sleep and hypnosis. Cloth, 75c.

Fundamental Problems. The Method of Philosophy as a Systematic Arrangement of Knowledge. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.

The Psychic Life of Micro-Organisms. A Study in Experimental Psychology. By Alfred Binet. Translation from the French with the sanction of the author. Treating of the following subjects: 1. The Psychology of the Cell—Introductory. 2. The Structural and Psychological Character of Proto-Organisms: Motory and Sensory Organs. 3. The Psychology of Nutrition: Holophytic, Saprophytic, and Animal Nutrition; Predatory Habits of Certain Animals. 4. Colonies of Unicellular Organisms. 5. Recrudescence of Proto-Organisms. 6. Recrudescence of Higher Animals and Plants. 7. The Physiological Function of the Nucleus. 8. Correspondence between Alfred Binet and Ch. Richet (professor of physiology in the Faculty of Medicine at Paris) respecting cellular psychology. 10mo, 135 pages; cloth, 75c; paper, 50c.

Wheelbarrow Articles and Discussions on the Labor Question, Including the Controversy with Mr. Lyman F. Gage on the Ethics of the Board of Trade; and also the Controversy with Mr. Hugh J. Pentecost, and others, on the Single Tax Question. Elegant cloth binding, portrait of the author, and autograph letter. Price, $1.

The Idea of God. By Dr. Paul Carus. Being a disquisition on the development of the idea of God in human thought and history; discussing: 1. The Nature of Ideas. 2. The Etymology of The Word God. 3. God an Abstract Idea. 4. The Conceptions of God (Polytheism, Monotheism, Pantheism, Theism, and Atheism). 5. Definitions of the Idea of God. 6. Entheism, the Monistic Conception of God. Price, 15c.

Epitomes of Three Sciences. 1. Comparative Philology: The Study of Sanscrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg, of the University of Kiel. —a. Sanscrit Research; b. From Jones to Lassen; c. The Discovery of the Veda; d. The Interpretation of the Veda; e. The History of the Vedic Epoch. 2. Experimental Psychology. By Prof. Joseph Jastrow, of the University of Wisconsin. —a. Aspects of Modern Psychology; b. Psychology in Germany; c. Psychology in France and Italy; d. Psychology in Great Britain and the United States. 3. Old Testament History; or, The Rise of the people of Israel. By Prof. C. H. Cornwell, of the University of Königsberg. —a. The Traditions of the People of Israel; b. The Migrations of the Tribes of Israel; c. The Conquest of Palestine and the Kingdom of Israel. With special introductions by Professors Oldenberg and Cornwell, and prefatory remarks by the editor of the Open Court. Elegant cloth binding. Price, 75c.

The Ethical Problem. By Dr. Paul Carus. Three Lectures, delivered before the Society for Ethical Culture of Chicago at the invitation of the Board of Trustees: 1. Ethics, a Science; 2. The Data of Ethics; 3. The Theories of Ethics. 112 pages, cloth. Price, 50c.

On Double Consciousness. Experimental Psychological Studies. By Alfred Binet. Table of contents: 1. Introductory; Experimental Psychology in France. 2. Proof of Double Consciousness in Hysterical Individuals. 3. The Relations between the Two Consciousnesses of Hysterical Individuals. 4. The Hysterical Eye. 5. Mechanism or Subconsciousness? 6. The Graphic Method and the Doubling of Consciousness. 7. The Intensity of Subconscious States. 8. The Role of Suggestion in Phenomena of Double Consciousness. 9. Double Consciousness in Health. 93 pages, paper. Price, 50c.

The Lost Manuscript. A Novel. By Gustave Freytag. A handsome, elegantly bound edition of this famous and popular German romance. The author writes as a motto for the American edition: "A noble human life does not end on earth with death. It continues in the minds and deeds of friends, as well as in the thoughts and the activity of the nation." In two octavo volumes; boxed. Price, $4.

Diseases of Personality. By Th. Ribot. Authorized translation. Treating of the following subjects: 1. Nature of Personality and consciousness. 2. Organic Disorders. 3. Emotional Disorders. 4. Intellectual Troubles. 5. Dissolution of the Personality. Cloth, 75c.

The Soul of Man. An Investigation of the Facts of Physiological and Experimental Psychology. By Dr. Paul Carus. With 152 illustrative Cuts and Diagrams. Price $3, pages 480. Printed on extra fine paper, handsomely bound in cloth. The subject-matter of the work is divided into the following sections: 1. The Philosophical Problem of Mind. 2. The Rise of Organic Life. 3. Physiological Facts of Brain-Activity. 4. The Immortality of the Race and the Data of Propagation. 5. The Investigations of Experimental Psychology. 6. The Ethical and Religious Aspects of Soul-Life.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. 40 cents.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price 10 cents.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon much less or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt-lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stipendiary; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE and OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continuity even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	10
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	10
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. J. BALL. Price, 2 cents.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquiring Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Gluckens. 12mo, 185 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquiring Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all." [The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume." [Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Graeco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere." [Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps." [Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought." [Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. BALL.

Price, 2 cents.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, 51.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE. Dedicated to the American Congress Which for the Sake of Religion Has Stabbed Liberty to the Heart. With Other Pieces. By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper covers, pp. 96. No. 32 of the Truth Seeker Library, price 25 cents.

Those of our readers who have perused Freethought literature for any length of time we believe will be overjoyed when they see Samuel Putnam's name as writer of a new book which they may procure. As to new readers, they may quickly become sensible of this writer's quality by turning to any one of the weekly installments of the description of the World's Fair that he contributes to THE TRUTH SEEKER. From this magnificent series, which we have no hesitation in claiming as the very foremost in literary merit of all the descriptions of the Exposition being written, they will learn the superb powers of that broad philosopher and enthralling prose-poet. There are, indeed, few authors living with whom we would not challenge comparison with this writer whose weekly productions the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER are so fortunate as to receive. His philosophy is wide, deep, world-searching. His reasoning is sound and test-enduring. His observation is exact. His feelings are so exuberant, ardent, and indeed impetuous that they sometimes seem to threaten prejudice to the framework of just deliberation which they should pervade and warm but not bury or warp; yet it will be found in each such case, on examination, that the rational part has suffered no injury from the emotional. As it is said of a genius that he is not one man but nine men in one—as good at generalizing as though he had no faculty for particulars, yet as good at particular facts as though no theorist, as fanciful as if lacking a stable sense of reality, yet as solid-minded when occasion calls as if quite without fantasy—as these things, and so on, are said of a genius, so we will say of Mr. Putnam that he is as good a reasoner as though he never felt those affections so prone to sway judgment, and yet so full of feeling that one expects room in the same breast for little sterner; so riotous an enjoyer and enthusiast that one fears dearth of prudence and measure, yet provided with these latter in such plenty that the reader chancing to begin on one of his judicial, balancing, and scrupulous summings-up would sigh for the charm, supposed impossible, of a less hesitant and care-weighted flight of impulse and unthinking delight. And so wide-spread and varied are his interests, so multitudinous the points at which he touches the universe in which he is enveloped, that readers might apprehend the failing so often concomitant with this quality, an undue complexity and involvedness of expression; when lo they are agreeably disappointed by a style of the utmost directness and simplicity.

Religion is a curse, says Mr. Putnam. More, it must ever remain a curse. The hopes of redeeming it by freeing it of some bad things which have fastened upon it can never be fulfilled. Religion is not, as some think, a jewel whose crust of mud need but be removed when the gem within will show its native brightness. No, "religion is not a jewel. It is a dagger—a bloody dagger. It is a dagger in its very nature. Brighten it up and it will be a dagger still. Wipe off the blood and its dazzling blade is still ready for slaughter. You cannot change that dagger into a jewel to shine in peaceful luster. All the ornaments of religion are but the ornaments of a weapon of death."

Now, why is religion a thing of this sort? Why is it a curse in essence, in its inmost nature? Why can it never be aught beside a curse, under different bearings in different and future times? What is its central nature that constitutes it a curse of this kind? The answer would occupy considerable space here; it is handsomely given by Mr. Putnam in the pages of his work.

Second, religion is a disease. This is important. If it is a disease it can be got quit of. We may cherish hopes of its complete removal. It might, as Mr. Putnam reflects, "be a curse and still be a natural and universal characteristic of human nature, and therefore permanent; and we could only comfort ourselves with the maxim, 'What can't be cured must be endured.' But religion does not belong to healthful human nature. It is a disease. It therefore can be got rid of by mental hygiene."

If religion is a disease, show us that it is so. What are the criteria by which this judgment is formed? We know what is health, and we know what is disease—now tell us what characteristics of religion call for its ranking with the latter and exclusion from the category of the former. And what is the mental hygiene by which this disease may be cured? Let the reader ask these questions of himself, and gain a clear idea of the problem which needs an answer, and then he will, we promise, by turning to Mr. Putnam's pages acquire a solution full and satisfactory.

Third, religion is a lie. So it should be exposed and made away with. We know the effect of untruth. It is woe-working. We know, too, the outcome of truth. That is creativeness of happiness. Giving belief to this lie of religion is merely "like taking an opiate. It weakens, while it cures not the ills of life. It is a desperate resort. It heals not the wound. It sends the poison deeper in. We must confront reality and make the best of it. By courage we can win something of happiness from our dark surroundings. Only, however, by sticking to the truth. If we abandon truth we are lost indeed."

How do you demonstrate that religion is a lie? How do you make it evident that the things of which religion tells us have no existence? This is the question which after the above affirmation of Mr. Putnam will be asked him by the reader—by the pious reader with angry vehemence. Mr. Putnam answers it at length. He handles the supposed proofs of a god, such as that from design, that from intuition, etc., and then deals with those of immortality.

In telling the people, at the end of his article, what they may put in the place of religion, Mr. Putnam renders a beautiful tribute to science, which reads in part:

"How beautiful is the way of science through all the world's history. How gentle, how patient, how brave, how charitable in the true sense, it has ever been. How ready to help; how eager to do and to dare. It is afraid of nothing, of no dark depths or rugged heights, of no desert or wild beast, poisonous insect or serpent's fang. It shrinks from no efforts. It shirks no task. It dares suffering, persecution, martyrdom, and death. It has been imprisoned, and through the prison bars hath read the lofty heavens, and revealed their glory. It hath been chained and yet it has filled the world with light. See the million happy homes it hath made; all the jeweled harvest-fields that shine beneath its footsteps."

"I would say, let Science reign, but Science does not want to reign. She desires no sword and no crown. Evermore she is the servant of humanity. Patiently she labors, scorning nothing, fearing nothing, hating nothing, and loving the truth."

"What shall we put in the place of religion, the curse, the disease, and the lie?"

"I have answered it, and may the working-people of this republic, whose rights have been so basely invaded, understand henceforth the true benefactor of this world."

It will be noted that in the last sentence Mr. Putnam uses the phrase, "the working-people of this republic whose rights have been so basely invaded." This draws us to mention that the motif which led him to writing this work was the impulse of indignation which he felt on receiving news that the World's Fair would be closed Sundays.

This main treatise, declaring Religion a Curse, Disease, and Lie, occupies sixty-four pages. The remaining thirty-two pages bound in the volume contain reproductions of pieces by the same author written occasionally during the last ten years. Three of these are prose, while six are poetry. The first of the prose pieces is on "Orthodoxy." "In orthodoxy," we are truthfully told, "there are no rights to gain. The universe is one dead level. History is an everlasting repetition, the treadmill of the beast of burden. It has no perspective, no pictures, and no anticipations. Everything is already acquired. The unknown is a myth; the known is only between the lids of a barbaric Bible. This is the 'word of God,' and it cannot be added to. Eighteen hundred years have passed, yet Orthodoxy has given no discovery, no invention. It has not increased one whit the area of human happiness. Its mockery of heaven has added nothing to the wealth of human civilization. The God of Orthodoxy has not plowed one inch of soil or reaped one golden harvest."

The next piece, a prose one, is entitled "Freethought," and is as admirable as its subject.

Next is an argument on "The Constitution and Holy Days and Holidays" made before the Columbian Exposition committee of the House of Representatives Jan. 12, 1893, against Sunday closing of the World's Fair. It is a clear and valuable statement of principles of liberty.

The six poems following are excellent, and we should love to set forth something of their nature, but must be content with printing their names: "Man, Not God," "The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine," "Truth, Beauty, Goodness," "Death and Life," "The Golden Age," and "Shut the Door."

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting Her Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.
One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It
and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.
Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Force and Matter;

OR,
Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:
Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things in Immortality of Matter, Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Force, Man,
Infinity of Matter, Brain and Mind,
Value of Matter, Thought,
Motion, Consciousness,
Form, Seat of the Soul,
Immutability of Natural Innate Ideas,
Laws, The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Personal Continence,
Laws, Vital Force,
The Heavens, The Soul of Brutes,
Periods of the Creation Free Will,
of the Earth, Morality,
Original Generation, Concluding Observa-
Secular Generation, tions.
Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THOMAS PAINE;
WAS HE JUNIUS?
By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.
Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Gems of Thought.

It is significant that in political revolution it is the Freethinker who is usually the leader. Franklin, Paine, Jefferson, Washington, were the chief founders of the American Republic, and Lincoln presided at its second birth. Mazzini and Garibaldi are the heroes of United Italy; Rousseau, Voltaire, and Victor Hugo have been the chief inspirers of democratic France.—Robt. C. Adams

No man can "enjoy religion," as the Methodists express it, unless he has well-developed veneration and wonder. All those who rebel against any form of government which in childhood they were taught to revere, must of necessity do so in opposition to the faculty of veneration. Thus it is obvious that the less one possesses of the conservative restraining faculties, the more easily he becomes a rebel or an infidel to that which his reason condemns. On the other hand, the profoundly conscientious and reverential man, who sincerely regards unbelief as a sin, of course instinctively antagonizes every skeptical thought, and is thus likely to remain a slave to the religion learned at his mother's knee.—Edgar Beall.

If there should arise a class of men who were able to distinguish, promptly and invariably, genuine things from imitations, facts from falsehoods, and truth from error they would have an almost inconceivable advantage in the struggle of life. The tricks of impostors would never deceive them; the bubbles of visionaries would never delude them; they would never be misled by the sophistries of shallow theorists; never be enslaved by baseless superstitions. Such wisdom is so unlike what the world has ever known that the idea savors of Utopia or the millennium, and to express it seems almost childish. Yet it is a fact that some progress toward this ideal has been made—some increase of the power of recognizing truth has been gained. A class of men has arisen whose pursuit of health is not hampered by the delusion that disease is a punishment for lapses from religion, who do not waste their money on schemes for getting more power out of a machine than is put into it, who do not accept every statement that is put to them with rhetorical vehemence and defective evidence. This superior discernment—far from perfect, but the best that man has ever had—is the possession of those who have adopted the scientific habit of thought.—Professor Youmans.

GIBBON, Niebuhr, Bentham, Colenso, Renan, Franklin, Jefferson, Darwin, Buckle, Motley, Knight, Carlyle, and others follow out lines of investigation which Voltaire suggested, or carry on investigation in a spirit and method which he made easy. The author most indebted to Voltaire was Buckle. Buckle's "History of Civilization," if the gifted and devoted author had lived to complete it, could have been little more than an amplification and rectification of Voltaire's essay. Even in the form, Buckle followed his model; for Voltaire, too, has an "Introduction" of extraordinary length—nearly a volume. We are reminded of the English author in nearly a hundred places in Voltaire's "Introduction," as when we read, for example, of the controlling influence of climate in developing civilization; that civilization began with leisure, and cannot thrive without it; that the immensities of nature limited the population of America; that religion retards and knowledge promotes development; that the "aspects of nature," when they are terrible, make men more superstitious, and when they are benign make them less so; that such works as the pyramids prove the builders to have been poor and servile; that ignorance and fear are the allied causes of all that is most deplorable in the history of man, and that the beginning of all progress is the increase of knowledge. He anticipates, also, those investigators who trace the gradual development of such doctrines as the real presence and miraculous inspiration, as well as the gradual construction of such modes of worship as the Catholic mass. On this line he displays all his knowledge, acuteness, humor, and audacity. The infinite absurdities of the early church history, such as tracing the papacy to St. Peter, who never saw Rome, give him matter for many entertaining and effective pages. The awful power wielded for so many ages by the ring of small-brained, greedy Italians who governed the church from Rome, and debauched both the mind and morals of Europe, received due recognition at his hands. He sums it all up in one sentence of terrible truth: "You will observe," he says, as if addressing Madame du Châtelet, "that in all the disputes which have inflamed Christians against one another since the birth of the church, Rome has always decided for the opinion that most degraded the human mind and most completely annihilated human reason."—Par-ton.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
 Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) B. J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
 Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
 Crisis. Written During Am Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
 Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
 Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
 Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Port. $1.
 Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
 Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
 Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
 Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
 Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
 Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING
 THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS,
 HISTORY, STATISTICS,
 AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
 TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF
 THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
 WITH PORTRAIT OF
 THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

26 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
27 " The Church Robbing the People.	3 " Missionaries.
28 " Thanksgiving.	4 " The Lord's Instruments.
29 " Sabbath Laws.	5 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
30 " Children and the Church.	6 " The Church and Slavery.
31 " Woman and the Church.	7 " Priests and Politics.
32 " The Church and Thomas Paine.	8 " Ireland and the Church.
33 " Studies in Natural History.	9 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
34 " The Bible and Science.	10 " The Uses of the Cross.
35 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.	11 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
36 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	12 " Persecutions of the Church.
37 " The Atonement Scheme.	13 " Some Allegories.
38 " The Lord and His Works.	14 " Heaven.
39 " Prayer.	15 " Hell.
40 " The Creeds.	16 " Miscellaneous.
41 " Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume. —[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers. —[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker Company

POPE'S AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
 Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
 Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By
 G. W. FOSTER.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
 Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Bronsais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtenay Palmer, Babe-lais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
 Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING
 A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
 Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION.

OR, THE
 Conflict between Reason and Superstition
 By T. C. WIDDICOMBE.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.....	5
3 Influence of Christianity on Civilization.....	5
4 Underwood.....	25
5 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller.....	10
6 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison.....	15
7 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall.....	10
8 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin.....	10
9 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin.....	50
10 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.....	25
11 Essays on Miracles. David Hume.....	10
12 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
13 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
14 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
15 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh.....	10
16 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.....	5
17 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake.....	5
18 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts.....	5
19 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts.....	5
20 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts.....	5
21 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts.....	5
22 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts.....	5
23 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts.....	5
24 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake.....	5
25 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake.....	5
26 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts.....	5
27 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
28 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
29 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.....	10
30 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts.....	10
31 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts.....	5
32 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake.....	10
33 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen.".....	5
2 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
3 200 Questions Without Answers.....	5
4 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin.....	10
5 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian.....	10
6 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake.....	5
7 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh.....	5
8 A Few Words about the Devil.....	5
9 Daniel, the Dreamer..... Austin Holyoake.....	5
10 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake.....	10
11 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.....	10
12 Lurid Aspects of Christianity. A. H.....	10
13 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
14 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh.....	5
15 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.....	5
16 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
17 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
18 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz.....	10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

150 AMERICAN WATCH

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 20 days; is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.

It has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lantern Pinion, 240 beats to minute; No key required to wind and set; weight 4 oz.; exactly like cut; Post-paid for $1.50, 3 for $4.00, 12 for $15.00, by express. Mention paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CLASP. AGENTS & SUGGESTIONS sent for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO.,
 65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL

Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	Oxidized,	each $2.50
"	{ 10 ounces per doz., }
"	Oxidized,	" 3.00
"	{ 14 ounces per doz., }
"	Oxidized,	" 3.00
"	{ 10 ounces per doz., }
"	Oxidized,	" 3.50
"	{ sectional gilt, }
"	{ 10 ounces per doz., }
Orange "	Oxidized, plain bowl,	" 2.75
Sugar "	" gilt "	" 3.25
"	" satin "	" 3.00
"	" gilt "	" 3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl. "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Badges, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer. (If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfect "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for pricelists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy.
 Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. BAKER & Co., Atty's, Washington, D.C.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,

Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER
 AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABLETS.
 SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church: Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. Bennett. 8vo, 1,119 pages. Morocco, gilt edges. Price, $4.50.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price. Cents

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

A BAD TIME FOR JERRY.

Then took they Jeremiah, and cast him into the dungeon of Malchiah the son of Hammelech, that was in the court of the prison: and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire: so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.—Jere. xxxviii, 6.

News of the Week.

ARCHBISHOP DUHAMEL of Ontario, Can., has begun a war of extermination upon Le Canada, a journal which printed the inside truth of a Catholic intrigue in politics.

THE convention of Quakers of New York state received a communication from the Baltimore annual meeting urging discountenance of Sunday newspapers as morally unprofitable.

A PROVIDENTIAL warning against going to church was witnessed at Milner, Ga., on the 28th ult. Rev. Wm. Graham, with his wife, on leaving the church in which he had just preached were so blinded by a driving rain that they failed to see a coming train and were killed.

ON the supposition that the painting at the Fair on the scriptural episode of "The Woman Taken in Adultery" had been covered because of objection to the nude, art writers have been denouncing the act; but the commissioner now says he covered the picture solely on account of its meritlessness.

THE drouth about Clermont, France, has been so bad that the archbishop authorized the ceremony of the procession of the miraculous statue of Notre-Dame-du-Port. The solemnity took place for the first time since 1862. Several who took part brought umbrellas in spite of the fineness of the weather. The bells of all the churches were ringing.

CARNEGIE'S proposal, in the magazines, of an Anglo-American alliance is meeting with small favor. The London Chronicle says his conception of a combination unsailable upon the land and able to sweep seas and competent to be the arbiter of nations is merely the ideal of "triumphant militarism," with philanthropic aims and pedagogic methods, whereas the essential spirit of "triumphant democracy" is that a people should do its own business and mind its own business.

WHILE the law calls for deporting our unregistered Chinese, the authorities hesitate. The churches protest against deportation, fearing harm to their foreign missions. And the national treasury lacks adequate funds. A Washington dispatch says: "It is not the fact that six millions will not be more than enough to execute the court's decision, but the consequential damages to manufactures, commerce, and the treasury, these and a great variety of problems, including foreign missions, in which Cleveland is understood to be interested, have thrust upon the administration unexpectedly a momentous question."

MRS. JAS. G. BLAINE, JR., having secured a divorce, on the 30th ult. married Dr. Bull. She is a Catholic, Dr. Bull a Protestant. A Catholic authority said: "In the eve of the church a marriage lasts throughout life. Neither party, though divorced, may marry during the life of the other. Mrs. Blaine will be no exception. She cannot, in the eye of the church, marry as long as James G. Blaine, Jr., lives. If she does so, she cannot receive the sacraments, and while there will be no formal expulsion, there will be a practical excommunication. The pope has not granted nor will he grant any dispensation for her. It would overthrow church rules of centuries' standing."

MISS ELIZABETH CHAPIN has been dismissed from her position as teacher in the Wilson Industrial School and Mission for Girls, New York city, for entertaining Theosophic views. She was asked, "Do you believe in the Bible?" and answered "Yes;" and "Do you believe in Christ?" and answered "Yes;" but was nevertheless discharged. She had taught there ten years, and being impecunious needs the place sorely. The Industrial School and Mission is supported by endowments and contributions. It is unsectarian and undenominational. Connected with it is a memorial church, also undenominational. The pastor says it is an evangelical school and church. In other words, it is founded on the Apostles' Creed.

At the Second Presbyterian church of Albany, N. Y., last Sunday, a crowd gathered to hear Rev. Dr. Ecob's announced declaration on the Briggs case. He renounced connection with the Presbyterian church and declared the Presbyterian general assembly "the most bigoted, intolerant, and reactionary body ever seen in any denomination." He said: "I leave the Presbyterian church because it has taken on a garment that has lain buried in the grave for more than two hundred years. It smells of the earth and of death." With these words he swept his arms down across his chest as though brushing something from him, adding: "I brush it off forever." He recommends forming a Free Church of Christ to take in the Congregationalists, the Episcopalians of the broader school, the Free-Will Baptists, and the Cumberland Presbyterians.

S. P. Putnam's Latest Pamphlet.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1893, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Freethought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for His Processes Are Egregiously Slow, They Are Egregiously Wasteful, They Often Serve No Use, They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

EAGLE BRAND.

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO.,
Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.

13718

HEAVEN AND ITS WONDERS

From Things heard and seen in the Spiritual World, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG;

ALSO THE LAST JUDGMENT,

as witnessed by him in 1757.
Both books (the first in cloth 375 pp. and the second in paper 208 pp.) sent by mail for 40 cts. Address exactly
Am. Swedenborg Printing & Publishing Society,
Dept. "A," 20 COOPER UNION, N. Y. CITY.

6teow17

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

Water of Life

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 24. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 17, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE KIND OF RELIGION THE DEVIL SMILES AT.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design."

Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated Price, cloth, $2.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles avory."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain. Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.] Price, - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker. Price, $1. Order at once. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

-With Music Written to All the Songs.-

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN. Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK--AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE! The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.
The Earth.
The Chemical Aspect.
The Sun.
Genesis--The Creation.
Genesis--The Garden of Eden.
The Deluge.
The Scriptural God--The Creation.
The Creation of God--Abraham.
Moses--Confirmation of the Idea of God.
Samuel the Kingmaker.
God Save the King.
Jehovah Takes a Rest.
The End of National Life.
The Christian Era.
Organic Life--Vegetable.
Organic Life--Animal.

The Master Tissues.
The Muscular Tissues.
The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,
In General.
By the Lungs.
By the Skin.
By the Kidneys.
Digestion and Nutrition.
The Elementary Substances.
Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.
The Soul--What Is It?
The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.
The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.
Rational Review.
Visions--Bible Dreams--Revelations.
The Planetary Gods.
Every Man His Own God.
Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.
(Morals; Whence They Spring.
The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.
ILLUSTRATIONS.
Map of the Intellectual Faculties--The Mind.
Map of Theological Retrogression.
Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters--Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS. AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth; Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone; Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards? The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested? Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies--thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that Infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN.

Price 25 cents.

New Publications.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" ($3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

For $7.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and the "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times" ($5.00), by D. M. Bennett. In two volumes. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDCAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 24. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 17, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - JUNE 17, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express-money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

The Natural Causes of Right and Wrong.

Hobbes, the goodly philosopher of a couple of centuries ago, in chapter xi of his "Leviathan" enlarges on a subject which he deems of great importance. This is, the mistaken courses whereinto men fall that are ignorant of natural causes and the proper signification of words. The effect of ignorance of the causes of right, equity, law, and justice, is to make custom and example the rule of actions, as with children, or to induce the setting of custom against reason, and reason against custom, "whereby the doctrine of right and wrong is perpetually disputed, both by the pen, and by the sword."

Proceedings of this nature are to be seen everywhere about us. Excellent Thomas Hobbes by no means over-estimates their prevalence. They constitute a large proportion of human action.

That portion of human action is wasted—indeed worse than wasted. While "custom and example" rule those who are easily befooled or intimidated, the deep-seeing and the valiant spurn these trammels; and the disorder that this breeds, and the persecution drawn upon these best members of our race, is deplorable. If the others, the conforming masses, could have been told of the truth in the matter, of "natural causes and the proper signification of words," they would not have lent themselves to the persecution, and it could not have taken place. And if the non-conformists could have been amply informed, they would not have committed those mistaken assaults upon the good in custom which unfortunately have ever mingled with their attacks upon the bad.

The cause of this hurly-burly of blindness and suffering is the religion that has for fifteen hundred years forbidden men to write or speak about "natural causes," as these natural causes would supplant the supernatural ones affirmed by that religion. It now lies with the opponents of that religion to find out and set forth the natural causes of right and wrong, the real reasons why we should do one thing and not do another. We hourly hear it said about us of actions, "This was right, "That was wrong." Why was the one right, and the other wrong? and shall we change our views in any cases and call right that which before was wrong, and wrong that which before was right?—these questions each should busy himself with continually. When we have found out, and told other people so that they all understand, crime will diminish vastly.

More Jubilation Wanted.

This age needs more celebration and festivity. The tone of society infused by Christianity, the religion that declares man helpless and forlorn, and capable of obtaining happiness only by recognizing his abjectness and renouncing earth joys in exclusive devotion to another world, must be superseded. In its place must be put the hearty joyousness and jubilation of those pagan worships of nature which it blighted and buried. There needs a rejuvenescence, gladsome and exulting, of "The glory that was Greece,

The grandeur that was Rome."

In this sentiment we find the sensible writer Arthur Brisbane concurring. He says in the New York World: "The inhabitants of this city are starving mentally for lack of amusement and gaiety. The events of recent days have demonstrated this fact. We have traveled about, squeezing and crowding each other, for a sight of a small duke, who is accompanied by a man in uniform. We have endured humiliation and the gentle treatment of the New York police for a glimpse of a fashionable marriage at which a young man of title and a young woman of money shone. The smallest collection of men marching with one drum and one fife to a schuetzenfest will attract large crowds. There is not enough fun to go round." That it is Christianity that is responsible for our gloom this writer agrees, for he goes on to say that it is our unprofitable inheritance of Puritanism that lends dulness to the one day in the week which should be devoted to healthy pleasure, the day which keeps the French cheerful and gay in the midst of all their troubles. We need more brass bands and more free shows. In Germany there is always good music in the air. The playing of fine military bands, particularly on Sunday, brings the people together, keeps them cheerful and helps to reconcile them to the extravagance of outrageous standing armies. We ought to have fine bands here free to everybody. Public parks ought to be fitted up with all sorts of gymnastic apparatus to be used free by young men. The theaters ought to be opened on Sunday and at lower rates than on week-days. There is too much starving of the mind and restriction of Sunday liberty in this country.

It would be fitting should Freethinkers, Anti-Christians, be the leaders in some signal move bringing in the new era.

A Priest Run Afoul of a Magician.

The famous legerdemainist, Herrmann, is conducting, through the New York dailies, a brisk skirmish with Rev. Alfred Young, of the House of the Paulist Fathers. The subject is miracles.

In one of his articles our impious sleight-of-hand man states that after a professional hunt for a real miracle for the space of thirty years, and after a reward of $20,000 for the production of one, he could never discover what he sought, and he concluded as reasonable that in the past thirty years there has never been a miracle wrought at all. At this the aggrieved Paulist comes forth in print and tells Herrmann to go to the fount of Lourdes, France, and there he will find a lot of miracles. To this recommendation he adds sundry bits of weak sarcasm and bitter epithet. The professor of white magic replies: "He tells me to go to Lourdes and see the crutches on exhibition there, and the church built with the alms of the people who have been cured there. I do not want to go to Lourdes, because I have been there, but for every person cured at Lourdes I will bring another from the Hot Springs of Arkansas." The professor then offers his $20,000 for proof, first, that the waters of Lourdes are not impregnated with medical substances, and second, that a person has ever been cured of an organic disease by them.

Then, the black-gowned of the disputants declares that there have been no bogus miracles, and that it is mean of Mr. Herrmann to say so. Whereupon he receives the retort: "Does Alfred Young mean to say that there have not been bogus miracles? If so, let me deluge him with facts. I refer him to 'Hume's History of England of the Reign of Henry VIII.' for a list of discovered tricks called miracles. I refer him to the contemporaneous history of those times for a further list of the exposition of tricks passed for miracles."

At last the spiritual father winds up with what he esteems a crushing blow, which is:

"Here is what he [Herrmann] is to do in order to obtain the power to perform Catholic miracles and give others the like power, simply this and nothing more: Let him get himself crucified and then rise from the dead again on the third day. Professional etiquette forbids my making any charge for the recipe."

To which he gets a reply that we suppose makes him impose doubly fierce penances on his victims of the confessional for a month, and in his sermons denounce skeptics with bitterness no end heightened. The reply is:

"Thank you, Alfred Young, but I am not in the miracle business. You are. You claim to be empowered with all the prerogatives given to the original Apostles. You know that in the tenth chapter of Matthew you are empowered, like the Apostles, to do the following things: 'Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils.' You perform duties every day by virtue of just such authority in your priestly functions—duties, however, which require mere words with no visible results. Now, then, prove something by facts. Take off your coat, get a cross, crucify yourself and come back again, or get one of your associates to bring you back again, for he has the power to raise the dead as well as you. Send me a complimentary ticket to the exhibition. I never charge clergymen admission to my entertainments."

It is not likely that this challenge will result in the self-inflicted crucifixion of Father Young; but we know whose crucifixion, if the church possessed her erstwhile power, it would result in.

Catholics Overriding Civil Law.

Among the things showing how certainly Catholicism would crush civil government to make place for ecclesiastical if she could get the power, is the manner in which she actually does at the present hour override the marriage law of the state. She steadfastly refuses to recognize as valid the law, enacted by the people supreme, which pronounces wedded two persons one of whom has been divorced.

On a late Sunday Archbishop Cleary passed sentence of excommunication against Richard McGovern and Mary Barkley at Kemptville, Ontario. Mr. McGovern had while employed in the United States married a Catholic woman in a Catholic church. On being brought to Canada she disliked the place so that she returned. McGovern got a divorce from her in the United States and married Mary Barkley by civil ceremony. When the archbishop of Kingston learned of this he summoned the man and woman to meet him in the church at Prescott. They appeared, but neither was willing to abandon the other. The archbishop admonished them and threatened excommunication, but in spite of repeated warnings they continued to live together, and on Sunday the archbishop in the presence of a crowded congregation, including Protestants as well as Catholics, gathered from all the surrounding parishes, pronounced in most solemn form what a report styles the "dread sentence." As the archbishop concluded the sentence of excommunication the tolling of the great bell in the steeple was echoed by the bells in the sanctuary. The archbishop shut the open missal and ordered it removed, then taking the candle on the right from its socket he dashed it on the floor and extinguished its light, trampling it under foot. He repeated the same form with the second candle, thus symbolically signifying that the excommunicated pair were, in the language of the report, "bereft of the spirit of wisdom and light and grace, and cast forth into outer darkness."

The Catholic clergy do not hesitate to call any woman who has been made a wife by the law of the people, but whose ceremony does not bring profit to their particular pockets, a concubine, and declare that she and her husband are living in concubinage. From their insulting defiance of the marriage law at present, we may easily conceive what would be their conduct toward all laws could they grow strong enough.

The Struggle of Moral Resorts vs. Immoral.

On Thursday, the 8th, the United States circuit court, sitting at Chicago, decided that the World's Fair should be closed on Sundays. Judges Woods and Jenkins rendered opinions in favor of the injunction asked by District-attorney Milchrist to prevent the opening of the gates. Judge Grosscup dissented. The decision will be heard on appeal in the United States circuit court of appeals.

Judge Woods announced that each member of the court would deliver his own opinion.

Justice Woods for his own part offered the point that the Fair is under national control even irrespective of the grant of $2,500,000 with the Sunday-closing condition annexed. He said that the act of Congress inaugurating the Fair showed that the Illinois legislature and the park commissioners had tendered the Fair to the national government. "It is provided," said he, "that the Illinois corporation shall tender the site to the national commission, which shall accept it on behalf of the government if the site is desirable. All through the act is indicated a legal transfer to the government. The local corporation is given no authority to control the possession of the grounds." He also stated: "The general law is that when the national government takes possession of grounds within a state the laws of that state continue to have force only through the United States authorities." He went on: "In my judgment the government had the right to enforce that Sunday-closing rule without giving the Fair a single dollar. It was not necessary for Congress to vote money and attach such a condition to its acceptance in order to secure Sunday closing." As to the right of the government to seek relief in a court of equity, he held that Congress had as much authority to protect its interests at Jackson park as it had in the federal building where the court was sitting. As to the contrary decision of the state court, while he regretted the conflict of jurisdiction, he said that it was inadmissible to entertain the idea that the federal court must yield in comity to the state court.

The decision of Judge Jenkins was substantially the same as that of Judge Woods. He added, however: "It is said that this legislation by Congress was without the power of Congress in that it seeks to establish a religious test. I cannot concur in that suggestion. The day of rest is needful for humanity to recover from the strain of six days' labor. The laws of the state bearing on this point provide for rest and for non-interruption of religious services. It is not compulsory on anyone to go to church, but it provides peace for those who wish to go to church." This notion of the judge, that it is necessary to the peace of the church-goers that they make everybody else go too, or at least shut them off from going to any other places that they may want to go to, will evoke from the reader a smile as he passes this point in the account. Withal, it cannot be denied that the smile will, as reflection succeeds, quickly merge into an expression of exasperation. This judge remarked on the decision of Judge Stein in the state court, ordering the Fair open: "As to the state court which has passed on this case, I will say that the United States was not a party in that court. I think that there can be no question that the United States has a right to use courts of its own jurisdiction to adjudicate matters pertaining to governmental affairs. In my opinion the injunction asked for should issue."

Judge Grosscup, who delivered the dissenting opinion, set forth that the point which moved him to do so was the withdrawal by the national government of part of the $2,500,000 with which it had purchased the right to close the gates Sundays.

At this decision, Edwin Walker, counsel for the local directors, asked a supersedeas, which would suspend the going into effect of the injunction. He said the gravity of the situation was increased by the decision of the state court on this same question being opposed to the decision of the federal court. There was danger of an unpleasant conflict of authority between the courts. The supersedeas was denied. It was then supposed by the people that the World's Fair would be closed on the coming Sunday. For they inferred that, of the two injunctions out, the one of the federal court commanding closing would be obeyed rather than the one of the state court ordering opening. To be sure, Attorney Mason, engaged in the suit of Stockholder Charles Clingman to have the Fair opened, threatened that if it was closed he would have all the Fair officials attached for contempt of court in disobeying the injunction of Judge Stein. There seemed some prospects of a lively conflict between authorities.

But this was averted and the Fair was opened. Edwin Walker was so lucky as to obtain an immediate audience from Chief-justice Fuller of the federal court of appeals at Chicago. This judge set the following Thursday, the 15th, for a regular hearing in appeal, and meantime granted the supersedeas suspending the closing injunction just issued in the federal circuit court.

Among the considerations advanced by Edwin Walker, in obtaining this writ, was the one that closing the Fair henceforth would deprive it of $1,750,000 of receipts which it otherwise would receive from now on to its close; that it needed this money badly and without it might be crippled and have to close; that if its present creditors should press their claims it would have to close at once, and that as a matter of right feeling surely the national government would not like to stand by and see the Exposition shut up.

The Fair last Sunday, the 11th, was attended by a large crowd, of perfect orderliness. The crowd, however, was not so large as that on some few week-days in the past. It will not be until Sunday opening becomes a settled and known thing. The puritans and domineers are to a very considerable extent winning success in their endeavor to keep people from elevating themselves morally and mentally.

Clerics Demanding Special Privileges.

The clergy, rendered presumptuous by long indulgence and adulation from an ignorant people, insist on special prerogatives in countless quarters. They enjoy freedom from taxes on their places of business. They are made happy by laws forbidding rivals to solicit the people's pennies on the day when they do business. They hold that they should be exempt from military service; in France, for instance, they are now declaiming against what they call the outrage of a new law drafting clerical seminarists like other young men.

What we shall note particularly here is their resistance to the law calling all citizens to testify whatever they are able at a case at law. Rev. Daniel S. Toy, a Baptist clergyman of Williamsbridge, New York, recently refused to give evidence in an important suit on the ground that what he knew of the controversy had come to him in the form of a confession, and was protected by Matt. xviii, 15, etc., which had been adopted by the Baptist church as a rule of discipline. Judge Dykman upheld the minister in his refusal to testify, basing his decision on Sec. 833 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which says: "A clergyman or other minister of any religion shall not be allowed to disclose a confession made to him in his professional character in the course of discipline enjoined by the rules or practice of the religious body to which he belongs."

A precious fine statute is this. And a precious class it is that has procured it and exercises the exemption granted by it.

The Catholic Review informs us on the origin of the statute. It says:

"That law was the fruit of the Rev. Father Kuhlman's refusal to betray the confidence of a man who had confessed his sins to him. He was sent to prison, but he would not have let one word escape him if he had been sentenced to the gallows or the stake. All honor to the Rev. Mr. Toy for defending the sanctity of communications received by him in his clerical capacity."

No, not all honor, but all shame, to the Rev. Mr. Toy, and the whole of the Protestants and Catholics together. Equality for all, special privilege to none—how far from this great principle of our people are the clergy in their every course.

Catholics Telling the People to Remain Ignorant.

As education is growing so popular now, Catholics generally profess to favor it. But before it had become so popular they uniformly discouraged it. They maintained a very few schools and colleges to educate their higher clergy, but repressed education of the people at large. If they held some scattered schools for the masses at large, it was only to teach them ghost stories and miracle legends, with perhaps a dash of an absurd kind of logic known as the "scholastic" which has not now been heard of for three hundred years, and a bit of the sterile dead language of Latin. The knowledge such as our children now learn in schools was not allowed to show its face.

People nowadays should not be deceived by the assertions of Catholics that they never repressed education. A good reading of history will make plain the facts.

Indeed, this truth may be discerned by the reader of the Catholic literature of to-day. For the new policy of friendliness to education has not been skilfully impressed in every quarter. Here and there a Catholic writer still blunders forth the actual sentiments of his church, unaware or disregarding that they should now be cloaked. Here is one such utterance:

"The ordinary man, favored with only sufficient education to assist him in comprehending the actualities of life's struggles, is the most enviable of creatures, if possessed of faith in Christ he leaves these various philosophies to the consideration of scholars fitted by education to analyze them without being carried off their base by distinctions and peculiarities."

This is from the Catholic Freeman's Journal.

The Roman Catholic church is the most deadly foe that education has ever coped with. She is the ancient and at heart unchanging enemy of blessed knowledge, which alone lights our path and brings us every happiness that we enjoy.

J. E. Remsburg has a well-preserved volume of Paine's "Common Sense," bearing the imprint "London, 1776." The original edition of this work was published in Philadelphia in January, 1776.

G. W. Foote, president of the National Secular Society of England and editor of the Freethinker, and Charles Watts, who needs no introduction to the Liberals of this country, will represent the National Secular Society of England at the International Congress of Freethinkers, to be held at Chicago this fall by the Freethought Federation, the American Secular Union, and the Canadian Secular Union. Messrs. Foote and Watts design to arrive in New York about September 1st. They are open to a few lecture engagements, and only a few. Application should be made at once, therefore, to Charles Watts, Baskerville Hall, The Crescent, Cambridge street, Birmingham, England. All Liberals know Mr. Watts. His colleague, Mr. Foote, we are assured, is an entertaining as well as satisfying public speaker. It is his first visit to this country, and he should receive a fraternal greeting that will make his hand ache. Let us give him the heartiest of welcomes.

World's Fair Notes.

THE ART PALACE.—CONCLUDED.

Still further pictures are these: "The Empty Saddle," a mounted warrior at a spacious castle leading a horse with empty saddle, while on the balcony a woman sinks fainting into the arms of her attendants—it is her lover's horse with the empty saddle; "Sea Urchins," naked boys with boats playing on the shore; "Scouts in Flight," two horses with riders leaping madly along; "Before the Days of Rapid Transit," a canal-boat company taking it easy—it's no use to be in a hurry; "In the Omnibus"—those who have been there will know it. "The Defenestration of Prague" is a splendidly exciting picture. It is by V. Brosik, a Bohemian artist of ardent patriotism. It represents a scene early in the seventeenth century, when three unpopular councillors of the emperor were hurled from the windows by the Bohemian representatives. The expressions of rage and helpless terror on the various faces are exceedingly well depicted. This act of violence was the beginning of the Thirty Years' war. "The Eternal Siren" is the sea in its most smiling, enticing, and musical mood. "The Vision" is a beautiful being floating sportively on the crests of the wave in a foggy night, spreading her ruddy hair with her fingers till its lights mingle with the rays of a lantern carried by bewildered boatmen. Makart, the Austrian artist, displays a series of large panels of nude figures typifying the "Five Senses," sumptuous in color. "Never to Return" is the despairing title of a desolate picture representing an Arctic expedition. The picture of "The Artist's Family" is charming. It is framed in an arched door. Two flaxen-haired, blue-clad boys are in the foreground, a dog at their feet. Back of them is the baby's carriage, its tiny occupant's fat, striped legs and cherished doll in bright display. The mother, with blue-spotted dress and red shawl, trundles this chariot of infancy. Behind is a little girl with papa's sketching materials, and the picture flows with a background of house and simple, pretty landscape. A large picture which cannot fail to excite interest is Krohg's "Lief Eriksson Discovers America." The navigator appears at the helm, one hand on the tiller and the other pointing to the land, which appears on the horizon, while his men are rushing up from the body of the vessel. The distant view of the land is admirable. The bronzes from Naples, reproductions of antique originals from the buried cities, are especially noteworthy, so exactly has the artist performed his work. The blemishes which appear in the originals' colors, resulting from the action of fire and corrosion, are faithfully copied. Narcissus is shown wearing sandals and roeskin, his right hand raised and head gently inclined. The winged Victory, poised on a globe, is a statuette of rare grace. There are the dancing fauns, Cupids clasping dolphins, figures of Pan, etc. None of these are over two feet high. They are of a beautiful gray-green color, with a touch of blue and red—the effect of heat and long repose in an envelope of ashes. There is a fragment of "Psyche," attributed to Praxiteles. There are also in this collection articles for domestic and sacerdotal use, such as lamps, door ornaments, vases, libation cups, tripods, a gladiator's helmet and greaves, the helmet ornamented with bas-reliefs, representing the last night in Troy. In this superb collection are about two hundred works of surpassing historic and artistic value.

The American "Retrospective Exhibit" includes the best examples of portraiture and sculpture of early American artists, all prior to 1776. The earliest date is 1731, a picture of the family of Bishop Berkeley, who wrote "Westward the Course of Empire Takes Its Way."

I have given mere glimpses of the wonderful treasures in the Art Palace—some of the swift yet lasting thoughts induced by these many forms and colors. Yet I have not given a tithe of what lingers in my memory. Space forbids. It would take volumes to express the depth, the grandeur, the ravishing beauty of these productions of human genius. I was almost of a mind to write nothing, words are so inadequate, but I must endeavor to give a hint of this luminous world, where the sweetest lessons of love, humanity, nobility, and grace are taught. It will be seen from my spare descriptions how largely the element of common life enters into these glories of art, and thus the lowliest human scenes are a treasure of delight. At the touch of genius the cottage becomes as magnificent as the palace.

I must now in a few words describe the Art Palace itself. It is a beautiful structure, the most faultless of any in the White City. Its architecture is universally commended. It is Ionic, the order being taken from the Erechtheum of the Acropolis at Athens. The galleries and courts for the exhibitions of paintings and sculptures are of varying proportions, lighted from above; and the structure is fireproof. The three great sections, the Central, East, and West pavilions, aggregate in extreme length 1,132 feet, and in depth 504 feet. The main walls are of brick covered with "staff," a composition of plaster-of-Paris and other ingredients, which has, when finished, the appearance of stone. The roof is of iron, steel, and glass, and all the columns, staircases, etc., are of iron. There are eighty galleries ranging from 30 feet square to 36 by 120 feet for the exhibition of paintings, besides 108 alcoves fronting upon the courts of the central pavilion, 28 on the first floor and 80 on the second. There are four large courts and a rotunda in the Central pavilion, and a rotunda in each of the other pavilions for the exhibition of sculptural and architectural works. The total wall space of the Art Gallery is 200,000 square feet. The countries represented are France, Germany, Great Britain, Austria, Spain, Italy, Belgium, Holland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Russia, Canada, Mexico, and Japan.

There is undoubtedly at this Exposition a better general representation of the World's Art than in any exposition of the past. In the French exhibitions German art has been very slightly represented, and the German expositions have contained but little of French art. Russian art is seldom seen outside of Russia, and Scandinavian genius has not received adequate attention.

The selection of exhibits has been made by a committee of artists. Great care has been exercised. The standard of excellence is much higher than is usual in international exhibitions. I must call attention especially to the Japanese exhibit. Never before has Japan been represented in the art department of an international exposition; and never before has that country been given such an opportunity as now. The authorities of the Art Department did not bind Japanese exhibitors to the rigid classifications established for other nations, but permitted the exhibit to be thoroughly national and universal in character, and the result is a most remarkable display.

The cost of the Art Palace was $670,000. It covers a space of over five acres. Its dome is 125 feet in height, surmounted by a colossal winged figure of Victory. It is located on the south side of the North pond, separated from the water by a beautiful terrace, ornamented with balustrades. The north front faces a wide, open lawn and the cluster of state buildings.

THE FISHERIES BUILDING.

On leaving the Art Palace we pursue our journey to the Fisheries Building. There is more variety in the architecture of this building than any other. It is in three parts: a main building, and two polygonal buildings, connected with the main structure by two curved arcades. The main building has two great entrances, set in pavilions projecting beyond the line of the main building and flanked with round towers. The general design of the structure is Roman, with the details of ornamentation worked out in realistic manner after various fish and marine forms.

Everything that human ingenuity has gathered from the depths of the ocean, lake, or river is exhibited here. The aquarium takes us with McGinty to the very bottom of the sea, and we look upon the beauty and strangeness of that underworld. We seem to be walking amidst deep sea grottoes and realizing the romance of Jules Verne's wonderful fancy. We watch the coral animal, builder of islands and of continents. We might make a bouquet of the sea anemones that blossom miles below the surface of the ocean. We are surrounded with monster devil-fish sharks, and other terrors, but they cannot touch us. We voyage safely by. We also see the beauties of the stream and lake, the catfish, the perch, the sucker, the trout, and all that the truant boy loves to angle for. Gorgeous goldfish, gilden ides, golden tench, disport where crystal streams flow from masses of rock covered with moss and lichens.

The paraphernalia of the Fish Commission, the inventions by which the finny tribe is cultivated, the wonderful progress in fish farming, the implements of commercial fishing, and the latest tackle for angling are displayed in their fullest extent.

The exhibit of the Smithsonian Institute consists of models in papier mache representing the fur seal and the walrus fisheries on the Alaskan coast. The "drive," the "rookery," etc., are illustrated. The killing of seals is also depicted; a group of Aleuts being represented in the act of smashing the seals' heads with clubs. The walrus, now becoming extinct, is reproduced in material that gives it a remarkably life-like appearance.

In the main hall Norway has a comprehensive exhibit of her fisheries, including boats, nets, fishing scenes, and prepared products. Canada has a fine display. The state of Washington sends the skeleton of a whale sixty feet long. Japan makes quite a showing with models, among which is that of a Japanese fisher-boat and crew, engaged in catching fish. A Rhode Island genius has what may be called a transverse section of the fishing grounds at Nantucket island. It shows the fishing-boats on the surface of the water, and underneath the manner in which traps and lines are baited, and how the denizens of the deep disport themselves at home.

On the lagoon is a life-saving station regularly equipped for service. There is a light-house, and a little beyond is the battle-ship Illinois. This is a model, life-size, of the latest addition to naval architecture. It is manned by a crew of Jack tars, and is supplied with a full battery of guns of the size and caliber of an actual ship. Four of its guns are of the breech-loading, one-hundred-and-ten-ton style, warranted to plunk a bull's-eye at fifteen miles. Naval officers command it, and life on board illustrates the doings of sailors on the White Squadron.

UNCLE SAM'S EXHIBIT.

From the battle-ship we stroll to the Government Building, where Uncle Sam has on parade something from all the governmental departments. California has distinguished herself by supplying a section of redwood fifty feet high and thirty feet in diameter. This is fitted with a circular flight of stairs, and you can climb to the top. The exhibit of the War Department is quite brilliant, and makes the heart of the soldier beat with many memories of the old camp-ground. By means of wax figures, the costumes of officers and privates are shown, and in picturesque groups the habits of soldier life are revealed. There is a complete display of small arms and ordnance. One cannon weighs fifty-two tons. God will always be on the side of a weapon like that. Prayer would avail but little against its tremendous missiles. Papier mache horses are hooked up to the gun carriages, and the gunners appear in their proper places. There is an Arctic scene connected with the Greeley expedition, and the Eskimos are shown with dogsleds, snow-houses, etc. The Smithsonian Institute has a wonderful exhibition of taxidermy, and the post-office department shows every stamp ever issued and all the means of mail transportation and service. Coins and bank-notes of every variety are displayed. The Fish Commission has an immense exhibit with hatcheries, fish, molds, aquatic scenes, etc.

There are valuable historical relics—the original manuscript of the Declaration of Independence, etc.

The illustrations of prehistoric races include a complete exposition of their stone, bronze, and iron implements, tracing also their evolution, decay, and extinction.

The North American Indian chiefs appear, modeled from life and dressed in native costume. They are surrounded by members of their families and by collections of their household utensils, clothing, basketry, implements of war and the chase, as well as evidences of their pastimes and religious ceremonies.

There is a most complete collection of grains. Samples of wheat grown in every county in the United States are here. Every seed was picked by hand, and the varieties are arranged in tasteful glass compartments, with labels indicating the name, place, weight, and nature of soil and climate.

The National Museum gives special attention to fauna, showing specimens rapidly becoming extinct, such as the buffalo, moose, mountain sheep and goat deer, walrus, seal, and sea-lion. The bird exhibition includes finely mounted specimens of every species. The exhibit of reptiles includes casts of all the poisonous and non-poisonous snakes, painted in natural colors and mounted in life attitudes. A collection of fossil animals is also to be seen.

In the zoological exhibit are collections showing the service rendered to man by the various animals, and the products of animals used by man as food or in the arts and industries, with the methods employed in their preparation, as in the case of fur, hair, feathers, scales, skins, flesh, bone, teeth, horns, hoofs, and claws.

Models of Hell Gate, showing the rock and illustrating the past and present topographical features of that portion of New York harbor, are here.

The Smithsonian Institute contributes a collection illustrating its own origin and growth, and the scope of its work during the forty-seven years of its existence, and in addition portraits of representative scientific men.

Transportation is illustrated by means of models,

(Continued on page 376.)

Communications.

Tortures and Savagery of Christianity.

It was not until recently that I became aware that superstitious rites were being practiced in the United States which can scarcely find a parallel among the barbaric tribes of Africa.

Others may be cognizant of the facts, but they were so new and startling to me that I have been constrained to write them up for the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Even if there are some who know that these terrible rites are being practiced, they must be new to many, and will afford a theme for profitable reflection. However, I am inclined to think that comparatively few know that here—not in the far-off islands of the Pacific, but here in the land of Franklin and Jefferson, where we are almost daily surprised by some scientific achievement—cruel and inhuman ceremonies are practiced which none would expect to find only among people sunk to the lowest depths of barbarism. Yet this occurs every year during holy week, and at many different places, among American citizens who vote with us at the ballot-box, and have a voice in all the concerns of the nation.

In southern Colorado, and all over New Mexico, is an order whose members, both men and women, represent Christ's journey to crucifixion by bearing heavy, rough wooden crosses on bare shoulders of sufficient weight to leave marks of abrasion in the flesh.

These crosses are borne with bare feet over flinty routes where cacti pierce their bleeding feet, to an improvised Calvary where they are bound, and often nailed, to the cross, and sometimes suffer death. The village of Taos, in northern New Mexico, is one of the strongholds of the Penitents, where they do their baking in mud ovens, and heat their low mud houses from mud fireplaces—showing what I have always contended, that the Christian religion, unaffected by outside influence, will forever hold men to a standstill. In this neighborhood are about one hundred of these fanatics, known as "The Penitent Brothers." They are Catholics, and the "Brotherhood House" is a one-story adobe with a huge cross at one end, and bare walls inside, except a few crosses, and scourges, and pictures of saints. The "Penitents" scourge themselves, or each other, and often on their naked backs, cut full of gashes with sharp flints.

Their religious ceremonies are mostly conducted in secret, and the man who would attempt to make them public by photography would scarcely be allowed to get away with his life. It is humiliating to think that such human hyenas are directing the affairs of our government. And I wish to impress this lesson especially upon the minds of the young, that Christianity is, and always has been, inimical to a free government.

Every one of these penitents shows fearful scars on his back, which may be regarded as "the trademark" of the order. These are made by an officer called "El picador," with a piece of sharp flint, at the initiatory ceremony. The novice says to the "gasher," "For the love of God give me three, or the five wounds of Christ, or the seven last words of Jesus, or the Ten Commandments, or the forty days in the wilderness, which means three, or five, seven, ten, or forty gashes on the bare back, deep enough to make the blood flow. These wounds are cut open with a sharp flint each year in order to render the scourging more painful. This is called "letting out the blood of Christ."

The scourge is a bundle of twigs three feet long, but sometimes the cactus is used, and its thorns penetrate the flesh, and they frequently march in procession with these cacti tightly bound to their naked bodies. It is reported that two thousand lashes have been laid upon a naked, bleeding back in a single day. It is not to be supposed that these lashes were laid on heavy enough to bruise, but with sufficient force to irritate the lacerated flesh and cause excruciating pain. In these ceremonies the Penitents have a black cloth thrown over the head and tied about the neck to conceal their identity.

In Holy Week all the horrors of this savage order are put into practice.

On a hillock some distance from the brotherhood house to represent Calvary is planted a cross. Day after day processions march from the house to the cross afflicting themselves in the most cruel manner for the love of God. Like other Christians, they imagine a great, powerful being with vindictive and savage propensities, and then they imagine what will please him and conduct themselves accordingly. And I imagine that the whole thing is but a reflection of the savagery in the Christian mind. And this must ever be so as long as the human mind is swayed by any system of supernaturalism.

A common scene is the march of the flagellants, led by the "pietro" blowing a bungle of a flute or fife. Another bears a crucifix. All are nearly naked, their bare feet cut with sharp stones and cruel cacti, while the scourges are applied to their already lacerated backs, causing the blood to trickle upon the ground at every step.

The march is to a cross, where the Penitents go through a secret mummary, as silly as that practiced by other Christians—lash themselves a given number of times, and then return to the brotherhood house. The cross-bearers are conspicuous figures in these marches. The company is led by the fifer and crucifix-bearers, and somewhere in the ghastly throng is a man with an open book reading prayers. One man bears a ponderous cross with his arms lashed to the cross-piece. Another is bending under a cross so long and heavy that the main beam drags on the ground and leaves a furrow along the trail. Still another is seen with the cross-bar resting upon his shoulder, his arms bound to the cross-bar at the wrists, each hand holding a sword by the hilt, while the points rest upon the hips. These crosses are rough and heavy, and often tear the skin from the naked shoulder.

In these marches one often kneels while another lashes his bleeding back. One makes the journey on his knees over the sharp stones and through the cacti. Another has them bound on his back with spines long and sharp enough to pierce leather. Pieces of cactus are thrown at these fools for Jesus's sake, and the spines pierce the flesh so as to hold the branches fast.

A woman carried in her arms a larger image of her crucified Christ, and waddled on her knees the distance of a mile covered with stubble, stone, and cacti. Her skirts were torn to shreds, and from her knees downward her limbs were covered with sickening wounds.

The climax is reached on Holy Friday, when the day is celebrated with a genuine crucifixion. The scene opens with a march from the brotherhood house to the hill representing Calvary. The chief brother goes into the house and comes out with his victim. He is entirely naked except a pair of cotton drawers, and a black bag drawn over his head. In some instances the subject is a volunteer, in others selected by lot. A huge cross lies upon the ground and a hole is dug to receive it. The subject walks resolutely up to the cross and lies down upon it, his arms stretched out upon the cross-beam. Then the "Brothers of Light" take a rope and lash his arms and legs to the cross. A strong man will draw those ropes so tightly that the strands are buried in the flesh.

If the love of God has been sufficiently shed abroad in his soul, if he is determined to do a clean job, one that will make his Jesus fairly snicker with delight and put the Virgin Mary in the spooniest kind of a mood, he will resolutely object to being tied to the cross, and will cry out: "For the love of God don't dishonor me; don't tie me, but nail me; for the love of God nail me to the cross." Scars can be seen upon the hands and feet of many who have been crucified by being nailed to the cross.

Ropes are tied to the top of the cross to serve as guys, then the "Brothers of Light" raise the great beam to a perpendicular. Its central post drops into the hole, and sends something like a death shock along the quivering nerves of the subject. The weight of the man causes the ropes to sink into the flesh, or if he is nailed the holes are drawn into ghastly slots. The man's arms and legs soon begin to turn to a bluish purple, then black, and swell into revolting bunches. The blood ceases to circulate, and after a time, which must seem like an age to the poor deluded wretch, and after God is sufficiently satisfied with the suffering, the chief brother gives the signal, and the cross is laid upon the ground.

The ropes are quickly untied, or if he was nailed the spikes withdrawn, and the helpless and almost lifeless man is picked up by two assistants, who place their shoulders under his arms, and the march back to the brotherhood house begins. At first the body gives no signs of life or consciousness, but after the blood begins to force itself through the torpid veins, the legs begin to show signs of a feeble movement. At the brotherhood house one of God's great fools is nursed back to life and strength. But not always, for sometimes the man is taken down from the cross and the world knows him no more. His clothes are sent to his wife, and in some lonely canyon a grave and a pile of stones supporting a rude cross is all there is to tell the tale. Such are the effects of superstition on the human mind. Of course, men must be influenced more or less by their environments, but the tendency of every system of supernaturalism is to force men from the path of reason. It is claimed that all the polished and highly civilized nations are indebted to Christianity for their elevation and advancement. As well claim that the progress of a steam-tug is owing to the raft which it drags behind it. Cut loose the raft and then you may form a just judgment of the speed of the boat. However high a nation may stand, it would have reached still grander heights if it had been cut loose from the dead weight of superstition. And these ignorant, self-torturing fanatics, whose cruel and bloody rites I have described, are ample proof of the truth of the assertion.

What but the Christian superstition has held these people back and kept them surrounded with the atmosphere of the Dark Ages? And what better to-day are the Christians in the most enlightened churches? True, they do not inflict self-torture, but they often show a disposition to torture others, as Bennett and Reynolds and Harman can testify. Witness the man who goes down on his knees to address a "throne of grace." Where is that throne? Who knows anything about it? To whom does he talk? Does he not address his words to open space? And yet men are paid for going through this silly mummary in the army, in the navy, and in our legislative halls—a ceremony as senseless as it would be to repeat one of Shakespeare's plays to a Digger Indian. Was a prayer ever answered? And yet they keep right on talking as if their imaginary God was holding his ear close to the keyhole. Think of it—men eating bread and swearing by the man in the moon that it is the body of a man who died two thousand years ago; drinking the juice of grapes and swearing by the toe-nails of all the saints that it is the blood of a man who was as old as his father, and not quite sure whether he begot his father or his father begot him; born of a virgin who was embraced by a ghost, and if "like begets like" could have been nothing but a ghost. And yet the Christian superstition has so obscured the light of reason that Christians believe that men are not to be trusted who do not believe in such ridiculous and absurd notions. Hence in half the states in the Union a man is not allowed to testify in court unless he believes that a child can be begotten by a ghost. And then there is a particular day known as the "Venerable Day of the Sun," on which Christians spread themselves before the Lord, and they try to compel everybody to stand and stare like a stuck pig while they do the spreading. They build costly temples to the Lord, and then compel those who have no interest in them to pay the taxes. When you wish to send anything through the mails you are expected to go to a Christian and get his consent before sending it. Where is the freedom when one-half of the people are compelled to do as the other half dictate? The more creed the more cruelty, the more Christianity the less charity, the more religion the less liberality. To say that such a system has a tendency to elevate the race is to say that the human race can be advanced by ignorance, superstition, and oppression.

JOHN PECK.

Naples, N. Y.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Free-thinkers.

A new Freethought society has been formed at Geuthin, Germany.

A new Freethought society has been formed in Delhi, British India.

A new Freethought society has been formed in Calanas, Spain. Don Francisco C. Tenorio is its president.

The French government has voted a pension of $2,000 a year to the widow of the late Ernest Renan.

Colonel Ingersoll's "Mistakes of Moses" has been translated into German by Wolfgang Schaumburg and is published in Leipzig.

An unusually large number of secular funerals are reported in the last copy of Bulletin Mensuel, the organ of the French Freethought Federation.

De Dageraad, our Dutch contemporary, is, as usual, up to the times. In its last two issues Colonel Ingersoll's lecture on "Voltaire" appears, excellently translated.

Our friends in Holland are unusually active. Lectures are delivered regularly now both in Amsterdam and in Rotterdam. Among the Dutch lecturers we must mention Messrs. G. v. Kuijkhof,

B. Goudswaard, G. Ten Bokkel, F. v. d. Goes, A. H. Gerhardt, and My. W. Drucker.

A well-known Swedish Freethinker, Mr. Karl Sachs, is dead. Mr. Sachs was one of the founders of the Freethought Federation of Sweden.

The Catholic church in Spain has begun an organized persecution of El Pais, a new Spanish Freethought journal. Blasphemy is the offense.

The well-known German poet and Freethinker, Dr. F. Krasser, returned to mother earth for eternal rest Feb. 16, 1893. Among his best-known works we must mention "Antisyllabus" and "Ceterum Censeo."

The Belgian Freethinkers held their annual congress at Liege on May 21st and 22d. Judging from the number of new adherents and of older societies which have signified their intention to participate, the congress must have been a splendid success.

Viktor E. Lennstrand will make a lecture tour of the United States this summer. Those of our friends who wish to secure his services had better write to Mr. Axel Lundberg, Hotel Brunswick, Minneapolis, Minn., who is Mr. Lennstrand's business manager.

The city council of Ulm, Württemberg, has prohibited the future appearance of the dramatized version of Werner's novel, "At the Altar." The drama was played seven times at the Ulm Theater when at last the Catholics objected. It did hurt their feelings. How touchy some folks are!

The first cremation has taken place in the crematory at Copenhagen, Denmark. The crematory has existed for several years, but the clergy's influence with the king had heretofore prevented the cremation bill from becoming a law. This is the old story of the opposition of the church to all reform.

The well-known German Freethinker, Dr. C. Rüger, leader of the Freethought movement in the Rhine provinces, has been sentenced to four months' imprisonment for "blasphemy." March 6th the doctor entered the prison to serve out his sentence, which was pronounced by the idiotic court of Elberfeld.

Poking fun in public at Mr. Jehovah is, according to paragraph 171 of the Austrian criminal law, to be punished with imprisonment not to exceed three years. This is a decided improvement upon the old-fashioned way, and even this punishment was only obtained after a heated debate in the Austrian House of Commons.

The Trinidad branch of the National Secular Society of England has elected its officers for the ensuing year. Mr. Edgar Maresse-Smith is president, Mr. P. Fort vice-president. The post of treasurer is filled by Mr. Charles A. Meltz, while our friend Mr. Emanuel dos Santos, of Port-of-Spain, is the society's secretary.

In Sweden Freethought is rapidly gaining ground. But there our friend Mr. Lennstrand is awake to the questions of the hour. Recently the Swedish Freethinkers headed a movement for the abolition of the death penalty, and secured over eight thousand signatures. The bigoted king, however, refused to listen. He is one of those antiquated "eye for an eye and tooth for a tooth" men.

According to Hoffmann's "Catholic Directory," there are in the United States 8,806,000 Catholics. Catholic schools are attended by 738,000 children; Catholic orphan asylums contain 26,500 children. There are 9,400 priests, 127 colleges, 656 academies, 3,567 schools, 465 benevolent institutions, 8,500 churches. Too bad, these statistics do not give the number of Catholics found in jails, state prisons, and workhouses.

At a late educational congress held at Petersburg Mr. A. C. Stramoljubskij read a paper in which he proved from statistics "that if Russia founded every year 3,250 schools, it would take 260 years till the whole population could read and write." The educational budget of Russia amounts to 7,000,000 roubles ($5,600,000) yearly, and the population is over 100,000,000 people. It is hardly necessary to state that Russia is a most Christian country.

There has been trouble at Leipzig regarding the erection of a crematory. The city fathers were in a quandary. The bigots threatened all kinds of evils if they gave their sanction to the project, while sensible people intimated that none but fools could fail to recognize the superiority of cremation to burial. To keep the good will of both parties the city fathers said that they had not the time to decide upon the question, and now have as a consequence gained the enmity of the orthodox and the contempt of the Rationalists.

Our friends at Charleroi, Belgium, are up to the times. They intend to start a "hall of science," a popular university where the poor but ambitious youth of both sexes can obtain a classic and scientific education. The fees are but nominal, and the college is to be supported in the main by subscriptions from Freethinkers. The building will contain a large library, lecture halls, and a large hall where concerts and theatricals can be held. Quite a large sum has already been guaranteed, and yet the invitations to subscriptions are out but two weeks.

The cry for universal peace is spreading, and some Christian churches have begun to take it up, seeing no doubt that the church can make capital out of this movement as she has done in the past out of the temperance agitation. To such of our readers as might be confronted with the statement that the peace movement is of Christian origin we wish to state that this is not so. Several ancient sages speak against war, but plainer than any other is the Chinese Micius, a younger contemporary of Confucius. For extract of his speech see Die Waffen Nieder! April, 1893, and Zeitschrift für Missionskunde und Religionswissenschaft, viii, part 1, 1893, p. 17.

The True Life of Job.

Compiled from Baring-Gould's "Legends of the Patriarchs and Prophets."

Job was the grandson of Esau, and his wife Rahma was a granddaughter of Joseph.

Job was more patient than any other prophet. Job, Jethro, and Balaam were Pharaoh's three councillors and chief magicians, and by their enchantments they drew a line around the land of Egypt so that no slave could escape out of it, for when he came to the line he was held back and could not overleap it; but finally the Israelites broke over the line, and the three prophets gave up witchcraft and turned to the service of the living God.

Job had five hundred yoke of oxen, a thousand flocks of sheep and a thousand sheep in each flock. He had ten grown-up children, seven sons and three daughters.

Job believed the idols his people adored were no gods, and that there was but one true God. There was an idol near his house that was much worshipped, and he prayed to the Lord to show him if it was a demon or not, and learning it was he destroyed it, and thus angered Satan. Job had been warned of this, and said he was ready to suffer for the truth.

Satan came to Job's house in the form of a pilgrim, but Job had the gift of prophecy and knew it was the evil one, and said to the servant: "Tell him I am occupied and cannot see him."

Satan left, and soon returned disguised as a beggar, and said to the portress: "Go and ask Job to give me a morsel of bread."

"Tell him," said Job, "that I will not give him of the bread I eat, because I will not have anything in common with him, but offer him this burnt crust, that he may not say I sent him away empty."

Satan took the crust and bade the servant tell Job that he would soon render to him such measure as he had dealt to him.

So Satan ascended to God and received permission to afflict and punish Job. He descended to earth and breathed such a hot blast that all the cattle, sheep, and servants of Job were burnt up. Then Satan took the form of a slave and ran and told Job, who answered: "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord!" Then Satan shook the earth under the house where the sons and daughters of Job were assembled, and the house fell and killed them all, and Satan (as a slave) informed Job, saying, "Had you seen their bleeding faces and their broken limbs, and their brains bespattering the stones, and heard their piercing cries, you would have been heart-broken."

Job wept and lifted his eyes to God, and said to Satan: "It is thou who comest to tempt and cast doubt into my heart. Get thee hence."

Then Satan blew a hot breath up the nose of Job and poisoned all his blood. His body became scarlet the next day, and the next he was covered with ulcers all except the head, tongue, eye, and heart; these Satan had no power over.

Job's friends all fled save his wife Rahma. She spent all they owned in trying to have him cured, and then went begging alms for his support.

Satan saw he could not triumph as long as Job's wife was with him, as he cared for her above all else, so he resolved to separate them. He took the form of an old man, and told her she would be poisoned by living with such a diseased old man. But she said he was her husband, and she should stay and help him and care for him. She informed Job and Job told her it was Satan, and she must not speak to him again.

Then the evil one came to her again as a beautiful youth, and said, "What woman art thou, who art so radiant in beauty?" She said, "I am the wife of a poor man named Job." He said, "O woman! what hast thou, with thy wondrous beauty, to do with a poor sick husband? Go and be divorced and marry me. I have great possessions and will treat thee as a queen." She said, "I am the wife of a prophet and desire nothing higher."

Then Satan despaired of seducing her. Rahma told Job and Job again warned her not to speak to Satan.

Then Satan came as an angel and told her God was angry with Job because Job did not render thanks for the good things he gave him, and so he had rejected him from being a prophet, and he should be cast in hell; that the angels cursed him, and she also must do so. Then Rahma wept to think that after all the afflictions Job should no longer be a prophet; and she went and told him, and Job was angry at her and said he had warned her twice not to speak to Satan, and as soon as he got well he would give her one hundred strokes with a rod. Another version says Satan appeared as a baker, and Rahma wanted bread, but had no money, and the baker offered the bread for some of her hair, and she gave him three locks, and when she told Job he swore he would beat her as soon as he was well. Thus Satan triumphed by making Job swear and ill treat a good, true woman.

If Job was a true prophet he knew Rahma was really innocent, pure, and good. But women are really only slaves to man's whims and man-made laws.

Job was sick seven years, and all this time his wife ministered to him. Then God had compassion and said to him, "Strike the earth with thy foot." Job did so, and from the dung-heap on which he sat a clear stream of water issued, the sweetest that there is, and it continued to flow, and God said, "Wash in this water." So Rahma poured it on him, and he washed and all the sores were healed, and not a scar remained, and he was more beautiful than before he was afflicted. Then God said, "Drink of the water." He did so, and all the worms inside of him died, and he was well.

This was in Bashan, and the fountain remains to this day and still heals the afflicted who bathe in it.

Then Job was told to fulfill his vow and beat his wife with a bundle of rods, but to take light rods. So he took one hundred and bound them together and smote Rahma, but did not hurt her. By this action of Job the Mussulman doctors support their advice to those who have taken rash oaths to clear themselves by a subterfuge. Thus if a man has sworn he will not enter his house again he is told to allow himself to be bound hand and foot and carried into his home. If he has sworn to recite the whole Koran it will be sufficient to say the word "Koran." Then God restored to Job double all that he had lost and he lived twenty years more and died at the age of ninety-three. The worms that had devoured his body turned into silk-worms; the flies which had tormented him were converted into honey-bees—before this there were neither silk-worms nor honey-bees on the earth. Also the rain and snow which fell within his possessions were grains of gold and pearl, and he became the father of seven sons and three daughters after he got well.

Who will say this is not a more interesting narrative than the one in the old Jew book of legends, and no doubt just as correct and true?

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

How to Help The Truth Seeker.

1. When renewing get a friend to subscribe and thus save a half dollar apiece.
2. Get your newsdealer to display it on his stand or in his shop window. Be sure that he displays the pictures.
3. Get your newsdealer to keep in stock one or more copies, with your guarantee to take off his hands at the end of the week any that remain unsold. If he exhibits them the pictures alone will sell them.
4. Take a few extra copies and circulate them among your acquaintances. On your request, we will send you back-number sample copies free.
5. Leave a copy occasionally where it will be picked up—in the train, in the factory, in the meeting-room, in the cigar store, in the barber-shop. Leave it picture-side up.
6. Keep in your pocket some of our cheap tracts and when convenient hand one to a friend.
7. Get a new subscriber by persuading some friend to take it.

(Continued from page 373.)

drawings, and pictures, from the most primitive animal locomotion to the uses of steam and electricity.

The history of language and religion, of music and musical instruments, of printing and book-making, of photography and the graphic arts, is clearly told.

I suppose the average American will find more to enjoy in the Government Building than in any other part of the Exposition. There is a brightness and variety and genuine American dash about it, and home feeling that is quite entertaining to the loyal lover of his country. The Star Spangled Banner and pennons of red, white, and blue float profusely over the hall. The number and variety of the exhibits so intimately concerned with the life of the United States, its history, its vastness, its strength, its majesty—everything—so appeal to the common mind, are so practical and yet so romantic and wonderful, that it is no surprise to see in this building day after day the largest and most animated crowds of people. The building is attractively located, Lake Michigan on one side and the main lagoon on the other. It is constructed of iron and glass, at a cost of $400,000. In architecture, with its huge dome, it bears a strong resemblance to the National Museum at Washington. Its decorations are exceptionally fine. The panels are emblematic of abundance, with an allegorical display of the various industries of the country, such as ceramics, tapestries, wood-carving, stone-cutting, metal work, lumber and mining, cotton and shipping, manufactures and agriculture. Facing the north entrance is a large painting representing the triumph of liberty. The central figure is Columbia, about to be crowned with laurel leaf, one hand resting upon an eagle. To her left in the distance her achievements are portrayed by a harbor, with vessels, cranes, and elevators. Beside these is a railway with train of cars approaching a depot. Facing the south entrance is a representation of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Over the east and west entrances are paintings typifying 1492 and 1892.

As you pass out of the Government Building to Manufacturers' Building you can take a glance at the Marine Hospital and, if more curious, can step in and see how Uncle Sam takes care of his ailing Jack tars.

We now might wind up the day's wanderings with a stroll over Wooded island. This is a relief from the continuous exhibition of art and industry, for here is nature in her gentle loveliness. Here are acres of bright flowers, groves of trees, clumps of shrubbery, and winding walks. The Japanese village is located here and headquarters of the commissioners of Japan. At the southern end is the Davy Crockett cabin. There are artistic little summer-houses where one can sit and enjoy the pleasing sight and perfumes. Some of these have thatched roofs and are covered with growing vines.

One chief attraction will be the big, jolly-faced sunflowers. There will be a profusion of these magnificent blooms. It is proposed to make this the national flower. It grows in every state, is a native, and needs no skill in raising. There is not a farmyard from Maine to Texas but what is adorned with them. They will occupy the highest spot on the island and make a show that will rival in magnificence the Administration dome itself.

The great bed of roses will ere long display the most bewildering mass of color that eye ever looked upon. There are sixty thousand separate bushes in a patch of an acre and a quarter. These have been forwarded from every quarter of the globe, and experts claim that the collection is absolutely complete. There are six hundred and eighty varieties of pansies represented by one hundred and fifty thousand plants. Holland and Belgium have many hundred budding rhododendrons. Austria has a display of lilies. England adjoins with costly holly trees and churchyard yews. Near by are sixty sorts of sweet peas. Japanese creeping roses make a carpet of delicate color. One section of the island is devoted to our grandfathers', or rather our grandmothers', flowers—the larkspurs, the columbines, and Canterbury bells. Nature also disports some delightful freaks—lilacs with yellow leaves, willows with boughs of purple shade, etc. Along the edge of the island are water plants. The stately swan floats by, the duck and the gull are on the fight for sunny spots. Thousands of birds sing in the wilderness of bushes.

As summer advances the Wooded island will be a favorite resort. It is nearly in the center of the grounds and commands a fine view of the main buildings. The shadows and the sunshine, the bright green grass, the lagoon flowing on either side, the ornamented bridges, the gay boats skimming along, the infinite variety of blossom, the music of birds, the beautiful Japanese temple and wonderful garden, and all these quiet sylvan scenes surrounded by the imperial grandeur of the greatest buildings in the world—these aspects make indeed an ideal place of this Wooded island; a place for thoughts and fancies, for romance and love, for dreamy wanderings and delightful repose.

THE MANUFACTURERS' AND LIBERAL ARTS BUILDING

After passing in review all the wonders which I have attempted to describe, one would think that the end of the panorama had been reached, and that it would not be possible for larger marvels to be unfolded, and yet through all these varied journeys amidst gorgeous days and illuminated nights, I have only brought my readers to the threshold of the mightiest wonder of all, o'erarching and outspreading in lofty and magnificent display, crowded with the rarest wealth of the world, with sheen of diamond and gold, with daintiest devices of art, with the elegance and the luxury of all lands. No Aladdin's palace ever glittered with such splendor as this. You can walk for miles and miles beneath the same roof, and spacious scenes still throng upon the view. You can spend a month in this vast and wondrous building and not exhaust its treasures. The eight wonders of the world combined could not equal this, and if I should meet a company of average men and women and be the sole narrator to them of this amazing structure, they would certainly put me down as a colossal liar. It could not be believed without corroborative testimony. Fortunately, I have a thousand newspapers to avouch my truthfulness. What I here say will be set forth in sedate veracity, and yet the wildest dream of the poet is outdone.

This is the greatest structure on the Exposition grounds, and the largest building of the kind ever erected. Its length is 1,687 feet, and its width 787 feet. Its cost is $1,500,000. The floor alone consumed over three million feet of lumber and five carloads of nails. It contains forty-four acres of space. One thousand cottages each twenty-five by fifty feet could find room in its interior. Within the building is a gallery fifty feet wide around all four sides, and projecting from this are eighty-six smaller galleries twelve feet wide, from which visitors may survey the vast exhibits and the busy scenes below. The galleries are approached from the main floor by thirty great staircases twelve feet wide each. Columbia Avenue, fifty feet wide, extends through the length of the building, and an avenue of like width at the center crosses it at right angles.

The style of the architecture is Corinthian. The long array of columns and arches in its facades is relieved by elaborate ornamentation symbolic of the various arts and sciences.

There are four great entrances, one in the center of each facade. They are designed in the manner of triumphal arches. Surrounding these portals is the great attic story, with sculptures of eagles eighteen feet high. At each corner of the main building are pavilions with arched entrances.

The building occupies the most conspicuous place in the grounds. It faces the lake, with lawns and promenades between. North is the United States government building; south the Music Hall and Peristyle and the jutting lagoon, and west the Electrical Building and the lagoon separating it from the Wooded island.

The exterior of the building is covered with "staff," to represent marble. The huge fluted columns and immense arches are apparently of this beautiful material.

This great building is intended to accommodate all the departments coming under the head of the Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts.

The great nations of Europe, nearly all the South American republics, and all civilizations and semi-civilizations have contributed to the imposing effect of this vast display.

In the center of the building is a structure which rises above all others and attracts general attention. It is a clock tower 120 feet high standing on a base 40 feet high. Fronting each of the four grand avenues are four portals 16 feet wide and 28 feet high on each side of which are panels with inscriptions of the story of Columbus. The clock has a face 7 feet in diameter and shows the hours, minutes, seconds, and days of the month. Above is a chime of nine bells. The dome at the height of 120 feet is surmounted by a globe 16 feet in diameter.

I can give only in barest outline the greatness and variety of this structure. Simply to see this building, simply to walk through it, overwhelms one with surprise; but when you reflect that in this "forty-acre cottage" are gathered the most splendid productions of human skill from every quarter of the globe, it will be seen how impossible it is to describe the grandeur of the scene. The value of articles on exhibition is over $50,000,000.

We wander through rooms more magnificent than any king ever lived in. If we were royal born we could not walk amidst more sumptuous surroundings. Pavilions, halls, galleries, chambers, open before us. Maze after maze glitters upon our bewildered vision. A hundred nations have gathered here and put their "best foot forward" in shining procession. Germany is here competing with France on a battle-field more brilliant than any over which have rolled thunders of war, and it is doubtful which has won the victory. The German pavilion is simply wonderful. First of all, we look upon the grand Germania group, representing in bronze the mighty life of the Teutonic people—their history and their triumph. We enter through mammoth iron gates. We see the handiwork of goldsmiths and silversmiths, and porcelain art-work, tile paintings, medallions, the beautiful wrought-iron fence. This fence is 40 feet high and 22 feet wide. The length is 161 feet. Fruit and flowers and delicate leaves have been hammered from the iron until they look to be the work of a skillful goldsmith instead of brawny wielders of sledge-hammers over huge anvils. Towering high above the top piece is a basket of flowers looking, save for color, as life-like as wax flowers, and these have been wrought by hammers. We see also the "crown jewels." One room is fitted up in blue and gold, modeled after the reception room in the imperial palace at Berlin. Exquisite fresco work attracts our gaze. There is a German hunter's room of the olden time. Around the walls are antlers and stuffed birds; on the shelves quaint old beer mugs and tankards. There is a German renaissance dining room with sideboards and cabinets, bronze busts, old clocks, oak chairs and tables, curtains and tablecloths with the richest gold embroidery. The embossed leather is worth a day's journey to see. The work is raised, colored, bronzed, gilded, and figured by laborious handiwork, and not by stamping. There is a picture of a steamer on a rough sea made by needles. The sheen of the water is skillfully imitated. There are dainty things for the children—a heaven of toys. I can't describe the many novelties. There is a baby kitchen valued at $200, a Santa Claus wagon fifteen feet high, with stuffed horse and stuffed St. Bernard dog. The wagon is piled full with boys and girls and all that they delight in. There's a toy stable with horses and hostler. There are scientific toys—steam-engine, electrical machinery, and magic-lanterns. There are battle-ships three feet long, perfect in every detail, with sailors and guns. The display of textile fabrics, embroideries, laces, and beadwork is marvelous in beauty and variety. I can only suggest by noting a few things at random which strike my fancy, as for hours and hours I travel along these gilded highways. And this is only one pavilion. The Austrian pavilion attracts attention. In it are the gems of ceramic art, furniture, bric-a-brac, etc. The glassware from Bohemia is among the most precious and delightful of the exhibits. Here is every quaint and graceful shape iridescent of hue, richly gilded, bearing heraldic designs; and there are giraffes and storks and the strangest kind of Oriental patterns. The ladies will find it hard to tear themselves away from this lovely display. And besides, there are the Bohemian garnets—stars, pins, combs, parasol handles incrustated with their old radiance.

In the Spanish section are two rare vases by a woman—a workingwoman. Both are made of iron—one in Etruscan and the other in pure Grecian form—richly ornamented with gold hammered into the iron with exquisite designs. One is four feet from rim to base, and gleams with vines, Cupids, and graceful figures of women in flowing drapery. These vases are valued at $30,000 each.

France rivals Germany—not so massive, but infinitely graceful. The Gobelins room is magnificent. The tapestries are costly and fascinating. The Russian pavilion has an acre of space and represents an enormous outlay.

The Japanese pavilion is curious in construction. It is composed almost wholly of hand-carved native woods with metal ornaments. There is a bronze image of the sacred phenix. The Cingalese pavilion is most beautiful. The supports of the little house are of ebony. Five varieties of Ceylon wood are in this pavilion—ebony, satinwood, humbuck, margosa, and raini. It took one hundred men six months to carve these woods for the pavilion. From far-away Siam are unique exhibits. The products of Siam, with a population of twelve million, rank in extent and value with those of many Western nations. Nine-tenths of these people can read and write. The exhibits of women's work show exceeding skill. One is a screen executed in gold and silver threads. It represents a branch of the fruit tree known as the lichee, the red and white fruit in full size, with green leaves and twigs. Perched on the latter, or flying between them, are birds and butterflies. Women's work also extends to silk and cotton fabrics, fancy articles, miniature household utensils made of gold and silver. The men exhibit their skill in manufactures of chinaware, pottery, carved ivory-work, basket-work, matting, wax flowers, clay models, and painting. Here are also boats, carts, musical instruments, photographs, fishing apparatus, money, minerals, and articles illustrating the mail service of the country.

The Siamese pavilion itself is a curiosity. Over the entrance are the ivory tusks of an elephant who must have lived to be a hundred years old. Each of these tusks is 9 feet long, and weighs 114 pounds. The pair is said to be worth $5,000.

It is beyond my power to enumerate the pavilions, pagodas, kiosks, and ornamented squares in which the foreign exhibits are displayed. Besides what I have already mentioned are exhibits of over forty nations, together with the magnificent representation of the United States. It would take a hundred pages simply to catalogue.

The Educational exhibit is the noblest ever displayed—full of entertainment and instruction—and shows the vast progress which has been made. The exhibit comprises three divisions, viz.: 1. Public schools, education of teachers, normal schools, high schools, and asylums for the blind, deaf-mutes, and idiots. 2. Colleges. 3. Universities and libraries. Works of pupils are on exhibition. Manual training is represented. The kindergarten is beautifully illustrated. All the states in the Union, together with foreign nations, take part in this comprehensive display. The German exhibit is especially notable, as is that of Harvard and Yale. These include university publications, photographs of grounds and buildings, the methods of work and study.

In the musical exhibit are bells, chimes, musical glasses, stringed instruments, and everything from the violin to the piano. In the theatrical exhibit are costumes, masks, armor, scenery, and illustrated histories of dramatic art in all nations and ages.

It is impossible to note the decorations of this great building. They are among the finest triumphs of human art.

To give some idea of the immensity of this structure it may be stated that the whole imperial army of Germany might be placed beneath its roof. It is three times as large as St. Peter's cathedral at Rome, and the largest church in Chicago can be placed in the vestibule of St. Peter's. There is room on the floor space for six games of baseball at one time, with the "regulation field" for each, and then leave plenty of room for outsiders to look on.

Now I have tried to flash some idea of this towering and immense structure, and the amazing wealth it contains. I have tried to pick out a little here and there, to give an adequate conception of its variety, magnificence, its wondrous nicety of detail, and massive sublimity. It is like the Alps or the great Rocky mountains in its relations to other buildings, and in its majesty and luster displays the history of the world, the transcendent genius of man.

Imagine this mighty building if you can. See its dome, two hundred and fifty feet above your head, adorned with all the colors of the dawn and the sunset, and the white splendor of the sky beyond. See the vast walls glittering with a thousand imageries. See the flags and pennons of a hundred nations, as if the atmosphere were a garden and flowers of every radiant hue bloomed and floated in its vast spaces. See the great galleries, and wander up the wide staircase and look down upon the dazzling, illimitable scene; take in at one glance that which represents fifty millions of dollars—gold and silver, bronze and marble, iron and glass, jewels and tapestries in every form and grace. But this is not all. Even when you have seen this great building and wandered through its endless corridors; even when you have traversed its vast galleries and looked down upon its thirty acres of floor space, crowded with every conceivable expression of human ingenuity—a poem in itself; even then you have not touched the grandest point of view. The cap-sheaf is yet to come, and can I make you realize the dazzling experience? Come with me to the elevator. Do you dare to go up, two hundred and fifty feet, straight up to that far-off roof? It will make you dizzy. But we will venture the airy journey, even if something breaks and we go to everlasting smash, as we surely will if the elevator should happen to take a tumble. We are in for it, however, since we shall never have such another chance to make a round trip to heaven in flesh and blood. We mount upward, and what is it before us?—what a city we behold beneath! In addition to the floor space we see fourteen acres of gallery space—all crowded, shining, a thousand people wandering along. Still we mount, and all the colors and forms blaze into one glittering mass. We can no longer distinguish. It is like a vast, brilliant carpet, and the people seem like little mice scudding over it, and we get so high that we can scarcely make out if there is any motion at all, and we might imagine that morn and sunset were taken from the sky and lay in gorgeous confusion far beneath our lofty course. We are glad when we reach the platform, right under the dome, and take a last look at that extraordinary scene. But we have not reached the summit yet. Through a winding corridor we still climb, and at length reach the roof, a small farm in mid-air, and here the supreme vision bursts upon our view—a reality, and yet it seems a dream, a dream of ineffable glory. The great lake is before us, its soft blue floating away into a brilliant green and golden color, and this is lost in the luminous gray of the horizon. We can look for miles away and even discern the distant shores and villages when the sun is especially bright. We see the ships and the steamers and the smaller craft voyaging in various directions. The long line of the city stretches against the lake, while to the northward and westward and southward are the dwellings of one million five hundred thousand people—a stupendous picture, indescribable in its contrasts and harmonies. For twenty miles circles away this theater of buildings, where wealth and poverty side by side play out the great drama of human life. I suppose that nowhere else in the world can such a quantity of buildings be seen as from the top of this building. Away off to the dim prairies, amidst clouds of smoke, glimmers and glooms the huge scene, masses of sunshine side by side with black columns and dark depths. It is a mile-long walk around this lofty roof, and ten thousand people can swarm here at once and look upon the varying panorama in every direction. From this point is the most complete view of the Fair grounds. The majesty somewhat of the other buildings disappears, but the harmony and beauty are preserved. To the northward along the lake shore are the group of foreign buildings in beautiful variety; then the eye ranges along the vista of states until it reaches Illinois's magnificent structure and California's fantastic pile; thence fronting the vista we behold the Palace of Art, with its noble dome and colossal figure; thence across the shining lagoon we take in Brazil's brilliant edifice and the Turkish pavilion. After that the eye rests upon the Fisheries Building, with its flowing architecture; then right at our feet is the Government Building. Thence crossing the ornamental bridge our vision embraces Wooded island, with its mass of flowers and green spaces. Over across the Wooded island we behold Woman's elegant temple, and this side of it the ample dome of Horticultural Building; then turning to the left, looking westward, Choral Hall greets our view; then Transportation Building, with its gorgeous color and golden entrance.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

International Congress of Freethinkers.

As announced in my letter last week, the committee that had been appointed to arrange for the above Congress met on the evening of the 6th inst. and discussed matters relating to the same. The committee was represented in full from the American Freethought societies, but no representative from Canada was forthcoming. I had written to Captain Adams acquainting him with the situation and asking for some one to be appointed in their behalf, to work in conjunction with the committee. No answer has been received from Captain Adams at the time of writing, hence no report could be given thereon. Judge Waite was unanimously elected chairman of the committee, and John R. Charlesworth was by the same vote elected secretary of the committee. After the preliminaries had been got through with, the committee settled down to business, and the following program was unanimously agreed upon.

The Congress shall be held for a period of eight days, commencing with Sunday the 1st day of October, and ending with Sunday October the 8th.

There being a good prospect for a large representation of non-English-speaking Freethinkers, it was also decided that the days shall be devoted successively as follows:

Sunday, Oct. 1st, addresses of welcome, and the opening ceremonies shall be conducted in English, with an address of welcome to the foreign delegates in French.

Monday, Oct. 2d, the addresses will be given in the Scandinavian languages and English.

Tuesday, Oct. 3d, German and English.

Wednesday, Oct. 4th, English and such others as may be agreed upon hereafter.

Thursday, Oct. 5th, business meetings, and afterward the delegates will visit the World's Fair en masse.

Friday, Oct. 6th, to visit the various places of interest in and around the city of Chicago.

Saturday, Oct. 7th, business meetings, etc., to conclude with a grand banquet in the evening.

Sunday, Oct. 8th, the farewell addresses will be made consequent upon the adjournment of the Congress.

The committee will endeavor to adhere as closely as possible to the program outlined above, although the right is reserved to modify the same as the committee may deem advisable, but in such cases they will be guided by the circumstances and conditions of the season.

An imposing array of talented speakers are expected to be present, and this will make the Congress the most imposing that has yet been held within the United States. G. W. Foote, president of the National Secular Society of Great Britain, and editor of the London Freethinker, has made the announcement that he will probably attend. Mr. Foote is a first-class orator, witty, humorous, and satirical, a store of argument in each sentence, which shows what the English language may become in the hands of a master mind. Mr. Foote, it may be remembered, has suffered imprisonment for his opinions, being sentenced to one year in the Holloway jail for blasphemy, as the ignorant Christians term it. Should he eventually decide to visit our shores, and bring from across the Atlantic news of the progress he has made in our cause, he may be assured of a royal welcome. Charles Watts, who is well known on this continent, is also expected to make the journey with him.

Victor Lennstrand is also expected to be present, the well-known Swedish Freethought martyr. Our Scandinavian friends should turn out by the thousand, to welcome this courageous and undaunted champion of Liberty to our land. Frau Henrich Wilhelmi has also been invited and will very likely be present and address the Congress in German. Like those previously mentioned, she has suffered martyrdom, in the form of imprisonment, for mere opinion's sake, because she had dared to speak out her honest thoughts in face of public opinion. Our Teutonic brethren should certainly do all in their power to give her a cordial welcome should she come to the Congress.

In addition to these the following speakers are also invited to be present:

Helen H. Gardener, Samuel P. Putnam, John R. Charlesworth, Judge Waite, Mrs. M. A. Freeman, L. K. Washburn, Captain Adams, J. E. Rensburg, W. F. Jamieson, B. F. Underwood, Franklin Steiner, Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel, C. B. Reynolds, Katie Kehm Smith, Dr. J. L. York, Mrs. Severance, Mr. O. Shay, and John F. Geeting. Our friends will see by this that the committee desires to provide the Freethinkers of the world with an educational and oratorical feast. This will require a large sum of money, to hire a suitable hall, to properly advertise and pay contingent expenses. So once again we put forth an urgent appeal for funds that are necessary to make this Congress a success. Remember that each organization is to contribute its share toward the expenses, so that friends desiring to help financially may send their donations to which they prefer. All communications relative to the Congress should be addressed to me.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,

Sec. of Committee of Arrangements.

On behalf of the Federation I have to announce the receipt of the following donations:

G. W. Goff, Kearney, Neb.....	$5.00
Thos. H. Hecox, " ".....	1.00
F. H. Kirts, New Lancaster, Kan.....	1.00

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,

Sec. Freethought Federation of America.

345 W. Randolph st., Chicago, Ill.

It Pleases Mr. Shaw.

From the Independent Pulpit.

"The Resurrection of Jesus."—An Agnostic view, in which there is nothing said against the personal character of the man (if he was a man) Jesus. It only attacks—and with reason, too—some of the superstitions that have long been associated with his name. It is an able work and should find a ready acceptance among thoughtful Freethinkers. The work is anonymous, which is to be regretted. The author gives as a reason for this that the clergy may consider the subject-matter instead of wasting their ammunition in personal attacks upon him. It is published by the Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place, New York. Price in cloth 75 cents, in paper 40 cents.

Bound Volumes of The Truth Seeker.

We have a few bound volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER for the year just closed (1892) which will be sent on receipt of $4. We also have a few of previous years which can be sold for $3. Readers desirous of keeping files as received weekly can obtain the File Binder for $1.

Letters of Friends.

A Freethinker's Missing Friend.

R. M. S. TEUTONIC, May 31, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: William Tindall, nativ of Liverpool, England, was for some years in the customs service, China; was last heard from as living at Everett, Wash., March, 1892. If any of our TRUTH SEEKER family can give information as to his whereabouts it will greatly oblige his mother and family. Her address is, Mrs. Tindall, 17 Haydock road, Liscord, Cheshire, England. THOS. KEWLEY.

A Freethinkers' Town Proposed.

KANDIYOHI, MINN., May 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I like your paper O. K., and it should be read by everybody who is not rid of the Middle Age darkness, and will not be so long as there are eighty thousand drones called preachers to be fed and clothed by the people besides their families. These are a hypocritical set of parasites.

I intend to lay out on part of my farm a town-site some time next fall. I will sell to one hundred Freethinkers one hundred lots for $100 a lot, $50 cash and the balance in two payments at five per cent interest. And I will donate one block for a Thomas Paine Hall, and I will also donate ten per cent of the proceeds of the sale of the next one hundred lots sold for the erection of a Thomas Paine Hall. If the Freethinkers of the United States want to start a town of their own this will be an opportunity for them to do so.

Anybody who likes this idea can send their application to me before October 1, 1893, for a lot of this kind, not after. Before the town-site is plotted and recorded no lot can be sold, but after that is done and the lots are opened for sale everybody has the same right to buy. If the Freethinkers want to get the control of a town of this kind the control must be obtained before the lots are thrown on the market. The town-site will be located on Ce. 33, T. 119, R. 34, one hundred miles west of St. Paul, on the north side of Crow river, which flows out of Lake Waconda.

S. J. FLECKTON.

A Rallying Song.

DEERING, ME., June 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I see by THE TRUTH SEEKER that the World's Fair is at last open on Sunday, in spite of all opposition. The tidings filled my heart with joy. To those among us who have labored early and late for the cause of intellectual freedom much praise is due. To them and to all others who love Truth for Truth's sake I respectfully address the following stanzas:

Come, freemen of America, and hear the joyful news,
'Tis sure to cheer each true man's heart and drive away the blues;
You can see the great World's Fair, my friends,
on Sunday if you choose.
Freethought forever for America.

Cho.—Hurrah! hurrah! 'tis joyful news
we bring,
Hurrah! hurrah! let freemen dance and sing,
Let Freedom's bell with brazen tongue
the glorious anthem ring,
Freethought forever for America.

'Tis glorious news indeed, my friends, and marks the coming day,
When Superstition from the mind of man shall fade away,
And all the world from pole to pole acknowledge Freedom's sway.
Freethought forever for America.—
(Cho.)

So take heart, all my Freethought friends, and don't give way to fear,
That day is fast approaching and the time is very near
When Truth shall all triumphant reign and Error disappear.
Freethought forever for America.—
(Cho.)

Yours for Freethought, FRED IRISH.

An Interesting Veteran's Tale.

AUBURN, MICH., June 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am receiving your horrible paper from Dr. C. W. Mason, Bay City, Mich., and am delighted with it. I was looking over the advertisements this morning and I found in the issues of 1892, "Why Don't God Kill the Devil?" by M. Babcock, and "The Holy Bible Abridged." Now, sir, please send me three Abridged Bibles and one "Why Don't God Kill the Devil?" and oblige an old Freethinker. I was born in East Berne, Albany county, N. Y., in the woods full of the wild animals, May 27, 1813. My father had three wives and twenty-one children, seventeen girls and four boys—and I am the twenty-first, the only one left of the family. My father was born in Stonington, Conn., in the year of 1746. My mother was born in the year of 1776 in Schenectady county, N. Y. My father died when I was eight years old, and I was put out among strangers and tyrants, and grew to manhood and could not read, write, or cipher. I went to school four winters, three months in each year; no grammar class in our schools. You must excuse my skip-hop-and-jump letter.

I am a Bob Ingersoll man, you bet. I don't believe in a forked-tailed and cloven-foot animal. Every man makes his own hell.

Yours in Freethought, Liberty, and Truth,
S. S. RANDALL.

A Brother Prayeth.

GIBBON, NEB.,

Sabbath Morn, June 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose you a prayer put forth by

C. PUTNAM.

A NEBRASKA PRAYER.

Job xiv, 6.

Turn from us, O Lord, that we may rest! Turn from us that we may not be altogether dissuaded from the belief that thou art a God at all, or holdest in thine attributes even the semblance of a God. Because our lands were parched and dried up and all vegetation was dying, because our labor to raise crops and subsist on the earth was going for naught without rain, and because we prayed fervently and with deepest solicitation to thee for a little rain, behold now thou dost send torrents and cloud-bursts, and art drowning us with floods. Thou hast also let loose upon us the grievous hail that hath broken our windows, pounded our crops into the ground, and killed our stock. Hast thou no control over the elements or over thine own passions? Wilt thou manifest the vengeance of a fool rather than the just and wise judgments of a beneficent God? Hast thou given into our care the earth for our subsistence, with the command to earn our bread by the sweat of our brow; hast thou endowed us with appetites and desires essential to our existence, and hast thou promised us seed-time and harvest, and, further and above all, hast thou promised to hear and answer our prayers, only to mock us with disaster when out of our distress we call upon thee? Wilt thou serve us still as thou didst thine own chosen people, who after their natural instincts, which thou hadst given them confessedly for their good, craved a little meat, and then in anger thou didst stuff them with quail for a whole month until it killed them? Hast thou no equilibrium of thought, of passion, or of judgment? Canst thou do nothing good without overdoing it until it becomes a curse? But if thou art limited in the effect of judgment, canst thou not refrain from venting thy jealous spleen upon the innocent? If thou canst not punish Chicago or the commissioners of the World's Fair for desecrating thy holy day—or rather Constantine's—then shouldst thou visit thy wrath upon innocent people a thousand miles away? Turn from us, O Lord, that we may rest, not for Jesus's sake, but for humanity's sake, Amen!

How to Promise Money to a Church.

SAN DIMAS, CAL., May 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I believe you offer to send one number a week of THE TRUTH SEEKER to any one newsdealer in any town who will sell it. I have found such a man in Pomona, Cal. He is willing to pay for all he can sell.

At the building of a Methodist church in Pomona, one of the deacons went to a certain lawyer and asked him to subscribe. The lawyer, in addition to being Pomona's leading attorney, and, like the deacon, a good judge of rattlesnake oil, is a Bible-reading infidel. He told the deacon that he would give $200 if the sky-pilot then at the helm of the church would preach a sermon from a text that he (the limb of the law) would select. The deacon went off chuckling that he never made $200 easier in his life. He went to the man of God and told him what he had done. But God's agent told him that it would not do, he could not fill the contract. So the $200 was lost. It may be that Comstock might do the job. We are willing to have a blast of Bible purity from Tony at $200 a night for one night for the benefit of the Lord's lambs.

How would it be to have some cards printed such as this:

Ladies, don't read the fifth chapter of Numbers from the twelfth to the thirty-first verse.

As a woman will always do what she is told not to do, especially if she be a so-called Christian and she thinks it something naughty, we may get some of them to read their Bibles more and not make the blunder the deacon did.

JOHN A. STEVENS.

[We should like to have some friend in every town see a newsdealer and get him to sell THE TRUTH SEEKER. Pick out an honest man, tell him the paper is "fully returnable," and we will try him for three months. He can pay for what he sells, and send the others back. The price to him will be five cents each copy. He can sell them for eight or ten cents, according to his conscience.—ED. T. S.]

Freethought Literature and Public Schools Are Our Two Deliverers.

FT. STANTON, N. M., May 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I herewith send a club of five for the fearless exponent of human Liberty, the result of a three months' trial subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER. This country has plenty of Freethinkers, but most of them are too cowardly or too indifferent to be listed as true-blue Liberals. That is not the right view to take. It is our aid and assistance that enables THE TRUTH SEEKER and other like papers to dispel the fog and superstition which the priesthood have spread over the minds of the race. These papers are doing the work we want done; therefore, it is a duty we owe to posterity and the human race to do all in our power to aid these fearless defenders of human rights.

Heston's picture of Priestcraft trying to throttle Education in THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 22d is awful, because we know it is only too true. Is it possible that our once-beasted public school system is in danger of being crushed by this horde of contemptible vampires? The monster that would obstruct the public school system is the most dangerous enemy of the human race. It is time that all thinking people were awaking up to this great danger.

I have spent much of my time and means in aiding the reform movement, but it has been through organizations that find it necessary to stop at every cross-road to pray for help, while the other crowd who used better sense got there first and cleaned the platter. In my humble opinion there is but one thing that will bring needed reforms, and that is education, universal education. The free schools are doing this work slowly, but too surely to suit popery. The man that will not guard the free education of his children is unfit to be classed as a citizen of a republic. He should go off and die for the good of his country.

J. N. COE.

How to Promise to Join the Church.

ELK POINT, S. D., May 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am well pleased to get a sample copy of your paper. In the near future I hope to be able to send you the names of several new subscribers, mine with the rest.

Oftentimes my schoolmates and associates have asked me about my belief in God. Yes, and not long ago in talking with a certain Methodist minister I was asked why I did not adhere to the Christian faith and why I did not become a Christian myself. Said I, "When you explain to me how, when, and where Cain got his wife then will I have time to consider your questions and not till then." He has never spoken to me since.

I do not doubt that you have already learned of the great disgraceful rape case at Beresford, S. D., where a terrible crime was committed by Rev. Mr. Wilson, of the Methodist Episcopal church, upon the thirteen-year-old daughter of Mr. Moulton. Rev. Mr. Wilson was sentenced to fifteen years in the state prison. I refer anyone who is interested to the mayor or city marshal of Beresford, S. D.

During the year 1889 I visited southern

Nebraska and Colorado. About thirty-five miles southwest of Lincoln, Neb., is a small town named Dorchester. Six miles south of this city lies a graveyard. Within this "slumbering-place" of the dead rises a marble monument, as many of the readers of your paper know, and towers above all the rest. With my own eyes I beheld this place and with my own hand copied the following from the tombstone:

Think of a peace of fifty years,
A life devoid of hellish fears.
Died without fears of gods or ghosts,
Heavens or hells with all their hosts!

Upon making a few inquiries in the neighborhood I learned that the occupant of that grave wrote this verse, with many more, before his death, and requested his son to place it as an epitaph upon his tombstone. At his funeral was read his autobiography. And his easy death was enough to show the folly of Christianity.

Yours in the "faith,"

CHARLES A. BURDICK.

Is God a Sabbath-breaker?

NEW YORK, June 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: A Liberal-minded lady who has read THE TRUTH SEEKER and has heard a great deal about the Sabbath, and the Sunday closing of the World's Fair, is desirous to be informed how she is to understand the following statement in the Bible. She says it is recorded in Gen. ii, 2: "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made, and he rested on the seventh day from all his works which he had made." The lady wishes to know if she is not to understand God worked on the seventh day, for it says he ended his work that day. This, she says, corresponds with what Jesus Christ says in John v, 17. Christ healed a man that had had an infirmity thirty-eight years, and ordered him to take up his bed and walk. The Jews said it was the Sabbath and it was not lawful to carry his bed. Jesus answered them, "My father worketh hitherto, and I work." "Now," said she, "this is the testimony of Jesus. And it is a plain matter of fact that God, whom he called his father, finished his work on the seventh day [she laid great stress on the seventh day], and that Jesus broke down the partition wall between Jews and gentiles by working on the Sabbath. When the Jews accused him of breaking the Sabbath he replied, 'The son of man is lord of the Sabbath day.'"

As we have the example of Jesus Christ, why do these hypocrites, members of churches and preachers, insist on going contrary to Christ's teaching, which is to do good on the Sabbath?

It is a well-known fact that Sunday is of heathen origin. There is not a passage in the New Testament that warrants any man or woman to keep it as a holy day. The saying it is the Lord's day does not make it so.

I trust the lady's mind may be made clear by some able correspondent of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

S. R. THORNE.

Tribute to Heywood.

COLUMBUS, KAN., June 6, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: You have ever bravely defended E. H. Heywood when his natural and constitutional rights were invaded. I too in my way have done the same, in the Health Monthly. Your space limits me to a little of the much I fain would write. "Nothing is so sure as the unexpected." To hear, one week after the event, that E. H. Heywood, one of my best and most appreciative friends, was dead; that he had written me his last hopeful, sympathizing, inspiring letter, uttered or written his last word and Word, was too much for my intensely conscious, sympathetic, sensitive nature.

His organism was peculiar, and so is mine, through which—like all others—I must measure and value him.

For three days I have been filled with unutterable emotions, which only copious tears could relieve. Can it be, must it be, that I, ten or more years his senior, must write these words for him whom I expected to survive me? E. H. Heywood was organically great and good: great because good. In his face and on his brow there were no baseness, falsehood, crime, or vice. How strange, that hostile, prejudiced judges, juries, lawyers, and people could not see him as, on the whole, their equal or superior. "He needed no law of state to teach him grudging submission to the law of right."

He was often impolitic and indiscreet, to his and his wife's and children's loss of means and "costly reputation;" but as Pope says: "All partial evil is universal good."

Truth, liberty, and humanity dominated him. He was in earnest and forgot himself. Like Garrison, with whom and for whom he worked, he "would be heard;" and his voice has echoed, and far more will echo, round the world.

I see him studious and thoughtful in college, and as the truths of nature come to him, rejecting, one after another, the inhuman absurdities of the past and present. I see him founding, leading, and working "without money and without price" for societies of peace, labor, freedom, equity, justice. I see him in Dedham jail, calm, hopeful, invincible. I see him in New York, to advocate and defend and celebrate the release of his fellow-martyr, D. M. Bennett, from prison. I see him at Albany, N. Y., as the only one to plead for Seward Mitchell, who at the Freethought convention had been selling "The Reign of Love in Freedom." He showed the judge that the Bible was far more "obscene" than the poem, and Mitchell was released. I see him ever first and foremost in behalf of "the under dog," the maligned and oppressed. I see him, where I stood fifty years ago, on the summit of Bunker Hill monument, and in or near the shadow of which he suffered two years in prison to gratify the Christian revenge of our church-and-state, Christian, religio-politico civilization. O judicially martyred, murdered, sacrificed hero and humanitarian, dead, dead, yet living and ever to live in the future of humanity.

For thee, who was indeed her friend,
Shall woman's heart-felt prayers ascend.
O moral hero unsurpassed;
Thy mental scope so lofty, vast;
My words are tame thy worth to tell.
Immortal hero, hail, farewell!

J. H. COOK.

Liberals, Hold Like Meetings.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., May 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: It has been some time since I inflicted myself on your readers. But I wish to report progress of Freethought in our city for the last year.

There never has been so much agitation and discussion upon practical subjects that are for the interest of mankind here as there has been in the last year. We have what is called a Reform Municipal League here of over five hundred members, for the purpose of reform in politics of our city; and it has already done great good, although only about six months old.

Our Liberal Club has helped to bring about this, for the lectures and discussions that we have had for the last five years have helped to Liberalize the people on the great questions that pertain to their happiness. We have just closed our meetings for this season, to be opened again in October. Other similar clubs have formed all over the city for discussion that have taken their cue from our club.

Take it all together, we have the most Liberal city in this country, and Freethought is increasing rapidly. Sunday is a holiday here. All places of amusement are kept open. In fact, you can do anything here on Sunday that is proper for you to do on a week-day. At the same time the churches are active and doing all they can to hold their own, but they have lost their strong hold upon the people.

Some of the subjects we have had lectures and discussions upon in the last few months are "Woman and Her Work," "The Ballot a Natural Right," "Life in Siberia as a Russian Exile," "Spiritualism and What Good It Has Done," "Politics," "Ingersoll on Voltaire," by a Jewish rabbi, "The World is Growing Better," "Government Ownership of Railroads," "A Nation's Disgrace," "That Pension Question," "Socialism," "Christianity versus Science," "Some Needed Legislation," "Thomas Paine," on his anniversary, "Municipal Reform," "Some Phases of the Labor Question," "Vested Rights and Their Restoration by the Single Tax," "The Gospel of Individualism," "Ingersoll's Lecture on 'Liberty,'" "Feudalism, or Root, Hog, or Die," "Government Without Compulsory Taxation," "The Present Social Status, and Its Remedy," "Man's Ownership of Woman," "The Life and Death of Nations." These are some of the questions, and you will see there are a variety of subjects. And let me say right here, no one can sit and listen to such lectures, and the discussions that always follow them, without learning something they did not know before. The lectures were given by persons that had made a study of the questions they spoke upon, and were ably handled.

I would earnestly recommend that such meetings be held in every town and city all over the land. These lectures were all volunteered, consequently the expense is not great.

Spiritualism is having quite a boom here now. About a year ago a new society was formed, and they have been holding meetings ever since, and I hear they are well attended. The great fault I find with them is, they do not take up any of the great practical questions of the day. But they may come to that some time.

A. B. SEVERANCE.

A Noble Society Started.

ELSINORE, CAL., May 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: There is plenty of music in the air at Elsinore just now, all on account of a little society which we have started for the diffusion of useful knowledge. There are a great many people here who do not attend any church, and as business is generally closed on Sunday we have long felt the need of some sociability and some place of meeting where we could enjoy an hour or two together without listening to the insults which our wise ministers heap upon such intellectual giants as Paine, Darwin, Tyndall, Ingersoll, and others. We have seen the need of some place where our boys and girls could meet without being compelled to listen to the usual "chestnuts;" some place where they could be interested in something really useful while becoming interested in each other; therefore about three weeks ago we organized a little society which we have named "The Society of Science, Art, and Literature." There were but seven members the first week, but we rented a hall and held a "Rose Carnival" Friday and Saturday of that week. The hall was profusely decorated, and about one hundred and fifty varieties of roses were on exhibition in great numbers. One single bouquet of solid roses, embracing every variety and color on exhibition, was five feet high and seventeen and one-half in circumference. The words "Society of Science, Art, and Literature" were made in bright colors of roses, jessamins, geraniums, etc., in very large letters. Tables were covered with labeled varieties with the name of the exhibitors, and hundreds of tastefully arranged bouquets were made for the visitors. We had wagon-loads of them, and crowds of people visited the exhibition. Saturday night we held an appropriate ball, and cleared money enough to pay a month's rent. Sunday we had several new members, and arranged a progressive euchre party for Friday night, which was also a success.

We had been very careful indeed to have no mention for or against religion in our by-laws or in our meetings, hoping we could go on in peace without stirring up the dirty workers of the churches, but it was of no avail. Last night the local paper, which is run by a cowardly cur for all kinds of blackmailing purposes, came out with a number of slurs against the society, and was followed Sunday by all the preachers appealing to their members to stamp us out. One illiterate fellow in particular stated that while it was not an organization which could be called bad, yet it was "run by those known to be infidels, and therefore very dangerous to society and the community." He told his flock "not to associate with anyone who belonged to the society or had anything to do with it." He said so much, however, that we increased our membership to twenty-six that day. A number who had been rather timid about joining were willing to stand up and be counted.

A little grocery-keeper who has his stand next door to our hall and who is usher for one of the churches made complaint that he was disturbed at night and deprived of his natural rest by the society, and about the same time we discovered a large hole had been punched through the plastered wall between our hall and his bedroom. In attempting to punch a small hole he had loosened more than three square feet of plastering on our side. We at once notified the town marshal and quite an excitement was the result. More than one hundred people have come into the hall to see the hole. We rendered our first program last Sunday, which consisted of better music than any of the churches can furnish, speeches, original papers, selections, etc., with a display of spring bonnets surpassed by none. We have bought a piano and are negotiating to build a hall, on the building and loan association plan, which at $10 per month (the rent we pay) will pay for itself in a few years. Better than this, we are raising a large cash fund with which to insure the permanent residence of a lecturer. We have commenced a fine mineral cabinet, and have quite a respectable library, which has been donated by members and others. We have many periodicals and magazines, amongst which is THE TRUTH SEEKER. In a few weeks we will hold a mineral exhibition from the hundreds of gold, silver, tin, and other mines and claims in the neighborhood. Our new microscope will arrive from New York in the mean time. We expect to hold agricultural fairs, flower festivals, chrysanthemum fairs, citrus fairs, exhibitions of art, exhibitions of products, etc., at least one a month the year around. Let the church boycott; we are able to take care of ourselves. Let the hoodle editor sling his dirty flings; they are a compliment to us. Let the little groceryman lie awake at night with his ear to the hole in the wall; he may learn something. If we can interest ourselves and our children in our society, with our library and our music, our games, microscope, telescope, chemical apparatus, assay furnace, modeling in clay, printing-press, classification of wild flowers, minerals, and all the things we do and hope to do in the near future, God will certainly not be as jealous of our success as the preachers. But we are going to be squashed out if such a thing is possible.

F. H. HEALD, Secretary.

An Anti-Spiritualist Replied To.

CAMP ALAMO, LOWER CAL., MEX.,

June 1, 1893.

FRIEND SHUMAKER: I have read your article in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 4th, under the head of "Spiritualism and Christianity Alike Superstitions." You have taken one step in the right direction by reading Spiritualist literature, and giving the authors credit so far as you can judge from your standpoint. Thus far all right. That is a step that some Materialists dare not take. But when you call Spiritualism a superstition, a product of the brain, there is where your great and ludicrous mistake lies. The fact is with you as many others, you pass judgment without investigation. How can you presume to know that the statement of Mr. Roberts, that a spirit grasped his hand, is untrue, when you have never been where that and other manifestations are alleged to occur?

According to the last census there are about seventy-five million avowed Spiritualists. I have conversed with them and read their periodicals for the past twenty-five years. Note the following statement: I have the first one to hear from yet who is a Spiritualist on hearsay or faith. But all who call themselves confirmed Spiritualists are such by virtue of unquestionable evidence of their own senses. I will take it for granted that you are in possession of the five senses, on which we all depend in forming our opinions of any and all things. By the use of those senses you are enabled to recognize the members of your family and acquaintances, and their handwriting, language, etc., when you get letters from those absent. Especially is a person's identity proven when he or she writes to you detailing incidents known only to you and him, and especially when such incidents are forgotten by yourself. Now be it understood once for all that the tenets of Spiritualism as a whole are founded on the evidence of all the five senses.

First there is the full-form materialization, where they can be seen and recognized as readily as you can recognize those you know, often materializing and dematerializing in full view of an audience. They walk, talk, sing, shake hands, caress, kiss, and show their individuality just as they did while clothed in the body.

Then there is the independent slate-writing, where the writing is done inside of closed slates, the slates being furnished by, and held in the hand of, the investigator, if he or she wishes it thus. Writing has been done in languages foreign to the medium under the most crucial test or fraud-proof conditions, the names signed being those of deceased friends of the sitters, whom the medium had no possible means of knowing. Such messages in every case bear the identity of those whose names they bear, just as much as the letters of your living friends are to be recognized by you. But a savage who was not familiar with communication by letter would be likely to say talking on paper through the mails or over the telegraph wires is all bosh. So also the Christians condemn without investigation every new discovery. And it is not surprising that either Christian fanatics or savages should be willfully blind, and misrepresent and oppose everything new, but such a course ill becomes professed Liberalists. They should have the wisdom to investigate and learn at least the alphabet of a subject before making such wild shots as some I read in THE TRUTH SEEKER on the subject of Spiritualism.

Mr. Shumaker, why don't you back your assertions by facts? Institute a set of experiments, duplicate all spirit phenomena with your alleged electro-mental manufacture, and publish the modus operandi to the world. Tell me what my mother's name was before marriage. Tell me whether I have any brothers and sisters—whether living. Give their names and describe their general appearance. Diagnose the sick. Tell where lost and stolen things are. These last-named manifestations I have witnessed many times. It took me a term of years to come to a conclusion on alleged spirit manifestation.

To come down to facts, there is as much of the phenomena of human life or mental phenomena of mind embodied as disembodied that we don't understand fully. There is hypnotism, mental telegraphing, psychometry, and dreaming. All of which we cannot ignore, and there is none of us who has not at some time known some one of these things to occur.

We cannot see with the naked eye the germs that convey small-pox, measles, diphtheria, etc., from one to another, neither can we see the atmosphere nor the gases, yet if we make conditions right by bringing a microscope to bear on those tiny objects we are charmed with their beauty or horrified with their hideousness as the case may be.

Those phenomena that come under the head of occult—that perhaps some of us have witnessed and some have not—how much better it is for us to investigate and witness repeatedly before passing judgment, as becomes the seeker after truth of the nineteenth century, and not shut ourselves up in a shell of self-confidence as impenetrable as that of the iron-clad Baptist. Verily consistency is a jewel.

It is not my aim or desire to induce anyone to become interested in, or investigate, Spiritualism whose tastes do not lead him to do so. And such wild, untenable theorizing is only something to laugh at by those who are versed in the demonstrated truths of Spiritualism—for truth cannot suffer for anyone's ridicule.

Friend Shumaker, when you have demonstrated your electro theory and got it as well established as truth, as are spirit phenomena, to all who have witnessed it, then I for one will be ready to abandon the ship and flag of Spiritualism and hoist the flag of electro-mentalism of the Shumaker school.

Yours for truth and the elevation of humanity,
N. A. PICKENS, M.D.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

[BY REQUEST.]

David and Goliath.

[An Irishman's poetical account of how the little Israelite defeated the big Philistine was recited by Master Tommy Bones at the Columbus school exhibition in Webster, Dak.]

The brightest boy ould Jesse had
Was David—youngest son;
He was a bould and activ lad,
Well liked by every one.

Although he had to moind the sheep
To learn he was so sharp,
When other boys were fast asleep,
He'd practice on the harp.

'Twould make the birds of heaven hide
Their heads to hear him sing;
He'd murder half the counthry side
Wid pebbles and a sling.

And then the soothern ways he knew
To capture young and old;
The female sex—Och whil ilu!
'Twas there wor' his best hould.

When David was some eighteen year
Of age or thereabout,
Betune the haythen and Judarr
A bloody war broke out.

His brother listed for the war—
Begorra! they wor' daisies—
His father took a contract for
To sell the army chaases.

"David," the old man said one day,
"You'd like a little tramp;
Just load some chaases on the dhrey,
And take 'm down to camp."

He dhrove to camp and sought straightway
The commissary's tint;
He got a voucher for his pay,
Thin to his brothers wint.

He found 'em looking mighty blue,
And in a dreadful plight;
Retreat was what they wished to do,
And divil a bit to fight.

A big, black bully, ten fut tall,
Was bluffin' all the Jews;
And throops and staff and Gin'ral Saul,
Wor' quakin' in their shoes.

Go'liath was the craythur's name,
A howlin' Philistine,
His sword was like the lightnin's flame,
His spear was like a pine.

He wore upon his back and breast
Tin thousand pounds of brass;
The shine of him, complatey dhressed,
Would smash a lookin'-glass.

And ivery day the baste would sthnut,
Inflamed wid dhrink and pride,
And kept all Israel closely shut
In lines well fortified.

"Come out," he'd bawl, "come out of there,
Beyant your dirty works;
Come av ye dare and fight me fair,
Yez bloody Hebrew Turks!"

But ivery faithful Israelite
Said, "Leave the blaggards be,
Av coose, no dacin't Jew can fight
With such low trash as he."

This sort of thing was well and good,
Till David jined the throop;
Whin he the matter understood,
Bedad! he raised a whoop.

"It is a burning sin and shame,"
He said, "upon my word,
To hear this haythen hound defame
The chosen of the Lord.

"And since no other mon has felt
A wish to tan his hide,
I'll fight him for the champion's belt
And fifty pounds a side."

The corp'ril of the guard he tould
The off'sur of the day
What David said, and he made bould
To mention it at tay.

The edge-du kong was in the mess,
And heard the whole discoose;
So he—he couldn't do less—
Tould Gen'ral Sol. av coose.

The chafe of staff tould the high praste
To sind peremptuous others
For David to report in haste
At Gen'ral Saul's headquarters.

But when the son of Jesse kim
And Saul beheld the lad,
So young, so tinder-loik, and slim,
It made him tearin' mad.

"Oh, houly Moses! look at that,"
Said Saul—"the boy's consate;
How can it be that such a brat
Can match the heavy-weight?"

"Wid that blood-suckin' giant thafe
This baby cannot thrive;
The Philistine, it's my belafe,
Would ate him up alive."

Thin David said, "Me lord, it's thrue
This seems a rash intent;
Yet while I weigh but nine stun' two,
I'm full of divilment.

"A lion and a bear kim down
The mountain's rugged sides,
I slew the bastes, and wint to town
And thraded off their hides.

"And since for roarin' brutes loike thim
I've found I'm mon enough,
I'm quite convinced that I can thrim
This blaggard pagan rough."

"Avic!" says Saul, "ye're full of pluck,
And wag yure little chin
Like one who raly thrusts his luck,
And manes to thry an' win.

"I'll giv ye my best coat of mail—
A new spring suit just made—
Tuck it a trifle in the tail,
And pad the shoulder blade."

But David didn't understand
The use of such a thing,
And only wanted in his hand
His staff and thrusty sling.

Whin Goliath saw little David approach-in', after havin' heard proclamation that a gra'at champion was comin' out to fight him, musha, he laught fit to shplit his sides; and by reason of what passed betune them in the way of talk, I dhrap out of poethry for a bit, bekase, while poethry is mighty foine for a sentimental dialog, it's no good at all for a ra'al strong, first-class, breezy blaggardin' match.

"Oh, Moses," says Goliath, wid the wather bilin' out of his eyes for laughin',
"what sort av thing is that? May the divil admire!" he says, "if I don't belave it's a monkey escaped from an organgrinder."

"Ye'll find me a moighty bad thing to monkey wid," says David; "ye big thafe, wid a pot on your head loike a cupola on a sthame fire engin, and your dirty, black mouth loike the hole av a coal-cellar."

"Ye little, skinned pole-cat!" says Goliath, beginnin' to grow mad whin he dis-kivered that David's rhetoric was superior to his, "do ye think I'm a dog that ye've got a sthick to bate me wid?"

"Bedad," says David, "I wouldn't be af'her doin' a dacin't dog sich injustice; but it's dog's mate I'm goin' to make of ye."

"Hear that," says Goliath. "Arrah, now, tache yure gran'mother to feed ducks!"

"Dhry up," says David. "Bad seran to ye," he says, "ye havn't the since of a catfish. By the light that shines, yure bad grammar givs me a cramp in the stommick." Och, David had a tongue in his head loike a jews-harp.

"Tear an' ouns!" says Goliath, "I'll not lave enough of your hide in one piece to patch a shoe."

"Tear an' ages!" says David. "I'll giv the buzzards a picnic wid yure karkiss, an' shure it 'ull make 'em sick to ate ye."

"Ye're a liar!" says Goliath.
"Ye're another!" says David, "and an ophthalmic ould Cyclops to boot."

Wid that Goliath lost his temper intirely.
He pawed up the groun' and kim at David wid his eyes shut, a bellowin', and that brings me back to the poethry.

Goliath poised his mighty spear,
'Twas fifty fut in length,
And unto David drawin' near
He punched with all his strength.

But David was surprisin' quick
And sphry upon his pins;
So dogin', natelly, wid his sthick
He whacked Goliath's shins.

With pain the giant howled and grinned,
And dhrapped both shield and lance
To rub his legs the lick had shkinne'd,
Thin David saw his chance.

Takin' a brick from his scrip,
He put it in his sling,
And, whirlin' it 'round head and hip
He let it drive full swing.

Right to the mark the dormick flies,
As sthraight as to a hod;
It smote the wretch between the eyes
And stretched him on the sod.

Young David, for to prove him dead,
In sight of all beholders,
Chopped off his unbelavin' head
From his blasphemous shoulders.
Dakota, Thursday, Dec. 1, 1892.

How to Make Little People Polite.

"Oh, dear, dear," said a mamma to me,
the other day, "I wish you'd tell me how I can get my children to be polite and of good manners. They are so rude I can do absolutely nothing with them. I try to teach them politeness, but all my talking is useless. What shall I do?"

At this juncture in came Tommy and Ralph pell-mell, and quarreling with each other about a top or a ball, or something.
"Here, you little ragamuffins," exclaimed the mother, in a loud tone of voice, "stop that, or I'll pound you till you ache. Go get some coal, Ralph, you young rascal!
Shut your mouth, Tom—I'll slap your face for you!"

"Madam," I said, "you just asked me a question. I am ready to answer it. Be polite yourself and your children will be polite. Example is more than precept. If you will pardon me, I will say you hav insulted your two boys by your language to them. Children hav natural feelings and quick perceptions. Speak to them as you would speak to a grown person, and I dare say a 'thank you' for a service rendered is quite as acceptable to a child as to a man or woman. If you call your children bad names they will call bad names also. There is no need of remarking upon their appearance, especially before people—no need to say you will pound them when you do not intend it. Be polite to them, treat them with consideration and respect, and they will return the compliment with interest." S. H. W.

Be Glad.

"Care to our coffin adds a nail, no doubt,
And every grin so merry draws one out"
(Walcott).

There is a world of truth in this old saying. To be fretting, worrying, and grieving will make us dyspeptic, morose, and unhealthy. The blood becomes sluggish in our veins, and black melancholy settles over all.

But be glad, merry, and hopeful, and health will abound in us. The heart will beat quickly and cheerily, the lips be wreathed in smiles, and everything will wear a rosy hue.

Tears depress and smiles exhilarate. Be jubilant and all will welcome your presence. You will be like a sunbeam of joy to neighbor, friend, and companion.

Gladness is catching. Go forth, then, and sow its seeds that the harvest may be health and happiness for thousands.

AUNT ELMINA.

Correspondence.

CEDAR BLUFF, KAN., June 5, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my third letter to the Corner. I am taking music lessons now, and like it very much. Mr.
Remsburg is coming here to lecture the last of this month. I went down to Oklahoma last month all alone, and it is about eight hundred miles. I hav got the "Story Hour," and think it is the best story-book I ever read. I think that piece of poetry that was in THE TRUTH SEEKER last week was too good for anything. The title was "Brown's Religion." I was corresponding with a girl in Michigan, but I lost her address. I seldom ever go to church, and never go to Sunday-school.

Your Freethinker friend,
INEZ PLUMB.

ELMO, Mo., May 16, 1893.

FRIEND MISS WIXON: Once more the inclination has come upon me to hav a few words with my Liberal friends, through the Children's Corner. In the issue of April 8th I noticed a letter from Minnie
M. Geir, in which she spoke of a communication from Geo. E. Remsburg (which I failed to read) in regard to having a meeting of young Liberals at Chicago, during the World's Fair, which I think is a capital idea. But I do not think it probable that we could all meet at one time. I for one would like to show the world our numerical strength. So I will make a suggestion, as it would be almost impossible for all to meet at one time, we should hav a register for all those who attend the Fair, which could be easily arranged by addressing John R. Charlesworth, Chicago, Ill., secretary of the International Congress of Freethinkers, and hav him make the arrangements, and publish same in THE TRUTH SEEKER. In this way we should be enabled to form an estimate of our number. It would be well to charge a small amount for registering, to defray the expenses. I think there should be a day set apart for a congress of young Freethinkers of America, the object of which would be to form a union.

In this way those who could attend on a certain day could attend the congress, and those that could not could show their loyalty for the cause of Freethought by registering, and having it published at the close of the Fair. I think we should act immediately on this matter, as the Fair is now open. Your Liberal friend,
J. E. KRAFT.

WANTED.—A Liberal with $100 to $200 capital, who will go in partnership on a farm, will meet a good opportunity by addressing the undersigned for further particulars. The farm is situated in the northern part of Alabama. J. G. DREES, 424 519 S. 3d st., Philadelphia, Pa.

GOLD. SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum,
Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead,
Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also
Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Carlibo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests;
all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years'
mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL. MINERAL.

3mo14

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance.
12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for
Boys and Girls. 12mo, 333 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Free-thinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued.
64 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

IN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Christianity a Fiction.

THE
Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. . . . 10 cents.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 180 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoveries, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt-lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardner's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Protestant Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attitude at Contingency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

Send all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	10
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the number published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. Gould. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquiringo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquiringo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 253 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Greco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much, and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. Ball. Price, 25 cents.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES. A Refutation of the Argument that Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being. By the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER. No. 31 Extra of the Truth Seeker Library. Paper covers, pp. 59, price 15 cents.

To this little book we feel emboldened to ask especial attention. For it meets, we believe, a want long recognized by Free-thinkers. It is much more easy to convince people of the falseness of the Bible and the inexistence of the Christian God, than to persuade them that there is no god at all of any kind. At this latter step nine-tenths of them balk. The consideration which mainly influences them in holding on to this last tenet is that of design in nature. They declare it as plain as the nose on one's face that very many things about us, the animal frame in particular, bear unchallengeable traces of having been consciously adapted to a purpose.

And these persons who thus remain believers in a god are often serious obstacles to the progress of the anti-ecclesiastical cause. For they frequently think that as there is a god, the Christians may as well worship him, even though they are somewhat misled as to his nature by their scriptures. They think it better that God be worshiped in this fashion than not at all. Accordingly they acquiesce in the popular Christian customs, and deny a helping hand to the Antichristian work.

Notwithstanding the need for a work that should bring against the design notion an assault of adequate force and comprehensiveness, no such one has heretofore been provided for Freethinkers. The argument mainly relied on has been that one—contained in the first section of the present book—If the world required a god to design it, does not that god equally require a god to design him? This argument is certainly unanswerable; but still further reasonings, traversing other fields, give yet fuller satisfaction. Such further reasonings have been produced, but they have been scattered through a wide extent of literature. It was needed that they should all be brought together into a form procurable by whatever Freethinker might desire to press this issue against his Christian friend.

This need is satisfied in the present work. About every argument that bears against the design theory has been incorporated in it.

"The Design Argument Vitiates Itself by Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers," is the first proposition. If, it is asked, it is the wonder of a thing that suggests the necessity of a creator, does not that necessity for a creator increase just as the wonder increases? Then as God is more wonderful than the world, does he not require a creator more than does the world?

"If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent" is set forth in the second chapter. To the assertion that he could be, the pain in the universe is the answer that has always been given by philosophers since the dawn of reason and inquiry. What brazenness is it that alleges goodness of a god in whose universe every mouth is a slaughter-pen and every stomach a tomb!

"If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Wise." The reasons for this affirmation which heads the next chapter are: First, his processes are egregiously slow. The present works of nature have been produced not by a single decisive act but through a period of millions of years, by means of an infinity of changing forms whose wavering confusion betrays imbecil aimlessness. Second, the processes of a supposed designer would have to be admitted to be egregiously wasteful. A thousand seeds are sown where one sprouts, a thousand animals born where one survives. Third, the alleged designer's processes often serve no use. Many animals have about their bodies organs of no benefit whatever. Evolution, it is shown, explains their presence; but theology is confounded by them. Fourth, besides all these faults of the processes of the designer just named, there is the remaining one that said processes have produced extremely bungling pieces of workmanship. Besides the creatures of the earth having been a long time in being made, and having been brought forth in the midst of a profligate waste, and having been encumbered with useless appendages, the whole mechanism with which they have been furnished is faulty at countless points; and of this examples are given.

In the fourth chapter, or section, design is denied altogether. The argumentation does not, it declares, purpose to stop short merely with pointing out, as it has done, that one designer necessitates an infinite series, and that the imperfections in nature indicate that if there is a designer he is one of limited goodness and wisdom; but it goes on to take another step, and denies the existence of any particle of design whatever. "Subserviency, fitness," says the book, "is one thing. Design is another. The subserviency we admit; the design we deny." This distinction is pursued, and made clear, at a length which precludes its reproduction in this column. At this point the famous watch argument, of Paley and other theologians, is taken to pieces, and not put together again. "If the adaptation of a watch's parts proves an intelligent watchmaker, so must the adaptation of man's parts prove an intelligent maker of man"—those who have been at a loss how to meet this standard argument will here find the reply which they have wished.

"What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design," is next set forth. It has been shown, says the book, that an intelligent designer did not determine the present constitution of things; but the inquirer will be helped to a clearer understanding of the matter by learning what did. The manner in which complicated organisms have been produced from simple beginnings, priest-hated Evolution fully shows. Accordingly, an outline of evolution follows.

"Astronomy and Design" is the title of the sixth section. While there have been published a reasonable number of books devoted to disproving design and affirming evolution in the departments of animal and vegetable life, there have been but few given to the purpose of accomplishing the like task in merely physical inanimate nature—particularly astronomy. Observation of this fact induced the dedication of a special chapter of this treatise to astronomy and design. It is noted in detail that the phenomena of astronomy—the positions, motions, and temperatures of the sun and the earth, and of all the other heavenly bodies—are utterly devoid of evidence of an intelligent designer. This chapter is the longest in the book. The outline of the science of astronomy which it embodies will be a bit of welcome instruction for the persons who have never attended to that branch of learning. Of course, it pretends to be of no consequence to those who have studied that science.

Sixth section and last which closes this strange, eventful history of Theistic misreasonings, is titled, "The Argument of a First Cause." It reads in one place:

"The Theists deny our right to challenge the existence of their God, for, say they, our discoveries of natural causes have been extended but a limited distance back, and while we have so far found but natural causes there exists behind all a great supernatural first cause which puts all these lesser causes in motion."

"But this argument is utterly groundless. The fact that discoveries have so far extended only a certain distance back, can be no more used to prove the existence of a God than it can to prove the existence of anything at all else. It seems to us no more sequent to say:

"We have as yet explored only so far back: therefore a manlike being—

"Than to say:

"We have as yet explored only so far back: therefore all was created by a beast with seven heads,

"Or than to say:

"We have as yet explored only so far back: therefore the owl and the pussy-cat went to sea in a beautiful pea-green boat."

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144
Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.
Price, 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.
By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.
By R. G. INGERSOLL.
With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."
Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.
Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.
By W. B. GREG.
Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

L. K. Washburn's Works

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.
Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.
Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.
The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.
One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and
Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.
Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Force and Matter;

OR,
Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:
Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things in Immortality of Matter, Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Force, Man,
Infinity of Matter, Brain and Mind,
Value of Matter, Thought,
Motion, Consciousness,
Form, Seat of the Soul,
Immutability of Natural Innate Ideas,
Laws, The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Personal Continuance,
Laws, Vital Force,
The Heavens, The Soul of Brutes,
Periods of the Creation, Free Will,
Of the Earth, Morality,
Original Generation, Concluding Observations,
Secular Generation, tions.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.
Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.
Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Gems of Thought.

The greatest pleasure an honest man can feel, is that of giving pleasure to his friends.—Voltaire.

A GREAT man is a torch in the darkness, a beacon in superstition's night, an inspiration and a prophecy.—Ingersoll.

THE priesthood in all religions sing the same anthem. First, the abuses are stoutly defended; but when the ground is no longer tenable, then these abuses form no part of the holy faith.—W. S. Landor.

LINCOLN said he did not believe in total depravity, and although it was not popular to believe it, it was easier to do right than wrong; that the first thought was: what was right? and the second—what was wrong? Therefore it was easier to do right than wrong, and easier to take care of, as it would take care of itself. It took an effort to do wrong, and a still greater effort to take care of it; but do right and it would take care of itself.—Wm. McNeely.

BUT if prejudice prevails in philosophy, what shall we say of religion? The race as a whole is divided into a large number of religious systems, and each system into sects. Every individual apprehends the "eternal truths" from the standpoint of the sect in which he was educated. Rarely does he change from one faith to another, and when he does so it is not often for his peace of mind. Such an "Exodus from Houndsditch," in Carlyle's homely phrase, is accomplished only "in a state of brutal nakedness, scandalous mutilation." Why? Because religious ideas are deep-seated and fundamental. To receive into the mind a group of new and foreign notions of such a kind requires a breaking up and readjusting of the old order such as few can undertake with safety.—Professor Patrick on the Psychology of Prejudice.

THE orthodox idea of God—a God that creates poor, fallible beings, and then forever damns them for failing to believe what it is impossible for them to believe—he [Abraham Lincoln] abhorred. The Golden Rule was his moral standard, and by this standard he measured not only the conduct of man, but of God himself. Like the irrepressible Dr. T. L. Brown, he wanted God to "damn others as he would be damned himself." He delighted to repeat the epitaph of the old Kickapoo Indian, Johnnie Kongapod:

"Here lies poor Johnnie Kongapod
Hav mercy on him, gracious God,
As he would do if he were God
And you were Johnnie Kongapod."

Lincoln thought that God ought at least to be as merciful as a respectable savage.—Was Abraham Lincoln a Christian? by John E. Remsburg.

IN conclusion, gentlemen, I presume to offer you a faith; yes, I beseech you to put your trust and your faith in work. Toil, young men, toil! I am keenly conscious of the triteness of the advice; but I ask you to reflect upon it because I, who have been nothing but a worker, am a witness to its marvelously soothing effects upon the soul. The work I allude to is daily work; the duty of moving one step forward in one's allotted task every day. How often in the morning have I taken my place at my table, my head, so to say, lost, my mouth bitter, my mind tortured by some terrible suffering—and every time, in spite of the feeling of rebellion, after the first minutes of agony my task proved a balm and a consolation. I have invariably risen up from my daily work, my heart sometimes throbbing with pain, but firm and erect, able and willing to live till the morrow. Yes! work is the one great law of the world which leads organized matter slowly but steadily to its unknown goal.—Zola's Address to Paris Students.

A SUPERSENSITIVENESS with regard to truth is the essential characteristic of a scientific frame of mind. Every suggestion that is offered in explanation of phenomena which are imperfectly understood is received with cautious reserve. This characteristic is liable to be mistaken for uncertainty or for prejudice; but in reality it is solely the outward sign of a just appreciation of the numerous sources of fallacy, which so often tend to render the most brilliant speculations worthless, when examined rigidly and coldly by the ideal standard of truth. When gauging the probability of the truth of any suggested explanation, it is held to be scientifically unsound to welcome it merely because some one of undoubted honesty of purpose has expressed his entire belief in it. There is always the possibility of mental bias to be reckoned with, as well as the possibility of unconscious delusion. No single sense is to be implicitly trusted. A preconceived idea may lead to the recognition of one property, while others of greater importance are overlooked.—Professor Youmans.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During American Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

13 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
 3 " The Church Robbing the People.
 3 " Thanksgiving.
 14 " Sabbath Laws.
 10 " Children and the Church.
 6 " Woman and the Church.
 4 " The Church and Thomas Paine.
 3 " Studies in Natural History.
 15 " The Bible and Science.
 1 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.
 1 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
 4 " The Atonement Scheme.
 2 " The Lord and His Works.
 10 " Prayer.
 1 " The Creeds.
 1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
 5 " Missionaries.
 1 " The Lord's Instruments.
 25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
 1 " The Church and Slavery.
 1 " Priests and Politics.
 4 " Ireland and the Church.
 2 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
 1 " The Uses of the Cross.
 4 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
 9 " Persecutions of the Church.
 12 " Some Allegories.
 3 " Heaven.
 6 " Hell.
 7 " Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTB.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlund Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

- 1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake. 5
- 4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. 5
- Underwood. 25
- 7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller. 10
- 8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison. 15
- 9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
- 10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin. 10
- 11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin. 50
- 12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural and Portrait. 25
- 13 Essays on Miracles. David Hume. 10
- 14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 15 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 16 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 18 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh. 10
- 19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake. 5
- 20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake. 5
- 21 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts. 5
- 22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts. 5
- 23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts. 5
- 24 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts. 5
- 25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
- 26 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts. 5
- 28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
- 29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake. 5
- 30 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts. 5
- 38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H. 10
- 42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts. 10
- 43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts. 5
- 44 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake. 10
- 47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

- 1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen." 5
- 3 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 5 200 Questions Without Answers. 5
- 6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin. 10
- 7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian. 10
- 8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake. 5
- 9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
- 10 A Few Words about the Devil. 5
- 11 New Life of Jacob. 5
- 12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake. 10
- 13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake. 10
- 14 Acts of the Apostles: A. F. A. H. 10
- 15 Luciferous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
- 16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh. 5
- 18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh. 5
- 19 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz. 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

$1.50 AMERICAN WATCH

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 30 days; is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.

It has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lantern Pinion, 240 beats to minute; No key required to wind and set; weight 4 oz.; exactly like our Patent for $1.50, $3 for $4.00, $12 for $15.00, by express. Mention paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CHARM. AGENTS & Storekeepers send for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Keelo, A.M.

12mo. cloth, $1.00.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL

Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	Oxidized,	each $2.50
"	{ 10 ounces per doz., }
"	Oxidized,	" 3.00
"	{ 14 ounces per doz., }
"	Oxidized,	" 3.00
"	{ gilt bowl, }
"	{ 10 ounces per doz., }
"	Oxidized,	" 3.50
"	{ sectional gilt, }
"	{ 10 ounces per doz., }
Orange "	Oxidized, plain bowl,	" 2.75
"	" gilt "	" 3.25
Sugar "	" satin "	" 3.00
"	" gilt "	" 3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Ba ges, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer.

(If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,

Vineyard, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

10 Regulate the STOMACH, LIVES AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABLETS.

SOLE U.S. PATENTED.

JERRY IS PULLED OUT OF LIMBO.

So they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: and Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.—Jere. xxxviii, 13.

S. P. Putnam's Latest Pamphlet.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1892, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Freethought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for
 - His Processes Are Eggregiously Slow,
 - They Are Eggregiously Costly,
 - They Often Serve No Use,
 - They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church: Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. Bennett. 8vo, 1,119 pages. Moroccco, gilt edges. Price, $4.50.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 895 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

EAGLE BRAND.

THE BEST

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO.,
Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.

13118

WIZARDS MAGIC PURSE.

The most bewildering illusion discovered in this century! A very strong purse of the finest dressed kid strongly sewed and beautifully embroidered. (Regular goods of equal quality sell for 50c. to 75c.) Comprises 2 pockets, which we GUARANTEE no one can open in 3 hours without knowing the secret. It has baffled all experts in puzzle-magic. A great novelty, a wonderful mystery and a useful article, all in one. Your money and secrets are safe inside this purse! Satisfaction Guaranteed. Sample with secret in sealed envelope post paid with Catalogue of 1000 useful articles, 25c. 3 for 60c.; 6 for $1.00, $1.50 Doz. R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO, 65 Cortlandt St., N. Y. Steow20

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, 10 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

Water of Life

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

News of the Week.

EDWIN BOOTH died on the 7th.

THE railroads have agreed to run occasional excursion trains to the Fair at half rates.

THE Christians in Morocco are in apprehension of massacre by the fanatical Mohammedans.

THE municipal council of St. Denis, a suburb of Paris where Freethinkers and Socialists abound, has had operations begun in demolishing the great stone cross in the cemetery there.

ARCHBISHOP SEMBRATOWICZ was mobbed by forty Polish students in Lemberg, Austria, on the 8th, on account of his visit to the pope, which the Poles regard as treason to the Greek Catholic church, of which he is a prelate.

AT New York city on the 6th a Providential visitation testified the Lord's dislike of churches. In a storm the lightning struck the gilt cross of St. Mary's Catholic church. A piece of the shattered emblem struck a man in the street below.

RUSSIA's persecution of the Jews has extended to the Russian province of Poland. Five hundred families have been expelled from the Ronda-Gonzowski district alone. All the heads of families thus expelled were engaged in trade and possessed more or less real estate, which they were forced to abandon.

THE cholera is spreading through the valley of the Tigris and the Euphrates. It has been brought this year, as on preceding cholera years, by religious pilgrims who take no thought for this world but are intent on joys beyond. They are flocking to the "holy cities" about Basorah, bringing all the way for burial the remains of persons who have died in India.

A REQUEST, signed by Robert G. Ingersoll and others, has been presented to General Gordon, United States Senator from Georgia, that he deliver a lecture on Generals Grant and Lee. Gordon commanded one of the wings of Lee's army, and helped make the terms of surrender. His lecture is expected to give a valuable estimate of the men considered.

THE Russian extradition treaty was formally promulgated by President Cleveland on the 7th, and is now in effect. Anyone who now attacks the despot of Holy Russia, or who is in any degree connected with a plot to do so, or whom the perjurious Russian police choose to charge with being so connected, will be caught for said tyrant and turned over to him by our officers.

THE Spanish princess Eulalia has been treated with excessive homage by American society and by the authorities. The latter have everywhere granted her a military or semi-military escort. Society in giving her receptions has furnished her with a throne, this being placed on a raised portion of the floor. This leads Ward McAllister and others to remark that we are drifting away from the republican simplicity which was severely enforced in the early days of the nation.

PROF. MAX MULLER, the highest authority in England on Oriental languages and literature, throws down a gauntlet in the Nineteenth Century to Theosophists. Professor Muller says that the esoteric Buddhism preached by Madam Blavatsky never existed in India and that the lamented high priestess of Theosophy, ignorant as she was of the two languages in which the canonical books of Buddhism are written, fell under the influence of designing Hindus, who played upon her credulity. As for the existence of mahatmas and the belief of Theosophists that living beings can hold communication with unseen spirits, it is pointed out that in all the history of Theosophy no independent witness has ever been present to test these miraculous performances in soul communion.

REV. J. G. WHITE was nearly mobbed in the Cumberland Presbyterian church at Macomb, Ill., on the 7th, and was tried the next day in a justice's court on a charge of using indecent language. He is seventy-five years old, and has been a Cumberland Presbyterian preacher for half a century. He lectured on the "Iniquities of the Roman Confessional." He said that Roman Catholic priests were a lot of libertines. He also spoke in most accusatory terms of women who go to the confessional. Many Catholics were present and became greatly enraged. The police had to draw their revolvers to keep the crowd away from the preacher. He was arrested after finishing his lecture. Many of the Catholics and Protestants drew knives, but the police prevented their use. The jury returned a verdict to the effect that, as the lecturer had simply made use of translations from books used by Catholic clergy, he was not guilty of the charge.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 25. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 24, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

HIS HOLY HYPOCRISY TRYING TO PERSUADE EUROPE TO DISARM. (Sequel or companion picture next week.)

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

By WATSON HESTON.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice.
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

New Publications.

S. P. Putnam's Latest Pamphlet.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1892, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Free-thought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for
His Processes Are Egregiously Slow,
They Are Egregiously Wasteful,
They Often Serve No Use,
They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Unpeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by
J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR

Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and
the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth; Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone; Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards? The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested? Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 25. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 24, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - - JUNE 24, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

An Ideal for Freethinkers.

Persons aspiring to practice certain principles are always greatly helped by contemplating the life of an individual who has already done so, and done so with preëminence and illustrious success. Models, exemplars, ideals, are of vast value to endeavorers after self-improvement of any kind. When a striver after a better life views the career of one who has lived such a life so prosperously and gloriously that his personality enriches and beautifies that course, the aspirer's task grows to be a labor of love, his efforts in self-culture are toilless and delicious satisfactions and delectations, and he rapidly though half-unconsciously becomes that which he admires.

To the ideal characters already thus enthroned in Freethinkers' souls for admiration and imitation, a superb addition is afforded by the personage of Henry Thoreau. This man, celebrated most as an author, was born at Concord, Mass., in 1817, spent nearly all his life in New England, and died in 1862.

The phase of Thoreau's character to which we shall first call attention is that in which he appears as a man of the highest morality and strictest integrity, and as filled with the warmest feelings of amity and benevolence toward his fellow-beings. Christians, so prone to denying the compatibility of these traits with the disbeliever's character, may here behold them expanded in their noblest proportions in the nature of a complete and thorough-going Infidel. "Duty," wrote this person while yet a youth, "is one and invariable; it requires no impossibilities, nor can it ever be disregarded with impunity. . . . None but the highest minds can attain to moral excellence. . . . To reject religion is the first step toward moral excellence. . . . Could Infidels liv double the number of years allotted to other mortals, they would become patterns of excellence. So, too, of all true poets—they would neglect the beautiful for the true." William Henry Channing, a litterateur and friend of Thoreau, says of the latter: "His views of friendship were high and noble. Those who loved him never had the least reason to regret it. He made no useless professions, never asked one of those questions that destroy all relation; but he was on the spot at the time. . . . He meant friendship and meant nothing else, and stood by it without the slightest abatement; not veering as a weathercock with each shift of a friend's fortune." The same friend thus addressed Thoreau in these lines:

"Modest and mild and kind,
Who never spurned the needing from thy door—
(Door of thy heart, which is a palace-gate);
Temperate and faithful,—in whose word the world
Might trust, sure to repay; unvexed by care,
Unawed by Fortune's nod, slave to no lord,
Nor coward to thy peers."

Again says Channing: "Of his character, the moral qualities form the basis; for himself rigidly enjoined; if in another, he could overlook delinquency. Truth before all things; in all your thoughts, your faintest breath, the austere purity, the utmost fulfilling of the interior law; faith in friends, and an iron and flinty pursuit of right, which nothing can tease or purchase out of us." In a college essay the subject of this sketch wrote thus of the goddess of the Freethinker, Truth: "Truth neither exalteth nor humbleth herself. She is not too high for the low, nor yet too low for the high. She is persuasiv, not litigious, leaving conscience to decide. She never sacrificeth her dignity that she may secure for herself a favorable reception. It is not a characteristic of Truth to use men tenderly; nor is she over-anxious about appearances." At the funeral of the writer of the above majestic lines, Ralph Waldo Emerson said: "A truth-speaker he, capable of the most deep and strict conversation; a physician to the wounds of any soul; a friend, knowing not only the secret of friendship, but almost worshiped by those few persons who resorted to him as their confessor and prophet, and knew the deep value of his mind and great heart. His soul was made for the noblest society; . . . wherever there is knowledge, wherever there is virtue, wherever there is beauty, he will find a home."

Thoreau was one of the earliest and most violent protesters against slavery. The love of unbounded freedom, of the most unrestricted individualism, breathes from every page of his writings, and the thought of the enthrallment of millions of his fellow-creatures in the Southern states was to him intolerable. After vehement outbursts of denunciation, he executed the remarkable act of formally seceding from the nation of the United States. He deliberately renounced membership in a government that upheld slavery, and proclaimed himself a ruleless unit, a man in his natural condition, ununited by any civil compact with his co-dwellers of the earth. In 1846 he uttered the markworthy saying: "Any man more right than his neighbors constitutes a majority of one already." And again: "I know this well, that if one thousand, if one hundred, if ten men whom I could name—if ten honest men—ay, if one honest man, ceasing to hold slaves, were actually to withdraw from this copartnership, and be locked up in the county jail therefor, it would be the abolition of slavery in America. Under a government which imprisons any unjustly, the true place for a just man is also a prison." On this deliverance F. B. Sanborn remarks:

"This sounded hollow then, but when that embodiment of American justice and mercy, John Brown, lay bleeding in a Virginia prison, a dozen years later, the significance of Thoreau's words began to be seen; and when a few years after our countrymen were dying by hundreds of thousands to complete what Brown, with his single life, had begun, the whole truth, as Thoreau had seen it, flashed in the eyes of the nation."

The particular reference of Thoreau to being imprisoned for withdrawal from the government, has its origin in the fact that he refused to pay his tax-collector any money, to go for the support of a government that maintained slavery, and was therefore put in jail. Whenever Emerson came to the cell and said, "Henry, why are you here?"

the reply was, "Why are you not here?" He remained steadfast in his refusal to pay taxes, and finally his friends paid them for him so that no obligation stood against him and he had no choice left but to vacate the jail. On succeeding years his friends continued to pay the assessments levied against him, and thus prevented his imprisonment again.

In providing means for the physical support of his life, Thoreau was scrupulous not to put any other human being under the slightest burden or inconvenience. His literary income was trifling, and as he would never be pecuniarily indebted even to his dearest friend, he eked out a living by various labors, such as farm-laboring, gardening, fence-building, land-surveying, pencil-making, and whitewashing. He was possessed of a remarkable mechanical faculty, and could readily excel in any craft. He had no false pride in such matters, but was proud of his work and his mastership therein, and averse from the gentility of his neighborhood. He records: "For more than five years I maintained myself solely by the labor of my hands, and I found that, by working about six weeks in a year, I could meet all the expenses of living; the whole of my winters, as well as the most of my summers, I had free and clear for study. I found that the occupation of day-laborer was the most independent of any, especially as it required only thirty or forty days in the year to support one." He said of himself that his "greatest skill had been to want but little." A few cents a day supplied his simple needs. He used neither tobacco nor alcohol. The intoxication of the morning air he pronounced infinitely superior to that from any other source. He could view only with amazement the conduct of his fellows in spending all their waking hours in toil, to procure an infinity of things that they could just as well do without. The chief preciousness of life, he thought, lay in its opportunity for contemplation, for the expansive and unoppressed exercise of the faculties of the soul; and that men could willfully forego this celestial employment, and pass life's golden hours with their mentality set on some cramp task, was to him incomprehensible. He wrote: "The order of things should be reversed: the seventh should be man's day of toil, in which to earn his living by the sweat of his brow, and the other six his Sabbath of the affections and the soul, in which to range this wide-spread garden, and drink in the soft influences and sublime revelations of Nature." In exemplification of this doctrine that men need to, and should, labor but little, and should give the main of their time on earth to contemplation of the wonders and joys so abounding around them, Thoreau retired from the ordinary life of the world to a lonely spot by Walden lake, Massachusetts, and erecting a hut with his own hands, lived two years on such means of subsistence as he could procure there without too great expenditure of time, and devoted his hours to meditation. He went, in his own words, "to the woods because he wished to live deliberately, to front only the essential facts of life, and see if he could not learn what it had to teach, and not, when he came to die, discover that he had not lived." In another place he says he went to Walden to "transact some private business," which nobody else could do for him, "with the fewest obstacles."

Thoreau encouraged his logic to penetrate every theme and to reason as newly and daringly as possible; and likewise explored with his imagination every avenue and nook of the world of fantasy. His endeavor was in his mind to live all possible lives, think all possible thoughts and feel all possible sensations.

Others he incited to the same headlong overvaulting of barriers and wild and free excursion into possible nature. For example, one of his verses reads:

"The timid it concerns to ask their way,
And fear what foes in caves and swamps can stray,
To make no step until the event is known,
And ill to come as evils past bemoan.
Not so the wise: no timid watch he keeps
To spy what danger on his pathway creeps;
Go where he will the wise man is at home,
His hearth the earth, his hall the azure dome;
Where his clear spirit leads him, there's his road,
By God's own light illumined and foreshadowed."

Thoreau had, said Emerson, "in a short life exhausted the capabilities of this world."

Thoreau is an example of the Natural Man, as contrary to the denaturalized man whom we usually meet. In contrast with that emasculated, artificial product of a repressiv religion and a narrowing conventionality, his figure stands forth with titanic grandeur. He spurned Christianity, the Religion of Sorrow, with its melancholy themes and dreary prohibitions, and mentally affiliated himself with the glad and free paganisms of antiquity whose creed was enjoyment and pride. And equally with the pagan religions of nature, he loved his own religion of nature—the communion with the universe about him which spontaneously and instinctively grew to be the prevailing mode of his mind.

Thoreau's love of nature and wildness, and also his imaginal craving to live myriad and diverse lives, made him a fellow with all living things of field and forest. He confessed that he sometimes felt like a hound or a panther. He loved Indians, and said that had he been born among them he would have been an insatiable hunter. "It was," says Emerson, "a pleasure and a privilege to walk with him. He knew the country like a fox or bird, and passed through it as freely by paths of his own. . . . His intimacy with animals suggested what Thomas Fuller records of Butler the apologist, that 'either he had told the bees things, or the bees had told him.' Snakes coiled round his leg, the fishes swam into his hand, and he took them out of the water; he pulled the woodchuck out of its hole by the tail, and took the foxes under his protection from the hunters. . . . He knew how to sit immovable, a part of the rock he rested on, until the bird, the reptile, the fish, which had retired from him, should come back and resume its habits—nay, moved by curiosity, should come to him and watch him." Thoreau's connection with nature was partly that of poetry and partly that of science. He set himself to keep a calendar of Nature, and her daily doings about him for twenty years found record in his journal. He had gages for the height of the river; noted the temperature of springs and ponds, the tints of the morning and the evening sky, the flowering and fruit of plants, all the habits of birds and animals, and every aspect of nature from the smallest to the greatest. He was an expert in all kinds of woodcraft and outdoor exercise and employment. His senses, naturally acute, he had cultivated to an exquisite fineness. "His power of observation," says Emerson, "seemed to indicate additional senses; he saw as with microscope, heard as with ear-trumpet, and his memory was a photographic register of all he saw and heard." And these special faculties performed their office no more admirably than the abstract powers, the generalizing and ratiocinative principles, of the mind, which received the items thus supplied by sense. "Every fact," says Emerson, "lay in order and glory in his mind, a type of the order and beauty of the whole."

It seems necessary that a pattern and hero for the people's admiration and imitation shall be of great intellectual gifts. Goodness of heart we not infrequently meet about us. To arouse the energetic emulation of the multitude, it appears requisite that this goodness of heart be united in the same person with illustrious ability of mind. Thoreau's intellect was as admirable in its power as his heart in its right feelings. His writings have a place with the first rank of American classics. They are unsurpassed in merit by those of any writer of this continent. Many critics of the first estimation would say, they are unsurpassed by those of any writer of the world. They touch with the certainty of a master equally topics of material nature and of transcendental imagining. They excel indifferently in observing and describing reality, and in building from fancy's gauzy films and dreaming's opaline hues the enchanting palaces of the ideal. The personal quality which pervades them is of a racy wildness, a strain peculiar and almost unearthly, the taste of which the reader never forgets.

The keynote of Thoreau's character, perhaps we may venture to predicate from the foregoing, was development. His life was a continual unfolding and education of his senses, of his emotions, of his intellect, of his will, and of his moral sentiments. Of self-development, as opposed to the ancient Christian cult of self-stunting and self-abasement, he stands perhaps the most splendid modern champion.

A word on the personal appearance of this lovable personage before we take leave of him, is desirable. He was of medium build, perhaps a trifle undersized. He possessed blue-gray eyes, brown hair, a large nose, and features in general somewhat rough. He wore a beard. In F. B. Sauborn's diary is this observation: "Thoreau looks eminently sagacious—like a sort of wise wild beast." Also, he "has a weather-beaten face, which reminds me of some shrewd and honest animal's—some retired philosophical woodchuck or magnanimous fox."

Thoreau's death resulted from pulmonary consumption. It was as triumphant as his life. Of his last illness his sister said: "It was not possible to be sad in his presence. No shadow of gloom attaches to anything in my mind connected with my brother. . . . Henry's whole life impresses me as a grand miracle. He said he should leave the world without a regret." His sister further wrote: "Henry was never affected, never reached, by [his illness]. I never before saw such a manifestation of the power of spirit over matter. Very often I have heard him tell his visitors that he enjoyed existence as well as ever. . . . The thought of death, he said, could not begin to trouble him. His thoughts had entertained him all his life, and did still. . . . During his long illness I never heard a murmur escape him, or the slightest wish expressed to remain with us. His perfect contentment was truly wonderful. None of his friends seemed to realize how very ill he was, so full of life and good cheer did he seem. . . . My heart is filled with praise to God for the gift of such a brother. . . . I wish you to know how very gentle, lovely, and submissive he was in all his ways. . . . He would sometimes say: 'I should be ashamed to stay in this world after so much has been done for me. I could never repay my friends.'" Thoreau's last letter concluded: "I am enjoying existence as much as ever; and regret nothing."

The Christian multitude complains, finds fault, accuses; Thoreau kept silence, uncriticisingly selected, and taught by example. The Christian multitude frets, despairs, falters; Thoreau moved forward unopposably with serene and imperial brow. Christians sourly reject; Thoreau warmly accepted. Christians spurn with sulky distaste; Thoreau riotously indulged and enjoyed. Christians devote themselves to repression of their mind and heart; Thoreau unfolded himself till he felt and moved with the universe. Others are burdens, in varying degrees, upon their fellows; Thoreau stood a monument of self-sufficingness. Others take, Thoreau gives; others consume, Thoreau produces; others are gulfs, Thoreau is a fount. Churchmen would make everyone think like them, but Thoreau wanted each to have the same liberty to think as himself. The orthodox churches were iron bands and locks on negroes' legs; Thoreau was a hammer shattering bonds. The too common worldly speech is a mantle hiding ill things in the pool below; Thoreau's accents were crystal waters through which was exactly seen reality beneath. Thoreau's honesty was an oak of trustiness and a lily of purity; the honesty of most Christians is—such as it is. Christians too largely are dejected; Thoreau was exultant and glad. The souls of conventionalists and religionists are gloomy inquisition cells; Thoreau's spirit was a freest sky of morn shot with silver rays of light and tinged with hope's roseate hue.

What a world would this be were all—men, women, and children—of the strain of Thoreau. Excellent Thoreau, independent, tranquil, joyous, bountiful, feeling, truth-telling, honest, sage, undauntable, free—when shall we be like thee?

Victory!

On last Saturday, the 17th ult., the United States court of appeals sitting at Chicago reversed the decision of the United States circuit court granting an injunction against opening the World's Fair Sundays. In this decision the government's contention that the World's Fair people had violated the contract implied in the act of Congress of March 3, 1893, was met by the court with the judicial enunciation that the government, by withholding the $570,000 of souvenir coins, had disregarded its covenant with the Fair. And, said the justice, that act of Congress was not a law, but a contract, and if violated its only remedy lay in a suit to recover the money, with damages.

The decision pointed out that the government's money investment in the Fair was but a trifle compared with the expense borne by other parties, whose rights in the premises were coequal with those of the government and should be considered and conserved by a court of equity. Finally, the decision held that it had not been shown that the government could suffer any loss or damage by the opening of the Fair on Sunday, and for this reason the government could have no right or claim in equity to the relief prayed for.

The judgment of the lower court was reversed.

This decision makes it pretty certain that the Fair will be open Sundays during the rest of its continuance. If an appeal is taken to the Supreme Court of the United States it cannot be heard till October, when the Fair will have been ended.

There is one hope left for the Sabbatarians, but it is a forlorn one. The Sunday-closing people now pin their faith to the Wanamaker suit. "This decision clears the way for the prosecution of the suit begun in the United States court here by Ex-Postmaster-general John Wanamaker and other stockholders in the Exposition to prevent Sunday opening," said the Rev. L. McLean, secretary of the American Sabbath Union. The point has been made in this case just concluded that the World's Fair directors were willing to refund to the government the money had under the Souvenir Coin act in return for the privilege of keeping open on Sunday. Mr. Wanamaker and the World's Fair stockholders associated with him assert in their bill that such return of this money would cause them loss and impair their property interests as part owners of the Exposition. This suit will now be pushed vigorously. E. F. Cragin, one of the leading advocates of Sunday closing, said it was a bad defeat, but he did not think it worth while to give up altogether. "The Fair may be open for a time," said he, "but Sunday closing will win in the end. The Wanamaker and Bown case will probably go right on. The decision rendered to-day does not affect their case."

Attorney-general Olney at Washington on hearing the decision said that his department had a clear record in the case, and had exhausted every legal means to enforce the mandate of Congress in the matter. He could not see that any injunction should be thrown in the way of opening the Fair on Sunday, but, as the matter was in the immediate charge of United States Attorney Milchrist and two able assistants, he had no doubt that they would exhaust every legal means known to the law to uphold the intent of Congress. While he saw no means in sight, perhaps those who had been more intimately associated with the case than he would yet discover some. Other matters of a complicated character, he said, would undoubtedly grow out of this decision. Suits over money promised, paid, or yet to be paid, or declared withheld, would arise.

Another thing affected by the decision, he continued, was the government exhibits. All the departments of the government had exhibits at the Fair, and all the appropriations made for them were coupled with the condition that the exhibits should not be opened on Sunday. It was entirely clear that the government exhibits could not be opened on Sunday. As this officer, Olney, is to be accounted as guided by instructions from the head of the cabinet to which he belongs, that head, namely President Cleveland, would seem to have submitted to the country this as his position on the Sunday question. The Republican president of last term appears to stand on the same platform. Ex-President Harrison said to a reporter a few days ago: "Whatever I think personally about Sunday opening, it seems to me that when Congress made the law and gave an appropriation to the Fair that settled the question."

Of the other opinions of eminent men expressed through the week, one was of a visitor from France, who gave the Gallic view of Sunday. Prince Roland Bonaparte on his return from his trip through the West said: "I was astonished to hear they were discussing whether to open the World's Fair on Sunday. I am very sorry for that. Sunday is the poor people's day."

The churches are now uncorking their vials of wrath to be emptied on the heads of the hell-guided miscreants who have provided the people with innocent and temperate places of pleasure and profit on their leisure day. For instance, Bishop Merrill, of the Methodist church, says that his denomination will boycott the Fair. He has information to the effect that the general commission will issue a manifesto withdrawing the exhibits, and that the five million members of the church will keep away week-days as well as Sundays. "In our manifesto," he says, "it will be laid on the consciences of our people to stay away from the Exposition that defies the laws of God. Millions of Methodists the world over, in response to that manifesto, will cease to patronize the Fair. The Methodist church will not be alone in the movement. I have it on good authority that other denominations will adopt measures equally radical, if not more so. That means that the World's Fair will be a financial failure. You can depend upon it the other Protestant denominations will follow our example. Mark my words when I say that the World's Fair will be a financial failure. The business men of this city, heretofore supposed to be the soul of honor, have by their action on this Sunday question broken all that is held sacred and honorable in business methods." Bishop Merrill is the chairman of the committee under whose authority the Methodist church exhibits were placed at the Fair. He declares: "This commission, which represents five million members of the Methodist church in this country, is composed of the leading spirits of Methodism in the United States, and it will give out a manifesto that will stir up the world."

Last Sunday Rev. W. C. Steele, Methodist chaplain at Randall's island, New York, in a sermon appealed "to the supreme being to deliver Chicago from the reign of Satan and close the Fair on the Sabbath day." Unless there is intervention by this supreme being—more powerful, it is said, than a supreme court, though we do not remember to have seen his operation so often—the noble Columbian Exposition will in all likelihood do its blessed work of improving the people in head and heart on Sunday just as on every other day.

Colonel Ingersoll About to Lead a Religious Sect.—He Declares Briggs Insane.

A person calling himself Gordon Lawrence, "P. J. S.," whatever that means, has come from London with a praying band to convert Colonel Ingersoll. The grace-defying object of their efforts received a few days ago a letter reading in part:

"ROBERT G. INGERSOLL—Dear Sir: For many years I and my friends have been warm admirers of you as a man of intelligence and brains, but the time has come when you should lay off this shell of unbelief which octopus like surrounds you and come forth in the clear light of belief and faith before you are taken from hence."

"Now, my dear sir, I do not wish to enter into any debate on the subject of religion. I intend to convert you. I have recently come to this country from London, along with a few staunch followers, and we are preparing to give to thousands of Americans the true religion of mankind."

"We will preach a religion that is the most sensible and logical of all known religions. We have taken the best and most probable ideas from those records for which there is reasonable proof. This religion of mankind is not the religion of any one sect, but is intended to take into its fold the thousands and thousands of dissatisfied men and women in Protestantism and Catholicism to-day."

"This religion is a reasonable religion. It is not like the Salvation Army in its methods, but we believe in having at its head a man like yourself, a giant intellectually and a Christian though as yet an unbeliever. With a leader like you we could sweep the country and gain thousands of converts for the religion of all mankind."

"We are believers in prayer, and by prayer we hope to convert you to this new religion for which you can do so much good. For several nights past I and my followers have prayed at the door of your residence that the good and kind maker would preserve you for this great movement. Now we shall pray by night as well as by day. We shall go to your place of resort by day and pray that you will be converted and accept the leadership of our religion and become leader of the Society of All Souls."

"We will have a national headquarters in New York."

"I will call upon you in a fortnight to secure your answer to our request. We feel confident by that time our efforts in prayer will have worked your salvation."

"Yours to save all souls,

"GORDON LAWRENCE, P. J. S."

An elevator boy at the colonel's law office in Nassau street told a reporter that he thought he remembered seeing three strangers of mournful visage standing with bowed heads in the hallway, outside the door of the colonel's private office, but no more touching the identity of the colonel's mysterious correspondent could be learned by the scribe. The colonel, says the reporter, remains in ignorance of the particular sect which he is to be called upon to lead. The reporter saw Colonel Ingersoll in his summer home at Dobbs Ferry, and he abandoned his favorite game of billiards to chat for half an hour about the letter. "Am I used to this sort of thing?" said he; "well, rather. At least one thousand letters reach me annually from as many fervid religionists. All the letters go into the wastebasket. I open a letter and see, 'Mr. Ingersoll, dear sir, I am a Christian and I'—That settles it. I used to read them, though. Some of the writers used to give me Hail Columbia. But this Gordon Lawrence, P. J. S., letter is of an unusual sort. There is a coolness absolutely refreshing about it. He proposes to convert me because he wants to use me as a figurehead for a new sect. Pshaw! the letter is a piece of insanity. No more so, however, than the trial of Briggs by the presbytery. That was the wildest thing I ever heard of." The colonel chuckled at the recollection. "But Briggs is also insane—not a doubt of it," he continued, "only not quite so crazy as his antagonists. Now, as for my solicitous friend, the 'P. J. S.'—whatever that means—he is welcome to pray for me wherever and as long as he chooses. I hope that the knowledge of my absence from my New York home, and the fact that he has been praying before an empty house, will not discourage him. His God will understand the mistake and undoubtedly overlook it."

The Freethinkers of Kearney, Neb., have made arrangements to charter a car to attend the International Congress of Freethinkers in Chicago.

J. E. Remsburg's work on Lincoln will contain a long and interesting letter relative to Lincoln's religion from Hugh McCulloch, Lincoln's last secretary of the treasury, and the only surviving member of his cabinet. Mr. McCulloch's letter was written especially for this work. Mr. Remsburg's book will also contain a letter bearing on this question from Chief-justice Chase to his daughter.

We have on our list a few score subscribers who owe us from three to six dollars, and seem pertinaciously bound not to square up, though we have asked them in the most fraternal manner. But this is the last call, and if we do not hear from them right away we shall draw the blue pencil across their names, and there will be nothing for them to do but join the church. Heston will enlighten them no more, and they won't know anything about the World's Fair or the International Congress of Freethinkers (which is going to be about the biggest thing in Chicago), or what is going on in the world of thought anywhere, or what becomes of Dr. Briggs and how the Presbyterians progress in revising their creed. They will just have to exist like benighted Christians. To escape this fate all they have to do—and we ask them for the last time—is to inclose the amount they owe in a letter and mail it to THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York city. Then will they sleep peacefully and have pleasant dreams.

A book has been published to show how far children comprehend terms, remember facts, and exhibit a reasoning faculty, as shown by their answers in examinations, etc. Among these answers are the following: "Doxology, dropsy in the head." Let us charitably suppose here that the youngster meant that doxology-singers have dropsy in the head. Another youth submitted: "Monastery, a place for monsters." Evidently this was included in the list of mistakes by some oversight. "An incendiary is when you go round preaching and singing him." History, good youth, bears out your assertion. "The Crusades were millinery expeditions undertaken by the Christians." The Crusades were undertaken by people who, in the words of a certain philosopher, "attach holiness or impiety to lawn-sleeves or gestures." Their object was at any rate as frivolous as millinery. "Evangelist, one who speaks from his stomach." Sense will be found in this by farm-boys with clothes all buttonless from crawling under barns for yellow-legged chickens upon the advent of the revival's holy man, or by the overworked cook-maid sweltering over dainties while the mistress is in the parlor flooding with best-best smiles said fortunate H. M.

Our neighbor, the company publishing the Twentieth Century, has made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors. We presume the paper will be continued. Mr. O'Laughlin failed once before, in Boston, as a Catholic book publisher, and as the publisher of the Catholic Herald, and his incursion into Freethought publishing seems to have ended the same way. How a Catholic can reconcile it with his conscience to publish such splendid scientific works as are in the Humboldt Library, which directly antagonize his faith, and to print a socially and religiously heretical journal like the Twentieth Century, is what we never could see. He certainly couldn't do it for money, as the assignment attests. In the hands of Mr. Pentecost and Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Sullivan, all Freethinkers, the Twentieth Century did a good work. If it should be edited by a Catholic its usefulness would cease. So far it has been supported by social or religious heretics.

We trust our readers will see a little warning in this disaster, and not let THE TRUTH SEEKER get into another financial hole. Prompt renewals of subscriptions will be particularly appreciated this summer to keep the paper merchants and printers quiet. We have nothing but our subscriptions and book sales to depend upon, and when these languish times are hard at 28 Lafayette place. A word to the wise and good is sufficient.

Manhattan Liberal Club Medley Meeting.

German Masonic Hall, 220 East 15th street, Friday evenings at 8 p. m. On the evening of June 30th, closing the lecture season, instead of the usual program, there will be twelve five-minute speeches alternating with entertainment in lighter vein. The subject proposed is, "What is the Next Best Thing to Do?" Each speaker can in reply state briefly what reform, in political or social affairs, he would advise for immediate use. If he has several hobbies he should trot out one ready to be harnessed to the car of progress at once, and not such as will only be useful to usher in the millennium. To put it in another way, suppose $10,000 bequeathed for use in reform work in the next twelve months, for "causes" rather than charities or personal relief, what would be the best way to dispose of it?

The entertainment will consist of music, songs, recitations, etc., by members of the club and obliging friends, including "topical songs" for the occasion, and a mandolin and guitar duet. The admission will be "ten cents all around," and the receipts will be devoted to the expenses of the International Congress of Freethinkers, to be held in Chicago, October 1st to October 8th.

E. B. FOOTE, JR., President,
120 Lexington avenue, New York,

Communications.

Reply to Miss Chapman.

IV.

ESTEEMED FRIEND: I cheerfully concede that we can recall in imagination objects, places, or persons not within range of our vision. I concede you may have seen, so to speak, as graphically as ever with the normal eyes, "long vistas of streets, friends—both living and dead," etc., both in your dreams or when musing awake, "within the walls of a narrow sleeping apartment." I concede we may thus hear music and songs more sublime than the harmony produced by greatest masters at other times; or see visions more rapturous than the realities of nature and art, or angels, mermaids, dragons, or our dead friends clothed in graceful robes, endowed with wings to soar through space, etc.; I concede all you claim, except this: that it is our "spiritual senses," or something not man, that perceives these phenomena, instead of the cogency of the physical organism.

Until some one of the world's Spiritists, or "spirits" direct, will define "spirit," what it is, what and where they are, what are their constituents, etc., I am compelled to consign them to realms of fiction. If an entity they must be something, if something they must be possessed of organs, parts, and constituents, and if possessed of constituents it must be in the power of such spirits, at least through their "mediums," to so inform the world. If reality and fact, we have a right to demand of them, and it is the emphatic duty of Spiritists to inform us, what they are, or forever cease their unwarranted assertions.

Please imagin the "spirits" of the many wise men who have lived on earth, who made the study and analysis of the most complex phenomena their sole mission in life, now existing for years and centuries in "spirit-life," yet refusing or unable to enlighten the world with a solitary intelligent idea of the constituents of a "spirit-form." Able now to penetrate almost all other mysteries of nature ("spirits" are supposed to study for pastime), yet they have failed so far to name a single element contained in the "spirit-body." The human body contains: oxygen, hydrogen, carbon, phosphorus, sulphur, calcium, iron, etc., none of which are embodied in the so-called "spirit-form," or we could see them with normal vision, weigh and handle them, or analyze them like other forms. (And here it occurs to me that fire cannot burn them, a buzz-saw not injure them, nor dynamite blow them up. If not miracle, what is it?) Furthermore, the last particle of the human form is, after death, consigned to the grave or the crematory oven, and not an atom of it survives to constitute such "spirit," because all assumes other forms—leaving absolutely nothing to compose a "spirit."

It is evident, therefore, that as our ignorant ancestors conjectured Gods, who had no existence, to explain natural phenomena, so they conjectured human "spirits" to explain mental phenomena, leaving however all these creatures of the imagination sadly unexplained, and thus infinitely increasing, instead of decreasing, existing mysteries.

I believe cerebration or psychical phenomena produced by the subtle and complex functions of the living organism is not yet fully understood; and I am not ready to deny clairvoyance, hypnotism, or kindred phenomena as long as we are aware of a source, cause, or basis for such phenomena, but when in the absence of a good, sound, healthy "medium" of flesh and blood, or other manipulator, it is affirmed, that such phenomena can be produced without such human agency then, I confess, I can not prostitute my intellect to believe it.

It is not necessary for the Materialist to prove how the world exists and governs itself without a God; how the human body can produce such marvelous psychical phenomena, etc.; the self-evident facts are that such is the case. Neither is it necessary for him to prove that Gods and "spirits" do not exist. Upon those affirming devolves the proof. They must soar through space and discover God, or produce "spirits" in the open court of science, or our plain and honest denial is equivalent to proof, that such beings do not exist.

You say: "Nature could not possibly bestow what she does not possess." Pardon me, dear friend, again to differ from you. Evolution—now scientifically established—proves the contrary. Behold the congress of nations and their products in mechanics and arts at the World's Fair at the present time. Then, kindly, permit your mind, imagination (or "spirit") to soar back millions of ages, to the time when this globe was in an incandescent state. Did not all this evolve, and nature and man produce at each successive period greater achievements than during antecedent periods? Did not purely chemical and physical forces—soulless and willless—first evolve protoplasm, this simple cell-tissue, this higher form of organisms, until we reach man, with each step "bestowing" higher order of development than it contained itself? Did not Ingersoll's Puritan parents "bestow" upon him that which they did not possess themselves? Did not your parents, my brilliant disputant, bestow upon you talents entirely absent in themselves?

No, indeed, mind is not necessary to produce mind, any more than perfume is needed in the black soil to produce the rose which produces the delicate aroma. Even the origin of a Humboldt or a Spencer is a purely physical effect of purely physical causes. And if it were true that we must look beyond nature for the intelligence that produces mind, would it not follow that we must look at the same source for idiocy, deformity, brutality, lust, and crime?

You dispute another proposition by saying: "How a powerful factor can produce innumerable results and yet have no existence is more than I can comprehend." Were you ever in love? Pardon my frankness—I desire no confession—but a reminder of that Tender longing! sweetest hope!

The golden time of love's first kiss;
[when] The eye beholds the heavens ope
[and] The heart too reveleth in bliss;

would, no doubt, instantly convince you that certain conditions, which have no existence in themselves, may be powerful factors for good or evil. Love is no entity but an emotion. Not real being but a power. Not substantiv reality but the potent and invisible motor which pervades all animate creation, fires the human brain, and lays prostrate strongest manhood at the feet of lovely, tender woman.

Man, when created,
At first alone, long wandered up and down,
Forlorn, and silent as his vassal beasts;
But when a heav'n-born maid, like you, appear'd,
Strange pleasures filled his eyes, and fir'd his heart,
Unloos'd his tongue, and his first talk was—love.

And—en passant—love is purely an attribute of the physical and based upon the passions. And this fact more than any other convinces one that life after death and during all eternity—when the human form we may have called "wife" has mingled with the dust of the earth and can exist no more forever—is not worth living. And I, for one, I am frank to admit, could find no adequate substitute in sentiment or misty "spirits."

Again, you say: "Matter divested successively of size, extension, color, weight, etc., would vanish." Indeed! But can you perform such wonderful feat? If you can divest a twenty-dollar gold piece of size, extension, weight, without removing any of its material I will cheerfully supply one to learn how. But it cannot be done. Matter has such attributes and retains them forever. We can transform it in other shape or color, and reduce its form and weight, but as long as an atom exists we can not divest it of properties—much less can such properties exist without matter.

Steam, ice, etc., still are matter as much as water, but it has changed form. But your notions of space, my friend, are most amusing. If space were something it would not be space, because space is the antithesis of something—nothing. Matter, worlds, gods, or you and I could not occupy space if space were matter, because two bodies cannot occupy the same space at the same time. Hence the universe exists—because it has infinit expanse to exist in. If there were no space or space were matter, nothing else, of course, would exist. Dr. Carus in the Open Court defines space thus: "Space is ideal, not real. Space is a conception of ours and nothing more. Space is abstracted from reality. We abstract extension and omit all material." This is space.

I am afraid, my young friend, you are too learned—hav read too much! Learning I define to be (aside from the practical, elementary, and positive branches of knowledge) conversancy with the ideas and theories of other "learned" men, who again obtained their learning from others, and so on back till we find the origin of these ideas in the brain of very ordinary and often ignorant mortals. Original, intuitiv, common sense, and acute analytical power, is generally preferable to the abstruse learning of those whose wisdom culminates in doubting their own reality or that of the universe.

You still doubt that "we are our bodies," and insist I must prove it. But here I must again beg to differ. You, affirming that "we" are not our bodies, must prove it, because the self-evident fact is that "we" and our bodies are identical. Where "we" are there our bodies are, and where our bodies are there are "we." If "we" should appear at the International Congress this fall, it would be necessary, I rather think, to go in corporeity or I fear "we" would be absent. This is a self-evident fact and requires no proof. But the contra-proposition requires proof because it is contrary to fact, startling, sadly lacking evidence.

Again, where were "we" before our physical bodies were in existence? "We" were not in existence a hundred years ago. Then, in course of time, "we" were born—yes, two animals the crowning work of nature (I am very proud of this). So the self-evident fact is that these two animals are you and I, and "we" are these two animals. As long as the latter live so long will "we" exist. But in time "we" must die. These bodies will then disintegrate, their constituents assume other form; and then it is equally self-evident that "we" shall cease to exist. "We" were the result or product of two certain forms of matter, animals, and their respective functions, and when these particular forms vanish, of course, "we" can exist no more. Born "like a brute," it seems inevitable that we must also "die like a brute," the parson's admonition to the contrary notwithstanding.

All this, my esteemed friend, may not be very agreeable to our vanity, but the philosopher in search of truth ignores all but facts lead they where they may. What I have said is self-evident. But now your school of thought insists that when this body, which originated and constituted man, is no more, a dual man survives—an exact counterpart—and so will live during eternity. But this is not self-evident, but mysterious, and equivalent to affirming that twice two equals five instead of four. You affirm—you must prove it, or my simple statement that man is dead when his body exists no more establishes such fact.

You next refer to the faculties of the dreaming man, which implies a living man, consequently is no analogy for the faculties of a dead man or the absorbed elements now in other forms.

And now, dear friend, your involuntary cries of despair in facing the inevitable fate of all living creatures betray the main reasons of the tenacious continuation of the belief in immortal life. But behold the suffering, wretchedness, and horrors menacing the pathway of every human life. In vain we plead for aid; does it not prove that nature is not responsive to our yearnings and that all gods are indifferent to our misery? Hence the clamoring of frail human creatures for final eternal bliss is evidence of egotism and conceit, and no argument in this discussion. Because if it were, proof that immortal life were not desirable (and which I think I can supply in some future letter) would prove there is no such existence. But we well know that our likes or dislikes cannot change the immutable order of nature. But death—eternal peace which was our fate before birth—is a boon in disguise.

Please substitute "the men in the dug-out" for "ape men" and you have my answer to your next argument, as we have no space to discuss technicalities of evolution now.

You say in proof of a God: "In no age of the world, and among no people, has He left Himself without a witness;" and this universality of the God idea is one of the popular orthodox arguments in proof of a God—shooting very far off the mark, however. If you insist that pagans' and heathens' gods—fetiches and all—are false gods, and your higher conception of Divinity the only true God, kindly inform me how the many heathen idols can prove your God? And if your "true God" does not prove the reality of the heathen god, or of the old-school Bible God, or of fetiches, etc., and all these false gods do not and cannot possibly prove your God, how, in the name of logic and reason, can your several opposing beliefs prove your general belief?

I explain it differently: Like causes produce like effects. All races and nations originally having been alike ignorant concerning abstract existence and natural phenomena, all alike conjectured a God "in their own image" to explain matters; and falsehood once rooted fast is hard to eradicate, especially when to the social, political, and financial interest of priest, preacher, and politician to perpetuate the same. But as you in the kindness of your heart have greatly civilized your God, so future generations will continue the good work of reform and finally crown an honest man or woman as their sole king, queen, or God.

As there are no two blades of grass alike, so there never were two Lincolns or two brothers alike; otherwise—like causes absolutely producing like effects—we would positively have two Lincolns alike. But the slightest variation in prenatal conditions or in his environments in after-life could not produce a Lincoln.

And, I regret to say, you are still "not penetrated by the solemnity of the problem" for which you offer in explanation a being or personal God. You might as well believe that an animalcule in a drop of water can control the motion of our earth or change the motion of our planetary system in its mighty orbit, as to believe that any being, no matter how majestic in its proportions, could rule an infinit universe. Did you realize that if your God were the size of the sun and all the planets combined, and filled all space occupied by these planets and their vast orbits—a thousand millions of miles in extent, that even such a monstrous God, when compared to an infinit universe, would be more insignificant than is an infusorium compared to our world? And furthermore, were your God within reach of our world, busy “controlling the minds and operations of our bodies,” as you say, “He” would of necessity, in the mean time, neglect the rest or principal part of the universe. And furthermore, when here, “He” would be entirely out of sight of other worlds and systems; and when there, would be absolutely out of reach of our strongest telescopes; and if moving with the speed of light through space, it would take “Him” years to get back—and in the mean time you would be without a God!

An infinit universe excludes an infinit God. A finite God cannot be a God—hence there is no God.
Rochelle, Ill. OTTO WETTSTEIN.

My Vision.

In the silence of a star-lit eve, when contemplating man's slow progress in knowledge during the many ages of his existence on this earth; reflecting on his proneness to superstition; dreaming of his whence and his hence; and wondering if those bright stars were peopled with sentient, happy beings—a trance-like reverie gradually controlled me, and in spirit like a sunbeam I was wafted away to some far-off sphere, the atmosphere of which felt strange. The sun was shining brightly. Everything there surprised me. But the great magnitude of every object impressed me most. I saw buildings like unto mountains, trees of prodigious height, animals of immense bulk. Then I saw issue from a vast doorway a gigantic figure, somewhat in human form, that took steps each of nearly a furlong. On looking down in passing, this towering figure espied me as something curious, paused a moment, and then in ponderous tones (though in accents which with care I could understand) slowly muttered, “Where could that manikin have come from?”

Notwithstanding the great disparity in size, I felt a strong desire to answer his question, and thus replied: “I know not where I am at this moment, but I was born and grown on the third planet in order reckoning from the sun.” “Well, well,” said the giant, sitting down beside me, “the globe on which you now rest is counted sixth from the sun.” By that I knew it was great Jupiter—fourteen hundred times larger than the earth and five times farther from the sun; and I thought there might be some relation between the great bulk of the planet and the size of things on it. Now this big Ju-Peter seemed greatly interested, and asked me many questions about the customs, government, morals, religion, etc., that prevailed on my little planet; all of which I answered truthfully. Then he told me that no other globe received so much attention from his people; that with large telescopes they could define the continents, lakes, and seas, and could even see creatures continually moving about—oftimes clusters of them apparently in collision. On which account they called the planet the Hive.

The description of things on the earth given in my answers moved the great Ju-Peter to say that the early inhabitants of his planet must have gone through similar experiences; that their ancient legends show that ages ago they thought theirs was the only solid, inhabited world; that all the stars were made solely for their delight; that they believed in a future epoch when their globe would undergo some miraculous change, and be made an eternal happy home for simple folks and slaves; that they had a God somewhere which had revealed all these things through mediums and vicars; and that all persons who denied the truth of them would be cast into the sun as fuel for its flames. But these superstitions, he said, were long since abandoned. The telescope reveals that this is one only of many worlds, and surely it cannot monopolize the entire attention of any God.

From our legends we learn also, continued the sage (I now felt I was listening to one), that for ages the people were ruled over by vicars supposed to be appointed in some way by their God. This kind of godly government, though costly and cruel, existed a very long time. It was costly, for it taxed the common people heavily for means to build grand temples for the God and fine houses for the mediums and vicars, and to provide for them luxurious living—the best and fattest of all productions. It was cruel, for it authorized the loyal ones to rob and kill whoever spoke or thought aught against the godly government. During that long dark age the people were ignorant, superstitious, very poor, and much given to crime; and the rulers had many Black islands covered with places for confinement and punishment of criminals. But this kind of sacred rule was abolished long ago. A very simple kind now exists—with no vicars, no mediums, no nobility, and but few in public office to be supported; consequently taxes are trifling. Having universal freedom in speech, in belief, and in trade also, it follows that there is now no favored class, no monopolies, no extremely rich or poor. And this general equality of opportunity furnishes few temptations to crime; hence there are fewer courts, lawyers, and prisons to support.

Then the sage talked on morals; contrasted the ancient time of godly rule—a time of ignorance, fanaticism, cruelty—with the present age; all actions being now in accord with a kind of Golden Rule. He dwelt a little on the relation of the sexes. In the olden time only an inspired vicar could unite in wedlock. Thus the tie was holy and indissoluble. No matter how unsuited and averse to each other the pair became, the knot held. Much discord and smothered suffering, ending frequently in slow, sometimes in violent murder, resulted. Millions were strangled with the sacred knot which no one must loose. But the knot is gone with the medium and the vicar. Now, a plain contract between the two most interested is sufficient. Instead of the two being made one, or rather one being absorbed in the other, each is now equal to the other. As there is now no ownership of one by the other—no inferiority in right of person—it follows that good behavior, kindness, and mutual self-respect is more lasting. And since there is no domineering of one over the other—no compulsion—the child is born of love and kindness: hence there are fewer deformed, fewer idiots, fewer insane, fewer suicides; and asylums for such are not needed. The generations of to-day are fairer and healthier; and whereas, in the old vicar time a truly beautiful person was an exception, now beauty is—

At this point I lapsed into a nearly unconscious state, heard nothing more, and felt only a rapidly whirling motion. The stars were going and the sun just rising, when I was aroused from my trance by the bells calling the brainless devotees to matins.

L. G. REED.

They Should Pay Taxes.

There is a world of wisdom in that saying of the illustrious Franklin, “A religion that depends upon the state for its support is for that reason a bad religion.”

The most secure tie that binds the Christian religion to our national customs, is the legislative exemption of church property from taxation, and such a crying evil has this become that the public press sends forth a cry of protest against it. From an article recently published in the Chicago Daily News, it is shown that the McCormick Theological Seminary is possessed of vast real estate holdings, upon which they do not pay one cent of taxes. It is situated in the heart of the city and extends over some magnificent property residences, each of which is rented and brings in a handsome revenue, and the whole proceeds are then dropped into the treasury of the seminary. There are in all seventy-one fine houses upon this property; three are used as residences by members of the faculty, and the remaining sixty-eight are in the open renting market. They are in direct competition with other rentable property and derive a material and decided advantage from the fact that they are entirely free from taxation while the other property with which they are in competition is taxed to its full legitimate possibility.

It is an outrage upon our national traditions that such a system should be allowed to prevail. The spirit manifested in the documentary foundations of our nation, is, that all men are free and equal, yet this system gives to one class of men an unfair and intolerable advantage over their neighbor. The property owned by the seminary amounts in the aggregate to something over $1,000,000. It brings in a yearly rental of $50,000; and though from the revenue of the city government, street improvements are being made, increasing the value of the said property, not one cent by way of remuneration therefor does the seminary give. Paying no taxes, the seminary can reduce its rental below that of adjoining property, and still receive more than the owner, because he is compelled to pay taxes for himself, and taxes for his theological neighbor too.

Religion has always had to maintain its power and position by law and not by love; it was built upon bayonets, not upon Bibles, and now we must commence an unceasing agitation through the land to secure such a taxation of any and all church property.

If the Christian religion is true, it does not need the law to impart that truth or to compel an observance of it. And if it is not true, then the law should be placed far beyond the reach of its influence as a weapon too dangerous to be in its hands.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
 Sec. Freethought Federation of America.

Agnosticism.

An Agnostic is one who professes to know nothing about any God, and is honest enough to confess his ignorance. The difference between an Agnostic and a theologian is this: the former is sensible of his ignorance as to the ultimate causes of phenomena and admits it, while the other is equally ignorant regarding the same subject, but claims to know where he really knows nothing. A man may claim to know much about some God and know very little about anything. He may admit his ignorance in regard to the unknowable and yet be a Humboldt, a Darwin, a Huxley, or a Spencer. Let me state the creed of an Agnostic, premising that a creed is proper enough if one does not insist on its acceptance on penalty of imaginary eternal hell-torture. Enlightened human reason is man's highest standard of truth. The well-being of man is the most worthy object of man's effort. Observation, experience, reflection, and not so-called revelation, are the true means of obtaining truth; doubt is the beginning of wisdom; without doubt there is no investigation, without investigation no knowledge, and without knowledge no wisdom; beliefs are neither moral nor immoral in themselves; they are not subject to volition; they depend upon inherited tendencies, education, surroundings, and influences; nevertheless right beliefs are desirable and we should do what we can to advance the truth. Let the motto be: “In things that can be demonstrated, unity; in things that admit of doubt, free diversity.” Freethought will give us truth. Evil is due to man's inability to adjust himself to his conditions, to overcome antagonistic influences, and to utilize natural forces. Man is a progressive being; he is a rising not a fallen creature; he is the improved product of evolution, not the degenerate product of an illustrious ancestry, made perfect from the first by a supernatural, impalpable, designing creator. Man has inherited the instincts and traits of thousands of generations of savage life, and these, not the crude snake and apple-tree story and fall of the biblical mythical gardener, Adam, for filching fruit, are the cause of man's imperfect condition. Man is saved, not through the medium of any religious reformer executed in Palestine a couple of thousand years ago, but through his own efforts and the efforts of his fellow-men in subduing the natural world to his needs. Self-reliance is better than trust in alleged divine providence. Science is the only providence of man. A lightning-rod on a steeple will protect a church from a thunderbolt better than the fatuous, fulsome, flatulent, and futile prayers of a professional parson or the dedication of the church to some invisible, intangible, sexless phantom. Learning to live is better than preparing to die. This world is worthy of all our efforts. Of another world we know absolutely nothing. We should take thought for the morrow, and lay up treasures on earth, and make this world as comfortable as possible. The Bible is a natural outgrowth of the human mind, the literature of a people—a mixture of fact, fable, and fiction; of reality, romance, and rant; of truth, error, and purblind faith. All religions are evolutions, natural outgrowths, implying nothing supernatural or miraculous. The Agnostic believes in evolution, not in miraculous beginning of species; not that the first woman was made of a motherless man's rib; in natural selection, not in design; in law, not in miracle; in anthropology, not in dogmatic theology; in fact, not in fanciful fiction; in science, not in superstition; in intellectual culture, not in pueril piety. All phenomena are natural; the ultimate cause of phenomena is inscrutable; natural law is everywhere, and supernatural intervention nowhere. This, in short, is the Agnostic creed; and when theologians ask what will be given in place of their egregious, antiquated creeds we assert that nothing could be much more misleading than what they teach about an assumed personal deity, and that the foregoing is, at least, some improvement on the quaint, superannuated, and moribund creeds of deluded, credulous Christians.

W. F. L.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

World's Fair Notes.

MANUFACTURERS' AND LIBERAL ARTS BUILDING.—CONCLUDED.

Then coming toward our gazing-point, we behold the Mines and Mining Building and at our feet the Electricity Building. Then still turning to the left, the great blazing dome of the Administration Building confronts us; beyond that to the southward our eye traverses the roof and towers of Machinery Hall; thence we pass across to Agricultural Building, the glowing form of Diana on its pinnacle; beyond this on the south lake front are the Forestry Building, the Dairy Building, the Krupp gun, La Rabida, etc. Thence circling back along the lake front we strike the Grand Casino, and the long colonnades of the Peristyle, and Music Hall, and then we gaze at the entrancing picture at our feet—the great basin, the statue of the Republic, the fountains and the Columbian group, and from these we watch the windings of the lagoon, with the beautiful boats upon its surface, until it flows again into the lake past the battle-ship Illinois, and all this vast expanding scene is constantly animated with the presence of tens of thousands of people.

In looking upon this tremendous and varied panorama we have walked one mile around the roof of Manufacturers' Building, two hundred and fifty feet from the ground.

As day passes and night comes a still more magnificent view presents itself—Chicago with its countless lights, the Fair grounds with one hundred thousand electric jets, the lake reflecting these and flowing into the misty distance. On this lofty roof itself, at the four corners, are four great search-lights. The largest of these has the power of two hundred million candles, and its rays will penetrate fifty miles.

We begin to realize from this colossal stage what man has done—what he has accomplished through the long and toilsome centuries. As if looking down from the empyrean itself, we behold the glory and the genius of the universal race. It is outspread in a magnificence unequalled yet. Never have so many flags of so many nations floated together in peace and beauty. The East and the West, the North and the South have poured their treasures here. Kings in glittering triumph have never witnessed the like before. War's triumphal procession has never been so imperial. We are poets all as we gaze upon these palpitating pictures. There's music in every pulse of our being as we watch the rhythmic blending of city and flood and sky. Look upon the scene again and again—the wonderful panorama; the soft spring day, the fleecy clouds floating over the daintily colored sea, the shores packed with life and splendor, the stupendous, marvelous buildings, set like jewels in a golden round; the city circling till it is lost in dim and silver haziness like a poet's fitful and shining dream. Drink in to the very depths of your being the glory of tint, the melody of sound, the sublimity of space. Be inspired as no prophet ever was inspired. Dream as no dreamer ever has dreamed before. Be happy in this festival time of all the ages. Behold the noblest results of human toil, the harvest of man's martyrdom, man's courage, man's love, and man's liberty.

THE ELECTRICITY BUILDING.

We have passed the mountain high, and no such vastness will again greet our eyes as from the Manufacturers' Building, but pleasing and innumerable scenes still attract, and there is no loss of interest and variety. We roam along amidst great and imposing objects; as when from the Alps we journey down into the valleys, gigantic and beautiful forms press upon the way with alluring change.

Passing from the Manufacturers' Building we cross over the lagoon with its festival pomp, and the Electricity Building becomes our next point of view. Here are located the most novel and brilliant exhibits of the Fair. For the first time in international expositions a great structure has been devoted entirely to electrical exhibits. This building covers over $5\frac{1}{2}$ acres and \$400,000 was the cost. The order of architecture is Corinthian with central pavilion. At each of the four corners is a pavilion. Above each rises a tower 169 feet in height. An open portico extends all along the whole of the south facade. In appearance the exterior is that of marble, but the various windows and balconies are highly enriched with color. The pilasters are beautifully decorated, and the capitals are adorned with metallic effects in bronze. There are 40,000 panes of glass in this structure, more than in any other of the great buildings.

The rapidity of electrical development in the last few years finds no parallel in any other range of discovery. To the electrician ten years is a century, and even in one year all his pet theories may vanish in the blaze of a new discovery.

One of the great subdivisions of the department is an illustration of the commercial and economical uses of electricity in the domain of light, heat, and power.

The second subdivision relates to the development of electrical science. The historical feature is illustrated by priceless relics of early inventors, models, books, drawings, and maps. Special demonstrations and experiments are also made.

The Electricity Building itself holds but a fraction of the electric exhibits throughout the grounds. Scores of spectacular effects claim admiration and interest. The electric lighting of the buildings and grounds surpasses everything hitherto in power and beauty. There are 8,000 arc lamps, each of 2,000 candle-power, and 130,000 incandescent lamps of 16 candle-power. One powerful arc light is 8,000 candle-power, and there is the lamp which is of one-sixteenth candle-power. It glimmers like a tiny fire-fly. These are wonderful object-lessons of the uses of electricity.

The electric launches on the lagoon are constantly moving and brilliant displays of electric power. Pleasure boats and yachts in the outer harbor are equipped with electric motors. Special torpedo boats demonstrate the warlike uses of electricity.

Greater, perhaps, than any of the other spectacular exhibits are the flash-lights on the tallest towers within the grounds, two of which blaze at night from the top of Electricity Building. These are among the most marvelous pieces of electrical machinery yet produced. By delicate switch machinery the operator throws the light to any altitude or at any angle he may desire.

In the ornamental uses of electricity the great electric fountain at the western end of the Grand Basin, and directly in front of the Administration Building, is among the most elaborate exhibitions of the kind ever attempted.

France and Germany make the largest exhibits of any foreign nations, and these rival the magnificent exhibits of America. America has not a monopoly of lightning by any means.

In the range of electrical appliances the exhibit is very wide. There are cables, wires, insulation by various methods, switches, safety appliances, lightning rods, and conduits interior and underground. There are electric motors in street and other railways; in elevators, pumps, printing presses; in toys and novelties. Also electrical apparatus for heating apartments, flat-irons, ovens, and furnaces.

There are displayed the various methods of electrotyping, electro-plating, of forging, welding, stamping, and tempering metals by electricity. Also there are the latest inventions in chronographs, annunciators, fire-alarm, burglar-alarm, police telegraph, and railroad signal apparatus. There are to be seen all the appliances of the telephone, and the latest phonographs, and other inventions.

An interesting group is the application of electricity in surgery and dentistry and the electric current as a remedial agent. In other groups are dynamos, batteries, apparatus for electrical measurements, etc.

There is the kinetograph—Edison's new invention. It gives pictures as well as sounds. Phonographs are getting to be wonderfully useful. Lovers can breathe into it at midnight, box it up, and send it to their lady-loves in the morning C. O. D. What a fine saving of time. There is no such thing as "wasting one's sweetness on the desert air" in this century. It's all bottled up, and you can put your nickel in the slot and there you have it—all the songs and melodies, from "Boom-de-Aye" to "Old Hundred."

Among recent inventions are the coat-thief and pickpocket detectors. When a sneak-thief attempts to take a coat from its hook a current sets an alarm bell ringing. In the same way one's pockets may be protected.

Among the notable relics are the original Morse telegraph instruments and the original Bell telephone; also pieces of the cable-laying owned by the estate of Cyrus W. Field.

Most of the inventions I have mentioned were unknown when the Centennial Exhibition opened in 1876.

At the portal which faces the grand court is a fifteen-foot statue of Benjamin Franklin. Around the wall is printed the Latin epigram which fully translated is, "He snatched the lightning from heaven and the scepter from tyrants."

In the center of the building is a tower which shines with many-hued rays of electric light. There is an Egyptian temple modeled after those of Thebes in which different kinds of harnessed lightning make a brilliant procession. The walls and ceiling are arranged with many-colored panels in which the glittering current comes and goes like smiles on the face of the "telephone girl." For the "telephone girl" is here also, an eternal curiosity, whose "hello" will never cease to be. What a triumph of electricity to so utilize the liveliest member of woman's side of the house. A telephone exchange is just the place for the fair sex, and we take great pleasure in glancing at the neat array. St. Paul said, "Suffer not a woman to speak in church." Well, woman has got the telephone and all the churches in Christendom can't make her keep silence. I hope St. Paul will hear her "hello" in heaven. What a sweet revenge.

Varied and wonderful and beautiful are the uses of electricity. If I did believe in a "soul of the universe" I should say it was electricity. It comes as near to being a "god" as anything I know of. What is so strong as electricity—what so subtle, what so pervading? There is no drop of water, no tiny hair, where it is not. And perhaps the sun itself is an enormous electric battery—a big dynamo. I think I could answer every question of the theologian with the word electricity. Electricity is more subtle than spirit, for spirit is wind, but electricity is finer than that. And now this Ariel-like intelligence glances before us in ponderous and delicate machinery. It is what Byron saw in his dream, "A mighty and a beautiful thing of light." It sings, it thunders, it surges, it plays, it dances, it sparkles beneath our feet, it flames in the heavens. It is a toy, it is a giant. What battles it wins for us against "chaos and old night." What a courier-avant of the brilliant future. Was there ever such a revelation as this light itself revealed—a wonder-worker? Armies equipped, sent forth, a million strong, simply by touching the button. Never has there been such a wilderness of light as will be witnessed at this World's Fair. It is worth indeed a "cycle of Cathay" to behold one of these marvelous illuminations, to wander amidst these masses of color and streams of radiance—the waters shining like gold and gems; the walls, roofs, towers, domes, like the blaze of a conflagration, stripped of its terror and soft and glorious in its intensity; while the halls, adorned with the flags and treasures of every people, are shining like the sun itself, and through galleries and pavilions innumerable riches open upon us like magic, and lightning, once the demon of the sky, is now

A pard-like spirit, beautiful and swift, and waits upon our path with gentle effulgence; or is like a serpent with glittering, brilliant folds, with circling, dazzling hues as the graceful serpent of the olden time described by Milton, which allures to the path of knowledge, to real humanity and the destruction of the gods. Electricity was once a devil, but now it is the wisdom, the glory, and the light of the world.

MINES AND MINING BUILDING.

From the world of light, the flash of electricity, we pass to the under-world—the bosom of the earth resplendently revealed in that which warms and vivifies and adorns human existence.

The Mines and Mining Building has a length of seven hundred feet and width of three hundred and fifty feet. Its cost was $265,000. The architecture is of early Italian renaissance, while the French spirit prevails in the exterior design. There are spacious entrances on the four sides. There are broad, easy flights of stairs to the galleries, which are sixty feet wide and twenty-five feet high, and are lighted by large windows. More than one and one-half million pounds of steel and iron were used in the construction of this building.

The figure over the main doorway is a noble representation of the great industry to which the building is dedicated. It is a colossal, half-reclining figure of a woman in Greek drapery, holding aloft in one hand a lamp to guide the miner and in the other hand a pick.

Nowhere else is there a greater diversity of exhibits than in this building. Michigan has an immense copper globe, North Carolina a mica pyramid, Montana the famous Rehan silver statue of Justice, Kentucky a reproduction of Mammoth cave, and Iowa a coal mine and coal palace.

Germany has an immense exhibit of ornamental iron worked into fantastic shapes, New South Wales pyramids of silver and gold, England has a fourteen-ton "lob" of coal.

Not only are the different varieties of coal exhibited, but the chemical analysis of each is given, with tests of economic value and special adaptability. For example, it is shown that coal veins underlie a great portion of Texas—some forty or fifty counties—and though the production in this state has so far been small, the supply is inexhaustible, and much is of excellent quality.

The iron exhibit is wonderful. The United States surpasses all in its iron productions, last year exceeding ten million tons, or four times that of ten years ago. The production of steel is about five million tons a year, a growth of nearly three hundred per cent in the decade. The development of the iron resources of the Southern states has been great and rapid.

Stone is extensively represented—granite, limestone, marble, sandstone, and bluestone in varieties of color, highly polished, and very beautiful.

From the Pacific coast are orange-red crystals of a rare species; from Alaska, deep-red garnets with coats of mica; from the Bridal Chamber of New Mexico, silver ore to the value of $500,000, also a precious turquoise from Los Cerrillos. There are specimens from the zinc region of Lake Superior. From the North Atlantic coast is the rhodonite; from New Jersey, the mineral franklinite, named after the philosopher, and from the South Atlantic coast are amethysts, sapphires, etc.

Among the curiosities is an exhibit by Louisiana of a statue of rock salt representing Lot's wife. It would take more than salt to represent Lot himself with any kind of decency. It would have been fortunate if the man had turned back and suffered the same fate. All the salt in the world won't save his reputation now.

The Standard Oil Company exhibits the varieties of crude oil in America.

The Canadian government geological survey places on view a synoptic picture of the mineral resources of that country. Big nuggets of gold and silver are shown just as they are dug from the earth. There are also topazes, emeralds, rubies, diamonds, and opals, and remarkable specimens of iron, copper, and tin.

The Foote collection exhibited at the Centennial and at London and Paris comprises one hundred and fifty tons of rare minerals, occupying an area of six thousand square feet. Among the additions is a meteoric iron weighing two hundred and thirty pounds recently found by its owner in Arizona.

A complete mining laboratory is one of the great features of this department and is the most valuable of its kind in existence.

A tunnel runs due east and west about twenty feet under the south end of the building and contains a double tramway for the carrying of ore. The inside is boarded and covered with clay to resemble as nearly as possible an actual mining tunnel.

The exhibits are displayed mostly in pavilions, pagodas, and kiosks, and these add greatly to the magnificent spectacular effect of the whole. Arizona shows an old Spanish arastra; New Mexico a miner's cabin.

One can spend a day or a month here and find constant entertainment and instruction. I have been compelled to take my reader on a swift journey, and he must try and make the best of it. If in the Electricity Building we behold the soaring genius of man, here we behold his strength and perseverance. Here he is the giant Antæus, planting his feet on solid earth, with pick and shovel and lantern, and patiently, deftly penetrating even to the chambers of fire and the subterranean seas and plucking the treasures that for a thousand centuries have awaited his grasp.

THE TRANSPORTATION BUILDING.

And now for another marvel, the Transportation Building, with its gorgeous colored walls and beautiful golden entrance. This is the only one of the great buildings which is not white. All the other great structures are white, and hence the term "The White City." It might have been better if these great structures had not been altogether white, that there had been a variety of color, although "The White City" is very impressive and delightful as it is in its present radiance. But be that as it may, it is confessed on all sides that the harmonious and brilliant coloring of the Transportation Building is exceedingly agreeable and makes a fine contrast to the great mass of white in the other architectural glories of the place.

This building covers over fifteen acres of ground, and cost $370,000. In the center it is surmounted with a cupola one hundred and sixty-five feet high, reached by eight elevators, and from which is an extensive view of the grounds, the lake, and the surrounding country.

In this building is given the history and evolution of transportation, and a most wonderful picture it is of human growth. From the ancient days when slow-going wooden carts represented the means of transportation to the present time when one can ride in a swiftly rolling palace-car, there has been an amazing change, and the flavor of romance is in the study of this ample display.

No other industry surpasses that of transportation in utility or equals it as a power in the progress of civilization. Easy conveyance from place to place, says Lord Bacon, is one of the greatest sources of a nation's prosperity. Consider the amount of capital involved in transportation. The railroads of to-day are worth $25,000,000,000. This represents one-tenth of the total wealth of civilized nations and one-quarter of their invested capital. All the gold and silver in the world could not purchase the railroads. If to the railroads be added transportations by water and means of conveyance on common highways the magnitude of the interests here involved will be fairly understood.

History is illustrated by relics of earlier days. The development of water-craft, of wheeled vehicles, and of the railway is illustrated by accurate models, drawings, plans, and designs. A grand object-lesson is presented so clearly that in a few hours one can learn what would otherwise require months and years.

The exhibits are divided into six classes—railways, intramural transit, vehicles for common roads, bicycles, pneumatic machines, and marine transportation. A space of over eight acres is devoted to the exhibition of railways. There is a wonderful collection of equipments and appliances. It is less than seventy years ago that the first railroad ran its crude passenger train, and now we behold sixty-four modern locomotives of all types and sizes, from the one-hundred-ton engine to the five-ton logging machine for use in the forests of Michigan and Puget sound. The Old Colony railroad of New England shows the first engine and coach that ran over its tracks between Boston and Providence. The Pullman works show a complete train of coaches, France shows four engines and cars, Germany two engines, two passenger coaches, and several freight cars, and an ambulance car. The Pennsylvania company shows a model station, with photographs and paintings, etc.; a magnificent coach and three freight-cars, as well as the famous "John Bull" engine, and two of the first passenger-cars used on Camden & Amboy railroad in 1831.

Chicago, Ill.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

International Congress of Freethinkers.

At a meeting of the joint committee held on the 13th inst., the final part of the preliminary arrangements for the forthcoming Congress was agreed upon. The unanimity of opinion that prevails upon all sides augurs well for the success of the Congress, and the prospects seem very bright indeed for the greatest and grandest gathering ever had in the name of Freethought within the United States. The committee feel that a great responsibility rests upon them and they will endeavor to do their utmost to make this undertaking successful. With the prospect of several of the most talented Freethought lecturers from the various nations of Europe, from Canada, and likewise our home lecturers, an educational and oratorical treat will be guaranteed to all who participate therein.

In the name of liberty and the freedom of the expression of opinion, the humblest soldier in our ranks will be given a fraternal welcome, and we confidently hope that none will stand aloof from the movement, but by their pledges and promises of assistance give to the committee in charge that hope and encouragement that is so necessary at the present time. Judge Waite and myself, constituting a committee appointed to secure a hall, called upon C. C. Bonney, manager of the Art Institute, and made formal application for rooms in that building for the purpose of the Congress. We soon found, however, that it was impossible for us to get accommodations from that quarter, so we speedily transferred our attentions elsewhere. We were informed that the rooms were fully occupied during the months of September and October, and even had there been an opportunity for us to meet and hold our Congress there it would have been under the stipulation that "we would not attack the churches or any system of religious belief."

Rooms were eventually secured and agreed upon in another part of the city, and the following is now given out as the official call for the Congress:

The Congress will meet at 517 West Madison street, Chicago, Ill., on Sunday, the 1st day of October, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon. There will be three sessions during the day, and addresses upon Freethought topics delivered.

As previously announced, the Congress will continue in session for eight days.

All Freethought societies intending to participate with us in this Congress are earnestly requested to correspond with me as early as possible, declaring such intention, and giving the probable number of delegates they will send (in this respect no limitation will be made). All individual members of the national organizations, and the friends of our cause, will be afforded the same rights and privileges given to members of local societies, providing they send their names and addresses to me at least one month previous to the time of the Congress. The committee hopes to secure as large a representative gathering as possible, and we hope that we may have the support of every Freethinker in the country. We are at the present time in sore need of funds, and we appeal to all who are interested in the propagation of Freethought principles, and others who may be willing to assist us financially, to do the best they can for us in that direction. Subscriptions may either be sent to me, or to the American Secular Union.

Every little helps, and as the good name of our cause upon this side of the Atlantic ocean depends upon the success of this Congress, we hope that each will do his or her part to help us.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,

Sec. of Committee of Arrangements.

345 W. Randolph st., Chicago, Ill.

Watson Heston Asks for a Loan.

TO THE READERS OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Dear Friends: I am in a corner financially and would appreciate some assistance, if there are any among the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER who feel disposed to help me without inconvenience to themselves. I am not able to stand the usual rates of interest and commission charged by the banks and money-lenders, and will briefly state the amount of money I want to raise and the terms I feel able to meet in order to pay out.

I would like a loan of $500 or $1,000 ($1,000 if possible) on five years' time, either without interest or not over four per cent. Remember, I ask no gifts, but only a loan, and if any of the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER feel able to assist me on the above terms, I will keep an account and acknowledge each individual loan, no matter how small, and pay out as fast as I possibly can. Times are hard and money scarce, I know, but if anyone feels disposed to help me, I will appreciate their kindness and report from time to time in the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER the name and amount of each loan. Let each one who may make a loan give their name and address and say if they want interest or not. Money can be sent safely to me here either by draft, check, money order, or postal note. Now, friends, what say you? Do only what you can easily afford and no more, as I do not wish to put anyone to any inconvenience.

Trusting, not in the Lord, but in the generosity of my fellow-men and Freethinking friends, I am, Fraternally yours, WATSON HESTON.

Lock-box 286, Carthage, Mo., June 14, 1893.

Lectures and Meetings.

CHARLES WATTS and G. W. Foote have been engaged to lecture for the Friendship Liberal League the first and second Sundays in October next. Announcements of subjects will be published in due time.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH during his recent lecture trip through the Coast states traveled a number of miles equal to the diameter of the globe. His trip occupied a period of 152 days, and during that time he delivered 114 lectures, in addition to which he held a six nights' debate with Clark Braden at Seattle and a four nights' debate with John Dillon at Gridley, Cal. He has been invited to lecture in Minnesota during the month of August and would like to hear from Liberals along the line of the Northern Pacific as far as Fargo regarding lectures at that time.

OF Mr. Rensburg's recent visit to Cortland, O., B. F. Parsons of that place writes to the Ohio Chronicle: "J. E. Rensburg, a Liberal lecturer, delivered a lecture here on the 'False Claims of the Church.' In spite of the fact that the enemies of Freethought lawlessly tore down our posters each time we put them up, and the Choral Union changed its date to conflict with the lecture—also the disciples concluded that they wanted to make taffy the same evening of the lecture—with the above to contend with, over one hundred adults were in attendance and many expressed their delight in the address. The lecturer said: 'One of the false claims of the church is that the best men belong to her, while to-day a hundred colored clergymen are languishing in prisons for theft and adultery. Frederick Douglas, a Liberal, has not been charged with either. Of the four men whose deaths excited the most comment for many years Longfellow and Emerson were unbelievers, Guiteau and Jesse James were Christians; the former were guided by the natural laws of morality, the latter were the legitimate fruits of Christian morality. If crime is caused by unbelief, why is it that our jails and penitentiaries all are orthodox; that Christians' necks so often wear the hangman's rope? Here are the statistics taken of the prisons in England and Wales, 1873, by Sir John Trelawney, member of Parliament: Roman Catholics, 38,581; Church of England, 96,097; Protestant Dissenters, 10,705; total Christian adherents, 145,383; non-religionists, 379. Five hundred Christians to one Infidel.'"

Letters of Friends.

A Long-time Friend of Truth.

ADRIAN, MICH., June 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I believe this will make my twentieth year as a patron to this truly American print. Please accept my kindest regards, and believe me as ever,

Your friend and the friend of Liberal Freethought,
S. D. MOORE.

Four Recruits.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB., May 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to renew my subscription to your paper for another year, and inclose the names of four new subscribers, also express order to pay for same. The remaining $5 is for "The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," by D. M. Bennett.

F. B. WAMBAUGH.

Is After Solid Facts.

TUNKHANNOCK, PA., May 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In the hurry of business I had forgotten to renew my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER. I have just thought of it to-day. I must have it another year. Inclosed please find $3, and I want it sent right along, not missing a number, for it contains more solid facts than any other paper I know of.

G. W. CRAWFORD.

For the Eternal Truth.

BENJAMIN, UTAH, May 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am pleased very much with the style and general make-up of the old TRUTH SEEKER. And Heston's cartoons are simply immense. I hope his health will last long so his cartoons will adorn the front page of the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. Wishing you every success, I am,

Yours for the Eternal Truth,
GEO. HONE.

Wishes to Devote All His Life to the Cause of Truth.

SOUTH RIVERSIDE, CAL., May 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have finally succeeded in obtaining a new subscriber for the dear old TRUTH SEEKER for two years. Inclosed please find $6—$5 to pay for the paper and $1 for five copies of the "Crimes of Preachers," to be directed to myself. As I am now in the eightieth year of my life, I wish to do all I can for the success of THE TRUTH SEEKER while I live.

C. B. TUCKER.

We Will Distribute Literature With Your Gift.

BRANDYWINE, O., May 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $6—$3 for my subscription another year and $3 for the following books: "God and His Book," by Saladin; "The Resurrection of Jesus," by Don Allen; "Religion a Curse, a Disease, and a Lie," by S. P. Putnam; "The Morals of Christ," by Austin Bierbower. This makes $5.40. The sixty cents remaining you may use for your own benefit. Send me THE TRUTH SEEKER as long as I live. I cannot keep house without it.

SOL BENSON.

Admires a Man Who Dares Say What He Thinks.

NEWPORT, O., June 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose my subscription and one subscription to the inclosed address. I have been trying to get you a new subscriber. I had one that said he would take it but he since said collections came in too slow, so I send you the "V" and send the paper to my brother's wife in Colorado.

What's the matter with Governor Penoyer of Oregon for president in 1896? Just think of a man in high position that dares to say what he thinks.

E. P. BLY.

Would Hav Freethought Literature in Every Household.

PANAMA, IA., June 6, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1.50 for the following books: "The Creation of God," cloth, by Dr. Jacob Hartmann; "Crimes Against Criminals," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll; "Self-Contradictions of the Bible;" "An Outline of the French Revolution," by W. S. Bell.

I have had the pleasure of reading your valuable paper for the last year. It is just what I have been looking for. It ought to be in every household. Wishing you and your paper a long life, I remain, Yours for liberty,

ELMER PENNELL.

The Non-producers Want to Shut the Fair of the Producers.

HARMONY, IND., June 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have aroused a good many people to thinking; talked to lots of men; told them they ought to open the World's Fair on Sunday. I told them it was wanted to be shut only by this lazy, non-producing class, the priestcraft and saloon-keepers. One man cited the French Revolution. I asked him or them if they wanted a civilized, scientific nation to fall back a hundred years to a semi-civilized nation for an example. They just simply blushed, and exit theology.

Respectfully,
JESSE MAURER.

The Opinion of England's Foremost Scientist.

CREIGHTON, NEB., June 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1, for which please send the Bible Picture-Book to the friend's address inclosed.

And can you tell me whether Mr. Huxley has changed his views in regard to religion or not? I have been told so several times, and would very much like to know.

LAVINA MAGNER.

[No, Huxley has not changed his views on religion. He still regards it, as he always has, as the perpetual and most injurious foe of science. A lecture just delivered by him on evolution and ethics, and about to be printed, may touch on the subject.—Ed. T. S.]

The Clergy Steal the Dead.

ELK PARK, MONT., June 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have received word from Missouri of the death of an old friend and staunch Liberal, Vanie Vansickle. Though he lived in the midst of orthodoxy, he died as he had lived, a true Liberal. Though often persecuted and slandered, he was gentle and kind toward his persecutors, holding no enmity toward the individuals but despising their religion. But I am sorry to say his wife, who is a Christian, permitted the preachers to sing and pray over his lifeless remains, which he had often requested should never be done. It seems that if the clergy cannot persuade or scare one while alive they take pleasure in stealing the dead.

GEO. W. SCOBEE.

Who Will Distribute Literature Likewise?

CLAYTON CENTER, KAN., June 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am happy to inform you that I have again sold another lot of books, as you will observe by the inclosed list.

In all I have now sold forty-four "Old Testament Stories," three "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Books," and a good number of various Freethought pamphlets. Therefore, you can readily see that I am very much interested in the spreading of Freethought literature.

And if every Freethinker would make a little exertion as I have done it would be more encouraging to the Freethought publishing companies, and at the same time spread Freethought literature throughout the land. As I have already discovered, it has its effect, as the hypocritical church-members, and especially the preachers in this neighborhood, are howling that Freethought literature is hurting their preaching business.

J. B. WISE.

They Prize the Bible Because They Know Nothing About It.

ESCO, TENN., May 28, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have tried to get just one subscriber for this the best of all papers, and before all the Bibles of all the Gods. They say they do not want anything better than the Bible. "That's good enough for me," they say. I tell them they must penetrate the wall of superstition and explore the field beyond and see the other side before they are competent to judge between Freethought and the Bible. I tell these superstitious fellows that it is nonsense to undertake to fill a box with precious metal when at the same time it is brimful of old useless rubbish; and it won't do to empty it all out at once, it must come out by littles, and be refilled by the precious metal; the same way to free their brain at once would be sudden death.

I send you $5—$3 to renew my subscription, and $2 for $3 worth of books named on inclosed list taken in connection with THE TRUTH SEEKER per your offer in place of "Bible Myths."

My wife has a brother, George W. Moulder, somewhere in the West, probably in California, Oregon, or Washington, whom she has not heard from in twelve years and never has seen. He is some sixty-five years of age. If anyone knows of such a man please inform the undersigned.

T. H. BUTCHER.

Calls It the Mother Hubbard Book.

CORBETT, MD., June 9, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: After reading the book I thought of you, namely, Colonel Ingersoll's Lectures, I must give you my opinion on the same. I have heard preachers denounce him in the bitterest terms. I have seen the imbecils bring their fist down on the Old Mother Hubbard book, followed by a shower of groans from the saintly corner. I cannot tell you the exact meaning of these groans, as I am told that their real beauty and force can only be conveyed in a dead language, but upon diligent inquiry I find they signify as much as one of us Infidel wretches would by saying: "Hit him again! Pin him! Sock it to him!" Let the imbecils pound and expound their Old Mother Hubbard book, let the amen corner groan, they cannot hurt the colonel. He has set forth an argument that will never be overthrown. Let the clergy answer him and not abuse his good name. The colonel is one of the intellectual lights of the world, and that light is not under a bushel. Let the colonel and all other men who are gifted with sense and reason go on with the good work. The time is not very far distant when the Mena mena tekel upharsin will be written over every old funky pulpit in at least the United States.

JOSIAH H. SHEPPERD.

A Millennialist—but of a New Kind.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., June 6, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: One word for the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. I can't afford to do without it. It suits me to a t. Your able editorials have the right ring, according to my notion. Putnam's letters are grand beyond expression. Your contributors are able, interesting, and instructive, and the correspondents well worth the perusal. As to Heston, he is, as the boys would say, certainly "entitled to the cake" as the champion cartoonist. May you and your paper live to see the day when the truth shall have been found by the masses in all its beauty, glory, and simplicity, and lived up to honestly and sincerely. Then will there be an end to ignorance, superstition, bigotry, intolerance, priestcraft, poverty, and crime; and civilized society be what in the nature of things it may and ought to be, the crowning glory of the best efforts of man. Then will the millennium have come indeed and in truth, and this world be made as much of a heaven as can be desired by those who look for a "new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness" at the second coming of Christ.

Take courage, then, friend Mac. Be assured you are the right man in the right place. Just act out your conviction of right and the good work of reform will move on with accelerated speed.

Yours for Truth and Humanity,
J. R. BARRY.

It Is "a Truth."

GRAND MOUND, IA., June 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Under the heading, "A Truth to Be Impressed on the Mind," in THE TRUTH SEEKER of May 27th, we find the following: "Mental freedom must come before industrial or economic reform will be more than a temporary hope and illusion, visionaries to the contrary notwithstanding."

Now we inquire, is it a truth? THE TRUTH SEEKER's opinions are nearly always right, but when I tried to swallow the above dose it would not go down, hence I hove it up and think I have discovered the nauseating elements contained in the decoction.

But, as no one is infallible, I hope THE TRUTH SEEKER will prove its position.

It is too late to frighten the honest investigator, the veritable truth seeker, by characterizing him as a visionary.

C. DUTTON.

[The proposition is self-evident. The history of Christianity proves that it has held back the world in every reform as well as every science. Slavery was not abolished till the civilized world was well out of the grasp of the church, and the people were just free enough to think that slavery of one human being by another was wrong. It is the nature of religion to hold people back, and it must be shaken off before progress can be made. We are surprised that Mr. Dutton, who is a well-read man, should dispute it.—Ed. T. S.]

Freethought Sunday-schools.

PETERSBURG, IND., May 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Where two or three are met together in the name of truth, there it will be found. I would advise all earnest Infidels to attend the Jesus snake-schools; or better, organize one of their own. Teach the children to sing sweet lullabies; temper them with a little prejudice, enough that when set upon their feet they can stand alone; train them to understand and apply fables. As they grow in years and strength give the elements of morality. And in an advanced grade teach them in succession the religions of different ages and nations, with free Sunday lectures on scientific subjects, the methods of God-making (or forming public opinion), and the general harmony of the universe.

Let a leader be chosen who can follow the churchly maxim of priests, "Never do what you can get members of the congregation to do." Do not fear that when Atheism has grown strong and lusty, and corrupt with the acquisition of wealth, any other ism will serve as a check to it.

Atheism is a badge of respectability; Christism a mask, though thin, for corruption. The world moves, and time may shift the scene. Put oil in the lamp of reason and let her shine.

Please send $1.50 worth of TRUTH SEEKER to the address I inclose of a wise old Infidel, at whose shop I loaf sometimes, and oblige, FRANK S. WEAVER.

Get the Tree Out of the Road.

BRISTOL, CONN., June 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: It has been a long time since I have written a letter to THE TRUTH SEEKER family. Mr. Remsburg has been here once this year and Mr. Putnam twice. They have succeeded in waking up the pious ones, and as usual they have shown their "gall" after the speakers had gone away. Mr. Putnam came back on June 2d, and the pious lads were going to do him up; but they did not "peck," although he made them a very gentlemanly offer to bring on their chaff.

Now, about the Sunday closing of the World's Fair at Chicago: If I remember right, when the cloak-makers in New York city were on strike a few years ago, the religious press all through the country wanted those honest men and women prosecuted for conspiracy. Now, why would it not be a good plan for the stockholders to get out writs for Mr. Crafts and several of these little Methodist lads for conspiracy and give them a dose of their own medicine? Of one thing we can rest assured, and that is that the Methodists have convinced the working classes of this country that they are not the friends of the workingman. And another thing, too, they have put themselves on a level with the saloonkeepers. All through the conferences of Methodist ministers they have started a boycott, and the churches are followers on the same track. The time is now at hand for all men that like honesty and have brains of their own to stir up their friends for action to strike hard and deep at the root of this old tree of superstition. It has stood in the way of progress too long.

The foundation of morality is honesty. Let them show a little by paying taxes on the vast amount of property that they have accumulated by robbing directly and indirectly the great mass of toilers the world over. Not one cent ought to be exempt from taxation of this great sum that has been piled up in churches and cathedrals.

In the name of justice let every honest man protest by pen, by word, and by vote.
Yours, etc., JOSEPH E. COY.

The Bible Berhymed to Its Sore Injury.

VINELAND, N. J., June 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I rejoice with joy unspeakable to learn that the Liberals of the United States and Canada will hold an International Congress at Chicago, and if I was twenty years younger I would be there, if I had to foot it both ways for want of railroad funds.

Priestcraft, the greatest curse that this world ever had, is now on its last legs, hobbling about on crutches of its own manufacture; and then and there, at this Congress, will be the time and place to give it its death-blow, and it will be done if all Liberals do their duty.

The priests are impostors;
Their trade is a fraud.
They teach that the Bible
Came from a wise God.
But I find in its pages
Full three hundred lies,
All proved by itself
Without any disguise,
And hundreds of texts
Too foul to be read
By any with innocent
Brains in their head.

That book has cursed mortals
A million times more
Than all other books
Written since and before.
It has tortured nine millions
Of people to death,
As honest and truthful
As ever drew breath,
Who could not believe
That its filth and lies
Ever came from a being Enthroned in the skies.

One hundred thousand
Were burnt or were hung
Of honest good women,
Some old and some young,
All tortured as witches
And evil from birth,
When no real witch
Ever lived on the earth.
Eight words about witches
To old Bible knaves
Sent these hundred thousands
To premature graves.

J. HACKER.

The Way a Freethought Funeral Should be Managed.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please continue sending your noble paper.

Robert Ingersoll Auffurth, our beloved youngest son, born Jan. 4, 1893, breathed his last May 30th. He was born the son of Freethinkers and as such he died. His birth, name, and death were duly recorded at the state board of health, in compliance with the law, but no sky-pilot was ever called upon either to perform any baptizing ceremonies or to attend the funeral. During the long illness of our little man many Christians called, generally while I was absent, preaching to my wife, some even asking her to have him christened without my knowledge; but they all had to leave dissatisfied, for my good, noble, and sensible wife soon put a damper on their tongues by informing them that we never have any secrets; that she will not play the hypocrite and do anything without her husband's knowledge; that whatever we do is the outcome of mutual agreement—no commanding, no compulsion for us; that this is the cause of our happy and harmonious life, all our misfortune notwithstanding.

On the day of the funeral, May 31st, many beautiful floral offerings were sent. One especially, sent by my fellow-employees of the St. Charles Street Railroad Company, representing a broken column, several feet high, surmounted by a dove, at the bottom the words "Our Darling," was admired by everyone. He was our darling indeed—a bright, intelligent-looking little fellow, of whom we expected great things some future day, but alas, the eternal laws of Nature decreed otherwise.

The undertaker having forgotten to instruct his men not to ornament the coffin with any symbols contrary to our views, the same was sent with the cover and the head bearing two large crucifixes. At my request they were promptly removed. Thus our little darling was borne to his last resting-place. Our only consolation now is our bright and intelligent little six-year-old son Erwin—the only one left us out of nine. But we must brave our misfortune and still live for the living, while bidding our beloved departed ones farewell.

To arrange for an International Congress of Freethinkers at the World's Fair is a noble idea, and should be supported by every Freethinker according to his means. I shall send my mite to Secretary Charlesworth and the Freethought Federation of America button shall ornament my coat lapel; later on I shall also purchase one of Brother Wettstein's badge-pins. Let us display our colors fearlessly and openly; it will very much help our cause, and form new acquaintances.

ERWIN AUFFURTH.

A Cosmic Philosophy.

MONTPELIER, IND., May 30, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am much pleased with the article from James M. Wight under the heading of "Letters from Friends" in THE TRUTH SEEKER of May 20, 1893. After referring to the financial troubles of himself and others, he concludes the only true remedy is growth. In this he is certainly correct. But growth or development cannot come without cause, and man is one potent factor in the physical development of man, animals, or plants; therefore we must not wait for that development, but work to cultivate that growth and help make it come.

I turn over one leaf to the "Children's Corner," and find an article from a young man advocating the philosophy of the growth or development of worlds. This thrills me with joy to see the aged and youth working harmoniously to build up the new philosophy of evolution.

I am in my seventieth year, but feel like writing my letter to THE TRUTH SEEKER friends expressing my conclusions regarding the production of worlds. I cannot expect more space in the "Letters from Friends" than will permit me merely to make assertions and leave the reader to do the reasoning.

Philosophy teaches that space is boundless or universal; we cannot rationally contemplate space without occupancy; therefore matter in some form is co-existent with space. And intelligence is also co-existent with space and matter, which cannot exist in their improved conditions without principles we call laws, such as magnetic attraction, electrical attraction, chemical attraction, and attraction of gravitation of a body for itself or for other bodies, and other principles or laws, among which time must not be overlooked. These may be termed primary principles that never had a beginning or creation; but are primary conditions without which man can have no conception of existence, whether it be of space, matter, intelligence, or God. What is space without occupancy, or matter without intelligence, or intelligence without space or matter through which to apply its force? The law of gravity cannot exist without matter on which to manifest itself. These properties of matter must be without beginning so far as human intelligence can discern; who can have a conception of nothing—no space, matter, time, or intelligence, no God? Where is the potency to produce these agencies? So far as human understanding can fathom the past these properties of present existence must have always existed in some form. The smallest divisible particles of matter called atoms existed in the most highly conceivable rarefied condition; the law of attraction was a coexisting part of that matter, therefore these atoms had an attraction for each other, though in a very minute degree, but when two of these atoms combined they had greater attraction for other atoms, and as the mass increased its density and power of attraction increased.

These atoms could not change places without motion, which produced a wave, and it required as much force to stop a body as to start it; thus atoms formed into nebulous masses, then into meteors with their erratic motions, they into comets with their extremely elliptical orbits, which gradually assumed more circular orbits and became more dense and opaque until finally they grew into a planet or other celestial orb.

Without further discussing the philosophy of the formation of matter into large bodies, we will suppose this to be descriptive of the primary formation of our planet, and when it grew into a condition which we designate a planet, having formed something like a correct orbit round its sun, it is supposed to be a seething fiery mass of little more than a gaseous substance, but as it cooled it became more dense through the law of attraction for itself, and as this attraction increased its power to attract other bodies to itself increased, producing continuous growth, and the law of centripetal, centrifugal, and other forces became established.

I have now arrived at the point where the geologist takes our planet into his keeping, therefore I will leave it, with the remark that the earth is constantly undergoing change that we might properly denominate growth; developing into more harmonious conditions, being each year better prepared than the preceding year to extend refinement, peace, and happiness to its inhabitants. WM. ALLEN.

Under Inspiration of a "Devilish Muse."

NEWARK, N. J., June 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I send you Mr. Lovell's poem, written by the gentleman last evening and read by him to-day in the League just before closing for the season. After he had read it the members asked the gentleman for a copy and I asked him if he had any objections to having THE TRUTH SEEKER publish it. He answered, "None whatever." He is a poet, a gentleman, and a scholar, and best of all, a talented Freethinker. It was really a pleasure to me to-day to become acquainted with him, and I hope the readers of your excellent paper will also become better acquainted with him in the future. President Bird excelled himself in his beautiful closing address. Gillan, Walker, and Brill were sublime. Mrs. Smith is always good and witty. Mr. Price said he was proud to be a Liberal. In fact, everybody was happy.

Yours in friendship, love, truth, and justice, W. W. MORRIS.

Wake, devilish muse, and tune your liar,
That he may wake the dead
And shake this good and holy town
As Sodom shook, 'tis said.

Not to destroy, but to build up
And let the people see
That there is joy and happiness
In dear old liberty.

That in one spot on Halsey street,
Where stands a radiant hall,
There Jews and gentiles of all creeds,
And Catholics great and small,

And Protestants, Mohammedans,
Episcopalists galore,
Can meet in friendly argument
As never met before.

I feel did they but only know
How great the talents are
Of those who form this Liberal League
They'd come from near and far,

And feel at home within our throng
No matter what their creed,
For in five-minute doses we
Can fill each varied need.

Our Birds in songs of gladness sweet
Awake the slumbering hours
Until we feel that life's a treat,
A natural bed of flowers.

We're lifted into spirit-land,
We're wafted through the air,
We feel from what we hear there's no
Materialism there.

Still our Materialistic friends
Need not be lonely here—
To Mayo they may owe applause
For giving them good cheer.

And e'en our lonely Catholics
Find comfort rich and rare;
Does not our strong and fiery Smith
Strike blows for their welfare?

To those who with great modesty
Their presence only lend
To brighten up this dismal world,
My greetings I would send.

If they but come into our League
Their high-priest they will see,
Who dare not say his soul's his own,
But shines with Brill-i-ancy.

But those dear boys who like a noise
And shout aloud for fame,
Our Gillan tall can beat them all,
And make them feel quite tame.

Our Walker leads in every race,
Our Morris runs for money,
Our Burton with electric shocks
Will make you feel quite funny.

What though a Wakeman wakes us up
Or Rowley rolls us down?
What though we're Rush-ed to other worlds
Without a soul to crown?

What though a Bell rings out its peal,
Or Remsburg brings a laugh,
Or Janes prefers a country life
Or Shephard gives a bath?

We have within our noble crowd
Great men who will entice,
And throw about with careless hand
The wisdom of great Price.

Then come unto our glorious feast,
Come now while there is room,
For indications surely show
You cannot come too soon.

You know the Lord makes everything,
Does vitalize all seed,
And so we feel with confidence
He's blessed our Liberal League.

C. LOVELL.

True-Blue.

CRAYON, O., Apr. 27, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: After an interval of two years I shall again contribute a letter to the columns of a journal whose peer is not to be found on this side of the "mystic beyond"—viz., the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. I am conscientious in this statement, it being justified by an experience of nine years with the paper and its various publications. In all these years I have been a constant worker for the cause of Liberalism by using it as a missionary document among my associates and presenting its principles to the saint and sinner, as well as the sky-pilot himself, in a way that I feel that good has been accomplished.

I look upon the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday as a calamity short of ridiculous to the natural rights and moral impulses of the American people, as well as those of the entire world. This is an act looking to the interests of the churches, saloons, and other immoral places of Chicago, and sanctioned by the devotees of superstition and priestly bigotry throughout the country.

There is quite a number of Freethinkers in this part of the country, among which myself and a few others are the only outspoken ones. The rest, on account of their vocation in life and their social surroundings, have submitted to Mrs. Grundy.

During a protracted meeting in one of our villages this winter, the minister took the liberty to misrepresent science and history in regard to his religion, when one of our reputable citizens, who is an ardent Liberal, took exceptions to it and wrote him a letter. This caused a couple of exchanges between the two on the subject, until our Liberal friend gave him the ultimatum in a mammoth missive, which contained such an array of historical facts, science, and logic that the man of God was completely knocked out. He sought to vindicate himself and appease his pious anger by hurling from his pulpit the most unbecoming epithets that his regenerated mind could conceive of, thus receiving the censure of his own flock and the contempt of fair-minded people. This has agitated thought on the question, and ultimate good will be the result.

Some of our ministers speak of Freethinkers as "narrow-minded Infidels." Is not this a shame, when we think of such intellectual giants as Col. R. G. Ingersoll, S. P. Putnam, and many others? Who but a dishonest, devising priest or sky-pilot could utter such an absurdity as this?

For my part I am not in the pursuit of anything at the hands of Christians, or any popular craze that by chance might be thrust upon the people, so but that I can proclaim the principles of THE TRUTH SEEKER wherever I go and still be successful in my legitimate requirements. I have no aspirations for the future with respect to fame or fortune that would cause me to be a mental slave or advocate principles that conflict with my better judgment. Therefore I shall ever be found bold and fearless, working for the cause of humanity and the destruction of superstition.

I herewith send you a renewal of my own subscription, together with a couple of new ones, and will say in conclusion, Long may live Heston and the grand old TRUTH SEEKER, and may its principles ultimately prevail.

Yours for Freethought,
ELMER MILLER.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Little Dog Under the Wagon.

"Come, wife," said good old Farmer Gray,
"Put on your things, 'tis market day—
And we'll be off to the nearest town,
There and back ere the sun goes down.
Spot? No, we'll leave old Spot behind."
But Spot he barked, and Spot he whined,
And soon made up his doggy mind
To follow under the wagon.

Away they went at a good round pace,
And joy came into the farmer's face;
"Poor Spot," said he, "did want to come,
But I'm awful glad he's left at home;
He'll guard the barn, and guard the cot,
And keep the cattle out of the lot."
"I'm not so sure of 'hat,'" thought Spot,
The little dog under the wagon.

The farmer all his produce sold,
And got his pay in yellow gold,
Then started homeward after dark,
Home through the lonely forest. Hark!
A robber springs from behind a tree—
"Your money or else your life," says he;
The moon was up, but he didn't see
The little dog under the wagon.

Spot ne'er barked and Spot ne'er whined,
But quickly caught the thief behind;
He dragged him down in the mire and dirt,
And tore his coat and tore his shirt,
Then held him fast on the miry ground;
The robber uttered not a sound
While his hands and feet the farmer bound,
And tumbled him into the wagon.

So Spot he saved the farmer's life,
The farmer's money, the farmer's wife;
And now the hero grand and gay,
A silver collar he wears to-day;
Among his friends, among his foes,
And everywhere his master goes,
He follows on his horny toes,
The little dog under the wagon.

—New Orleans Picayune.

Death of a Good Woman.

Passed away at 4 o'clock A.M. of the 18th of April, 1893, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. P. T. Morrison, Sugar Run, Warren county, Pa., Mrs. Martha Shearman, in the eighty-fourth year of her age.

Martha Morrison was born in Pleasant township, Warren county, Pa., the 27th of September, 1809. She was one of a family of nine children born to Samuel and Eleanor Morrison. During the greater portion of Martha's youth her mother was an invalid, so it happened that upon Martha fell the responsibility of housekeeping and the care of her brothers and sisters. I have often heard her relate how at as early an age as seven years she was in superintendence of her mother's home, and many times was so perplexed with the many duties devolving upon her, that it was often a severe tax upon her small head to think the best way out of all such.

Having thus in early life to sacrifice herself to the calls of her family, it happened that to little Martha's lot fell few of the pleasures that make the childhood of the children of to-day such a season to be remembered in after life as one of many joys. Moments of leisure being few added a neglected education. It was, however, not deemed necessary in those days to extend a girl's education much further than the understanding of reading, spelling, writing, and a limited knowledge of figures. But with a good understanding and a retentive memory, what few chances to add to her store of knowledge that presented, were made the most of by the subject of our sketch. Many were the troubles and trials; but, a philosopher in her way, never did she bemoan nor lament the conditions, but calmly reviewing the matter from all sides, proceeded to the best course of action.

Had she been given the educational advantages that many girls of her day were given, she no doubt would have made a name for herself that would have lived with the names of many prominent women of her time.

At the early age of eighteen years she was married to Perry Shearman, of Rhode Island, with whom she shared the storms and sunshines of life for many years, and by him was preceded to "the silent land," some twenty-seven years. To them were born ten children, eight of whom are now living.

To sum up all in few words, her life was one of well-doing, always forgetting self in a desire to render assistance to others. This assistance was given at the sacrifice of both pleasure to herself and time, in which she might have greatly enriched a mind calculated to appreciate the best in literature. But she was one of the few persons possessed of a strong, right conscience, and had she not answered its calls and relieved those in trouble whose necessities attracted her, she would have felt that her duty had been neglected. I have often thought these lines must have been her guide, as she was an admirer of Pope:

What conscience dictates to be done,
Or warns me not to do,
This teach me more than hell to shun,
That more than heaven pursue.

Her religion was: "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you." She, as far as was in her power, tried to follow this precept's teaching, but few to whom she showed this spirit gave her the same treatment in return. Thus her treatment of people was always better in most cases than they deserved. The biblical saying, "Cast your bread upon the waters and it will return after many days," proved an untruth in her case, as it has proved in the case of many another such worker of good deeds. I presume never a person in a humble walk of life and possessed of as limited means made greater exertions to relieve distress and suffering and do good always. But out of scores of those for whom she evinced a mother's solicitude, and performed kindnesses hardly payable with money, few more than remembered the act. She was never remembered in any more substantial way by anyone outside of her own family, and many of them failed to perform their whole duty toward her. But she did not censure them.

She had no faith in the Bible as the word of God, and its many miraculous tales often called forth from her ridicule—in a mild way, be it said, as this book held the religion of her parents, and for this reason deserved, so she thought, something of her respect. She believed that no person, of whatever belief, who had conducted himself rightly toward his fellow-man while here would receive punishment of any kind in the hereafter, of which the wisest has no knowledge. I feel that herein she was right with some of the greatest thinkers of the world. A person of great energy, she labored hard while strength held out, and "did with her might what her hands found to do." Her constitution at last weakened, and for the past ten years she had enjoyed a season of comparative rest. Her eyesight and hearing perfect, she had much to enjoy in the companionship of her family and friends and time devoted to perusal of that in literature which gave her most pleasure. She retained a youthfulness of mind and respect for continued existence that was remarkable in one of her years, something that is rarely seen in age and in one of her sound mental perceptions. One would have thought life with all its sternness, and failure to do for her what she had a right but was too wise to expect, would have killed out her faith and feeling, toward which she ever maintained the most perfect trust. But no. Life to the evening before her departure was to her, with all its trials, a respected epoch. These traits in her character carried her over many a rough life-walk none the worse for the experiences, and added greatly to the pleasant passage of her last years.

Others of her age whom life had treated harshly might sit in corners reserved for age and mourn over past life and broken fortunes. But as for her, all she asked was the light and hope of youthful faces, and she was young with the best of them. My grandmother, and one of our family for many years, I write truthfully of her.

She always read and had a kind word for THE TRUTH SEEKER, and particularly the young folks' department, and I hope the young folks who read this may profit by facts I have related concerning her long and useful life.

MAUDE MONTAGU MORRISON.
Sugar Run, Pa., May 14, 1893.

What the Little Folks are Saying.

A little fellow of four years of age in a town in the West was playing with a lawn mower and cut his finger off so high up that in fixing it the doctor had to take off more of it, and leave him with none. He stood it all very bravely and scarcely cried at all, but his mother was dreadfully distressed at having her boy's hand so mutilated and cried a great deal. So, while the doctor was finishing with dressing the finger the little fellow looked over at his mother and said, "Don't cry so much, mamma; it'll grow out again."

A Popular Error.

Not long ago I saw a plump and well-fed child that had a pet kitten that it treated very badly. It lived near to me and I could hear the kitten howling with hunger and cold, and sometimes I would feed it, but it was so sick and weak that it could not gain strength and finally it died. The little girl's mother did not pay the rent that she owed, though she had the money to pay it with, but she would give the child money when it went to Sunday-school, to put into the contribution box to send to the missionaries in India to teach the little Hindoo children the Christian religion. In India the children are taught by their parents that all animals must be treated kindly, and if the little Hindoos knew that children in this country let their pets freeze and starve they would think it would be a very proper thing to send missionaries over here to teach them kindness to animals. In England some of the children of English parents but born in India have learned this of the Hindoo children, and on coming to England have started societies of children in which all the members agree to do no injury to animals for sport and to try to keep other children from hurting them. The religion that allowed the mother to give money to the Sunday-school but refuse to pay her rent, and that let the little girl starve her kitten to death, cannot be a very good one. Those who believe in it think that there is a very big and very savage person up in the sky, shaped like a man, but a great deal stronger. They think he has a very bad temper, and if he is not worshiped and his religion is not taught to those who do not know it he will be very angry and hurt some one. So his followers will keep money for him that they owe for rent and they will go to Sunday-school and sing while the poor kitten is starving at home. When people are cruel to animals they soon get cruel in their treatment of each other.

A LIBERAL.

Correspondence.

BURLINGTON, IA., May 21, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for a long time. I like to read the Children's Corner very much. I am ten years old. I go to school and study arithmetic, geography, grammar, reading, writing, and drawing. Well, I will close.

PEARL E. MOSENA.

CORNPLANTER, PA., May 5, 1893.

MISS WIXON, Fall River, Mass.: I have written an account of my grandmother's life and desire it printed in your department of the paper should you deem it suitable. Shortly before her death my little sister read her the letter of a grandparent which appeared in your department. She remarked that she would like to have the young folks know something of the story of her life; said some day she would write and give them facts regarding it.

I do not remember that you have inserted anything of like character, but concluded no harm would be done should I write you. Should the nature of the contribution prove no bar to its insertion, you will confer a favor on me by allowing its appearance.

MAUDE M. MORRISON.

BRONSTON, KY., May 24, 1893.

DEAR AUNT SUSAN: I will write another letter to the Corner, as I am still a Free-thinker. It has been a very nice spring. I have been to church this spring. One day I went, and a preacher got up to pray; he said, "The Lord has been with us an hour, and I hope he will be with us the next hour." I suppose he did not want his company any longer. Our Sunday-school lesson was about Job, the other Sunday, where the Lord let Satan try Job's religion. If the Lord knew everything, why did he let Satan bring so much trouble on Job?

I am going to Sunday-school Sundays. The boys and girls were talking to me about fishing on Sunday. I told them that it was not a bit of harm, and I would go again. I wish some of the boys and girls would write to me.

My address is Bronston, Ky., Pulaski county. Your little Free-thinker, GERTIE STIGALL.

GOLD.

SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL.

MINERAL.

Smol4

"Everybody's Law Book,"

Is the title of the new 768 page work prepared by J. Alexander Moones, LL.B., member of the New York bar.

It enables every man and woman to be their own lawyer. It teaches what are your rights and how to maintain them. When to begin a lawsuit and when to shun one. It contains the useful information every business man needs in every state in the Union. It contains business forms of every variety useful to the lawyer as well as to all who have legal business to transact.

Inclose $2 for a copy, or inclose two-cent postage stamp for a table of contents and terms to agents. Address BENJ. W. HITCHCOCK, Publisher, 385 Sixth Avenue, New York.

WANTED.—A Liberal with $100 to $200 capital, who will go in partnership on a farm, will meet a good opportunity by addressing the undersigned for full particulars. The farm is situated in the northern part of Alabama. J. G. DIERS, 4124 519 S. 3d st., Philadelphia, Pa.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 333 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Free-thinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. (Full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.)

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's

ARGUMENT

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its logical acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon much nery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt-lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 80 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 80 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stipendiature; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN AND REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardner's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attitude at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of it: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardner's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Read's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oratorical Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Rensburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Rensburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	10
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Rensburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Rensburg.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear. Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired. Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 82 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Graeco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims. A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BELL.

Price, 25 cents.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

HENRY D. THOREAU. By F. B. Sanborn. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Cloth, portrait, 324 pp., price $1.25.

Some men excel in intellect, others in feeling and benevolence, and others in will power. This biography is of one who excelled in all these. Many extracts from his writings our subscribers will remember seeing in the corners of our pages and in the department of "Gems of Thought." An exposition of his character is given by us on the editorial pages this week, to which readers are referred.

The biography is a satisfactory one. Its first chapter deals with Thoreau's "Birth and Family." Its second, with his "Childhood and Youth." As a knowledge of his early environments will aid to an understanding of him, in the next two chapters we learn about "Concord and Its Famous People," and "The Embattled Farmers," which aligned cultivators formed an incident in Concord annals. The speculations and sky-aspirings of "The Transcendental Period" which so largely molded Thoreau are next limned for us. In "Early Essays in Authorship" we delightfully find productions of fine merit and noble sentiment emanating from our youthful Freethinker. This person in the next chapter has "Friends and Companions," and in the succeeding one seeks his "Walden Hermitage." "Horace in the Role of Mæcenas," the title of the next chapter, means that Horace Greeley played to Thoreau the part of patron sustained by the ancient Mæcenas to needy genius—at least, he attempted it, and prosecuted it with such success as our writer's independent spirit permitted him. In the next chapter Thoreau is beheld "In Wood and Field." Chapter xi exhibits admirable "Personal Traits and Social Life." As "Poet, Moralist, and Philosopher" our Concord idealist and Antichristian is next surveyed. His "Life, Death, and Immortality" conclude.

"Mohammedanism is largely on the increase in the British West African colony of Sierra Leone, one-tenth of the population now being of that faith. A state-aided branch of the Church of England exists there, and practically all denominations of Christians have missionaries in the colony, but Islam gains on them. Islam is rapidly gaining ground in England, has a very encouraging foothold in America, and is destined to become the Universal Religion, much sooner than even some of its most earnest advocates imagine." The foregoing statement we copy from a new paper, the Moslem World, started in New York to spread Mohammedanism in this nation. Now, if the statement is true, we don't feel like giving the paper a notice in these columns. If the prediction is likely to be fulfilled, we shall be indisposed to give the cause aid of this or any kind. We don't want Islam to become "the Universal Religion." We don't want any religion at all. But as we think Islam likely to be only Christianity's rival at the most, and not a faith of world-wide prevalence and consequently unprecedented despotism, we will accord its organ a line or two. Besides, Islam is not so bad a religion as Christianity; and we favor several religions as a less evil than one, for they involve less intolerance; and moreover, this paper by reprinting one of THE TRUTH SEEKER's articles extends to us friendly overtures. It is of goodly size and handsomely printed. It is to be issued weekly, at $2.50 a year. Among the notices that it has obtained from American papers are two on the very signal point of the difference between Mohammedanism and Christianity in their treatment of liquor-drinking. These we will reproduce. The Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Eagle says: "What has become of the project for a Prohibition church? The Eagle suggests that when that church is founded it embrace Mohammedanism and offer itself as the first convert to the American Mohammedan missionary who has recently landed in New York. The Bible is not exactly sound on the rum question, but the Koran leaves nothing to be desired." The Detroit, Mich., Journal says: "The total abstainers ought to encourage Alexander Webb, the Mohammedan now in this country, for a drunken Mussulman is a rare sight. A lady who has made a tour of Egypt says she nor none of her party ever saw an intoxicated man. Her dragoman told her that if, on a doctor's order, his wife was to take brandy and died with the brandy in her stomach, God would not receive her into heaven. St. Paul's advice to Timothy, about a little wine for the stomach's sake, does not go down with a Mohammedan."

Freethinkers' attempts at poetry nearly always contain a good deal more of sense than the effusions of Christians. We have rarely read one, however rude its form judged by the critics' rules, that did not seem to us pleasing, conveying wholesome truths necessary for the people to learn, in an agreeable and easy form. Mr. A. Easton, of Chicago, has written a poem called "Mortal Man" which turns that reputedly important individual about, and over, and we may say inside out, and in short surveys philosophically everything of leading importance about him. The views, taken from a Freethinker's viewpoint, we think much more sensible than those of Pope's "Essay on Man." The author says that "Creeds are ingenious theories of the brain,

By one set forth that hosts with zeal maintain.

We censure all, yet cling to one alone,
Nor know we why nor comprehend our own."

This poem is printed in a little paper-covered book which we imagine sells for no more than 25 cents.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

Christianity a Fiction.

THE
Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, 15 cents

AN OUTLINE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 60 cents.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. B. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol. 12mo. 300 pp. $1.50

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

L. K. Washburn's Works

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardner.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

TRANSLATED BY:

Force and Matter.	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology).
Immortality of Matter.	Mind.
Infinity of Matter.	Brain and Mind.
Value of Matter.	Thought.
Motion.	Consciousness.
Form.	Seat of the Soul.
Immutability of Natural Laws.	Innate Ideas.
Universality of Natural Laws.	The Idea of God.
The Heavens.	Personal Continence.
Periods of the Creation.	Vital Force.
of the Earth.	The Soul of Brutes.
Original Generation.	Free Will.
Secular Generation.	Mortality.
	Concluding Observations.

Price $1.50 Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Gems of Thought.

My extreme love for the truth is the only thing that renders me worthy of it.—Voltaire.

A STRICT observance of the moral precepts taught by any, say for instance by the Christian, religion, must involve the ruin of nations and destroy all the bonds of society, since we are told that every pursuit of earthly objects is incompatible with a Christian's care for the salvation of his soul.—Buchner.

In his Second Inaugural address, referring to the contending Christian elements in the civil war, he [Abraham Lincoln] says: "Both read the same Bible and pray to the same God, and each invokes his aid against the other." What a commentary upon the hypocritical assumption that Christians possess an infallible moral standard, is contained in the above words!—Was Abraham Lincoln a Christian? by John E. Remsburg.

It may be well enough here to ask the question: "What is greatness?" A great man adds to the sum of knowledge, extends the horizon of thought, releases souls from the Bastille of fear, crosses unknown and mysterious seas, gives new islands and new continents to the domain of thought, new constellations to the firmament of mind. A great man does not seek applause or place; he seeks for truth; he seeks the road to happiness, and what he ascertains he gives to others.—Ingersoll.

Those governments which employ the most compulsion perform much less than those which scarcely ever have recourse to it. Government, by addressing itself to the understanding, by engaging the free will of its subjects, by acting by means purely intellectual, instead of contracting, expands and elevates itself; it is then that it accomplishes most, and attains to the grandest objects. On the contrary, it is when government is obliged to be constantly employing its physical arm that it becomes weak and restrained—that it does little, and does that little badly.—Guizot's History of Civilization.

No civilization before Christianity! Would to God that, in many respects, we could turn back the dial of time to an hour long prior to that in which the son of Mary first saw the sun light up the straw in his manger cradle! In many respects two thousand years have been lost to the world through God and his Book. Founded hospitals, indeed! Down till comparatively recent times the fewer hospitals Christianity founded the better for mankind. Her theology overmastered every other consideration. The Jews and Saracens who did know something of medical science, were looked upon as wizards and conjurers, and banned and persecuted. As soon as Constantine, the first Christian Emperor, found the scepter firmly in his grasp, he suppressed the medical schools of the Saracens as Pagan and out of harmony with the genius of Christianity. It is true that certain hot-beds of theological quackery, nicknamed hospitals, were substituted for the suppressed medical institutions of the Jew and the Saracen. There, instead of Pagan bleeding and blistering, there were the Christian prayers of the elders and the anointing with oil.—Saladin in God and His Book.

"THE watch proves the watchmaker" was his [Voltaire's] constant argument for the existence of God, at every period of his life, and he developed it some years before Paley was born. While admitting God, he denies providence. The universe is governed by laws which nothing can change,—laws as invariable as those of mathematics. Revelation, other than that of science, he rejects with his usual gayety and scorn. "I do not assert," he says, "that I have demonstrations against the spirituality and immortality of the soul; but all the probabilities are against those doctrines." In treating of the nature of virtue, he lays down this simple proposition: Virtue is conduct which benefits the community; vice is conduct which injures the community. Lying, for example, is generally a vice, because it is of the greatest importance that men should be able to believe one another. As to his religion he plainly reveals his conviction that, as then established in Europe, it was a system of spoliation and oppression, the despot's main support and defense. Every desolator of the earth began his work of massacre and ruin by solemn acts of religion, and, while the ground still smoked with carnage, hastened to the temple to repeat those solemn acts. Nor was religion necessary as an ally of virtue, since men conspicuous for unbelief, like Bayle, Locke, Spinoza, Shaftesbury, Collins, and others, were men of rigid virtue. "Much to be pitied are they who need the help of religion to be honest men."—Parson's Life of Voltaire.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
 Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
 Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
 Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
 Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
 Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By O. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
 Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
 Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28, $1.
 Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
 Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
 Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
 Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
 Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
 2 " The Church Robbing the People.
 3 " Thanksgiving.
 4 " Sabbath Laws.
 24 " Children and the Church.
 10 " Woman and the Church.
 6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.
 4 " Studies in Natural History.
 2 " The Bible and Science.
 15 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.
 1 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
 4 " The Atonement Scheme.
 4 " The Lord and His Works.
 20 " Prayer.
 1 " The Creeds.
 1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
 5 " Missionaries.
 1 " The Lord's Instruments.
 25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
 1 " The Church and Slavery.
 2 " Priests and Politics.
 4 " Ireland and the Church.
 1 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
 2 " The Uses of the Cross.
 4 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
 9 " Persecutions of the Church.
 12 " Some Allegories.
 8 " Heaven.
 6 " Hell.
 7 " Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utility of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTB.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
 Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambaletta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
 Price, 25 cents.
 Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
 Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake..... 5
 4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization..... 25
 7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller..... 10
 8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
 9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall..... 10
 10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
 11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
 12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait..... 25
 13 Essays on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
 14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 15 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 16 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 18 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh..... 10
 19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake..... 5
 20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
 21 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts..... 5
 22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
 23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
 24 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts..... 5
 25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts..... 5
 26 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts..... 5
 28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake..... 5
 29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
 30 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts..... 5
 38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H..... 10
 42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts..... 10
 43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts..... 5
 44 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake..... 10
 47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen."..... 5
 3 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
 6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
 7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
 8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
 9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
 10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
 11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
 12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake..... 10
 13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake..... 10
 14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H..... 10
 15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H..... 10
 16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
 18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
 19 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz..... 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT O. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, - - - 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy. Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and Reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. Bageen & Co., Attys., Washington, D.C.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL.

Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	Oxidized,	each $2.50
	{ 10 ounces per doz. }
" "	Oxidized,	" 3.00
	{ 14 ounces per doz. }
" "	Oxidized,	" 3.00
	{ gilt bowl, 10 ounces per doz. }
" "	Oxidized,	" 3.50
	{ sectional gilt, 10 ounces per doz. }
Orange "	Oxidized, plain bowl,	" 2.75
Sugar "	" gilt "	" 3.25
	" satin "	" 3.00
	" gilt "	" 3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy I Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Bages, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer.

(If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,

Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr Fellows is an Infidel.

STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABULES.

THE LORD SENDS JERRY TO INTERVIEW A COLORED MAN.

Now the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah, while he was shut up in the court of the prison: Go and speak to Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Thus sayeth the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring my words upon this city for evil, and not for good; and they shall be accomplished in that day before thee.—Jere. xxxix, 15, 16, etc.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature—i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY." RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that Infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABOOCK.

Price 10 cents. Boards, 40 cents.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

EAGLE BRAND.

—THE BEST—

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO., Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.

13618

HEAVEN AND ITS WONDERS

From Things heard and seen in the Spiritual World, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG;

ALSO THE LAST JUDGMENT, as witnessed by him in 1757.

Both books (the first in cloth 375 pp. and the second in paper 708 pp.) sent by mail for $1.00. Address exactly Am. Swedenborg Printing & Publishing Society, Dept. "A," 20 COOPER UNION, N. Y. CITY.

6teow17

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, 10 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

Water of Life

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

News of the Week.

A YOUNG woman was found wandering near Elizabeth, N. J., saying she was in heaven. She is crazy on religion.

AN Italian committed suicide at Santa Rosa, Cal., recently because he had no education. He left a statement to the effect that a man without one had no business to live.

THE French Catholic church of St. Anne at Kankakee, Ill., was struck by lightning and burnt down. It was a famous seat of miraculous cures. Its shrine, the clergy aver, held part of the body of the saint.

A FASHIONABLY dressed woman entered the cathedral at Dubuque, Ia., with the purpose of killing Bishop Hennessy at the behest of two angels. She was seized while offering the prayer preparatory to the sacrifice.

THE bishop of Seez, France, has just published a pastoral letter in which he assures his flock that the cause of the drouth is threefold—the education law, the military law, and the toleration extended to Freemasonry.

JOHN OSMOND, the wife-murderer executed at Sing Sing, N. Y., by reading his Bible and taking counsel with Father Creeden became perfectly resigned and composed. His last utterance was a mumbling of the Lord's Prayer as the electrical appliances were being adjusted to his leg.

MRS. MCKENNA, of Keeryville, N. Y., carried her baby to St. Paul's Catholic church and laid it on the altar. Then she knelt before a picture of the Virgin and prayed aloud, offering to God the baby as a living sacrifice. Thereupon she leaped on it and attempted to strangle it. A crowd that had collected prevented her.

REV. DR. CAMPBELL, professor of church history in the Presbyterian College of Montreal, Can., is on trial for heresy. He said he did not believe in God as portrayed in the Old Testament. "Why did God," he inquired, "allow men, holy men, to err in describing the divine character and imputing to him what was not his word and deed? The solution of the question is human freedom; the greatest thing in man."

NORWAY has sent to the World's Fair a "Viking ship," reproducing the craft of the ancient Scandinavian sea-kings in which, it is said, they visited America before Columbus. It has reached New York. One of its crew, describing the passage of this craft which would not now be reckoned very safe in comparison with a modern steamer, says that they had no Bible aboard but did have a copy of Ingersoll's works.

THE World's Fair is now on all hands pronounced a brilliant success. Its area is six times that at Philadelphia. Its buildings are correspondingly grander. The exhibits match their setting in magnificence. They exceed tenfold those of the Centennial exposition. The management, notwithstanding some slight flaws, has been excellent. Altogether, the Exposition is without precedent, and will not be surpassed in this generation.

THE Church of the Chudov Monastery at Moscow was recently robbed of a vast amount of plate, gems, and money. Police arrested the monks, and found secreted in the cells diamonds and other gems which had been hastily torn from their settings, holy robes, and the missing holy vessels made of precious metals. A charge of sacrilege has been made against the monks. This is a crime that is punishable in Russia with the most severe penalties. The police in searching the monastery learned that a number of women had been living secretly with the monks.

OF the Protestants who are pointing out, in opposition of the claims of Catholics, that Columbus was not a worthy man, Rev. Dr. McArthur is the latest to draw attention. Referring to various authorities, who write in different languages and from varying points of view, he concludes that Columbus was a bad man. "Neither his moral character nor his ability," says the doctor, "entitle him to the credit he has received. . . . We are now going wild over the Infants and over the duke of Veragua, and we are extolling Spain, a country whose territory does not cover more than two-thirds of the area covered by the state of Texas; of whose population eighty-three per cent are unable to read or write. Spain is the poorest and most ignorant country in Europe." He quotes from the "Cyclopedia of Education" to show that illiteracy dominates in Roman Catholic countries. He names Spain, Mexico, Italy, and the Argentine Republic, where the percentage of illiteracy is above eighty, and says that they are worse off in this respect than China, where illiteracy stands at only about fifty-one per cent. He also draws contrasts with other heathen countries.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 26. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.}

New York, Saturday, July 1, 1893.

{28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

LEO XIII. TO DISARMED EUROPE. "NOW WE'VE GOT YOU! SUBMIT OR WE STRIKE!"

WHAT MIGHT FOLLOW THE DISARMAMENT OF EUROPE.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change, which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

New Publications.

S. P. Putnam's Latest Pamphlet.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1893, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Freethought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for
 - His Processes Are Egregiously Slow,
 - They Are Egregiously Wasteful,
 - They Often Serve No Use,
 - They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam"; What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most Startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvijn, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY

ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution."

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by
J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR

Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and
the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.
The Muscular Tissues.
The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The

Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

THE

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 26. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.}

New York, Saturday, July 1, 1893.

{28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - JULY 1, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

The Design Argument.

One argument of those who assert a design or adaptedness in nature showing an intelligent creator, is this ancient one of Cicero's: "Let anyone toss up a number of letters ever so many times, they will never form a poem, such as the Iliad or the Odyssey." This proposition the Roman orator was accustomed to brandish against the Atheistic philosophers of his day. It is to many hopelessly perplexing. By corresponding reasoning, they say, we are forced to recognize that the particles of this world, tossed up ever so many times, could never by chance alone have formed our globe as it is. Let the Atheist, they continue, toil as he may in his explanations of how the present constitution of things could have come about, we are after all obliged to see that this constitution is a certain one, a particular one and only one, among all the possible constitutions that presented themselves eons of time ago, and as the chances were so against this one among all of them, and it has actually come about, then an intelligent chooser of it must have acted, let him have used whatever means, of evolution or anything else of the sort, you will. In other words, they say that the present state of things must have come about by choice because it had so many chances against it that it could not have come about otherwise.

But, the Atheist's reply should be, we do not know that the present combination of atoms in the universe is the one that was wanted. We know that the combination of letters in the Iliad is what was wanted solely from our knowledge of the nature of the writer; and so to know that the combination of atoms in the universe was wanted we must be possessed of knowledge of its creator; but there is no such knowledge.

The letters of the alphabet must necessarily fall in some combination. Suppose then that on their making what we call nonsense the tosser-up claims that this unintelligible combination is just what he had previously chosen for them. We disprove this by a reference to the character of the human mind which does not desire such a thing, but desires a result of the character of a poem. So too the atoms of the universe must necessarily have formed some combination. If we say that, for all we know, a combination of any kind would have suited a creator as well as the present, this can be disproved solely by a reference to the divine mind which does not desire such a thing, but desires a result of the character of the present one. Now, who will show that the divine mind is of such nature? Where is the information as to the divine mind? Name it.

There would of course have been enormous chances against any particular constitution of things chosen eons ago coming about to-day. The chances against it would have been so vast that a fulfillment of the choice we should be forced to attribute to some intelligent being designedly gratifying the chooser's wish. If we could learn that at a moment ages ago a god underwent the psychological experience of desiring that the world should be as it is at the present moment, then on our turning to the world now and finding it thus we should affirm divine agency in making it so. But the trouble is, we can learn of no god's desiring that it should be so. It had to be some way or other, and though the chances are vast against each way in particular, we have no ground to think strange any way in which we now find it to be. Dice when thrown have to turn up some number, and though after an hour's throwing we admit that there was beforehand an infinity of chances against the particular series of numbers that have turned up, we do not discredit the fact that they have turned up thus when so assured by a friend. And we do not ascribe to the thrower an intention to turn them up thus, nor would we believe that he had such an intention if we were so told.

We must distinguish between the improbability of a picked thing happening, before the event; and the improbability of something having happened, after it. Many events are improbable to us before they have happened, or before we are told they have happened, which are not in the least incredible when we are told of their happening. The distinction is that between the improbability of a mere guess being right, and the improbability of an alleged fact being true. So in this case of the universe having come out as it is, we are to make this discrimination: that it is not a case of a mere guess having been right, or of a particular result having been chosen long ago and now coming about despite infinitesimal chances against it, for we cannot show that this result was guessed or chosen then; but it is a case of an alleged fact being true, of the truthfulness of the assertion by a present-day observer that the universe has fallen out as it has.

God, through the mouths of his prophets, must name which side of the copper is going to turn up before the throw. The declaration by those prophets after the throw that he had named the right side beforehand, cannot be entertained. The boy cannot accept his playmate's assertion, after heads has been turned, that heads was what that playmate wished; and we, if we desire to maintain ourselves on the intellectual level of the boy, must not credit the preacher's assertion, after the universe has been turned, that the universe was what the preacher's God wished.

Christ Was Not a Philosopher.

A friend writes us these queries: "Was Christ a philosopher? If so, why? If not, why?"

A philosopher is one who views things in their deepest and widest relations. He is distinguished from the ordinary man, whose instruction and habits of thought are such that he views things in relations but narrow or fragmentary. He is distinguished from the frivolist, who by choice views them only in their superficial and inconsequent relations. He is distinguished likewise from the practicalist, who views them in those relations solely by which they advance or impede his few designs. He is distinguished from the religionist, who views things in supposed relations which have no existence and are therefore the most barren of all, namely supernatural relations. And the philosopher is, agreeably to some groupings, distinguished even from the man of science, since a science is considered to be the body of knowledge in one particular field only, while philosophy, it is said, marshals and reviews the sciences as a whole, builds itself on principles deduced from all of them, and is in short a science of sciences.

Christ was not a philosopher. That he was not is evidenced sufficiently by the fact that he was a religionist. When we say that a philosopher is one who views things in their deepest and widest relations, we mean, of course, in their deepest and widest causal relations—relations of cause and effect. There is, indeed, no other rational way of viewing them. Now, a religionist, a supernaturalist, denies or ignores natural causality and views things as related and determined by the mental processes of a supernatural being. Hence his mental conceptions, so far from being embodied in a framework of "deepest and widest relations," are even not connected by the few and short ties of rationality which run between the ordinary man's ideas, but are, if the person be extreme in his religionism, connected by no ties at all. A religionist is the diametrical opposite of a philosopher. As Christ was an extreme religionist, he was the extreme opposite of a philosopher.

But besides that part of Christ's character which constitutes him a supernaturalist, there is another phase of his nature which we may view, that of a discourses on ordinary things on an ordinary level. And here he shows himself as far from a philosopher as in his religious aspect. A philosopher is expected to be wiser on any matter whatever, even be it a concrete, every-day one, than another person. The more general is our knowledge of a thing the more useful and valuable it is, hence the philosopher, who ever aims at knowledge of the utmost generality, must possess the most useful and valuable knowledge about it. Philosophy is only common sense in a high degree. The man with the most common sense is the nearest to being a philosopher. The man in the village who possesses the most common sense is the village philosopher. Jesus had no common sense. He declared that marriages should be inviolable, except in case of adultery, giving as a reason, "What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder" (Matt. xix, 1-12, and v, 31, 32; Mark x, 1-12). This absurdly assumes that the act of joining is of God and that of separating not of him. It would be as possible to claim the divine sanction for the dissolution of a marriage as for its formation. And in many cases the maxim might be exactly reversed. So unfortunate is the result of many marriages that it would be easy for a religious innovator to say of them, "What man hath joined together, let God put asunder." Supposing even that the decision of Christ is right, he assigns no reasons for it, but simply lays down the law in a trenchant manner, without giving us the least clue to the process by which he arrived at so strange a conclusion. It is not in the least likely, as Lord Amberley remarks, that the many perplexities encompassing this, and all other questions affecting the morals of sex, had ever troubled him. His mind was not sufficiently subtle to enter into them. The dislike of wealthy men shown by Christ is not rational. In it he appears to be moved by none of the considerations that now guide certain reformers who would deprive persons, not of wealth, but of that wealth which they acquire unjustly. He suggests no economic system better to fill the place of the prevailing one. The only advice he gives the rich man is to sell all that he has and give the proceeds to the poor. How beneficial this would be, those who know the effect of profuse charity may estimate. More indiscriminately still is this aversion to the rich expressed in the parable of Lazarus and Dives. Here, says Amberley, "we are not told that the great proprietor had been a bad man, or had acted with any unusual selfishness. The utmost we may infer from the language used about him is that he had not been sufficiently sensitive to the difference between his own condition and that of the beggar. But no positive unkindness is even hinted at. Nor had the beggar done anything to merit reward. He had only led one of those idle and worthless lives of dependence on others which are too common among southern nations. Yet in the future life the beggar appears to be rewarded merely because he had been badly off; and the rich man is punished merely because he had been well off (Luke xvi, 19-25). A stronger instance of apparently irrational prejudice it would be difficult to find." In Matt. xx, 1-16, we find an attempted justification of the giving of the same wages to laborers who have worked vastly different numbers of hours. The ridiculousness of this a child would notice. Again, nothing could be more distant from common sense than punishment without a purpose. Men punish to reform the offender and prevent his repeating his crime. But Christ in numerous places (Luke xvi, 27-31; Matt. xiii, 30, 42, 50; xv, 30; xviii, 8, 9; xxv, 46; Mark ix, 43-46; iii, 29) declares for punishment which can never reform the criminals, but which continues forever, when possibility of their wrong-doing has passed. Another preposterous utterance of Christ is that asserting the power of prayer. This, like one or two other points noticed in this paragraph, perhaps would come as much under the head of Christ's supernaturalism as of his secular lack of common sense. But we will treat it here. It, with its like, impel some investigators to pronounce Jesus insane. In Matt. xxi, 22; Mark xi, 24, etc., he declares that prayer can effect anything whatever. This is not the language of a person endowed by nature with the average wits. Then, in his Sermon on the Mount (Matt. v-vii) Christ gives on the question of oaths some reasoning of a degree of sense not above that of a Mother Goose rhyme. The reason why in oaths we are to avoid the employment of the names of various objects, are these strange ones: We are not to swear by heaven, because it is God's throne; nor by the earth, because it is his footstool; nor by Jerusalem, because it is the city of the great king; nor by the head, because we cannot make a single hair black or white. What would be thought of a person nowadays arguing that we ought not to swear by our house because we cannot make a single brick bigger or smaller? In Matt. vi, 25-34, Christ tells us to take no thought for the morrow. The constable leading the tramp to the workhouse is the commentary which collective mankind now sees fit to make on this piece of advice of the Jewish philosopher. This sage exhorts: "Why do you take thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, they toil not, neither do they spin: and I say to you that not even Solomon in all his glory was clothed like one of these. And if God so clothe the grass of the field, which exists to-day and to-morrow is cast into the oven, will he not much more clothe you, O you of little faith?" It is hard to choose just which to use among the many replies that suggest themselves to this laugh-provoking deliverance. But we will say: Solomon in all his glory was clothed more splendidly than the lilies; and in fact the lilies are not clothed at all, so Christ seems to direct us to go naked; and the lilies do toil and do spin, being hard at work with their chemical labors on soil and air perpetually; and God has never been known in one instance to clothe "you, O you of little faith." "Look at the birds of the sky," this sorry attempter at sageship says, "for they sow not, neither do they reap nor gather into barns, and your heavenly father feeds them." Birds work for their living just the same as we do for ours; they do reap; those who do not work are never fed by a heavenly father, but perish of starvation; they do not gather into barns simply because they have wings to go south over winter, and if the Lord will furnish us wings too we will not gather either; and if we do consider that our "heavenly father feeds" them we must perceive that he feeds them to a large degree on one another, as the hawk on the dove and the shrike on the sparrow, whence it appears that of the system arranged for us by this Jewish wiseacre cannibalism is to form a part.

We can imagine, correctly reflects Lord Amberley, the havoc that would have been made in the statements and arguments of Jesus had Socrates, the philosopher of pre-Christian Greece, met him face to face and subjected him to his testing method. How ill would his loose popular notions have borne a close examination of their foundations; how easily would his dogmatic assertions have been exposed in all their naked presumption by a few simple questions; how quickly would his careless reasoning have been shattered by the dialectic art which would have forced him to exhibit its fallacies himself before the assembled audience!

Christ was not a philosopher.

Preachers vs. Public Transportation.

In Brooklyn the clergy have united in a movement restraining the transportation of the public by the electric cars known as trolley. They make the two moderate demands that trolley lines be not run on certain avenues, which at present have the happiness to hold their blessed churches; and that on a certain line already established no gongs be sounded on the cars during the hours while they are vending their spiritual wares. These two things are wanted because the gongs disturb them while they are engaged in said holy vending. The granting of the former request of course must involve inconvenience to the public who need the proposed car-lines. And concession of the latter demand necessitates the running down of an occasional pedestrian by the silent cars. But these unpleasantnesses will wear a changed aspect to a true Christian—and, it is said, should wear one to an unchurchly infidel—when it is reflected that it is all for the glory of God.

The latter road, which is the Atlantic avenue line, is largely managed by "Deacon" Richardson, a very pious church-member. Rev. Mr. Henderson, the pastor most disturbed thereby, wrote this limb of the church a letter requesting cessation of the gong-ringing. He added another complaint, against an outrage so hideous that it shall find record here:

"It may not be amiss that I mention the fact that on last Lord's day an outrage for which there could be no possible excuse occurred in the hauling past our church, right in the middle of the morning service, of a load of rails. Between the cobblestones and the rails you can imagine the noise! The preacher had to pause for some two minutes, since not a word could be heard."

God-beloved Mr. Richardson ordered that the gongs should thereafter emit no sound during the time of church services. The motormen accordingly preserved during the morning and afternoon services a silence as reverent as would have satisfied the souls of the Mathers and the Bareboneses of days colonial. But in the evening these unregenerate motormen, who plainly give not their hearts wholly to meditation on the ways of the Lord—or the preachers—and observance thereof, made considerable noise. In the darkness many pedestrians were unaware of the nearness of the cars, and the motormen sometimes unaware of the proximity of pedestrians, so the gongs were sounded to warn people and obviate loss of life. The corruption of the human heart is such that it is only with vexatious difficulty prevented from taking thought for life in this world, instead of devoting itself wholly to grace, preachers, and such-like jewels of great price. Thus sadly reflected Pastor Henderson, as with grieving heart he penned to Deacon Richardson a missive thanking him for the observance of godly quiet during the day, but deploring that profane activity of the gong—a heathen instrument anyway, and therefore undoubtedly suspicious—had marred the rendering of two of his most evidently inspired periods at night. The deacon with consideration which will redound to his comfort on that dreadful day, returned that if the holder-forth would station a man by the church Sundays to report the number of any car whizzing along with gong-using motorman, the latter man-serving but God-contemning wight would disgrace the cars of the company no more.

Later, we see, the ministers are endeavoring to enlist the public in general in their crusade.

It must be the wish of every devout heart that there be a thorough putting-down and sitting-upon of those who would allow such things as safety for life and limb to embarrass the traffic of the ministerial trade on the day which they have fixed upon therefor. If there be a surplus of funds, and public indignation, left over from the accomplishing of this movement, it should be applied to the confounding of those individuals, with windows by church belfries, who have so forgotten themselves as to complain of disturbance from the ringing of the divine bells.

A Book Which We Warmly Welcome.

We believe that everyone will agree with us in warmly welcoming Mrs. Matilda Joselyn Gage's new book, "Woman, Church, and State," which is now ready. Mrs. Gage is one of a trio—Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony being the others—whose names are household words among the workers for and supporters of woman suffrage. Two of this trio, Mrs. Gage and Mrs. Stanton, are outspoken, ardent Freethinkers, and Susan B. is more than half-way out of the woods. Mrs. Gage is one of the authors of the "History of Woman Suffrage," but was not content as a clear-seeing historian with that volume, and has supplemented it with this volume to more plainly show the real facts. "Woman, Church, and State," is, says Mrs. Gage, one of the most radical presentations of the church question ever laid before the public; and although especially presented from the point of its injustice and injury to woman, it yet shows the destruction of human rights and human will in case of man equally as well. Mr. Green, in his Magazine, said of it some time ago: "Every friend of woman's rights, every advocate of the entire separation of church and state, in fact every worker in the cause of human advancement, will be much interested in the forthcoming work. It will strike orthodoxy a very heavy blow where it has seldom been hit before, and by one of the sex upon which it now depends for its existence. It will be a publication that ought to be read by every intelligent woman in the land, for it is a woman's emancipator from priestcraft slavery. . . . An argumentative work in behalf of Freethought, it has no superior. It is a book the world needs, and Mrs. Gage is justly entitled to the thanks of every friend of human progress for producing it. It has cost her much hard work and much money, and the Liberal public ought now to show their gratitude by giving the book a large circulation."

The work is a historical account of the status of woman through the Christian ages, with reminiscences of the matriarchate, fortified with voluminous notes that can be used in verification of the main statements and argument. The author considers it by far the most important work of her life. It is printed in crown 8vo, contains 556 pages, and is bound in cloth and half leather. The price in cloth is $2; half leather, $3. We have it for sale and shall be gratified to receive numerous orders.

A Book Every Freethinker Will Have to Have.

We placed in the pressman's hands last week Mr. Remsburg's new book, "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" and we ought to get it away from him and the binder in ten or fifteen days. The work will be handsomely finished, in fine paper, and be a thing of beauty as well as a quieter of religious tales.

One of the most noted controversies of the century has been waged over the question of Abraham Lincoln's religious belief. Soon after the remains of America's most illustrious son were laid to rest at Springfield, one of his biographers, Dr. Holland, put forward the claim that he was a Christian. The claim was promptly denied by the dead statesman's friends, but only to be renewed again, and again denied. And thus for a quarter of a century the question of Lincoln's belief has been tossed like a battledore from side to side.

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

NOTED WITNESSES.

Hon. W. H. Herndon, Col. Ward H. Lamon, Hon. John T. Stuart, Col. Jas. H. Matheny, Col. John G. Nicolay, Judge David Davis, Col. Jesse W. Fell, Hon. Leonard Swett, Dr. William Jayne, Judge Stephen T. Logan, Joshua F. Speed, Hon. Jesse K. Dubois, Hon. Joseph Gillespie, Dr. C. H. Ray, Col. F. S. Rutherford, Judge Robert Leachman, Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Leonard W. Volk, Joseph Jefferson, Hon. E. B. Washburne, Hon. E. M. Haines, Hon. James Tuttle, Hon. M. B. Field, Hon. Geo. W. Julian, Hon. John B. Alley, Hon. Hugh McCulloch, Gen. M. M. Trumbull, Rev. David Swing, Rev. Robert Collyer, Judge Jesse W. Weik, Hon. J. P. Usher, Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, Salmon P. Chase, Wm. H. Seward, Hon. John Covode, Hon. A. J. Grover, Hon. W. H. T. Wakefield, Gen. D. W. Wilder, Judge Aaron Goodrich, Judge James M. Nelson, Rev. Edward Eggleston, Rev. John W. Chadwick, Donn Piatt, H. K. Magie, Dennis F. Hanks, Mrs. Sarah Lincoln, Mrs. Mary Lincoln.

The foregoing and sixty other reputable witnesses testify that the greatest man born on this continent was a Freethinker.

Large 12mo, 336 pages, in handsome cloth, $1; in paper, 50 cents.

J. E. Remsburg has recently made a tour through Nebraska. He is now lecturing in Iowa, and will go to Illinois soon.

Mr. R. R. Jones, of Syracuse, N. Y., opines that the observance of Decoration day was originated by a Freethinker. If some one of our readers who knows will send the facts to these columns our Syracuse friend will thereby be furnished with intelligence which he wishes to use in a controversy with Christians.

A bill has been introduced in the Illinois legislature providing that "it shall be unlawful to conduct or play any game of baseball, football, curling, polo, tennis, or any athletic game or sport of any kind or nature on Sunday." Hoisting money from pocket to contribution-box is the only Sunday exercise meet to the clergy's view.

The Staats Zeitung says: "Chauncey M. Depew is universally beloved on account of his love-worthy manners and his genius for saying agreeable things; but whenever he tries to speak of things that lie below the surface, and whenever he rises toward themes that require to be studied and judged profoundly, his intellectual shallowness becomes evident." Mr. Ottendorfer seems to be quite well acquainted with Mr. Depew.

Helen H. Gardener has in press another book, entitled "Facts and Fictions of Life." It will contain among other essays her celebrated paper on "Sex in Brain," and her essays on Heredity, which were read before the World's Columbian Woman's Congress. The book will be out some time in July, and orders for it may be sent now, and will be filled as soon as the books are finished. In cloth covers, the price is $1; paper covers, 50 cents.

A New York city marriage of the last few days over which the genius of Freethought, we conceive, must have hovered benignantly, was that of Mr. Delos A. Blodgett and Miss Daisy Albertine Peck. To the said genius we personally vouch for the worthiness of the pair. To the deities, not of the religion of the celibate Christ and woman-hating Paul, but of the ancient paganisms of love and transport, we commend the couple.

Paul told the women of his time to keep silence in the churches. Nowadays, however, and naturally enough, the women do not do anything of the sort. But the Western Recorder, of Louisville, Ky., is Christian enough to say: "The very worst thing a girl can do is to repeat a verse of scripture in a religious assembly, for that is using God's words to disobey him." To decent people, though, there are many things worse that a girl could do. For instance, she might believe the scripture verse she repeats.

The Christian Statesman says that owing to the renewed attempts of the Infidels to make Lincoln to have been one of them it will print evidence to show that the greatest of all our presidents was a Christian. In pursuance of this plan it prints one of the stock yarns—a tale which on its face is of the fairy order. It is safe to say that the Statesman will not do as Mr. Remsburg has done—give both sides. Nor will it print Mr. Remsburg's analysis of these stories, much less the evidence that Lincoln was an unbeliever in Christianity. One side of a case seems to be all that Christian mentality can bear.

Those self-constituted guardians of religion, the trustees of the Santa Ana, Cal., Public Library, evidently hold THE TRUTH SEEKER to be dangerous to their pet superstition, for they have adopted a resolution reading thus: "That no magazine or newspaper attacking any religion by means of cartoons, burlesque or ridicule shall be allowed on the files or tables of the public library of Santa Ana." These long-eared persons evidently imagine they can bolster up Christianity by keeping the people ignorant, but they will one day find their mistake. The people can read THE TRUTH SEEKER outside of the library, if not inside.

"The paid attendance at the World's Fair last Sunday was less than sixty thousand. The expected great crowds will probably not appear, unless special inducements and attractions are offered. Was it worth while to offend the Christian conscience of the country for the few thousands of dollars likely to be realized?" So says the Independent. But what more has the Christian conscience got to do with it than the Infidel conscience? Do the Christians own the earth? And why should their consciences be considered more than other consciences?

The hoggish impudence of the pious is mountainous.

We shall print Mr. Putnam's letters from Chicago in a pamphlet to be called "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," before their complete appearance in THE TRUTH SEEKER. We shall get the book out in time to be used as a guide-book for those who visit Chicago during the last three months of the Fair. These letters have been highly commended, and deservedly so, for the descriptions are veritable poems, and all the statements are as accurate as official information can make them. Those who go to the Fair will find the book exceedingly useful, for Mr. Putnam has laid it all out from beginning to end, and the book will save visitors' time. Those who read it will know what to see, and where the sights are. It will contain as much information as is possible to crowd into a work of its limit. Those who do not go to the Fair will in this book see it in all its glory, and certainly will know more about the Exhibition than those who attend without this guide-book, trusting to memory. Those who go to Chicago will receive great benefit from it; those who do not, still greater. The price of the book is 25 cents.

At Duell, Michigan, the other Sunday, the Catholic priest, Rev. Mr. Pieffer, during services noticed that while the collection had been taken James Kampa had gone outside to light his pipe. This so enraged the father that he struck Kampa several times with his fist and then with a club. The next day a warrant for his arrest was issued, but when its serving on him was attempted he could not be found, being evidently concealed in the house of one of his parishioners. At present only one priest dares reveal his ravenous greed for the money of the producers so openly, but the impulse to do so nevertheless abides in the breasts of all the clergy. In the Middle Ages when they had the power they everywhere plundered the people with the same force wherever necessary. They will do the same thing again if they ever get the ability. Indeed, they do at present despoil all of us, Jew and Mohammedan and Infidel, by sheer brutal force, only in an indirect manner through the clubs of constables and bayonets of soldiers instead of by their own fists. By the exemption of their churches from taxation, and the banning of competing attractions on the day when they do business, they shamefully rob us all of our money with an outrage as gross as that of the highwayman.

The legislature of Washington state is struggling over a bill exempting church property from taxation. The bill has so far been successful. Those who opposed it in the senate were Foss, Ide, Kellogg, McManus, Miller, Richards, and Rutter. The debate over the bill was a long one. McManus, of Snohomish, said that not to tax palatial houses of worship was wrong when the possessions of the poverty-stricken of the land were taxed all that the law allowed. He was unalterably opposed to freedom from taxation. Senator Sargeant offered an amendment to assess all church property in excess of $5,000, whereupon McManus receded from his amendment. Sargeant's amendment was vigorously opposed by Senators Forrest, Brown, Claypool, and Eshelman. Sargeant contended that if people were able to put from $100,000 to $200,000 in palatial palaces of worship, they were able to pay taxes on it, and that when they made monuments of worship to their money instead of their God, thus taking vast sums of money from the legitimate channels of circulation, they should pay for it. The amendment was lost and the bill passed. We hope that it will not finally become a law, and the lazy and lying churchmen of Washington be pampered with the same indulgence as their brothers in the other states of the Union.

We desire to call the attention of readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the benefits of subscribing to the Truth Seeker Monthly Library. The yearly subscription is only $3, and subscribers to the Library receive a paper-bound copy of each book issued in it; or, if they desire the books in cloth binding, subscribers to the Library can remit the difference in price between paper and cloth binding, and get the books in the latter shape. So far this year subscribers to the Library have received "Paine Vindicated," by Colonel Ingersoll, price 15 cents; the "Creation of God," by Dr. Hartmann, price 50 cents; the "Resurrection of Jesus," by Don Allen, price 40 cents; "Crimes of Preachers," price 25 cents; the "Handbook of Freethought," by W. S. Bell, price 50 cents; "Religion a Curse," by S. P. Putnam, price 25 cents; "Design Argument Fallacies," price 15 cents, making two dollars and twenty cents' worth in five months, or at the rate of $5.40 worth per year; and all for $3 paid in advance. J. E. Remsburg's "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" will be ready very soon, and other books besides are in preparation. Two of these, we may mention, are "Progress and Pleasure," by A. M. Lorentz, LL.D., of which further notice will shortly be made, and Mr. Putnam's "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," of great value to visitors to the Fair, and still greater to those who cannot attend. Send $3 and receive at once the books already published, and, as they appear, those which will be published between now and January '94.

Communications.

These letters will be published in pamphlet form within two or three weeks, as a guide-book and description of the Fair. Send 25 cents for "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair."

World's Fair Notes.

THE TRANSPORTATION BUILDING.—CONCLUDED.

There are two Leslie rotary snowplows—enormous affairs—four powerful steam-shovels, a light and heat tender of the Chicago & St. Paul road. The Baltimore & Ohio shows wooden models of all the earliest locomotives built in this country and in England, with samples of original track, as well as one of its celebrated Royal Blue line passenger trains. In this collection are three of the grass-hopper type of engine, and the old Sampson and Albion built in England and shipped to this country in 1838. The original documents, drawings, pictures of early inventors, way-bills, turn-tables, tickets, and passes, and business methods when railroads were in their infancy form a wonderfully interesting museum of historic relics.

The old Pioneer, built in 1835 and now belonging to the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, is the first engine that came as far West as this city and was run on the Galena road in 1848.

The Great Western, of England, exhibits the old Lord of the Isles, a seven-foot-gage engine originally shown at the London Exposition, 1851. It has made seventy-five miles an hour. This company also shows Trevithick's engine of 1802 and the Pocket of 1829 in full-sized models.

The New York Central company shows the original De Witt Clinton of 1833 on strap rails. The Illinois Central shows the old Mississippi, built in 1836. There is also the historic engine General captured by Andrews's raiders in 1862.

The Westinghouse companies have elaborate exhibits of pumps and signaling apparatus. A complete water station is shown, also a sixty-foot iron turn-table, a seventy-foot electric transfer-table, track scales, and pneumatic crossing gates.

The street railway is not omitted. There are twenty cars showing many varieties of motive power—horse, cable, electricity, steam, gas, and compressed air.

Among the railway bridges are models of those at Forth, in Scotland, Memphis, etc.

The vehicle display is magnificent. There is everything from the old Mexican cart drawn by oxen and the first bicycle ever made to the finest carriages that the modern builder can produce. The luxurious brougham stands alongside the deacon's "one-horse shay." The lord mayor's state coach is in contrast with the "carreta" made without metal by the hands of Pueblo Indians. There's a bewildering collection of carts and harness from Palermo, sledges from Lapland, a caleche from Quebec, a volante from Cuba, and saddlery in the most useful as well as most curious styles. The horse and ass and every kind of packing animal appear. There are palanquins, hammocks, sedans, from remote corners of the earth and remote times. The jinrickshaw from Japan excites attention, along with the ancient carryall of Daniel Webster and Henry Clay.

In the bicycle exhibition is every style of wheel, from the first manufactured to the modern pneumatic.

In the gallery is displayed a vast and comprehensive engineering exhibit.

The first attempts at navigation are illustrated by canoes and rafts gathered from the islands of the sea, the Dark Continent, the far-away north, and the waters of the sunny south, and the rivers and lakes of America. Some of these are queer-looking craft and bear strange names—the Jangada, of Brazil, the Champan, from Magdalena river, etc. Innumerable models illustrate the oddities of marine construction in China, India, Ceylon, and the Malay peninsula. A superb Turkish cacique is an object of interest, and the famous Viking boat from Norway, and the "Golden Door," a braggaza of the Adriatic.

The variety and perfection of merchant marine and navy of almost every nation is displayed in hundreds of forms. The great shipbuilders of the world have vied with each other in showing the miniature products of their skill. There is the half section of a great transatlantic liner, an exact counterpart of one of the new international passenger-boats. There is a vast collection of sail and row boats, yachts, and launches of graceful and elegant finish.

One of the most striking objects in the building is a huge steam hammer, the largest machinery of the kind in the world, which looms almost to the roof in the southern central court.

Improvements in armor plate and naval ordnance are fully shown and will demand careful study.

There is a miniature Nicaragua canal, which shows all the cuts and locks and fills, and the water is running through it. It strikes me that this canal is much more feasible than the Panama canal. The total cost of completing this work is estimated at $66,000,000. Starting from Greytown, where a good harbor, 12 feet deep, has been dredged out, the channel runs west for 31 miles, to a point where three locks will be constructed. Here the San Juan river is adopted as the course, and thence for 64½ miles there is comparatively easy sailing into lake Nicaragua. From lake Nicaragua the canal finds outlet to the Pacific through the Tola basin. No one should fail to look at this beautiful model.

Experts in transportation are those who are the most astonished at the wonderful displays in this building. It is almost incredible what advances have been made. The general manager of one of the best roads in the United States said: "Our complete train service in the United States is perhaps better for our uses than that of any foreign country; but there is not one of them apparently which has not advanced further in particular directions. American roads can learn a lesson in improved methods from every foreign exhibit." It is well for Americans to know that we are not ahead of the world yet, and thousands of foreign exhibits will teach us many things of beauty and use.

Transportation is a splendid illustration of evolution. See the difference between the lifting of weights by contracted biceps and the steam crane, which lifts a hundred tons as easily as a baby does its toy. See the difference between the original "Rocket" and "Meteor" locomotives, with their stove boilers and barrels of water on wheelbarrow tenders, and the one-hundred-ton locomotives, capable of a speed of one hundred miles an hour. Between these two points of history are the experience and the best works of hundreds of thousands of human beings. One is fairly dazed at the development of man's genius.

FESTIVAL HALL.

And so, looking upon these magnificent triumphs of the development of motion more grand and imperial than that of Phœbus in his fabled chariot of the sun, it is time for the charms of music and symphonies to voice the gladsome victory, and from Transportation Building we will pass into Festival Hall, or Choral Hall, which is next door, and listen while Theodore Thomas wields the baton and one hundred and fourteen musicians play Berlioz's march, "Rakoczy."

This hall is located where the two great promenades meet, between the Horticultural and Transportation Buildings. It is simple and severe in outline, after the Doric architecture, resembling an amphitheater surmounted by a dome. It has four porticos, the one facing the lagoon being the main entrance. This is entered by a broad flight of steps, at the foot of which appear two statues, reproductions of the two celebrated marbles of Handel and Bach. On the side of the portico are bas-relief panels displaying the progress of music. The interior arrangement is that of the Greek theater. There are no galleries of any kind, but a large promenade extends around the building. The auditorium, which seats sixty-five hundred, is decorated with plaster relief work in color, and symbolic paintings. Near this is Puck's building, and of course we want to take a look into this elegant little structure, where we see the printing in all its processes of this illustrated journal.

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING.

After the music is over, between Electricity Building and Mines and Mining Building, at the end of a beautiful wide avenue, towers Administration Building, the gem of the architectural glories of the Exposition. It occupies a commanding position overlooking the Grand Basin, which spreads between the Manufacturers' and Agricultural Buildings, and flows under the Peristyle to the lake. Its dome may be seen shimmering in the sunlight many miles out upon the lake and from any point of approach it is the loftiest object that attracts the view—a great golden dome, with the beautiful White City about it, a charming prospect indeed.

The building is in the form of four pavilions 84 feet square, and these are connected by a great central dome 120 feet in diameter and 250 feet high. Externally the design may be divided into three stages. The first stage corresponds in height with the buildings grouped about it 65 feet high. The second stage is a continuation of the central rotunda, surrounded on all sides by an open colonnade. The third stage is the base of the great dome, 30 feet high, and the great dome itself rising in graceful curve and richly ornamented.

On each side of the four great entrances are groups of sculpture. Between these entrances is a hall 30 feet square with broad circular stairways. The interior of the dome is octagonal in form, the first story being composed of eight enormous arched openings, and above these arches is a frieze 27 feet in width. The dome rises 200 feet from the floor. The under side of the dome is enriched with panels filled with sculpture and an immense painting. It rivals in decorations the most celebrated domes in the world.

A great statue of Columbus stands on a pedestal directly in front of the east entrance to the building. The standard of Castile and Aragon is uplifted in his right hand. In the left hand is his sword pointing downward. He is taking possession of America.

There are no exhibits in the Administration Building. It is the headquarters of the officials of the Exposition. It is a continual delight to look upon this building as you traverse the different parts of the grounds. Especially beautiful is the building as it fronts the lagoon—that part called the Grand Basin. First to be seen at the western end of this is the Columbian fountain, the central idea of which is the apotheosis of modern liberty—Columbia enthroned on a triumphal barge guided by Time, heralded by Fame, and rowed by eight standing figures representing on one side the Arts, and on the other Science, Industry, Agriculture, and Commerce. The barge is preceded by eight sea horses, forming a circle directly in front, and mounted by eight young men as outriders representing modern Commerce. The base is circular, flanked by columns surmounted by eagles. The water is furnished by a great half circle of dolphins and a system of jets around the barge and figures. At night the fountain is illuminated by electricity. On each side of this are the great electric fountains with streams of water 150 feet high.

Looking eastward from the Columbian fountain the eyes rest upon the great statue of the Republic, the largest ever made in America, and which faces the Administration Building. The figure is sixty-five feet tall. The arms and hands are upraised toward the head. In her right hand she holds a globe on which an eagle rests with outspread wings, the left hand grasping a pole on the top of which is a liberty cap. A laurel wreath rests on the head. The hair is arranged after the fashion of the Grecian model, while the drapery lies in heavy folds on the arms and shoulders and falls in graceful curves at the side. Over the bust are armored shields, on the bosom is an eagle. A corsage envelops the waist and from it depends a chain holding a sword. Beyond the statue, toward the lake, is the Peristyle or Grecian colonnade, five hundred feet long and one hundred and fifty feet high, which connects the Casino and Music Hall. It is classic and picturesque. Along the top of the Peristyle is a broad promenade adorned with eighty-five allegorical figures of heroic proportions. In the center the colonnade is broken by an immense triumphal arch twenty feet higher than the promenade. At the top the arch gradually narrows to a pedestal forty feet square supporting the Columbus Quadriga. This group represents Columbus as he appeared on the triumphal fête given in his honor on his return from his first voyage. He is standing in a four-horse chariot leaning lightly on his admiral's sword. The horses drawing the chariot are led by women. Their light drapery flies in the wind and the horses prance impatiently. A mounted herald on either side completes the group.

MACHINERY HALL.

Machinery Hall, or Palace of the Mechanical Arts—as it is fitly termed—attracts our attention as we pass from Administration Building and take a last look of the Grand Basin, the fountains, and the Peristyle, and pursue our way to wonders vast and new. Machinery Hall, with its annex, is the next largest structure to Manufacturers' Building, and covers a space of over twenty acres, and this is crowded with every kind of machine from almost the whole world. It is an amazing exhibition. There is every device and contrivance by which man can increase mechanical force and make himself a giant in power, and yet no lady's finger might manipulate so delicately as these polished and splendid instruments that in their varied action seem to glitter with the intelligence of man himself. There is the machine which puts upon a watch-screw the threads so infinitely minute that it takes a microscope to detect them, along with the monster hammers which by a single blow exert the force of tons, and the great engines developing twenty-five hundred horse-power.

Here was witnessed the quick and wonderful transition from stillness to motion, when on the grand inauguration day the president touched the button and the vast currents swept through these mighty machineries. The Allis-Corliss began its ponderous evolutions, and with this fifty or sixty other engines start like regiments at one command, and wheels, cranks, spindles, by the thousands leap the marvelous activity. At no one time in the history of the world has a single touch liberated such tremendous forces.

As we come into this enormous structure the three traveling cranes, operated by electricity, are objects of immediate interest. Huge tracks, elevated to a height equal with the balcony, run along the three main aisles from the east to the west end of the building. The cranes are used for installing and moving the heavy machinery. They are run with the average speed of a horse-car, and pick up pieces of fifteen tons' weight, more or less, and transfer them to any part of the building. They are so constructed with lateral motion as to place any exhibit within ten feet of the space to be occupied. When the needful work is done a sort of passenger car will be attached to these cranes, and visitors will be carried back and forth from one end of the long building to the other. The extreme length is fourteen hundred feet, and so this vast spectacle of moving machinery can be watched for one-third of a mile with the ease and comfort that you could watch a theatrical entertainment.

The Westinghouse plant, which supplies the incandescent lights throughout the entire grounds, has its power generated in Machinery Hall. Here are the two largest dynamos ever constructed. The capacity of each dynamo is fifteen thousand lights of sixteen candle-power.

In connection with this is the largest and finest electrical switchboard ever made. All the wires which feed the immense system of the grounds originate in this. It is of marble, with nickel slide bars. It is divided into forty circuits, and is so arranged that any dynamo can be turned on to any circuit. It is above the floor and is reached by a winding bronze staircase.

The boiler plant is one of the most interesting features of this stupendous display. It contains fifty boilers, all of large size. These are arranged in a long tier, like slumbering giants, and the space about it is as neat and clean as a lady's boudoir. Ventilators keep the air pure and cool. The firemen wear a uniform, and this tremendous laboratory, with the heat of hell itself, rivaling the fury of the central fires, presents a very pretty and comfortable appearance to the visitor.

All the applied sciences of the world are under the roof of Machinery Hall. Every machine known to civilization is here, from the least even to the greatest. Silk-weaving machines occupy considerable space and turn out various fanciful designs commemorative of the Exposition, such as the landing of Columbus, etc.

The printing-presses are here, from the perfecting press of a morning newspaper with a capacity of fifty thousand papers printed, pasted, cut, and folded in an hour to the country press which is run by hand and fed by the "devil" of the office. These are in actual operation, and the great Chicago dailies are run off every hour with the latest information from every part of the globe. As you sit down and rest your weary feet these colossal and restless servitors will daintily hand you a picture or printed column and you will know what is happening at the antipodes.

The forgings and castings are particularly complete. Brass valves and tubings are polished to a degree that they resemble mirrors. There is one towering valve made of wood and tin and painted to resemble iron. It looks large enough to provide safety for every boiler on the grounds.

It is difficult to give an idea of the almost one hundred classes of exhibits which throng upon us. There are water-wheels, steam and gas engines, pumps of all sorts, ice and refrigerating machinery, and diving apparatus.

In another group are fire-engines, hose-carts, stand-pipes, extension-ladders, etc., all the latest improved apparatus for fighting fire.

Again we find machines for working metals, steam hammers, hydraulic, planing, drilling, wheel-cutting, and dividing machines.

The most attractive to the uninitiated, perhaps, are the machines for the manufacture of silk, cotton, woolen, worsted, linen, and India rubber goods; of rope, twine, paper, tapestries, carpets, and laces; also the sewing and leather-working machines, and those for the manufacture of boots and shoes.

Saw-mill machinery can be seen from the primitive types to the modern mills which turn out hundreds of thousands of feet of lumber every day. All the newest machines for planing, veneering, for working geometrical designs in wood, and for the manufacture of matches, tooth-picks, etc., are on exhibition. We also take a look at the job presses, the numbering and type-setting machines, and the various mechanical processes in use for illustrating newspapers and periodicals.

The delicate machinery which turns out the various completed portions of a watch, the needle- and pin-making machines, which seem to work by the power of thought itself, these are alongside the huge street rollers, sprinklers, and sweepers; steam-gages, stone-sawing and glass-grinding machines, rolling-mills, forges, etc. We behold enormous power and wondrous subtlety of movement in near review.

In still another group are the mills for the preparation of cereals, sugar-refining and confectioner's machinery, oil-making machinery, and evaporating machinery for condensing milk.

There is a machine for measuring and weighing coffee. It takes the coffee from the hopper, puts it in one-pound paper bags, and seals them, at the rate of several tons per day.

A machine for the manufacture of tags and labels takes the paper from the roll, cuts the tags, prints the labels, punches the eyelets, and inserts the wire for fastening.

One is amazed at the ingenuity of man. One can scarcely conceive the progress made in machinery since the Centennial, so numerous are the inventions and applications. It seems as if by his own efforts man had removed whatever curse there was to labor and remanded drudgery to material things. If there were as much genius in co-operation as genius in discovery it seems as if no man might be obliged to earn his bread in the sweat of his face. With these imperial forces at command all the millions of the earth might live in comfort. It gives one a keen sense of power to walk amidst these superb and beautiful machineries, and to realize that here are a thousand servants of his will in almost every variety of form to make him ruler of this planet. It is an animating spectacle, and the music of the innumerable wheels is delightful, while right before our eyes are produced the most astonishing results, that put to shame every miracle of the past, and if all this wonderful wealth could be rightly distributed and used for the universal benefit heaven would have to abdicate in favor of earth, for the earth then would be the better paradise. I think machinery is the greatest foe of the church, and I don't wonder the pious bigots want to keep it still on Sunday. Every revolution of a wheel diminishes the orthodox regime. No bayonet was ever so powerful as those flying spokes.

These great masses of building covering over twenty acres consist of the main Machinery Building, 846 feet long and 492 feet wide; of the Machinery Annex, 490 by 550 feet; the power house, 100 by 461 feet; the pumping house, 77 by 84; and the machine shop, 146 by 250 feet. The cost of all these buildings is $1,285,000.

The main Machinery Building presents the appearance of three great railway train houses, spanned with three arched trusses. As it fronts the Court of Honor it is rich and palatial; toward the stock exhibit, on the other side, it is of the plainest description. The details of the architecture are mainly fashioned from Seville and other Spanish towns. There is a lofty colonnade between this main building and the Agricultural Building. In the center of this colonnade is an archway leading to the cattle exhibit. From this point there is a beautiful view nearly a mile in length of the lagoon as it flows by the Manufacturers' Building, the Woman's Building, and the Art Palace. Between the two buildings, Machinery and Agricultural, is an obelisk 60 feet high and a fountain placed in the lagoon.

The Machinery Annex Building is entered by subways as well as by bridges from the Main Hall, and from Administration, Mining, and Transportation Buildings. It is a large and very simple structure. It is like a vast mill or foundry.

Attached to this Annex is the power house, with its 40 steam-engines and 20,000 horse-power.

There were over 1,000 applications from American manufacturers for the exhibition of machinery. Germany has four sections of floor space near the main entrance. Great Britain has a somewhat larger space toward the north entrance. France has an equal section. New South Wales, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland will be found stretching along to the west of Germany, while Canada, Belgium, Brazil, Austria, Mexico, and Russia are to the south. All these are first to be seen as one enters the building and make a most creditable appearance, while our own exhibitors are by no means eclipsed. The United States leads all countries in the extent and variety of its display.

THE AGRICULTURAL BUILDING.

Passing from the huge Machinery Building, and taking our way either by the colonnade or across the bridge over the shining lagoon, we enter the Agricultural Building, where nature in marvelous profusion spreads its many products. In Machinery Hall we see man subduing earth, but in Agricultural Hall we see the earth itself gladly pouring forth its wealth to man. What abundance there is, and who need to starve when the earth is so fruitful? Here are palaces, gorgeous palaces, made out of the golden sheaves and tasseled corn, and no palace of silver and gold ever shone with such splendor. I must confess, after all, that when I have passed through the prodigious displays of man's genius and been thrilled and exalted beyond the power of words to express by his daring achievements, it is a real comfort to wander and revel in the amplitude and beneficence of dear mother earth and realize that it is not all eternal struggle, but that at times, as Walt Whitman says, we can "loaf with our soul," or as Thoreau says, we have a "large margin" to our lines. We can simply do nothing and not starve. We can sit under the vine and figtree; we can dream beneath the orange blossom. We can sleep, and still the golden grain will grow and fruit will fall at our feet. Earth is our glorious ally and woos us from restless toil to gentle and careless repose. We can now and then let things drift as they will, and we drift, too, like clouds through the sunny sky, and are soothed by the music of the indolent winds. Nature of her own accord is preparing the root for flower, and the flower for fruit, and we need not toil nor spin. It is well to enjoy these luxurious moments, for labor afterward becomes sublimer and more vigorous. It is well to realize not the storm and conflict only, but the beauty and peace of earth, its richness, its exuberance; to know that if "we tickle her with a hoe, she will laugh with a harvest." In Agricultural Building we see the kindly, the sweet, and almost human side of nature so lovely and alluring which is indeed the nurse of our greatest faculties, the fountain of our boundless energy. Where, after all, would be the glories of this Exposition, its architecture, its roofs and towers and sculptured walls, its blazing jewels, its wondrous pictures, its breathing statues, its mighty machineries, but for this gift of nature to our earliest toil? In these genial products are the beginnings of man's greatness. The cultivation of the earth is the first step to civilization, and if earth had not poured forth her treasures so abundantly the vantage-ground of to-day would have been forever unattainable. A vast prospect unfolds itself to my mind's eye as I wander through this stately palace. I see the prairies far away, the bearded grain and tasseled corn swaying in the sun; I see the fields and groves in spring's effulgence; I see the seed dropped into the ground, the horse and the ox at the plow; I see the June days, with green pastures and flowery meadows; I see the march of summer, the golden autumn and the pomp of harvest; I see the blithe and busy scene, the loaded trains, the great barn crowded to the utmost, the farmer and his merry men, the laboring animals; the bright and whirling machinery; the limpid stream and the wash for dinner; the sunset's jolly hour; the round moon in the sky, the breezy dawn. I see the pageantry of the year—the ever-changing seasons, which make perpetual romance for human life. I see the hearth and home amidst nature's luxuriance. I hear the song of labor, that labor which dignifies and ennobles our common existence. The Agricultural Building might be called a beautiful temple wherein we recognize the universal bond, the identity of nature with man; wherein we see the sun and earth combining to give brightness and plenty to our pathway; wherein we see the operation of those eternal forces which beyond the will of man contribute to his advancement. I always did think that Cain was superior to Abel, and really the gentler and nobler of the two, for surely if there is a god what worship could be sweeter to him than the offering of the fruit of the earth? Only a cruel god would demand or accept the blood of beasts. If we could unravel Cain's side of the story we should find that he was the better man, for he was the cultivator of the earth, and not the hunter and slayer of animals. Surely, if we are to honor and reverence nature how more worthily can we do it than by wreathing our altar with flowers and piling it with fruits? Cain was the first agriculturist, and he had the courage to vindicate the glory of his calling. I shall not condemn him, for certainly his act of worship was a step in human progress.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

A Poem Which Quotes Poems.

From the Sunday Gazetteer.

The Truth Seeker Publishing Company, of New York, has placed on our table "Liberty in Literature, Testimonial to Walt Whitman," by Robert G. Ingersoll, being an address delivered in Philadelphia. There is also given an excellent likeness of the poet and one of the author. It is a handsome book of one hundred pages, in enameled covers. The lecture is itself a poem, interspersed with choice quotations from the good poet's writings. The colonel's address at the funeral of the poet is added as a supplement. Price 25 cents.

An Open Fair on Sunday.

Religious fanaticism has received a decided and emphatic set-back in its attempts to close the gates of the World's Fair. One hundred thousand people testified their appreciation of the opening of the Fair yesterday by their presence within the inclosure of the Fair grounds. Parents with their children were seen sauntering over the serpentine walks, or riding on the launches and gondolas that dotted the surface of the beautiful lagoon. Nearly all the buildings were thrown open, and but few exhibits were closed. The crowds that attended were respectable and orderly, and not one person under the influence of liquor could be seen upon the grounds the whole day long.

Every hour the crowds increased. The lines of transportation were taxed to their utmost capacity at times during the day. Each train and car brought crowds of American workingmen with their families, who had decided to leave a noisy, bustling city for a place where they could find quiet and rest, among the beautiful and inspiring sights of the White City, surrounded by healthful, elevating, and ennobling influences.

The writer, in company with Dr. E. B. Foote and Mrs. Foote, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Stevens, and Mr. Bernhard, of Strasburg, Ill., made a little party and decided to swell the crowd as much as possible.

A truly delightful day was spent. After visiting several buildings, and getting a fair meal at moderate prices in the Vienna Cafe, we wandered into the Art Palace, and true to the natural tastes of Freethinkers for the beautiful in nature, we enjoyed the rare works of human skill. Here we met with many other Freethinkers, a fact rather suggestive that the Art Exhibition was by far the greater attraction for them. Dr. Brown and Mrs. Brown, from Rockford, Ill.; Mrs. Webb, daughter of the late Dr. Monroe, of the Ironclad Age, with her husband, were here, gazing with appreciation and wonder at the grand specimens of art that have helped to make this world more beautiful.

As night came on, and the sun had passed below the western horizon, the whole grounds, aided by nature, took on an air of greater beauty. The trees seemed to wear a more beautiful tint, the flowers seemed to possess more fragrance, and the beautiful strains of sweet music, floating on the cool zephyrs, made one feel as though one had suddenly been transported from this world of reality and fact into a fairyland where perpetual summer, sunshine, and flowers could be enjoyed. At night the grounds were one continuous scene of enchantment and beauty. Thousands of incandescent lamps, aided by innumerable arc-lights, made the grounds and buildings glow with beautiful splendor. The boats upon the lagoons were decorated with lights of various hues. All of this filled the enthusiastic lover of nature with an unspeakable joy. Did one want to find religion, they would find more here than in all the churches and cathedrals of Christendom. That is, if religion means grand thoughts, soul-inspiring scenes, and beautiful visions. The creed that nature teaches here in this collection of beautiful temples, exhibitions of man's attempt to make this world beautiful with his skill and glad with his labor—magnificent flowers, paintings, statuary, and marvels of handiwork—is calculated to ennoble the minds of men far more than any creed that has ever yet been hatched in the brain of a priest or preacher.

The church had predicted that the day would be given to debauchery should the gates be opened on Sunday, but the conditions in Jackson park yesterday gave back the lie to those who had made it, a lie hatched only in conceit, and engendered by selfishness.

The gates are open—may they be open, may the toiling masses be given an opportunity to view with wonder and pleasure the productions of their own labor and skill. Bigotry has threatened to boycott the Fair should the gates be opened on Sunday—a truly consistent act with its own mean and grasping nature. It is the duty of every Freethinker now, the duty of every lover of freedom, to visit this Fair on Sunday if they possibly can. Swell the crowds that attend it on Sunday. Show the administration that we appreciate and approve their action in opening the Fair gates in face of the mountains of prejudice that have been brought to bear against them. I should be pleased if every Freethinker visiting the Fair would call at our headquarters while in Chicago, where we may be seen at any time. JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,

Sec. Freethought Federation of America.
345 W. Randolph st., Chicago, Ill.

Impurities of Churches and Political Parties.

Christ says, Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God. Also, Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them. People of intelligence believe religiously and vote politically as suits them. I mean in the United States of America. It is true in many instances that they step aside from that strait and narrow path which they ought to walk in, and do things not right, through love of money. Our savior says the love of money is the root of all evil. Politicians sell out for it. Preachers sometimes rail at others and leave their church and preach another doctrine if paid enough cash. Is it any wonder that a man of sense and good morals hesitates when asked to join a church or vote a straight ticket? Will anyone ever be worth a million dollars and get it honestly? The Standard Oil prince gave a large sum out of his corners to condone those corners. So have robbers taken from the rich and given to the poor, without publishing it either. Both obtained the money dishonestly. In New York state I have seen the rich in their pews but the poor sat where they could, or sat standing or went out disgusted. I saw the wealthy commune, then the well-to-do, and last of all the poor. They associate the same way. Christ says, Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. In fact, to-day money is worshiped more than God, and if there is no hell there ought to be one to put in liars, tattlers, thieves, doctors, lawyers, and all who do evil that good may come, especially for money. It ought to be paved with gold, with precious stones scattered around so that all who worship cash would kill each other in the scramble to see who would get the most. But this is not the case any more than that heaven is paved with the same. There are a few honest, sincere preachers, doctors, and lawyers in this world, and if Christ tells the truth occasionally one may get to heaven after being purified. For money is king on earth. If $500 were offered to any of us to join a certain church and we knew it would be paid, would any church on earth hold the congregation? I forgot to include editors with the above sinners. I do so now, asking pardon for the omission. Paul says, According to your deeds you shall be judged, whether they be good or evil. He also says; As in Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive—not a part, but all. Our laws say the same. If anyone does more good than evil their account ought to balance the right way. James says, If any among you is sick let him call for the elders of the church, and they shall pray over him, anointing him in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall raise him up, and if he have committed any sin it shall be forgiven him. In my mind, when the millennium comes we will see this done by those who belong to the churches. If any are sick here they generally send for a doctor, even if he swears, or smokes, or chews—people belonging to churches—sinners, lawyers, preachers, etc. I reckon James sorter was using deceit. Our savior says, Love one another. Will a man love his wife if she will knock him down and use him to mop the floor if he does not? Does a child love the parent like Solomon, or the one who is mild, gentle, and persuasiv? It is said God is love.

The Jews crucified Christ. They were cowards, and could not worship anyone unless they were afraid of him. I have heard in the Eastern states Methodists North preach that there were grades of happiness, and also misery. The Methodist South, I "sorter" believe, do not. Not ignorant ones either, but those who were highly educated and received a good salary. We know just what we have been taught, or learned by books or experience. There are so few who do as they would be done by, that when death overtakes us I am afraid we will not get to heaven until purified.

The old generations did not know how to steal and hide as well as we do now. The happiest people I ever was among I found in the mountain region, of the Southern states. I have eaten and slept in their homes. No need to carry a bed down there. You do not have to have money to stop with them. In reply as to my stopping over night, the answer was most invariably: "Stranger, if you can put up with our fare you can stay." My horse was taken care of, too. He did not have to wear out his teeth on a post.

There was no stuck-up aristocracy, vanity, or pride of life. I was a stranger and they took me in. Christ says of such are the kingdom of heaven. There was no railroad, nor bank, nor stock quotations, etc.

Preachers officiated who could not read a word, occasionally. They could live with little work, and seemed to be happy. When I left I was invited to call again if I ever came around that way, and was urged to stay a week; and if I had offered a cent they would have been insulted. I came up from there in 1887, too, not thirty years since. They were most of them ignorant. The poet says where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise. Eve ought to have known this. But she did not. She got wise, but it shortened her days. Saloon proprietors fix up their saloons, and have a good warm fire, so as to get customers. Many resort to them because there is not as good a place to get papers at home, and they have a miserable wife to keep that home. People do not have to go there. If people were honest and did right, we would have a millennium now, and not have to put it off until dead. Instead of worrying and wishing to make the weather, etc., they would trust God. Heaven would be here, all would be blissful. The babe in its mother's arms has perfect trust in the love that protects it. If its hunger is satisfied, and it is in health, it is not aware of life's troublesome sea, but gently falls asleep at the lullaby, and wakes up again without fear of here or hereafter.

So may we if we trust in God that he doeth all things well.

The abuse or misuse of what we possess leads to a severing of our chain of existence, link by link, until we die before our allotted time. It is a slow but sure way of suiciding. Christ says, no murderer can ever enter heaven. Tobacco, whisky, coffee, tea, morphine, and opium all have their drunkards.

Why do not all Protestant churches unite? They believe in the same God; there's good people in all, and bad also. John says when comparing us to trees, that every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. A tree is very apt to burn up into ashes. But some say we burn forever, throughout all eternity. Can anything be burnt up and do this? Can we see or feel our souls? Can they be burnt or frozen? There is not a good mother, who would punish her child always, no matter how bad it was. It is said, your father in heaven is more merciful to you than you are to your children. Without purity, we cannot see God. Without loving him we cannot enter into the holy city. Man born of woman is prone like the sparks which fly upward to do evil.

The book of Genesis says God made all things, and called his creation good, and very good.

If we read further we find that he repented that he made man, because he only did evil continually. He must have known that his work would do so, when he made man, or else changed his mind. If he changed his mind, he was not such an infinitely wise God after all as some preach. Joshua said, Sun, stand still. Science says it did not. But if the almighty made all things he can make the sun even stand still or the moon either.

If we had a correct version of the Bible we would not need educated men to explain the book, as we are sadly in need of now.

Money is taken, by all denominations, of sinners as well as the righteous with no exceptions. The Campbellites in Ohio do not pass the hat to us sinners, if we sit apart from them. But some others.

Some Portraits.

WOULDN'T THESE GENTLEMEN HAVE HARMONIZED BETTER WITH THEIR ENVIRONMENT IF THEY HAD FLOURISHED ABOUT 1620?—The Jury.

are as much beggars as the tramp. Let the church support itself, and go and visit the widow, orphans, and poor, and not pray God to do so. Nor think we sinners wish an interest in their prayers until they turn out their rich liars, hypocrites, tattlers, etc.

J. L. BUSHNELL.

Selfishness and Socialism.

All the attempts which have been made since the dawn of history to equalize its burdens of labor and justly distribute its rewards have failed because man is as yet under the dominion of the purely animal instincts. The greed of the hog, the fierceness of the tiger, the cunning of the fox, the pride of the peacock, have been the combined impulses which have ruled nations and individuals since this world was born. Dignifying these animal instincts by such terms as "self-interest," "war," "diplomacy," and "self-esteem," does not in any degree mitigate their unquestioned animalism. Nor do the multitudinous evidences of man's superiority to other animals in cunning devices for his material well-being, and which we call civilization, alter or soften in the slightest the nature of these predominating qualities which impel him to action. On the other hand they seem to intensify and exalt them, and we bow in reverent obedience to the mandates of the rule of force to which they have given birth.

Under such a dominion is it any wonder that we fight, crowd, and trample on each other to get the biggest ear of corn in the pen?

The world is one vast arena of battling contests for plunder and supremacy; the fight is ever on, and the universal interest in it never abates.

Those who have attained the mastery are kept busy fighting off those who seek to displace them by invading and occupying their positions. War, rapin, and murder ensue, the positions change—the patrician becomes the plebeian and the proletariat, and the latter opens his peacock feathers and struts out his brief reign until he in turn is dethroned and again enslaved.

In the short breathing-spells snatched from this all-absorbing battle of life a sort of mongrel morality has been instituted which, having for its basic origin nothing but pure animalism, necessarily appeals to that element in man and finds a ready acceptance. Under the guise of religion it promises rewards and punishments for acceptance or rejection of belief in the silliest proposition that was ever presented to a gullible people. The eternal principle of natural justice forms no part of its decalog. It outrages the natural faculty of reason by placing the punishments of an alleged "original sin" on the shoulders of an innocent, unselfish man, whom it proceeds to raise to the altitude of a creative God, making belief in this marvelous change a condition of "salvation."

No man, be he Agnostic, Infidel, or possessed of any belief, can consistently deny the fact that whoever uttered the three words, "Love one another," solved in their utterance all religious or sociological questions that have arisen or can arise in the history of the human race. It will be observed that the church which claims that the utterer of these words is the God of their salvation has never attempted to obey that command. It has established a sort of soul insurance society the subscribers to which sign articles of belief and pay as much premium as can be extorted from them, and this is all that is required to insure them an eternity of bliss in the next world. What particular virtue there is in thus looking after one's self for the next world and ignoring the claims of our brother man to our love in this we leave the Presbyterian general assembly to decide.

With these preliminary remarks, showing that the church is not engaged in the moral uplifting of the race by advocating the principle of universal love, we proceed to glance at the "reforms," so called, which break forth spasmodically with promises of a sure and speedy establishment of justice and right for the sons of toil.

The most pretentious of these at present is the Socialist Labor party. It gets square into the roadway of our modern civilization and taking it by the throat proceeds to demand an unconditional surrender of its cherished and vested rights. Many of these demands are just, some are impracticably vague and will need revision, but all are an expression of a sense of injustice and wrong not to be longer tolerated.

It was my privilege recently to address an audience composed for the most part of Socialists. I endeavored to show that love for all men—a reciprocal, co-operative interest in the welfare of the whole people by the whole people—would lift us above the beast and possibly develop a soul in us and would be the solution of the vexed question of our unjust and imperfect social condition. To my surprise, the leaders combated this idea of unselfishness. They wanted no voluntary love from their fellow-man, no graceful concessions, no reciprocal interchange with all mankind. They gloried in their selfishness, and cited the fact that we are all selfish, and what they wanted was the earth. In vain I tried to lift their thoughts above animal selfishness, to impart a racial pride that would distinguish us from the beasts; they would have none of it. They would rather have their opponents bound down to compliance than their cheerful concession.

This experience at this meeting revealed to me the cause of the failure of reforms and gave rise to the thoughts expressed at the commencement of this article.

Here was an organization whose object was beneficent, but whose intense selfishness made them intolerant of the conceded right of others to capital and the machinery of production. They were oblivious to the fact that these possessors of capital and machinery were in no wise personally to blame for being such owners, but were the logical outcome of the very selfishness which they themselves were proud to possess. And the fact that centuries of custom and law concede these rights to capitalists and that to wrest them from them by force or statute would be manifest injustice has not the slightest weight with these leading Socialists. They are as careless of the rights of the capitalists as the capitalists have been of theirs. They use the same weapon—a club of greed. It needs but a glance at these combatants to see who will come out victorious. Entrenched behind law, custom, prejudice, and with the sinews of war (money) in plenty to bribe or coerce the poor proletariat from political allegiance to his self-confessed selfish leaders, the capitalist can smile in supreme disdain at the abortive efforts of radical Socialism.

The only relief that will ever come to underpaid labor through the dawn of justice in this world will not come by force or by political action. It will come only through the resurrection of mankind from the quagmire of animal wallowing to a higher altitude of reciprocal beneficent existence.

WILLIAM ALLEN SMITH.

Chinese and Church.

From the Coast Seamen's Journal.

The clergy have again shown the hoof in their present attitude toward the Geary act. With very rare exceptions these gentlemen are opposed tooth and nail to what they are pleased to call our barbarity toward an unfortunate people, and have even gone so far as to threaten the nation with the direst results if the law is put into operation. This is all directly in keeping with the record of the clergy as related to the people. Religion as it is taught by them is a mere abstraction, a dream, instead of, as its philosophy directs, a practical treatment of every-day conditions. No wonder the great masses of the people of the United States are non-church-goers when we witness the maudlin, raving execration of the sleek tricksters of the pulpit. The religion of Christ, as it has been taught by these conservators of injustice, is a thing to be well rid of; a thing to revolt against; it has been ever for the rich man and against the poor. Resignation, subjection, meekness, toleration, and a bending of the knee to the hatred, malice, and lust of the usurpers of God's own domain on earth—these are the mandates of the church. And it has always been so; a jealous regard for the Peter's pence has kept back the light for centuries and is to-day obscuring it. We see this in the history of all religions before and since the time of Christ, in the crucifixion, in the tyranny of Constantine, in seventeenth-century despotism in Britain and the continent, and afterward among the refugees on our own soil who placed the shackles of religious domination on our country before it was well born. We note the same thing among the prostituted and petted preachers of Louis XVI, whose conservation of the wrongs of the people accelerated the French Revolution instead of preventing it, as they would have done if their religion had been less than a snare to trap the unwary. To-day the mouthing herd are unanimous in their cry, "Seek ye the light!" while they hold the pall of their destructive teachings over the people. Theirs is outwardly a beautiful theory of "peace and good will;" inwardly it is a disgusting callous that is dead to every perception of humanity. Veritable whitened sepulchers are these preachers of a morality that is immoral, active in the work of conserving the power of wealth and wrong in the interests of their own beloved Peter's pence, and deaf to the cry of suffering humanity. A better example of the treachery of this misnamed religion could not be had than in the attitude of the clergy toward the Chinese now. They openly advocate the breach of the law on the ground that it is unjust to the Chinaman, but really in the fear and conviction that every step of that sort is a step toward the emancipation of the nation's wage-slaves and the consequent reduction of Peter's pence. The clergy may find before long that they have been trying to stem the running tide of knowledge and liberty, religious and social, with sand.

The Newark Liberal League

being desirous of fostering the social talent that is apt to lie inert with the Freethinkers generally, and with a hope of a better acquaintanceship with neighboring individuals of that order, would like to meet them at Glen island on Friday, July 7, 1893. The steamer upon which they will journey to the island is the regular Starin steamer leaving pier 18, N. R., at 9:45, South Fifth street, Brooklyn, 10:05, and Thirty-second street, E. R., 10:30 A.M. Fare for round trip forty cents for adults and twenty cents for children. Tickets are purchased on the steamer. For those wishing to carry provisions there is an island with tables, etc., used exclusively for lunches, while for others, the clam-bake, restaurant, and dairy are available. For amusements there are boats, bathing, swings, animals, birds, fishes, and various other attractions. The monument and grave of the great Freethinker, Thomas Paine, is near by and can be visited. Subjoined is the entire time-table of the steamers, as some may be able to join them later in the day. The omnipresent photographer will be on hand and endeavor to obtain a group picture of those who do not object. Come one and all and let us get better acquainted that we may enjoy and assist each other. Steamers leave Pier 18, N. R., foot of Cortlandt street, 9:45, 10:45 A.M., 12 M., 1:30, 2:30, 3:30, 5:15 P.M.; Thirty-second street, E. R., 10:30, 11:30 A.M., 12:45, 2:15, 2:45, 3:15, 4:15, 5:45 P.M.; South Fifth street, Brooklyn, 10:05, 11:05, A.M., 12:20, 1:50, 2:30, 2:50, 3:50 P.M. Returning, leave at 3:00, 5:00, 5:30, 6, 7, 8 o'clock P.M.

The World's Fair Open on Sunday.

The correspondent of the Journal, Atlanta, Ga., has this to say:

The World's Fair was open yesterday, and will be open every Sunday till the final close of the Exposition.

The question of Sunday closing is settled. It has been adjudicated by the highest tribunal. Justice Fuller, sustained by his learned associates on the bench, has emphasized the wisdom and truth of the maxim, written in the Constitution: "Congress shall make no law respecting religion."

Said a distinguished Chicago lawyer to me to-day: "I regard the decision of Justice Fuller regarding the Sunday opening as a most important deliverance. A vital principle was involved, viz.: Is this a free country, or shall it be controlled by fanatics? When Congress, nagged on by pharisees and zealots, sought to make such a law, it at once became the duty of all conservative people in the United States to oppose it by legal and moral means. If Congress can, with impunity, annul that provision of our Constitution which divorces the state and church, and the courts uphold the nullification, Congress will proceed to annul other provisions of the Constitution. Sunday closing of the World's Fair would be the small end of a revolutionary wedge whose further entrance into constitutional restraints and safeguards would be merely a question of time."

A prominent Southerner here says he regards this as a states' rights victory, and as such it should delight the Southern heart.

SUNDAY AT THE FAIR.

Thronging thousands yesterday testified their approval of Justice Fuller's decision by attending the Fair. It was an ideal June day—not too hot.

Early in the morning a steady stream of visitors poured into the gates, and by noon more than sixty thousand visitors were sauntering about the grounds. The crowd was distinguished by perfect decorum, by neatness of dress, and by an eagerness to see everything. At least one-half of this crowd had never before visited the Exposition. This half consisted of laborers, mechanics, clerks, saleswomen, and others who are kept busy every week-day. The Sunday opening was a godsend to them, paradoxical as this expression may seem.

Many of the visitors started on a tour of the buildings, but were disappointed when they found many of the exhibits under cover. There was a great quantity of unbleached sheeting exhibited in the buildings, and many of the pavilions were closed.

NOTES.

Great Britain's section was open, but many of the displays were curtained from view.

France's pavilion was open, and was thronged with people all day. It presented a gala-day appearance.

Japan's big display was closed, much to the disappointment of the sightseers.

All the exhibits in the Agricultural Building were open, and in the Machinery Hall everything was in full blast.

Most of the other buildings looked very much as they look any week-day.

Many of the state buildings were entirely closed. California and Illinois, which were wide open, attracted the most visitors.

The exhibits made by Virginia, North Carolina, Kansas, and Oregon were displayed as usual, but Pennsylvania and the New England states ignored the Sunday opening and would have nothing to do with the Fair.

Send for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Letters of Friends.

Soothing-Syrup and Sunday-School Displaced.

CASS CITY, MICH., June 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3. Do not stop my paper. You see, we are raising our family, and my little girl and boy cry for THE TRUTH SEEKER the same as other children cry for soothing-syrup or to go to Sunday-school. Both of the latter are used when ignorance is in the saddle.

D. P. DEMING, M.D.

Circulates Truth.

NEW JASPER, O., June 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3 to continue our intimacy another year. I distribute many numbers after perusing them, and am confident of good results from the same, but no one has yet given me permission to send his name for the paper. Please send me some extra copies and I will make the best possible use of them to increase the circulation of the dear old TRUTH SEEKER.

CHAS. R. KIMBERLEY.

A Speaker Givs Food for Thought.

DELPHOS, O., June 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1, for which send me three copies of "Hard Knocks at Christianity," one Voltaire's "Pocket Theology," and five "Infidels and Charity."

Mr. John R. Charlesworth was here and delivered a series of three lectures which were very good. He is an eloquent speaker and gave the boys some food for thought.

JOS. ROTH.

Givs This Paper First Place.

PARKERSBURG, ORE., June 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I thank you for the receipt of the grand old TRUTH SEEKER, and I wish you to send it along until I say stop or I die. You see I have taken it for so long that it would be next thing to impossible to do without it. You send her and I will pay for her. I take a half dozen newspapers and your paper is always the first one read.

Accept my best wishes for you and your efforts. In the cause,

D. J. LOWE.

Are Our Dream Experiences Real?

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Being an interested reader of the mental conflict now going on between Wettstein and Miss Chapman, I would like to propound a question which I hope will receive attention, although the discussion is confined to them alone. Miss Chapman asserts that dreamland is a real world, and what is seen, felt, and experienced in dreams is as real to the soul as what is seen, felt, and experienced in our moments of wide-awake consciousness. Are we to understand that an incubus and a succubus are real spiritual entities, and the soul has a real and actual experience with these hitherto supposed creatures of imagination, produced by food and drink? Has not Miss Chapman asserted some things that lack the possibility of substantiation and reveal immense and unlimited credulity?

C. SEVERANCE.

A Preacher Admits He Hasn't Common Sense.

MILFORD, MASS., May 30, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3, for which send THE TRUTH SEEKER to the persons whose addresses I inclose for six months, commencing with the number of May 20th, Putnam's World's Fair Notes.

I have been reading the number of May 20th TRUTH SEEKER to quite a number of persons with the above result—one subscriber; and in order to make even dollars to send, I subscribe for the other person named, presuming that you take such insults kindly.

The Methodist minister in this town said, "If the Fair is opened Sunday, I shall not go." As the Fair was opened Sunday, very likely they had not heard of his decision, or rather lack of "common sense." Bishop Vincent, in a sermon at Grace Methodist Episcopal church of Chicago, is credited with saying Sunday, "I haven't gone so far as to say that if the Fair is open on Sundays I will not attend week-days. I have some common sense left. The people who say such things forget that they must come to Chicago on the cars of companies that run on Sundays." For once I agree with the bishop.

CHAS. C. JOHNSON.

"Just Like Church Folks" to Know Nothing About Their Religion.

MOUND CITY, June 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I cannot get along without THE TRUTH SEEKER. I had to stop the others I was taking so I could the better pay for the one which suits me best, and as I cannot read as much as when my eyes were younger I think it does me more good.

It looks as though something was wanted here, to see two church buildings minus a preacher to look after the lambs. It may be they are short of funds to pay them. If they depended on such as I they would have to try something else for a livelihood. I have been twice at church in thirty years. I happened to be at burials. Soon after one of them I asked a friend if they remembered the text. They could not tell me. They were surprised when I told them. I said, "Just like church folks."

I wish my name was on Putnam's list for membership. I cannot raise a new subscriber here, although there are lots of Liberals here that can pay for the paper, but they do not want it to come to the office in their name, but will pay toward the church. None of them will attack me, although I often give them a chance.

Yours for truth,

JAMES ADAMS.

If Our National Prosperity Comes from God, Then His Agents Should Rule.

PORTLAND, ME., June, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose a report of a sermon of Sunday, 11th inst., in which it is claimed that we owe our prosperity as a nation to the Bible and the church. If that is so—if those things are supreme, if the ownership belongs to them secondarily as the representatives of God (using the name God from their standpoint)—then are they right in pressing their claim to get their God into the Constitution and for national Sabbath legislation. That irreligious Constitution is all wrong if they are right. Our prosperity and success as a self-governing people is not due to our Constitution, but in spite of it. This question is not sufficiently discussed. It should be placed before the public by Liberals and squarely met. For one, I am not prepared to surrender the principles of Thomas Jefferson. I claim that what the church calls "Infidelity" is what we are indebted to, and that it can be proved.

I will not say any more. If you have a short treatise on this question—brief enough for people to stop to read—I would like to circulate a few. We do not have any Liberal publishing house here, and papers are afraid of the religious sentiment.

Fraternally yours,

WM. H. HART.

Wishes God and the Czar Put Down.

SALIDA, COL., May 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I send you to-day per mail one hundred copies "Hard Knocks," which please accept as a donation for the good of the cause—your cause and my cause and the cause of everyone who believes in human liberty. As soon as I can dispose of this edition I shall want another cheaper edition, which can be sold at a low price and scattered broadcast over this priest-cursed land.

Your editorials against the design argument and the idea of a supreme ruler met my hearty approval. Man will never be wholly free until this idea is banished from the world. I wish you could find time and space for a leader on the penal code of "Holy Russia." I wish, in view of the recent attempt to fasten a clause requiring extradition of political offenders upon this country, and of the action of the Rev. Mountebank in Brooklyn in praising and defending the government of that country, that every citizen of this country could realize what a damnable, despicable government that is. I fairly grind my teeth in impotent rage when I see one who professes to be a man uphold the royal family of that cursed country in the most stupendous crime ever perpetrated in the world—the enslavement and degradation of a whole nation. I believe that I would be as red-handed a terrorist as any of them were I there.

I expect to make several additions to my scanty library from your publications as soon as I can find time to read them.

All honor to Wettstein, who by his clear logic and unanswerable arguments has banished the Gods from the universe and driven me from my Agnostic position to that which he so sturdily defends.

But time presses. Here let us part—you to tend the flaming beacon on the hill; I to hold aloft my feeble torch, strong in the hope that Light will yet prevail and banish darkness from the land.

Yours for human rights,

RICHARD WHEELER.

Helps People Search the Scriptures.

BOISTFORD, WASH., June 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I see that my subscription expires June 26th, and I cannot do without the paper in this fanatical religious district. The very name of "truth seeker" is rank poison to many of the pious frauds we have here; but I manage to get them to look at the pictures, and many of them make them shudder with fear for their sacred pet, the Bible. I also take pains to copy many of the good things given in the columns of the dear old paper, and in this way I get them to read things that they utterly ignore in print, and by this mode of action I have actually toned some of them down to a little reason and common sense.

With the young people, I have been in the habit of quoting select passages of scripture, until at the present time the Bible is being investigated and read as it never was before. Some of our brightest young men many times come to me for information, and they always get it, as I have a pretty fair library of Freethought literature. Another item is, that the younger boys find the beautiful passages of holy obscenity and pass them around to their sweethearts, and the result is that the rising generation of the fair ones are so disgusted with Holy Slush that our last winter's revivals were a dead failure; they only warned over two old converts.

Yours for Truth and Mental Liberty,

G. A. BOYD.

Christians Delight to Bark and Bite.

SANGER, CAL., May 28, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5, for which send THE TRUTH SEEKER for one year and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," also "Bible Temperance," by E. C. Walker; "Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen Gardner; "The Public Schools and the Catholic Church," by L. K. Washburn; "Crimes of Preachers," "Sabbath-Breaking," by Remsburg; "Science vs. Religion," by T. C. Widdicombe; "Spiritualism—Is It a Faith or a Fact?" Washburn; "The False Teaching of the Christian Church," Washburn; "What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity," B. F. Underwood. My wife sent for a three months' subscription to your most valuable of all papers I have ever had the pleasure of reading, and as the time will expire on June 25th we wish to renew for one year.

Sanger is a railroad town of about twelve hundred inhabitants, who support six churches, thirteen saloons, and two drugstores where intoxicants can be procured. They also support a Good Templars' order. The other Sunday some of the ministry attacked the order by saying that it was not a fit place for church-members to go and spend their time and money, and, as some of the members of the I. O. G. T. belong to the church, it has caused quite a disturbance. The chief Templar has challenged the ministry to a joint discussion. The challenge was made last evening, but we have not learned the decision of the ministry. But I do not think they have the manhood to come out from behind the pulpit and debate the question fairly. I have been a Freethinker, or in other words a believer in Spiritualism, but the more I investigate on that line the less I see in the phenomena to cause me to believe that it is more than force and electricity or mind-power over mind. Hoping Liberalism will increase, I remain,

Yours for Truth,

L. A. ROSE.

A Glorious Freethought Picnic.

PORTLAND, ORE., June 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I take the pleasure of writing you of the grand success the Liberals had at their picnic at Rock Island and Castle Kehm, the home of the secretary of the Oregon Secular Union. At 8:30 A.M. the steamer Altoona—as beautiful and commodious a steamer as is on the Willamette river—left the dock with over one hundred men, besides the ladies and children. The steamer floated flags abundantly, and was decorated with the three grand words on every side, forward and aft: "Universal Mental Liberty." The band played all sentimental and patriotic music. We arrived in Oregon City and were greeted by friends who swelled the crowd. Then passing through the lock, which is forty-five feet high, was a feast for the minds of a good many. Then we landed at the home of our secretary, and after a hearty greeting of our friends who were there to receive us refreshments in abundance were served. Music, songs, and many games of innocent pleasure were enjoyed, and many walked around to view nature's great work. After all had congregated together before returning we were provided with one of Oregon's best artists, Mr. Bechler, and all can commemorate the 4th of June, A.M. 293, by looking at the picture. After our bidding adieu to all remaining, the palatial steamer steamed out, the band playing sentimental and patriotic music. Of course it is unnecessary to say it was a financial success. And not a person showed the least sign of dissatisfaction. Everyone seemed pleased. We arrived in Portland at 7:00 P.M. and steamed down the river with our Universal Mental Liberty banners floating. It really was a Fourth of July to all on board. We went down the river as far as the Methodist University College, and giving them a chance to view our banners and hear the sweet sentimental music we returned to Taylor street dock, where everyone dispersed to his or her home in every direction a compass could point. The Liberals are going to give a Grand Harvest Picnic, and extend a cordial invitation to the public.

Bidding you good-bye, and wishing you success with your valuable paper, I remain your friend in Universal Mental Liberty,

J. J. TRACY.

Can Both the Affirmative and the Negative of a Proposition Be "Foolish?"

ROCHELLE, ILL., June 6, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: "I think that it is just as foolish to try to prove that there is no God as it is to prove that there is a God" (S. P. Lindahl). But, pray, why? Does not our good brother's proposition imply that it is foolish to try and prove that there is a God? If so, how can it be foolish to controvert a foolish proposition? If either one of these antithetical propositions is foolish, the other, as a logical necessity, is correct.

Let me paraphrase the brother's proposition: "I think that it is just as foolish to try to prove that there is no devil as it is to prove that there is a devil." Its (il)logic and (un)reasonableness is identical. Yet Brother Lindahl will hardly insist that it is foolish to prove to those deluded mortals who still fear a devil and his abode, that there is no such a monster. The noblest work of man is, I think, to rid the world of devils, gods, and ghosts.

By almost universal consent his "satanic majesty" has been consigned to oblivion by all thinking minds; not so his august chief, who is still considered a logical necessity to explain natural phenomena. But now, when it can be demonstrated as plain as $2 \times 2 = 4$ that the universe is eternal and self-existent, it is the duty of all those who, like our brother, concede that the God idea is absurd, to prove to the world, if possible, this important fact, so that the energy of humanity and the mental and material resources of the world may cease to be sacrificed upon the altar of superstition.

Of course to reasonable minds it is not necessary to prove that twice two equals four and not five, but when a large share of the world's population still insist that twice two equals five and without proof, it then becomes our duty, if possible, to prove the negativ of such proposition.

Materialism, which implies that nature embodies within itself the potency of all phenomena, simply affirms that $2 \times 2 = 4$.

Theism, which seeks the cause of all phenomena beyond nature, arrogantly affirms that $2 \times 2 = 5$, but sadly fails to prove it.

To insist that a man is dead when he ceases to breathe, when his life-fluid ceases to circulate, and his constituents have assumed other form, equals twice two is four; but to insist he survives the dissolution of his organism, equals twice two is five. As it can be mathematically proved that twice two is four, this implies that it cannot possibly be five.

OTTO WETTSTEIN.

Women Are as Wise as Men, Would Vote as Satisfactorily, and Would Not Help the Church.

June 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: For some weeks past I have noticed articles in THE TRUTH SEEKER for and against woman suffrage. Among others I observed a letter in THE TRUTH SEEKER of June 3d, signed J. H. Hamilton, in which he says: "As to woman suffrage, whilst it may be woman's right in the abstract, it is my opinion if we give them the right to vote we will put ourselves in a worse condition than we now are in." Granting, for the sake of argument, that this is true, does it justify us in withholding the ballot from them? If I owe a man $5 and refuse to give it to him, because I know he will immediately resort to some saloon and get drunk, will this knowledge exonerate me for cheating him out of his money? I think not.

While he admits the indisputableness of their right to the ballot, and I presume will not deny that they are as well qualified as the men to cast an intelligent vote, he advocates withholding the ballot from them because he fears they will not see certain issues in the same light as he does. Is this a true Liberal sentiment?

In plain language he is advocating what religion has advocated for centuries—i. e., If any man dares to differ from us he must be crushed.

But is it true that we will place ourselves in a worse condition than we are at present by giving woman the ballot? It is a well-demonstrated fact that she has mental endowments equal to the man. Her perceptions are just as keen, her judgment just as sound. She can fill any position or profession where intellectual powers are necessary, and if the opportunity were given her, I see no reason why she could not cast as intelligent a ballot as the oppositex.

Mr. Hamilton says, "The vast majority of them will vote as the parson dictates, and, as self-preservation is the first law of nature, I am not willing to give the preacher a club to break my head." In every country where the Christian religion has held sway, its promulgators have never failed to grasp every weapon, and use every means, to subvert liberty.

The thousands of preachers and priests of this religion are by no means the weak and shallow-minded men that some people would lead us to believe. They are the most crafty and subtle class of people that the world has ever produced. They are fully aware that the duel they are fighting with liberty is a life-and-death struggle, and they are not the kind of men that will allow the slightest advantage to escape them. For eighteen hundred years they have kept their religion afloat, lived lives of luxury, and robbed the people, sometimes by controversy, and more times by the thumb-screw, the rack, and the sword. They have always been ready to use any means that would result the most advantageously to their cause. To-day they are using the ballot; and, if women suffrage would give them a club to break our heads with, rest assured we would long ago have been wearing court-plaster on our craniums.

I concede the point that the majority of women would vote as the parson dictates, but of what benefit would that be to the clergy, when the majority of men are already doing so? If the opening or closing of the World's Fair was to be left to a vote of citizens of the United States, what an awful majority the clergy would roll up against Sunday opening. It is the same with any political issue on which the church itself is not divided. Let a bill be presented in the senate of any state in the Union which is going to interfere with any of their customs or practices, and how quickly it is snowed under.

They already control the male vote and consequently do not need the female vote. But if it would be of the slightest advantage to them, women would be voting before another presidential election rolled around. I hope, and expect, to live to see the time when every woman can vote, and it is a mystery to me how any man calling himself a Liberal can oppose woman suffrage.

B. J. McEWEN.

Would Christians But Read the Bible, They Would Disbelieve It.

SOLDIERS' HOME, LEAVENWORTH CO.,
KAN., June 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: For the last fifteen years I have had the chance, and improved it, to read THE TRUTH SEEKER and must acknowledge the benefit and help it has been in more conclusively establishing me in my own peculiar beliefs and opinions. The distinctly independent, intelligent, and Liberal stand it takes; its communications; its views, presented by reason and logic, as found in its columns, fully confirmed by reliable history and observation, cause the chief sky-pilots, such arch hypocrites as De Witt Talmage, Jo Cook & Co., to flutter and fume, and to keep clear of open, free, and fair discussion—although an occasional attempt is made by some meek and lowly follower of J. Christ to stand up as a witness for his cause. The witness is often a cross-road or schoolhouse "Rev.," never advances an opinion of his own, but is full of quotations from that old book of fables the Bible. Natural sympathy for my fellow-man compels me to suggest that you be a little more lenient with the lay members and the cross-road and schoolhouse "Revs." Do not flay them so unmercifully. Most of them are the slaves of priestcraft. Some are susceptible to feelings of sympathy, regret, respect, and even shame, the same as we are—of course not in the same degree. Yes, MR. TRUTH SEEKER, deal gently with the middle and lower class of Christian shepherds and the sheep of their flocks. We are well aware that they are not altogether to blame, hardly accountable or responsible for their beliefs. They have no ideas nor opinions of their own, for the reason that in their youth when their minds were plastic, obedient to the will of their parents, they were compelled to be continually listening to the reading of the few passages in the Bible that are fit to read and selections from the New Testament of many good and practical rules, forced to the Christian Sunday-school, made to listen to a set of rules for their observance usually declared by the oldest solemn-visaged hypocrite in the district. The children's attention is gained by the speaker's attitude. Ghostly white, eyes upturned, with finger pressing one nostril to produce the necessary twang pitch, he proceeds to draw in language about as follows: "My dear children, it is my Christian duty to remind you that we are in the presence of an all-seeing God; that we have been called together by his divine command; that in our willing obedience we have met to confess our many sins, praise him that is above and over all, and give thanks that through shedding the blood and the crucifixion of his innocent son Jesus Christ the way was opened for our escape from the torments of an everlasting, burning hell, our deserved punishment by an angry God. My dear children, will you ask, why such terrible punishment? This morning you heard read from God's holy word, as found recorded in the third chapter of Genesis, the account of our first parents eating the forbidden fruit, disobeying the command of God. Or, to make it plainer to your immature minds, it was the sin of disobedience. By that very act of disobedience of Mother Eve death, sickness, sorrow, sin, and work came to be our lot in this world. Had not Eve eaten the apple there would not have been death, sickness, sin, sorrow, crime, nor labor in this world. We should have lived in a perfect paradise, in the presence of God, in company with angels and saints, in heaven through all eternity."

After such instructions comes the prayer to the God they know nothing of. Then follows the hymn, often from the old collection of Watts:

An everlasting hell there is, and never-dying flames,
Where children must forever dwell in darkness, fire, and pains.
Hav faith it is the same in all the human race,
For hell is crammed with infants damned, without a day of grace.

The same hymn is used on funeral occasions for the consolation of parents of the children that die without the saving ordinance of baptism or sprinkling. Under the influence of such teaching and Christian drill as cited above, and continued with most of us for fifteen or more consecutive years, when our minds were tempered to receive impressions and belief in the Bible God without doubting or the right to doubt or think for ourselves, we must believe that we have been taught the truth as declared by God in his divine word. It is a fact of common observation and experience that dogmas and beliefs which have been instilled into our minds during our years of minority, more especially in regard to our existence and a future life, however false, are the most stubborn that we have to rid ourselves of.

Another truth is, that a large majority of Christian cannibals who eat the body and drink the blood of Christ, naming the absurd performance sacrament or love feast, are those that have not (some cannot) read the Bible or New Testament. They only get it second-hand in the Christian Sunday-school, and from behind the devil's breastworks. Such believers are the most pugnacious, willing to die and fight for Jesus, ready to hang all that do not believe as they do. The quarrel that commenced over a century ago concerning the use of the Bible in our schools would have been ended now had its continuous compulsory use prevailed. Had such been the case, it is the opinion of the writer that there would not now be a literary man or woman holding the belief or opinion that God had anything to do with it more than he has had to do with the vilest books ever written.

ARIS TOTLE.

Two Bad Signs of the Times—Truckling to Royalty, and Church Amalgamation.

CUTTINGSVILLE, VT., June 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your sample copy came duly to hand, for which please accept our thanks. It appears by the title and contents of your journal that you are engaged in a noble and commendable cause, and your labor will doubtless be appreciated by the best and ablest minds of the present age. Nevertheless, I fear it will not prove a very remunerative enterprise. Yet the hope and belief that you have lifted or may lift from the old ruts the load of bigotry and superstition that has crushed the masses for ages may be an ample reward for your indefatigable and ardent efforts.

Truth is a rare and choice jewel and can only be winnowed and sifted from the great mass of ignorance, falsehood, delusion, and hypocrisy that has cursed the world from time immemorial by the most energetic and untiring efforts. Theology has been the bane of man's existence from the earliest history of the human race. It has deluged the world in blood and tears, and caused more pain, anguish, human suffering, and sorrow than all other causes combined. Its bloody footprints can be traced in every land and every clime. It was brought to the inclement shores of New England in the Mayflower and was first to take root and grow in its sterile soil, and its fruit ripened into the hanging of innocent men and women for alleged witchcraft and the burning, splitting of the tongues, and cropping the ears of inoffensive Quakers, and other inhuman outrages. Theology has always been the inveterate foe of science, philosophy, astronomy, inventions, investigations, and progression. Men of the purest and noblest aspirations and of the most inventive genius have been branded, butchered, and burnt. Kings, priests, and potentates have lounged and lolled in the lap of luxury, while the masses were saddled, bridled, croupered, and ridden by dogmas, creeds, and isms. Popery is now drawing its dragon form through our fair country and is stealthily winding its deadly coils around American liberty, freedom of conscience, and independence of thought.

As the fluttering leaf shows the direction of the wind, so the reception given the crowned heads of monarchical powers and the shameful banqueting, toting, and junketing the ducal parties and princes apparent to the throne by our government officials, while the toiling masses pay the piper, afford sufficient cause for alarm, in connection with the influx of foreigners of every nationality, the secret societies, union rings, and other organizations. However much they may differ on other subjects, they all worship the same partial, revengeful, imaginary God that is fond of flattery and human sacrifices, and the Inquisitions and persecutions of the sixteenth century may be renewed and the massacre of the Huguenots, and the burning of John Rogers at the stake, with his wife and nine small children, with one at the breast, forced to witness the awful tragedy, may be duplicated in this land of the free, home of the brave, and asylum of the oppressed. One enemy within the fort is more dangerous than a well-armed force in open field. Therefore, with the vast army of ignorant, deluded, inhuman, priest-ridden subjects of popish power within our borders, we are forced to believe the signs forebode a terrible, relentless storm.

The press, that should be the arbiter of our rights and safeguard to our liberties, has become subservient in a great degree to priestly rule, and gives countenance, approval, and support to Romish power. I wish THE TRUTH SEEKER might be furnished to every household in the world and relieve many a generous, loving heart of the great anxiety felt concerning an imaginary future existence. And the greatest truth that can be unfolded to them is that popes, bishops, priests, dominies, deacons, and the D.D.'s know no more of a future existence than they do, and they know no more about it than they knew about their present existence a thousand years before they were born, and Pope Pius and his horde of priests and holy fathers with all their robes and ruffles, trappings and trumpery, are but leeches upon society, constantly blocking the wheels of progress, creating discord and dissension, instead of cultivating union, friendship, and brotherly love.

Why are representatives of all the creeds and isms that curse the world to meet in ecclesiastical council in Chicago in next September, if not to amalgamate, coalesce, and harmonize their interests and views and establish a uniform religion to rule the world that will force every man to contribute to its support and stifle every independent, generous thought and muzzle every liberal, truthful tongue? The census of 1892 shows by statistics published that there were in the United States 6,250,045 Roman Catholics, 10,850 Greek Catholics, 13,504 Russian Orthodox, 104,940 Presbyterians, 1,394 Apostolic Catholics, 470,760 Episcopalians, differing only in their ritualistic exercises, ceremonies, and despotic power over their deluded communicants. The country is also cursed with Hindooism, Mohammedanism, and other Asiatic creeds. There were also 162 archbishops, cardinals, and bishops, with 9,388 priests, and $124,323,270 invested in churches and temples of worship aside from other parochial institutions and detestable nunneries. It can be readily seen that a half of this vast sum, saying nothing of the millions gathered annually from the sons of toil to support pope, bishops, cardinals, priests, and all other church functionaries, would furnish every destitute family in the land with comfortable houses and farms, giving relief to the poor and indigent and relieving the prisons and almshouses of most of their unfortunate inmates. Most of these priest-ridden subjects are engaged in riotous strikes and forcible demonstrations against every branch of human industry, resulting in the loss of millions of dollars in property and labor to both employer and employee; yet there is no strike against the enormous gigantic robbery and church swindle.

L. DAWLEY.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

When Nettie Went to School.

Nettie, four years old, near the window sat,
She and her doll and the big yellow cat,
Watching the children, as they wandered by,
Rosanna, Johnny, and sweet Bessie Bly,
On their way to the schoolhouse on the hill,
Where learning and play every hour did fill.

Nettie watched them all with a wistful sigh,
And said: "They do to cool, an' why sooden't I?"
The old yellow cat looked up from her spool,
And she seemed to say, "Why not go to school?"
Then Nettie slid down from her high-backed chair,
And tied her pink bonnet over her hair.

The bluebird was singing his sweetest note,
And fleecy clouds in the sky were afloat;
The robins were building up in the tree,
And the grass was as green as grass could be,
When Nettie ran lightly down the road,
Filled both her hands with the buttercup's gold,
Crept under the bars and stepped on a toad,
Then climbed to the steps of the schoolhouse old.

She paused a moment, then opened the door,
And let fall her flowers all over the floor.
Her bonnet swung from the back of her head,
And her cheeks were flushed to rosiest red;
Her hair was straying quite down in her eyes,
As shyly she gazed, in greatest surprise,
At the rows of scholars on books intent,
And one who was punished for time misspent.

Then spying her sister on a back seat,
She started toward her with nimble feet;
Quick under the desks, on her knees and hands,
She crept till beside her she bravely stands.
That moment there came on the door a pat,
Which duly was opened by little Mat;
When amid much laughter, and cries of "scat!"
Who should walk in but a great yellow cat!

The cat had followed Miss Nettie to school,
In defiance of the established rule,
And, looking about, demure as you please,
She began to "Me-ow," and then to sneeze.
"Boy, turn out that cat!" said the teacher stern;
"Tis children, not cats, who come here to learn."
"At's my tat!" said Nettie; "if se tan't tum,
I san't!—Tum, Pansy, let us two do home!"

The scholars giggled, and jiggled their feet,
The teacher gravely complained of the heat,
And to hide smiles, remarked on the weather,
As cat and Nettie marched off together.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

Bitterness.

"Hushed be every thought that springs
From out the bitterness of things."

Yes, try and forget wrongs and revenges, and think of something nobler, better, and higher. Our thoughts build up our lives and make us what we are.

It is even said that sad, sorrowful, and bitter thoughts create cancers and ulcers that eat out the life.

We know they do eat the happiness of life, and hence should do our best not to dwell upon them.

It is said that "every sweet has its bitter," but we will gather the sweet and throw away the bitter dregs as nearly as we can.

Cherish love, friendship, and kindness, and banish the bitterness of anger, hate,
and malignity.

Pleasant memories make pleasant lives.
Let no bitter memories of the has been,
or the might have been, mar the sunshine of the now.

Turn the mind upon sweet scenes and joyous hours, and dwell happily and comfortably therein.

AUNT ELMINA.

The Thrilling Drama of Life-Saving.

One winter night on the dreary New Jersey coast a patrolman of the life-saving service spied through the sleet and rain a dim red light from a wrecked schooner.
He ran a mile to fetch the crew and apparatus. In the darkness, as the storm grew more wild, a big rope at last was safely stretched between the vessel and the shore. The breeches buoy leaped across the surf, and presently returned with one of the sailors holding the pale and fainting wife of the captain. On the next trip it fetched the captain himself, with his six-year-old girl hugged tightly to his breast, her little wet face full of cheer and faith as she swung safely over the roaring sea. The old surfman who carried her to the station said: "I wasn't ashamed to cry for joy when the little thing held on to my old scraggy neck and chatted away as cheery as a sparrer."

Her elder sister came next, and then the sailors one by one until all were in safety.
Who would not give years of life to figure as a preserver of lives in such a thrilling drama as this?

Correspondence.

WESTMINSTER, CAL., June 2, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and I like to read the Corner very much. I am ten years old, and am in the fourth grade. It is vacation here now. Our teacher's name is Mr.
Conley. I like him very much. Most of the people here in Westminster are Christians. I don't attend Sunday-school any more, because papa said they teach too many lies. I have one little playmate; her name is Lillie Gallup. Lillie and I are the only little Infidels in our district.

From your little Liberal friend,
SADIE MARTIN.

PORT TOWNSEND, WASH., May 28, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first attempt of writing a letter to the Children's Corner, although my father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER over eight years. I have read the Children's Corner and like it very much, and when we recited recitations at school I have often looked through the Corners of your valuable paper and found many nice recitations. I have been going to school for eight years, and am now in the high school, and have two teachers. One is very religious, but the other, I am quite sure, is a Freethinker by the way he talks. One afternoon, in our General History class, he asked us if we had read the story about Noah and his ark. We all said "Yes." He then asked us questions about Noah and the animals, and how he let the birds fly away, and how one brought back a green leaf. We were not interested until he said, "What great sin did Noah do after God helped him out of his troubles?" All the girls and boys looked at one another, but not one could answer. The teacher smiled and said: "Why, he got drunk!" The next time I write I will tell you all about the town in which I live. Wishing good success to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Children's Corner,

I remain your Liberal friend,
LOUISA IFFLAND.

NEW YORK, June 1, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: If you can spare the space, I beg leave to be permitted to enlighten your young correspondent, Lola Grigsby, of Calistoga, Cal., in regard to a question she asks you. In speaking of her pet dog, "Tufel," which she says is the German word for "devil," she wishes to know how it is pronounced.

In the first place, the proper spelling of that word is teufel. Then the "t" is pronounced as t, and not as d. The "eu" has no equivalent in the English language which exactly expresses it, the nearest approach being the diphthong "oi," pronounced rather short. The "f" is pronounced as f in English. The whole word, as near as its pronunciation could be given in the English language, is toifel.

I am your Liberal friend,

PETER LEIST.

P. S.—If you have room for it, you may add that I have been converted to Liberalism within the past eight months, for which I may thank the study of phrenology and that admirable book by Edgar C.
Beall, "The Brain and the Bible." Phrenologists generally are Christians, but that is because they always have been. The "thinkers," however, among them are Infidels or outright Liberals, because they cannot reconcile the Christian claim that "man is a free moral agent," with the phrenologically demonstrable fact that every man is and must be just what his mental and physical organism proclaims him to be, and that he can be nothing else. The experienced phrenologist can with unerring certainty separate a dozen or more criminals from any number of moral men that may be selected for a test.
This being so, what becomes of the above-quoted Christian claim?

[Welcome to our brother. May he find much enjoyment in Liberal truths.—Ed.
C. C.]

KANSAS CITY, KAN., May 25, E.M. 293.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Since I began writing for the Corner I have received several Christian tracts through the mail. I have read them carefully and can honestly say that there is nothing but falsehood, ignorance, and weak sentiment in them. The latest installment of fetich literature which I have received is a leaflet by one H. L. Hastings, entitled "Nuts for Skeptics to Crack." The following is a sample of its contents:

"THE OLD WOMAN'S QUESTION.

"After an Infidel had concluded a lecture in a village in England, he challenged those present to discussion. Who should accept the challenge but an old, bent woman, in antiquated attire, who went up to the lecturer and said:

"Sir, I have a question to put to you."

"Well, my good woman, what is it?"

"Ten years ago," she said, "I was left a widow, with eight children utterly unprovided for, and nothing to call my own but this Bible. By its direction, and looking to God for strength, I have been enabled to feed myself and family. I am now tottering to the grave; but I am perfectly happy, because I look forward to a life of immortality with Jesus. That's what my religion has done for me. What has your way of thinking done for you?"

"Well, my good lady," rejoined the lecturer, "I don't want to disturb your comfort; but—"

"Oh! that's not the question," said she; "keep to the point, sir. What has your way of thinking done for you?"

"The Infidel endeavored to shirk the matter again; the meeting gave vent to uproarious applause, and the champion had to go away discomfited by an old woman."

If the sender of this tract were not blinded by the great delusion called "faith," he might have known that such silly and improbable stories as the above could have no weight whatever among Freethinkers. I notice that a great many of the Christian stories have "old woman" characters as the heroines. And they are always represented as puzzling or defeating alleged Infidels. I wonder why some of these wise old ladies never reply to THE TRUTH SEEKER articles?

If Mr. Hastings's "old bent woman" had asked Mr. Remsburg or Mr. Putnam, or any genuine Freethinker, what his way of thinking had done for him, she would have likely received an answer similar to this:

"My way of thinking has made me an honest, intelligent, reasonable, truthful, generous, and useful man. It has taught me that religion is a leech that is now sucking, and always has sucked, the life-blood of credulous, gullible humanity, and chained three-fourths of the world's inhabitants in the darkness of ignorance and base superstition. My way of thinking has enabled me to look the truth in the face. It has counseled me to regard nature with respect, but not with veneration.
It has told me that I owe my allegiance to this world, and not to a theoretical heaven, nor an imaginary god.
My way of thinking has told me to accept with resignation the decrees of nature, which brought me into existence and will take me out. It has told me that knowledge is the savior of the world, and that Jesus Christ is a dead Jew. It has told me that an upright and pure life is productive of more happiness than all the hopes of immortality that selfish, ignorant, barbarous men have ever invented.
It has generated in my mind a love for science and philosophy and given me an insight into the marvelous processes of nature—with which the Christian mind, dwarfed and shriveled by erroneous doctrines, is totally unacquainted. My way of thinking is the way in which humanity's greatest benefactors have thought.
My way of thinking has revolutionized the world and made it far better than it was when dark-browed, intolerant, bigoted religion held sceptered sway. My way of thinking will yet emancipate humanity and establish absolute liberty and justice throughout the world."

ALVIN J. TANNER.

GOLD. SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States
and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum,
Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead,
Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also
Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests;
all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years'
mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL. MINERAL.

"Everybody's Law Book,"

Is the title of the new 768 page work prepared by J. Alexander Hoopes, LL.B., member of the New York bar.

It enables every man and woman to be their own lawyer. It teaches what are your rights and how to maintain them. When to begin a lawsuit and when to shun one. It contains the useful information every business man needs in every state in the Union. It contains business forms of every variety useful to the lawyer as well as to all who have legal business to transact.

Incise $2 for a copy, or incise two-cent postage stamp for a table of contents and terms to agents. Address BENJ. W. HITCHCOCK, Publisher, 385 Sixth Avenue, New York.

WANTED.—A Liberal with $100 to $200 capital, who will go in partnership on a farm, will meet a good opportunity by addressing the undersigned for further particulars. The farm is situated in the northern part of Alabama. J. G. DRESS, 4624 519 S. 3d st., Philadelphia, Pa.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance.
12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for
Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Free-thinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued.
Full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

IN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and ex-
pounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Agnostic Annual

—FOR—1893

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:

The Moral Sanction, Leslie Stephen; Reverent
Agnosticism, Amos Waters; The Mother Nature,
A Poem, Gerald Massey; Dogmatism in Theology, Alfred Mommie; Sermons on the Mount,
Samuel Laing; The City of the Dead, W. Stewart
Ross (Saladin); On the Duty of Honesty in Our Convictions, C. E. Plumtre; Scientific Religion,
R. Bithell; The Blight of Superstition, Charles
Watts; Anthropology and Orthodoxy, Edward Clodd; The Disappearance of the Nether World,
F. J. Gould; Religious Ideas: Their Origin and Development, Frederick Millar; Signals with Mars; A Poem, G. H. Martin; Materialism and Idealism Harmonized, Lucian Armstrong.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The
$2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH
SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gift bowl, 50c. more.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.

Price, 15 cents.

Address this office.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt-lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius.

Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life.

Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardner's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFSSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism.

In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the person." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoveries, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Rensburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Rensburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Rensburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Rensburg.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By M. E. GORDON. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages; 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages; 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages; 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Græco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages; 50c; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BART. Price, 25 cents.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

Captain Adams writes thus concerning four of our new books recently sent him:

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE. By S. P. Putnam.

As an example of forceful expression, significant language, vigorous denunciation, keen logic, remorseless attack, and even as the culmination of abuse and vituperation, this little brochure of Mr. Putnam stands unique among the literature of the day. No such intense and passionate assault couched in terse rhetorical terms has ever before been made upon religion. Not a word of apology or consideration is bestowed upon the hated foe. Few Liberals would accept the unqualified statement of indictment and the wholesale condemnation of religion as always and everywhere evil; for many radical evolutionists agree with Herbert Spencer that theologies have been "good for their times and places" and "beneficent in their effects on those who held them;" "that while absolutely bad they are relatively good." But Mr. Putnam makes no such allowances, and however one may desire to modify some of his statements he cannot read this indignant outburst of unqualified censure without feeling a sense of satisfaction that in these days of compromise and namby-pamby accommodation of old creeds to new ideas there is one man who dares to pour forth his unqualified denunciation of the falsehood and sham that is covered by the venerated word religion. The book should be read as a literary curiosity, for such powerful, terse, idiomatic, and poetic language is not to be found elsewhere compressed into so few pages. But allowing for some extravagance, the thoughtful reader must admit that Mr. Putnam has in the main proved his case, and has administered another death-blow to the long-dying ghost of superstition that doesn't seem to know when it is dead, and, although time and again logically buried, still flaunts its shade across the path of progress and declares that nothing has happened to it. Other good essays and poems add value to the pamphlet, and if anyone wants an absolute "sockdologer," "a knock-down and drag-out" assault upon religion, here it is in an intensity that can never be surpassed.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES. By the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

After reading Mr. Putnam's impulsive and fiery rhetorical assault on Religion, it is restful to the mind to peruse the calm, unimpassioned arguments against Design summarized by the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER in a form that is a model of controversial writing. This is one of the most useful essays that a Freethinker can read, for it abounds in important facts and condenses a vast array of knowledge into a convenient compass. It then with irresistible logic draws conclusions that can not be gainsaid or resisted. It is written in such clear, concise English that the uneducated man can comprehend every sentence, and yet exhibits such keen rational deduction that the learned reader will feel well repaid for its perusal, and will admire the solid sense and discrimination of the author. Many Freethought writings are offensive to Christians by their abusive style, but here the Theist is met respectfully on his own ground with rational argument, the manner and method of which must command respect and ought to win conviction. It is one of the best missionary book weapons in the Freethought armory, and should be studied by the "Infidel" and handed on to the Christian.

HANDBOOK OF FREETHOUGHT. Selected by W. S. Bell.

Here is a book that truly no Freethinker should be without. Its perusal is a Liberal education, and he who masters its ideas and facts will become a champion Rationalist and a "holy terror" to Christians. Beginning with creation, the whole range of biblical and Christian dogma is considered and discussed in a spirit of fairness and with irresistible force. It is a grand summing-up of the case of Reason versus religion, and furnishes a splendid text-book and library of reference. Anyone who gets cornered in debate with a shrewd believer can find weapons in this armory that will bring him out conqueror in the next attack. A poor man who wanted to tackle his parson, and could only buy one book, wrote for advice what to get. He was referred to this work and will doubtless be fully equipped for the fray after its study. A survey of these arguments, so numerous and invincible, shows that Christianity has not a rational leg to stand on; and one is filled with wonder that it still manages to stride over the land and oppress mankind. It is emotional gas that sustains it, and Mr. Bell's admirable collection will help to puncture the bag and hasten the coming collapse.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS. By M. E. Billings.

"All is fair in love and war," and in such a fight as that of Reason and Religion every possible weapon has to be used to obviate the great disadvantage in numbers and worldly position under which the Freethought advocates labor. So this book, giving a terrible catalog of the sins of the "men of God," has its warrant for existence as a means of destroying that superstitious reverence for a caste which has always used its power to fasten upon the human mind those fetters of supernatural belief which have been the greatest hindrances to progress and the worst restraints upon liberty. Thoughtful comment accompanies the weird list of crime, and the work is calculated to make a deep impression and to enforce its motto, "By their fruits shall ye know them."

ROBERT C. ADAMS.

The Late Charles Bradlaugh's Paper Concerning Three of Our Books.

From the National Reformer of June 11th. THE CREATION OF GOD. By Jacob Hartmann, M.D. New York: The Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place.

The best parts of Dr. Hartmann's somewhat rough-and-ready book are the scientific parts, which in a popular but precise fashion supply solid ideas as to geology and physiology to take the place of the sentimental ignorance on which popular religion flourishes. He is not so fortunate in his handling of questions of biblical criticism. He takes the legends of Moses and Samuel, for instance, as at bottom real history, thus indorsing by implication the view that the Hebrew people was founded and developed in both of the two incompatible ways set forth by the legends, barring miracles. If Dr. Hartmann had looked into the critical analysis of the Bible narratives as closely as he has gone into questions of physical science he would have written a better book. As it is, it may be serviceable to readers who care nothing for delicacy of style and like to have points put in the language of animated dispute among plain people.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS. An Agnostic's View. By Don Allen. New York: Truth Seeker Company.

The work of "Don Allen" is really a very shrewd and entertaining discussion of the resurrection story, which goes into a number of points not commonly raised, but very relevant. Readers may or may not find it odd that all the while our acute and critical "Agnostic," instead of seeing that he is dealing with unhistorical matter, has his own "theory" of what took place at the tomb of Jesus, which is simply that Pilate caused the body to be hidden so as to prevent the Jews from seizing and desecrating it, and thereby setting up a riot. This is entertaining, but not edifying. If "Don Allen" had looked into the question of the origins of the Christian rites and mythical narratives he could not have supposed that he was dealing with an historical episode at all. He would have seen that the narrative was a late compilation, probably on the basis of a mystery drama in which Jesus was buried in a rock-tomb and resurrected just as Mithra and Adonis and Osiris were in the mysteries of their cults. His book, however, may suffice to interest readers who have not reached the point of view of comparative hierology, and will certainly serve to satisfy any candid person of the futility of the resurrection story.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT. Selected by W. S. Bell. New York: Truth Seeker Company.

A similar service, on a wider scale, is supplied by Mr. Bell's "Hand-Book of Freethought." Certainly Mr. Bell has put together a great deal of matter which it behooves Freethinkers to know. Mr. Bell's book cannot be read without profit by inquirers. It is much better intellectual food than is supplied in the multitude of religious books. It will put readers on the track of further investigations, having the merit of giving exact references for its many quotations. If in a future edition there is added an analytical table of contents, and sections dealing with the documentary analysis and criticism of the biblical books, it should serve its purpose to a very considerable extent.

Mohammed Alexander Russell Webb, whom we have before noticed as an enterprising missionary of Mohammedanism endeavoring to introduce his religion into this country, sends us a book by himself entitled "Islam in America." Its chapters bear the headings: "Biographical," "Introductory," "Why I Became a Mussulman," "An Outline of the Mohammedan Faith," "The Five Pillars of Practice," "Islam in Its Philosophic Aspect," "Polygamy and the Pordah," "Popular Errors Refuted," "The Moslem Wars De-fensiv," and "The American Islamic Propaganda." The faults of Christianity are pointed out and denounced in a way that pleases us. For instance, Christians are very forward in attacking what points of immorality they can find in Mohammedan countries, and laying them to the religion held there; but these Christians themselves have in their own lands two things which Moslems do not possess and which they deem flagrant offenses against purity, viz., prostitution, and exposure of the female shoulders and arms. If, says this missionary to the Christian heathen, "we are to judge of the results of polygamy as shown in Eastern countries, we might be impressed with the idea that possibly herein lay the remedy for prostitution and marital infidelity, those twin curses that Church-Christianity and our laws are so utterly powerless to contend with. They are entirely unknown in Mohammedan countries, except where European customs and ideas have gained a foothold. It is a fact well known to those who have lived in the East with their eyes open, that wherever the European influence has penetrated, a wave of vice of all kinds has dispelled the primitiv purity and simplicity. It was an exceedingly difficult, not to say a hopeless, undertaking to find a Mohammedan prostitute in India, until the Christian British government provided a liberal sum in its annual budget to supply native women to the English soldiers in Hindustan. Go with me into any large American or European city, and see the evidences of that resistless torrent of vice and crime that rushes and seethes through the social fabric; go with me to fashionable ball, reception, or dinner party, and see the position in which noble woman, one of the greatest works of God, has been placed by the usages and customs of this nineteenth century civilization; see the honored wives of wealthy educated Christians and their virtuous daughters, exposing to the view of men whose blood and passions are fired by the fumes of alcohol, personal charms which should be seen only in the privacy and purity of the home; take up the newspapers and see the records of divorces, social scandals, and marital woes that fill us with shame and disgust, and then tell me that these so-called Christian laws and Christian customs are good things. And where is the remedy for all this? In Mohammedan laws and customs—in Islamic principles. Christian laws and customs have been tried for many centuries, and have utterly failed." This work designed to let the one-sided Christian see himself as others see him is bound in paper covers, contains 70 octavo pages, and sells for 50 cents.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 825 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.
One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Gems of Thought.

If you are determined to believe in the scriptures, leave their history and all inquiries as to how they originated and how they have been preserved severely alone. Faith can flourish and triumph only where Ignorance is cultivated as a virtue. —Saladin.

WHAT would the world be if Infidels had never been? The Infidels have been the brave and thoughtful men; the flower of all the world; the pioneers and heralds of the blessed day of liberty and love; the generous spirits of the unworthy past; the seers and prophets of our race; the great chivalric souls, proud victors on the battle-fields of thought, the creditors of all the years to be. —Ingersoll.

MORE than one good Catholic, on going out from the mass, rushing upon his neighbor for the honor of the faith, has cried to him, "Die, impious wretch, or think like me!" Why is this? It is because man, enamored of degrading slavery, has made God in his own image. We have made him unjust, irascible, vain, jealous, a seducer, inconstant, barbarous, like ourselves. —Voltaire.

GOVERNMENTS are not made up of compulsion, because, whenever they can, they are glad to do without it, to the great blessing of all; and their highest point of perfection is to be able to discard it, and to trust to means purely moral, to their influence upon the understanding; so that, in proportion as government can dispense with compulsion and force, the more faithful it is to its true nature, and the better it fulfills the purpose for which it was sent. —Guizot's History of Civilization.

As regards this morality suited to nature, it must be clear from what has already been said that it can only be based permanently and durably on that principle which gave it birth, viz., the principle of reciprocity. There is therefore no better standard for moral conduct than the old rule laid down by Confucius: "Don't do to others what you would not have others do to you." If this negative rule be supplemented by the positive one, "Do to others as you would that they should do to you," we get a whole code of natural morals and ethics in hand which is certainly better and simpler than can be found in the bulkiest treatises of morality or in the quintessence of all the religious systems of the world. All further moral directions which may be drawn from conscience, from religion, or from philosophy, are entirely superseded by these simple and practical rules. —Buchner.

VOLTAIRE calls his readers' attention to the difficulties arising from accepting legends as history, rhapsody as prophecy, self-annihilation as virtue. Pascal says, for example, that since there is a God we should love only him, not his creatures. Voltaire replies, "We must love his creatures, and very tenderly, too—country, wife, father, children; we must love them so well that God will make them love us, whether we wish it or not." Pascal exalts the Christian religion as holy beyond comparison and true beyond question. "Think," says Voltaire, "that it was on the way to mass that men committed the massacres of Ireland and St. Bartholomew; and that it was after mass and on account of the mass that so many innocent people, so many mothers, so many children, were murdered in the crusade against the heretics in the south of France. O Pascal! Such are the results of the endless quarrels upon the dogmas, upon the mysteries that could have no results except quarrels. There is not an article of faith which has not given birth to a civil war!" —Parton's Life of Voltaire.

LINCOLN was opposed in his political campaigns on account of his disbelief. This is confirmed by a letter he wrote to Martin M. Morris, of Petersburg, Ill., March 26, 1843. In this letter he says: "There was, too, the strangest combination of church influence against me. It was everywhere contended that no Christian ought to go for me, because I belonged to no church—was suspected of being a Deist. . . . Those influences levied a tax of a considerable per cent upon my strength throughout the religious controversy." He never changed his opinions, and the church never ceased to oppose him. In the Bateman interview, seventeen years later, he was compelled to note its relentless intolerance: "Here are twenty-three ministers of different denominations, and all of them are against me but three; and here are a great many prominent members of the churches, a very large majority of whom are against me." For thirty years the church endeavored to crush Lincoln, but when, in spite of her malignant opposition, he achieved a glorious immortality, this same church, to hide the mediocrity of her devotees, attempts to steal his deathless name. —Was Abraham Lincoln a Christian? by John E. Remsburg.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
 Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
 Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
 Crisis. Written During American Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
 Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
 Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
 Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
 Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
 Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
 Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
 Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
 Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port., $1.50.
 Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By
G. W. FOOTB.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
 Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendree, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hethington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joaz Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
 Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
 Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

- 1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake. 5
- 4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood. 25
- 7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller. 10
- 8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison. 10
- 10 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
- 10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin. 50
- 11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin. 50
- 12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural and Portrait. 25
- 13 Essays on Miracles. David Hume. 10
- 14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 15 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 16 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 18 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh. 10
- 19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake. 5
- 20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake. 5
- 21 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts. 5
- 22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts. 5
- 23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts. 5
- 24 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts. 5
- 25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
- 26 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts. 5
- 28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
- 29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake. 5
- 30 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts. 5
- 31 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H. 10
- 42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts. 10
- 43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts. 5
- 44 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake. 10
- 47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

- 1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen." 5
- 3 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 5 20 Questions Without Answers. 5
- 6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin. 10
- 7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian. 10
- 8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake. 5
- 9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
- 10 A Few Words about the Devil. 5
- 11 New Life of Jacob. 5
- 12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake. 10
- 13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake. 10
- 14 Acts of the Apostles: A Fable. A. H. 10
- 15 Lucicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
- 16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh. 5
- 18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh. 5
- 19 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz. 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 30 days; is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.
 This AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lantern Pinion, 240 beats to minute; No key required to wind and set; weight 4 oz., exactly like cut; Post-paid for $1.50, 2 for $4.00, 12 for $15.00, by express. Mention paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CLASP. AGENTS & Storekeepers send for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol. 100 pp. 200 pp. $1.50

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL.

Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	{ Oxidized, 10 ounces per doz., }	each $2.50
" "	{ Oxidized, 14 ounces per doz., }	" 3.00
" "	{ Oxidized, gilt bowl, 10 ounces per doz., }	" 3.00
" "	{ Oxidized, sectional gilt, 10 ounces per doz., }	" 3.50
Orange "	{ Oxidized, plain bowl, }	" 2.75
Sugar "	{ " gilt, }	" 3.25
" "	{ " satin, }	" 3.00
" "	{ " gilt, }	" 3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Ba ges, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer.

(If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for pricelists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidence of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,

Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in The Truth Seeker.

Dr Fellows is an Infidel.

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABLETS.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

- 16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
- 5 " The Church Robbing the People.
- 3 " Thanksgiving.
- 10 " Sabbath Laws.
- 14 " Children and the Church.
- 20 " Woman and the Church.
- 6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.
- 4 " Studies in Natural History.
- 3 " The Bible and Science.
- 15 " The Clergy and their Flocks.
- 1 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
- 4 " The Atonement Scheme.
- 3 " The Lord and His Works.
- 10 " Prayer.
- 1 " The Creeds.
- 1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

- 2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
- 5 " Missionaries.
- 1 " The Lord's Instruments.
- 25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
- 1 " The Church and Slavery.
- 2 " Priests and Politics.
- 4 " Ireland and the Church.
- 3 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
- 1 " The Uses of the Cross.
- 4 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
- 9 " Persecutions of the Church.
- 12 " Some Allegories.
- 3 " Heaven.
- 6 " Hell.
- 7 " Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker Company

POPPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

EAGLE BRAND.

—THE BEST—

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO.,
Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.

18618

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatharians.

Price, ———— 20 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in
Immortality of Matter,	Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Force,	Man,
Infinity of Matter,	Brain and Mind,
Value of Matter,	Thought,
Motion,	Consciousness,
Form,	Seat of the Soul,
Immutability of Natural	Innate Ideas,
Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural	Personal Continuance,
Laws,	Vital Force,
The Heavens,	The Soul of Brutes,
Periods of the Creation	Free Will,
of the Earth,	Mortality,
Original Generation,	Concluding Observa-
Secular Generation,	tions.

Price of 50 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

—144—

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, ———— 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

THOMAS PAINE;
WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

Water of Life

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa

"A Digest of Science."THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.

Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

L. K. Washburn's Works

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MBSLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Prest-bowd. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.

WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, ———— 15 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, ———— 10 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN.

Price 25 cents.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, ———— 40 cents.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that Infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. EABOOK.

Price, ———— 10 cents.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 88 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

News of the Week.

MCGLYNN has been to Rome and had a friendly interview with the pope.

In an upper neighborhood of New York city there is feeling against Mrs. Julia Hill, who let a twelve-year-old girl die of diphtheria with [the attendance only of a faith curer.

GOVERNOR ALTGELD of Illinois pardoned Anarchists Schwab, Fielden, and Neebe. He says that the jurors who tried them were irregularly drawn, and the judge acted with partiality for the state.

DURING naval evolutions of a British fleet off the north African coast, the warship Victoria was run into by the Camperdown and sunk so quickly that four hundred and sixty sailors were drowned.

REV. FATHER JOHN T. CULLETON, of Louisville, Ky., made choice of an earthly bride in preference to the church. He married, and has consequently been excommunicated from the Catholic church.

THE director-general of the World's Fair says that he will inform the churchmen who want to remove their exhibits because of Sunday opening, that the rules forbid anything being withdrawn after once placed. The religionists can, however, cover their exhibits Sundays.

WANAMAKER and Brown, the stockholders of the World's Fair who brought suit for an injunction closing that exhibition Sundays, have had their plea thrown out of court, upon the representation of the opposit side that notice had not been properly served on them. The pious expostmaster and his friend will have to begin over again.

REV. CHAS. FLUHRER, a Universalist preacher at Grand Rapids, Mich., caused a sensation by declaring in a sermon that he would sooner stand his chances for heaven with Booth, who paid his debts in full, than with that other actor, Talmage, who joined in the doxology after announcing that the debt of his church had been compromised at twenty-three cents on the dollar.

THE bigots have to a large extent accomplished their design of keeping people from the World's Fair on Sunday. On that day all other art galleries, museums, and the like have always received double attendance, but on account of the uncertainty about the Fair's opening, and other similar hindrances, the Sunday attendance at that exhibition has been not over half that of the average week-day.

REV. DR. HENSON, of a Methodist church at Chicago, said of Chief-justice Fuller's decision opening the Fair Sundays: "I can imagine a personal devil squatting like a black toad at the ear of justice itself and dictating the decision of the court, and then, after the judgment had been pronounced, slapping the judge on the shoulder and saying, 'Well done! I couldn't have written that better myself.'"

At Rangoon, India, Mohammedans were forbidden by the British magistrate to sacrifice a cow in their religious ceremonies. When police appeared near the temple with the announcement Mohammedans stoned them. The police charged without effect, and then fired, killing twenty of them. The fanatics gathered so that the military were called, and they fought the Moslems all the afternoon with bayonets. At last accounts the religionists were mustering from all the region, and the regular military had asked aid of volunteers.

DURING the session of the Pennsylvania legislature just ended publishers of Sunday newspapers worked for repeal of a special Sunday law fining them $25, instead of $4 as does the general law. But after the repeal bill had passed the legislature it was vetoed by Governor Pattison. He says: "It was placed upon the statute books, and has been continued there, in the recognition of a sound public sentiment. The instincts of a moral and law-abiding people find it as much needed today as when written into the laws a hundred years ago. Therefore its penalties should be sufficient to secure its observance and enforcement, in order to preserve and secure the salutary objects for which it was enacted. For thirty-eight years the penalty of $25 for its violation has been in force in Allegheny county. It is the unconcealed object of this repealing clause to weaken its enforcement and to render its violation more easy and less expensive. The offer of a premium for the violation of a law is indeed a novel proposition. After very deliberate examination of this bill, I am strengthened in my conclusion that its approval would be a step backward and an encouragement toward the violation of a reasonable statute, and I therefore decline to approve the bill."

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 27. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.}

New York, Saturday, July 8, 1893.

{28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

A DEAD SHOT IN SEARCH OF GAME:

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twine,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Exalt,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor Study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

New Publications.

S. P. Putnam's Latest Pamphlet.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1893, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Free-thought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for His Processes Are Egregiously Slow, They Are Egregiously Wasteful, They Often Serve No Use, They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles awry."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impatched; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]
Price, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Quoted from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK BY ARTHUR B. MOSS.

Author of "The Bible and Evolution."

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by
J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF
ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS
FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and
the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE. The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables {Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The

Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 27. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.}

New York, Saturday, July 8, 1893.

{28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - - JULY 8, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

The Ethics of Christ Are Subversive of Law and Justice.

The state University of Kansas lately included among the questions to be debated in a commencement exercise, the following: Resolved, That the ethics of Christ enter into the law and the administration of justice." Mr. Morgan, the student speaking in the affirmative, was heard. But Mr. Jesse Dunn, a senior law student, who took the negative side, was refused an audience. The University is a state institution, supposed not to be sectarian. Mr. Dunn, upon being suppressed in speech, had the argument that he had intended to deliver printed and distributed a thousand copies of it among the gathering.

THE TRUTH SEEKER does not believe in hearing only one side. It advocates consideration of both sides, and all sides however numerous, of every problem. It believes that a lover of fair play, and a lover of the truth, should put forth a hand to secure hearing for the side that he finds denied one, wherever and whenever he meets it. We will give here the gist of the suppressed discourse.

This law student sets out with quoting the sentiment of James Parton that "The proper religion for an American citizen is the United States of America." Yes, says this student, an American's sublimest religion is "America with her music of industry; America with her schoolhouses and homes; America with her tramways, waterways, her heavens wreathed with the smoky garlands that overhang a thousand hives of enterprise vast and beneficent; America in an aspect greater and grander than all these—with her "proclamation of universal freedom and eternal liberty, under the protection of a system of law and jurisprudence whose influence is security to the weakest and from whose authority and restraint the greatest are not exempt." This elevation of country into a meet object of worship, we will interject, is what was practiced twenty-five hundred years ago with splendid success. The empire of Rome received from her citizens a heartfelt devotion that always rivaled and usually surpassed their adorations of their religious faiths. The effect of these people's devotion to country was the rearing of a nation whose exploits, polity, and justice will never cease to be celebrated by fame. America has faults, but withal she is a thing of excellences in the contemplation of which the heart may fitly thrill and the mind pronounce vows of glad duty and service. If the endeavors which her sons have misdirected to religion had been consecrated to beautifying her, she would indeed be a glorious object of their love.

But we must not with prolongation of comment perpetrate a second suppression of Student Dunn's really commendable utterance. There are, he says, in this religion of country which he advocates, "no mummeries, no holy of holies, no trinity, no immaculate conception, no baptism of the spirit or Holy Ghost, no heaven or hell, no Calvary and no vicarious atonement." In place of these futile fictions, he says, we find useful and excellent realities. We look for dogmas, we find principles. We search for souls, we find men and women. We hunt for heaven and hell, we find conditions and not places. "Tirelessly we explore for prophets and martyrs, we find statesmen and soldiers." We attempt to locate the scenes of biblical incidents, we find our firesides and hearthstones. We gaze into the heavens for a cross, we see, illuminated by the trinal light of reason, equality, and justice, the floating folds of the flag of freedom.

Christ, says this attempted speaker, discoursed strange vagaries. His ethics display a narrow knowledge of man's needs and capacities. "He spoke of man's spiritual welfare, not of his temporal. He held all men as guilty, not as innocent. He knew nothing of crime, it was always sin. He offered no man a home on earth, it was mansions in the skies. The sweet name of liberty he never knew, and freedom was a stranger to his lips. It was the Declaration of Independence and not Jesus Christ that said: 'All men are born free and equal.' He led the life of a mendicant; homeless poverty and shiftless improvidence are the lessons it teaches. 'Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth' and 'take no thought for the morrow' were to him favorite themes. 'Give to him that asketh, and from him that would borrow turn thou not away,' to 'lend hoping for nothing again,' are fair samples of what the gentleman would have us to believe make part of our law and justice. 'Unto him that smiteth thee on one cheek offer the other,' and 'To him that taketh away thy cloak forbid not to take thy coat also.' It seems to me," exclaims Student Dunn, "if I had a thousand voices to raise in defence of this proposition these solecisms would strike them all dumb. They assassinate the dignity of forbearance and turn the bearing of an outraged man into that of a submissive victim. With them goes the brand to their own refutation. They directly traverse every penal code in every state in every country in the world. They are outrages to peace and insults to justice. Society would be overthrown in a day if they entered into the law or the administration of it. They put a premium upon crime and pay a man to be an outlaw and a thief. The law, as we have learned it, means anything else than suffering ourselves to be defrauded. The virtues recognized by all men are courage and resistance to wrong and not cringing cowardice or fawning servility. Loving enemies is another specious doctrine of feigned morality, and equally impossible, as it is vain to say it is part of our law. The way the law and the Christians of the present day love their enemies is by building the largest gunships the world ever saw, by casting the biggest cannons and maintaining immense standing armies to sustain the dignity of the nations of Christendom. Billions of property and millions of lives, with their story of widowhood and orphanage, have told the tale of how we Christians do love one another."

The doctrine that one can win forgiveness of crime and admittance to heaven for the asking, is next animadverted on. "Ask and ye shall receive," is the foundation of the countless prayers which each day ascend, and is contrary to law and contrary to justice, as it teaches man that he can gain without effort and derive benefits through another's merit. Nay, worse than that! It concedes to him the indulgence of the worst passions. It teaches him that he can strew the highway with thorns for another's feet, that he can rob honesty of its earnings, and from the blossom of innocence steal the perfume of happiness, and when at last from the gallows of infamy his soul takes its flight, it can be washed whiter than snow.

Then there was Christ's statute on domestic relations, or marriage and divorce. Contrary to our law, he advises man for the "kingdom of heaven's sake" to incapacitate himself for that relation. Contrary to the daily practice of our courts, he said: "What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder." He granted no right of divorce to the wife, and after she was cast off by her husband for her to remarry was criminal. That statute which makes woman the servile puppet of a man is polluted. The student concludes on this point: "I am glad to live in a state and country that are granting woman rights equal with man's, and have stripped from ecclesiasticism the power to enforce such slavish, brutish decrees."

Next says this negative advocate who failed of a hearing: "The Golden Rule for which Christ has received much glory is, I maintain, no part of our law, and in support of this I wish to offer for your consideration a ruling of the law itself. Found in the 24th Ohio State Reports, p. 246: Board of Education vs. Minor, wherein the eloquent and learned judge says:

"We are told Christianity is a part of the common law of this country, but those who make the assertion can hardly be serious. For if Christianity is a law of the state, like other law it must have a sanction. No one seriously contends for such doctrine in this country, or I might say in this age of the world. True Christianity never shields itself behind majorities. Its weapons are spiritual, not carnal. Legal Christianity is a solecism, a contradiction in terms. Its laws are divine, not human. Were I teacher, while I should instruct the pupils that the Christian religion was the true one and all others false, I should tell them the law itself is an unchristian law. One of my first lessons would be to show it to be unchristian. That lesson would be, 'Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye even so to them.' I could not look the veriest infidel or heathen in the face and say that such a law was just or was a fair specimen of Christian republicanism. I should have to tell them that it was an outgrowth of false Christianity. I should be bound to acknowledge to him that it violates the spirit of our Constitutional guarantees and is a state religion in embryo."

"Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, p. 472: 'The precepts of Christianity affect the heart and address themselves to the conscience, while the laws of the state can regard the outward conduct only.'

"In the United States statutes at large, Vol. 8, which contains our treaty with Tripoli Nov. 4, 1796, there appears in the organic law of our land, of which this treaty is a part, this statement: 'The government of the United States is not in any sense founded on the Christian religion.'

"In the recent litigation concerning the Sunday closing of the World's Fair, C. H. Howard, the petitioner, stated that Christianity was a part of the law of the country. 'This is clearly not so,' said Judge Stein; 'the position is clearly untenable in a country of religious freedom.'

Our excellent student next takes in hand the "believe or be damned" clause of Christ's teachings. That clause, he says, crucified thought and reason. That clause stripped from judgment the livery of heaven and decked her in the slimy garb of hypocrisy. That clause, so far from propping government and the administration of justice, overthrew them. That clause turned Europe into a slaughter-pen. That clause "instituted the Inquisition, with its dungeons, its racks, its stakes and fagots. That clause in three hundred years imprisoned, racked, and tortured over three hundred thousand human beings, of whom thirty thousand were burnt. That clause in 1641 in England and Ireland took the lives of over sixty thousand people, and their conscientious murderers prayed God to eternalize the fiendish work in hell. It did enter into the law at one time, but it does not now. We have seen the result of its justice. Queen Mary said: "If God is going to burn them forever, what harm is there in me burning them a little while?" That clause blasphemes Greenleaf, who teaches that when certain facts are offered for credit or discredit, liberty and reason hold the balance at the bar of justice, evidence is offered pro and con, and the integrity of the soul tells which side rises and which side falls." No man can control the belief of his brain. The implication of Christ's doctrine, that he can, is disgraceful folly. "To say that this doctrine of Christ enters into the law and the administration of justice is little less than self-stultification."

This keen-minded and fearless student concludes: "Now I want to ask you in the name of right, justice, and equality, in the name of our homes, our country, and our flag, the next time some one tells you that Christ or his ethics enter into our law to tell him he is mistaken. I want you to say it in honor of the courts and the judges, whose decisions I have read you. I want you to say it in honor of the organic law of our country. I want you to say it in honor of Washington; of Franklin, of Jefferson, of Paine, and the rest of those grand old patriots who guided our nation through days that were sunless and through nights without a star. I want you to tell them they put reason, justice, and liberty into our Constitution and laws, and left Christ and his ethics out."

In giving the foregoing discourse to the world we have, we find, not only performed the duty of aiding the ill-used, but withal treated ourselves to a repast of very good thoughts, and confirmed anew our conviction that the ethics of Christ are subversive of law and justice.

An Exemplar for Freethinkers.

A man who was a thorough Infidel, and at the same time so noble and lovable morally as to form a brave exemplar for the patterning of our lives, was Abraham Lincoln. This man, says Mr. Remsburg in his new work upon him, with the stature of a giant, and strength and courage of a lion, "possessed the gentleness of a child and the tenderness of a woman. The sufferings, even of a stranger, would fill his eyes with tears, and the death of a friend would overwhelm him." In the social relations of life, he was a most exemplary man. He was a devoted husband, an indulgent father, an obliging neighbor, and a faithful friend. Mrs. Colonel Chapman, a lady who lived for a time in his family, pays this tribute to his private life: "He was all that a husband, father, and neighbor should be, kind and affectionate to his wife and child, and very pleasant to all around him. Never did I hear him utter an unkind word." "His devotion to wife and children," says George W. Julian, "was as abiding and unbounded as his love of country." The strong attachment always manifested by him for his friends has often been remarked. Rich and poor, great and humble, all were equally dear to him and alike the recipients of his regard and love. The prince, says Mr. Remsburg, he treated like a man, the humblest man he treated like a prince. By his rugged honesty he won the sobriquet of "Honest Abe." In his profession of lawyer, so prone to unscrupulousness, he was a shining light of purity. He labored mightily in cases that he believed just, faltered with little heart and little efficiency through causes that he doubted, and refused those that he knew unjust.

"Lincoln," says Colonel Ingersoll, "was the grandest figure of the fiercest civil war. He is the gentlest memory of our world." And he was a total disbeliever in the tenets of Christianity. Ideal splendid and heart-swaying is he for the Freethinker's aspiration and imitation.

A subscriber writes to us of the way in which a colored murderer of Hendersonville, North Carolina, met his execution. He had embraced religion and become reassured by its declarations that no matter how a man had treated his fellows, he would be regarded just the same in the upper world. So, requesting his spiritual adviser to sing "Amazing Grace, How Sweet the Sound," he swung off into everlasting bliss, an encouragement to all who may be tempted likewise in the future.

From the far isle of Trinidad we are sent information of the prosperous continuance of a Free-thought organization. This is the Trinidad branch of the National Secular Society. This body has elected as latest officers: president, Edgar Maresse Smith, Esq.; vice-president, Philip Fort, Esq.; treasurer, Charles A. Meltz, Esq.; secretary, Emanuel dos Santos, Esq., 15a Upper Prince street, Port-of-Spain. May the proceedings of this body be blessed with a spirit of peace as balmy as the air of their happy island, and Secular works spring forth as luxuriantly as their soil's growths about them.

There are nearly three hundred young East Indians studying at the British universities of London and at various inns of court. One seldom meets with any of them who do not maintain those total abstinence principles which are characteristic of their native faith. Whether they be Hindoo or Mussulman, they are to be found among the most earnest and steady groups of students, and earn golden opinions from the authorities. Yet, to convert Hindoos and Mohammedans such as these to the faith of guzzling Christianity enormous sums are annually wheedled from our opulent citizens by those everlasting humbugs, the missionaries.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett will regret to learn of the decease of Mrs. Bennett's brother, Loren J. Wicks, of New Jersey. His death occurred May 9th, and as became a firm Spiritualist was quiet and confident. He remained conscious till the final breath left the body. He told his daughter he was going home, and was glad of it, for he wanted to go. He crossed his own hands on his breast and passed away as peacefully as a child goes to sleep. His sister, Mrs. Bennett, is in better health than formerly, and cherishes her husband's memory with the utmost fidelity. She asks us to send greetings to her many friends throughout the country.

Every now and then some preacher follows Dr. Briggs by ceasing to pronounce any longer that falsehood as arrant as that black is white, the assertion that the Bible is errorless. The latest to stop telling this lie as prodigious as to deny that the sun is shining at noon, is Rev. Dr. Sprecher, of the Euclid Avenue Presbyterian church at Cleveland, Ohio. The other Sunday this minister in whose breast the spark of shame had refused to die out utterly as in the bosoms of his fellows, declared in his pulpit that he would not be a slave and say that the scriptures are without error. The work of seeking the truth and promulgating it that Freethinkers are doing, if continued must in the end result in forcing everybody to speak it.

Folks who have been in the market towns within easy access of Alsace, Germany, have noted that the peasant girls with the peculiar headdress are invariably attired in either green or red skirts. This fashion in colors is due entirely to the difference in the religious belief of the wearers of the skirts. The girls in the green skirts are Protestants and those that wear the red are Catholics. Most of the Alsatian maidens are blondes of decided beauty. They think more of their religion than they do of the esthetic necessity of making the color of their dresses match their complexions. They wear their colors ostentatiously, so nobody may think they are ashamed to be what their dress indicates they are. Let us pray that our charming sisters of America obscure not their gladdening beauty by any such tributes to ugly superstition.

We shall print Mr. Putnam's letters from Chicago in a pamphlet to be called "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," before their complete appearance in THE TRUTH SEEKER. We shall get the book out in time to be used as a guide-book for those who visit Chicago during the last three months of the Fair. These letters have been highly commended, and deservedly so, for the descriptions are veritable poems, and all the statements are as accurate as official information can make them. Those who go to the Fair will find the book exceedingly useful, for Mr. Putnam has laid it all out from beginning to end, and the book will save visitors' time. Those who read it will know what to see, and where the sights are. It will contain as much information as is possible to crowd into a work of its limit. Those who do not go to the Fair will in this book see it in all its glory, and certainly will know more about the Exhibition than those who attend without this guide-book, trusting to memory. Those who go to Chicago will receive great benefit from it; those who do not, still greater. The price of the book is 25 cents.

Francis Wilson, the actor, and Rev. Dr. Bristol, of Chicago, are friends. It happened early last spring that the two friends met in Omaha. Dr. Bristol was there as a delegate to the Methodist Conference. Mr. Wilson was there with his comic-opera company. Both gentlemen did a big week's business. "Now is the time for you to come to one of my performances," said Mr. Wilson one day. "Oh, no; that would never do," answered Dr. Bristol. "I never was in a theater in all my life, and I couldn't conscientiously go now." "But I've been to hear you," argued Mr. Wilson; "surely you should come to hear me!" The clergyman shook his head and set his teeth firmly. The two fell to arguing the merits of the case. Mr. Wilson stood up for his profession, and in the course of his elaborate argument said: "I try to make my fellow-men happy and so do you. Now I claim that my efforts are more successful than yours. For two hours every night I am before the public and the people go away happy. Many of these same people go to hear you twice a week, and with what results? They come away miserable as —!"

Colonel Ingersoll while in Cincinnati on the 1st inst. thus expressed himself on the present silver situation: "This is a bankers' panic. The bankers have been predicting a panic for years, and have done all they could to fulfill their prediction. They tell us that the Sherman law has done all the damage, and they point to the present price of silver as one of the results of the Sherman law. Certainly silver did not fall in price because the Sherman bill made a market for 4,500,000 ounces a month. You can not put down prices by buying. Silver has fallen because it was demonetized. The value of a thing depends somewhat upon its uses, and the main use of silver has been destroyed. Suppose gold had been demonetized instead of silver, what would gold be worth?" Colonel Ingersoll thinks that a ratio between the metals can easily be established by a conference of nations. He is a strong silver man, and gives it as his opinion that the Sherman bill cannot be repealed unless something is put in its place, as there is not gold enough in the world to do its business, and the present trouble is due to a lack of confidence of the people in each other.

We desire to call the attention of readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the benefits of subscribing to the Truth Seeker Monthly Library. The yearly subscription is only $3, and subscribers to the Library receive a paper-bound copy of each book issued in it; or, if they desire the books in cloth binding, subscribers to the Library can remit the difference in price between paper and cloth binding, and get the books in the latter shape. So far this year subscribers to the Library have received "Paine Vindicated," by Colonel Ingersoll, price 15 cents; the "Creation of God," by Dr. Hartmann, price 50 cents; the "Resurrection of Jesus," by Don Allen, price 40 cents; "Crimes of Preachers," price 25 cents; the "Handbook of Freethought," by W. S. Bell, price 50 cents; "Religion a Curse," by S. P. Putnam, price 25 cents; "Design Argument Fallacies," price 15 cents, making two dollars and twenty cents' worth in five months, or at the rate of $5.40 worth per year; and all for $3 paid in advance. J. E. Remsburg's "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" will be ready very soon, and other books besides are in preparation. Two of these, we may mention, are "Progress and Pleasure," by A. M. Lorentz, LL.D., of which further notice will shortly be made, and Mr. Putnam's "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," of great value to visitors to the Fair, and still greater to those who cannot attend. Send $3 and receive at once the books already published, and, as they appear, those which will be published between now and January '94.

Dr. Whitford, of Butte, Mont., an old contributor to THE TRUTH SEEKER, is hurling into the cowards' castles of the preachers of his town challenges to investigate scripture. However, the pietists there are not so universally cowards as in most places, for one Major Camp has been found to take up the challenge. On a late Sunday he responded to the doctor's request that he publicly read and expound Jer. xix, 9. Besides making the exposition desired, the devout son of Mars remarked: "It is now too late in the nineteenth century for a man of the doctor's caliber to begin a war on the Bible, which has withstood centuries of warfare of the most intense and bitter kind, and the sage of Idaho street cannot expect to accomplish anything where greater and brighter men than he have failed. His hatred of God and the Bible has become a part of himself, and he can only think of the one subject, or else age has affected the gray matter of the brain, which perhaps is the more charitable view to entertain. Of all the Infidels I have known and met in debate not one knew more than a half-dozen verses from the Bible, and the few that they do know they usually garble and distort or misquote for the purpose of ridiculing the same." The fighting disciple of the prince of peace then spoke of the persistent efforts of individuals and even of nations to suppress the Bible and Christianity, and "how utterly they have failed." More books, he said, had been written on the Bible and more people read the Bible than any other book that was ever published or would be published in the future. Daniel Webster, Lincoln, Washington, Garfield, and Gladstone all believed in the Bible and spoke well of it, "either of whom had brains enough to break Dr. Whitford's neck should he attempt to carry an equal weight of gray matter in his head," said the major. This personage seems to make up in powers of wind what he lacks in politeness, and we suppose that our friend Dr. Whitford will have quite a lively time pinning him down and opening the bladder of his argument in all its emptiness.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought."

In connection with the World's Fair and International Freethought Congress no subject can be more interesting than the progress of Freethought since the landing of Columbus on these shores. The most brilliant and alluring pages of human history are open before us. The greatest events and the greatest geniuses of the world are seen in their relation to the glory of to-day. Only by understanding the progress of Freethought for the last four centuries can we understand the present time. It is a wonderful record, more beautiful than any romance. Every Freethinker interested in the advancement of the race, and wishing to see the true meaning of civilization, should read this history.

I propose to show the progress of Freethought for the last four centuries in philosophy, science, literature, education, and government. It will be a book of permanent value, for it deals with the most fruitful portion of history. I shall devote my time from now until the meeting of the International Congress to writing this book, and the book will conclude with a report of the Congress itself, in the best manner in which I can do it, giving a living picture, I hope, of this great gathering; of those who take part in it, the representatives of our cause throughout the world. I intend to make this book not only a correct history of the last four centuries, but of organized Freethought to-day, and therefore it will be valuable for reference. I do not mean, however, to give a bare abstraction of events, but to clothe them with life and color, to show the heart and brain of humanity in its eternal struggle for truth and liberty.

I shall issue a souvenir edition of this book in commemoration of the International Congress. I propose to make it in every respect a book worthy of the cause. It will be elegantly bound. It will contain the portraits of over fifty Freethinkers, living and dead, who have adorned the history of our work. It will be a gallery of Freethought, as well as its written record. It will be something worthy to preserve and valuable as a gift to friends, illustrating what Freethought has been and is to-day.

I shall sell this book by subscription, and I desire subscriptions from friends at the earliest possible moment. The subscriptions will be for the benefit of the International Congress as well as for the publication of the book. The names of all subscribers will be enrolled in the book along with the members and officers of the International Congress, whether they attend the Congress or not, and in this way in permanent form there will be a list of the pioneer Freethinkers of the world. I hope everyone will feel it an honor to be on that list, and will hasten to enroll their name. I do not mean to do things cheaply, but generously. I want to make this one of the best and handsomest books ever published in the interests of Freethought. Therefore, I shall make the price per copy $5.00. All above the cost of publication will be for the benefit of the Freethought International Congress.

Friends, I ask you to subscribe for this book; you will thus help to secure in permanent form the history of Freethought in its noblest career; you will thus put yourself upon the roll of the pioneers of the great cause, and you will at this important time aid financially the Congress of the Freethinkers of the World. Address,

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,
TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

International Congress of Freethinkers.

Christians frequently boast of the profound erudition and learning of the professors of theology. Names of great men are frequently enumerated as adherents of their creed, first to try and show its popularity, and secondly to try and give a little authority toward showing its supposed truth; but what a vast preponderance of learning and pretensions toward orthodoxy stands arrayed against these claims, repelling with contempt such arrogant assumptions of authority and superiority! We have attached to the cause of science and human progress the brightest men that may be found in any civilized country, men and women too who have been and may be regarded as the brightest ornaments in society. Of this latter class the late John Stuart Mill declared: "The world would be utterly astonished to know how many of them were complete skeptics upon religion." Others of literary fame have not been absolutely blind to this fact, though literary dishonesty has in a sense led them to suppress it. In face of this we must make it our duty at the forthcoming Congress to gather together upon our platform the shining lights of Freethought, who by their study and inquiry have acquired a profound learning, which being clothed with splendid oratory has won the admiration of thousands of their fellow-men. We have within the bounds of our party ties and affections men and women who have grown old and gray in the glorious work of freedom, who have sacrificed their wealth, their means, and their reputations in an earnest endeavor to free the race from mental bondage. The traditional history of our cause is resplendent with noble characters—those heroic souls who have given their very lives to subserve the highest and best interests of humanity.

Realizing this, how earnest we should be to perpetuate these same principles, and touched by the rays of gratitude for those who have labored so incessantly in the past, endeavor to supplant the Christian religious system with a newer religion, broader in its purpose and meaning, nobler in sentiment and purer in motive, a religion embracing the whole human family, the great and enduring religion of humanity.

It is these points we desire to emphasize at the forthcoming Congress, when men and women from all parts of the civilized world may participate in this grand demonstration, and by song and speech fill each heart with purer motives, and inspire each brain with more elevated and progressive thoughts, fitting them for nobler deeds and a more devoted life to the cause of justice, freedom, and truth.

What deeds of heroism have been performed even within our own age and time, what vivid pictures are reflected upon our minds. It is impossible for us to forget them, and as they rise before us in glowing recollections, let us one and all find therein an incentive to urge us on, and by our help, our sympathy, and our affections encourage and assist those who are now engaged in the long and bitter fight against slavish creeds and customs which by subtlety and deception have been made to permeate the very system of man's own nature. We have men of learning and ability within our ranks who are giving their life and means to strengthen our cause, and the object of the promoters of this Congress is to bring together these laborers in the vineyards, not of the Lord's, but of humanity's service, to see them and encourage them in the work they have selected to perform. Religious despotism has of late shown itself in its true character—oppressions of liberty and trappings of human rights. The searchlight of investigation, the piercing rays of truth, have shown its pernicious tendencies toward the race, and that it is truly deserving the opposition of all sincere Freethinkers who desire to make this a practical and useful world to all mankind.

Let gods attend on things that gods must know,
Man's only care relates to things below.

The preparations for the Congress are now assuming vast proportions, and the tendency is toward making it the greatest event in the history of our movement in America. Universal satisfaction is expressed at the steps we have taken toward this end. It would require pages to enumerate the names of friends who have written me concerning it, and the favorable opinions expressed by them. Let this fact suffice to move those who have not yet sent in their contributions to help us in the realization of this worthy object.

To properly arrange this Congress, where the consummation of our brightest hopes may be realized, we must have a sufficiency of financial help, the hands of the committee must not be cramped by want of funds, and I trust our friends will realize how vastly important this will be. The hall rent must be paid, the Congress must be properly and adequately advertised, decorations are needed, some of the speakers must be paid, especially those from abroad, and then there are innumerable incidental expenses; though not large in themselves, still in the aggregate they will amount to quite a sum. So, again we put forth an urgent appeal for financial help so greatly needed at this time. Friends, we need your assistance in these our efforts, that by the work we have before us truth and justice may have an abiding-place upon the earth from whence they cannot be driven, a stronghold from whence the united vengeance of priests and dupes would fail in their efforts to dislodge them.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Committee of Arrangements.

345 W. Randolph st., Chicago, Ill.

Since my last report of donations, I hereby acknowledge the receipt of the following donations in behalf of the Federation:

Louis Levine, Charleston, S. C.	$10 00
C. W. Brace, Kain, Ill.	5 00
Jorgen Nilsen, Waupaca, Wis.	1 00
J. M. Monroe, Mabel, Minn.	5 00
Sarah Monroe, " "	1 00
L. G. Reed, New York city	2 00
David Freidenrich, Baltimore, Md.	1 00
E. E. Otis, Palo Alto, Cal.	1 00
James A. Greenhill, Clinton, Ia.	5 00
B. Anderson, Carleton, Neb.	5 00
C. F. Swartz, Iroquois, S. D.	1 00
J. J. Wilkin, Hutchinson, Kan.	1 00
H. L. Wilson, Davenport, Wash.	1 00
H. Merrick, Spuyten Duyvil, N. Y.	5 00
Asa W. Brayton, Brayton, N. Y.	5 00
Total	$49 00

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.
345 W. Randolph st., Chicago, Ill.

Information To Be Had from Its Pages.

From the Investigator.

"The Creation of God." By Dr. Jacob Hartmann. In the preface of this volume the author says: "In presenting these pages to the public it is for the purpose of exposing some simple intelligible facts, some wholesome truths, some few scientific revelations discovered by men of eminence, knowledge, and wisdom regarding the terrestrial globe, and the universe at large of which we are part." "Man to know his rights must know himself, his nature, and his natural surroundings, and if he knows himself he will learn that God did not create man, but that man created God, and that every man is and must be his own God to be a true man. Know the natural—never mind the supernatural." Dr. Hartmann has given a great deal of valuable information in this volume, and has applied common sense and reason to the current Christian dogmas and beliefs in a way to expose their fallacy and absurdity. Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place; 432 pages—cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Bound Volumes of The Truth Seeker.

We have a few bound volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER for the year just closed (1892) which will be sent on receipt of $4. We also have a few of previous years which can be sold for $3. Readers desirous of keeping files as received weekly can obtain the File Binder for $1.

Communications.

These letters will be published in pamphlet form within two or three weeks, as a guide-book and description of the Fair. Send 25 cents for "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair."

Pen Pictures of the World's Fair.

THE AGRICULTURAL BUILDING.

Agriculture creates the home life, first of all brings wild and wandering man to an abiding-place, and makes possible those conditions whereby art and industry adorn and glorify his career.

And so with still fresh and exultant feelings I walk through these vistas of flowers and fruit and grain, and see that the oldest art of man is still bright and beautiful; that it is regnant amidst all the shining wonders of his later conquests, and whatever may happen in the long result of time never can we outgrow the grand old farm life with its restfulness, its ruggedness, its peace, its strength, its amplitude. Whatever may be our progress we must still keep close to nature, to forest and field, to hill and dale, to meadow and brook, to tree and flower, to garden, orchard, and vineyard. We must plow and sow and reap, and we thus gain, not simply the resplendent harvest, but the noblest qualities of our being, and that presence of nature without which art itself is "stale, flat, and unprofitable."

The Agricultural Building, fronting the beautiful lagoon, with the glorious statue of Diana on its pinnacle, is indeed one of the most illustrious spectacles of this great Exposition. It is appropriately styled the "Palace of Agriculture." It is five hundred by eight hundred feet, and the annex is three hundred by five hundred feet, and the total cost is $618,000. On either side of the main entrance are mammoth Corinthian pillars, eighty feet high and five feet in diameter. There is a continuous arcade around the top of the building, with three pavilions. The rotunda is one hundred feet in diameter, with a glass dome one hundred and thirty feet high.

Agricultural progress has been remarkable in the last decade. Colleges throughout the country and the national government are entering upon the fields of scientific research.

The subject of irrigation and its possibilities are presented in a practical and comprehensive manner. The science of dairying, the breeding of live stock, the beautifying of roadways by tree-planting, the production of sugar, the new methods of industry, the vast material developments both of the North and South, are displayed with marvelous fidelity. Foreign nations vie with America in the abundance and variety of their exhibits, and present features preëminently instructive. On the floor space, covering nearly ten acres, are seen in multitudinous perfection the farm products of the world. On every exhibit is the name of object, of producer, where grown, character of soil, date of planting, date of harvesting, yield per acre, and all items necessary to thorough information.

In the great galleries, novel in construction and perfect in point of availability, are located in the north front the wool exhibit, in the west end working colonies of bees, in the south end dairy implements. In the central sections are the brewing and tobacco industries, magnificent collections of flowers, sugars, confectionery, canned goods, oils, soaps, etc. There is a colossal image of Columbus in chocolate. As you enter the building it seems like a brilliant little city of temples, pavilions, palaces, and kiosks. There are long avenues running east and west, north and south. Every exhibit tells its own story. Tags and placards are everywhere. Most of the booths are built in their native clime, and illustrate the wood products of the different countries. As you wander along you might imagine yourself a pilgrim in all parts of the world face to face with nature herself. There is no imitation, no copy, but the vivid reality. It is impossible to note the particular exhibits, for almost every nation is represented, and the states of the Union rival each other in the ingenuity and magnificence with which they furnish forth their peculiar riches.

I must of course note the beautiful Diana statue which adorned the tower of Madison Square Garden, and is now above the central dome of this "Temple of Ceres," for as against the Sunday opening so the ultra religionists of the land protested against this superb creation of Art for no other reason than that it was "beauty unadorned." The figure is of heroic size, being eighteen feet in height. The glorious huntress is represented with a drawn bow, her right foot resting upon a small ball which moves in a socket to the lightest zephyr. In the glittering sunshine and amidst the wondrous illuminations that gem the night this figure of exquisite grace, of beauteous animation, as if born of nature's selectest influence and exuberant joy, floats and quivers and glances in radiant swiftness along the blue plains of the welcoming sky. And to think of the idiocy of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union that would file a caveat against this stainless loveliness! The next thing we know they will issue a mandamus to arrest the naked truth itself.

LA RABIDA.

Coming forth at the east end of Agricultural Building, fronting the lake, if we are hungry we can saunter into the Casino, or if we desire a few symphonies we may pass along the vast colonnade of the Peristyle to Music Hall; but since we have already visited these places and are still in good trim for travel we will cross the bridge over the lagoon which flows into the South Pond, and walk through the quaint and richly crowded halls of La Rabida, and dream of the past and study the poetic and toilsome life of Columbus. La Rabida takes us back through many centuries almost to the beginning of the Christian era. As we enter, the world of the present seems to fade away, and a strange silence falls upon our curious footsteps. We can spend a whole day in this pictured gallery of ancient times and ever some new relic will attract our gaze. The things that pass before our vision are not by any means illustrious or inspiring. There is gloom and sadness penetrated by the romance of the bold adventurer, who no more conceived of the glory of to-day than the walls that shut in his weary frame. But still in the bosom of superstition he found sympathy and new hope. They who dwelt in the shadow of enthroned falsehood caught some glimpse from the eye and brain of the imperious wanderer of the "orient colors flying"—of the New World beyond the sea, and their gentle souls gave nourishment to the intrepid spirit that else might have sunk by the way, and the ocean rolled its undiscovered billows another century.

The legend says that La Rabida was built in the time of the emperor Trajan, a temple to Proserpine. It is said that criminals could escape to this temple and be safe, and that virgins were sacrificed on its altars. According to this story the convent is very nearly as old as Jesus. The Christian monks occupied it in the year 159. In the year 700 the Moslems came in and made it a mosque. Afterward the Knights Templar used it, and when they were driven out on account of their wealth and pride the Franciscans took possession, and held on until 1835. Rabida in Spain is a strong-looking high object on the top of a hill, a good way back from the water; and with the monument of Columbus, built last year, rising conspicuously by its side, it has the appearance of an important town. It is three miles from Palos, which furnished sailors for the ships of the navigator.

In Chicago La Rabida is a whitewashed-looking building, not many feet above the water. The center of the convent is all here, and is filled with paintings and relics. The descendants of Columbus, the monarchs of Spain and other countries, and the pope himself have sent to this spot priceless things.

Here is a book published in 1507 when Columbus was obscurely dying at Valladolid, which first contained the name "America." In this book it says, freely translated from Latin, "Now that these parts have been more widely explored, and another fourth part discovered by Americus Vespucci, I do not see why we should refuse to name it America; namely the land Americus or America for its discoverer Americus, a man of sagacious mind, since Europe and Asia and Asia derive their names from women."

So it seems after all, as some one wittily remarks, that the name "America" originated in a protest for the rights of man as against woman's supremacy. She had already named two continents and would no doubt have labeled this the continent of Isabella, if this voluble monk had not been too quick for her.

Here are relics of old Isabella, the first town established in America, such as handcuffs, spurs, stirrups, and the first bell which rang in the New World in 1494; also horseshoes, jugs, bits of cannon, bits of Toledo blades, and lance-heads. The anchor which Columbus used is here, and some of his ashes. Autograph letters from the popes are to be seen; also the first map in the world upon which America is shown. Here is the terrestrial globe made by Martin Beheim, in 1492, of pasteboard covered with parchment. An interesting feature are the canoes, roughly constructed from great logs, in which the Indians are said to have gone out to meet Columbus on his way to this continent.

There are views of the harbor and city of Genoa, of the university at Pavia, of the church at Lisbon, and Porto Santo—connected with the youth of Columbus.

There is the "sepulcher room" with relics of the last days and death of Columbus. There are views of the city of Seville, the Tower of Gold, the Alcazar and convent of Caruja. The house in which Columbus died is still standing at Valladolid.

There are paintings illustrating the career of Columbus—his disappointments, his triumphs, his voyages, his imprisonment, his chains, his pathetic death.

What a contrast is this old convent with its little windows and little halls and narrow stairways to the Manufacturers' Building, the emblem of modern progress, with its amplitude and wealth of light. The one is the fifteenth century, the other is the nineteenth century, and what a vast space is dark and luminous between. The toilsome life of Columbus, with its defeats and victories, has been repeated a thousand times to make this imperial White City in the heart of the continent of America. What voyages have been made since Columbus, not only over the liquid surface of the earth but through the trackless heavens themselves to stars beyond the gaze of the dauntless navigator. I wonder how, with such surroundings as this little building and its relics, Columbus could have pierced beyond the limits of his time? There must have been a daring and wonderful spirit in him, born of the sea, of the wandering winds, of the boundless sky. Somehow he must have been touched with the Promethean fire, which never burst from the altars of the church or the chambers of the convent. Something of the viking was in him—the old, indomitable pagan heart—and something of the glorious science which flamed and perished in the schools of Alexandria.

THE KRUPP GUNS.

Going southward along the lake shore from La Rabida we reach a pretty and imposing pavilion like an old feudal castle with turrets and signal towers, in which like sleeping tigers are the great Krupp guns. One of them is the largest ever manufactured, the 120-ton gun. Special cars were required to transport these engines of war to the Fair grounds. The exhibit costs $500,000.

It is a tremendous spectacle, as if you were looking at chained thunderbolts. We see here the unadulterated grandeur of war, its polished fierceness, its magnificent brutality, its splendid barbarism. Murder as a fine art is here exhibited, surely. This is the perfection of slaughter, the masque of death. What a glum satire on the so-called Christian civilizations these big-mouthed cannon are. The savagery of the race has reached its highest mark. Let us hope that these guns will some time be stranded on the shores of a true civilization and be looked upon as relics of a far-off time. Brilliant and beautiful as these things look, awing one with the display of man's enormous physical power so that Jehovah and Jove sink almost into insignificance, yet they point backward and not forward. Religion may bless them, but science will some day put them on the retired list. Take a good look at the monsters. They may kill the gods but not man.

THE SHOE AND LEATHER BUILDING.

This is a cheerful resort after the colossal gloom of the Krupp guns. In the words of an old chestnut here is something for man's "understanding," every kind of footwear from the Cinderella slipper to the seven-leagued boots. Here is a big shoe made especially, I suppose, for some Chicagoan. You know when you meet a lady of the Windy City you must be careful and not inquire, "Are you long on these grounds?"

Russia and France have especially fine exhibits in this building, and the manufacturers of the United States have given a most attractive and fashionable display. One would scarcely think so much ingenuity could be expended upon foot-wear. We might say that shoe-making has become an art. Leather seems to be almost as beautiful as silk as it hangs before you in the shining cases.

THE BACK YARD.

From the Shoe and Leather Building we are in what is called "the Back Yard" of the Exposition. We bid farewell to the wonderful grandeur of the white buildings. However, we must keep our eyes open, for curiosities will still throng upon our view; but with rather a motley presentment. We can imagine ourselves in a kind of country show as we wander along. From this time on we can take our ease. There are no more heights to climb. We have been to the top of Olympus; we have looked upon that which awes and thrills with its immensity. Now we can travel with a home feeling, with a restfulness of soul. We are in the "back yard," but everybody who has visited a farm knows that a back yard is just as charming as the front yard, even if it is not quite so gorgeous.

Chicago, Ill.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The Bible in Our Public Schools.

I have found through my experience with the Liberal public, that differences in opinion concerning the reading of the Bible in our common public schools are by no means very scarce. A great deal has been said upon both sides, and the apparent earnestness with which the opposing sides adhere to their opinions entitles them to the respect and consideration of all thinking people. Many people outside the pale of church influences together with those of pronounced Freethought ideas are unanimously agreed upon the impropriety of giving "religious instruction," as such, within the four walls of the little red schoolhouse, but it is evident that all are not thoroughly agreed as to whether the Bible should or should not be prohibited altogether from these institutions of learning. It is not very strange that differences of opinion, even upon such a question as this, should exist among Freethinkers, or indeed upon any subject, for it is impossible for all to think alike, and these differences may be said to have arisen from the very principles underlying all our philosophies, the right to the exercise and use of individual Freethought. Every phase and condition of thought commenced with the individual. At first it finds favor only among the few, and meets with the opposition of the many. As it becomes more widely known it receives an extended indorsement, and eventually meets with public favor. Thus it is that public opinion is molded, altered and transformed from generation to generation. The Freethinker, however, clearly recognizing that every individual owes a duty to society, by stimulating and encouraging individual free thought has endeavored to faithfully discharge this duty and conscientiously followed the path whereon the truth should lead him as he sees it for himself. Then is it strange that differences of opinion should exist among them, when all cannot think alike, surrounded by conditions different both in character and nature, and still adhering to that right inherent to all mankind—the right of individual free thought?

Having clearly shown that differences of opinion may arise and the probable cause of their existence, there is no need for surprise that Freethinkers should disagree upon any given subject; and in this respect sufficient reasons may be found for the difficulty experienced in the attempts at organization, many of them preferring to work individually for the advancement of their opinions rather than take an active part in organized effort. There is no doubt that a large majority of Freethinkers, and indeed many who are not professedly such, are opposed to the reading of the Bible in our public schools, but the more conservative element in our ranks are inclined to a toleration in that direction. The latter class are inclined to favor the reading of the Bible in the schools, but without any comment upon the passages read being made by the teacher. The idea entertained by them is, that it is necessary for an individual to have a thorough knowledge of the Bible before he can either conscientiously believe it or reject it. A great deal may be said in favor of this proposition, for, in very truth, a person should possess a thorough knowledge of all the Bible teaches before he can honestly believe it, and the same rule applies also to the unbeliever. Without this knowledge, the one accepts and the other rejects that which they have never examined, so that both are extremely culpable, and, I might say, unworthy of credit. If neither possess a thorough knowledge of the subject, then neither can their belief, or unbelief, in any sense be justified. A person cannot honestly affirm that of which he has no knowledge, nor can he for the same reasons deny or honestly reject. Seeing, then, that a knowledge of the Bible is necessary to justify either course, it is claimed by some that no injury would arise from a careful reading of the Bible literature in our public schools.

The question arises here, what is meant by a careful reading? If it means to select such parts only as are considered fit for a child to read, and to eliminate from the lessons altogether those of an opposite character, then the "careful reading" becomes too careful, and would have a decided tendency toward evil, for even under such a system the former objection would not be met, and the children be furnished with but a very incomplete knowledge of the subject, and we find ourselves in precisely the same position as under our first objection. An incomplete knowledge of the Bible would, in my judgment, be a far greater source of injury than a state of comparative ignorance regarding it. When a person is found ignorant of the Bible's teachings, no extended or influential ideas can be expressed concerning it. But in those cases where, by a "careful reading," only a partial knowledge is obtained, then erroneous ideas regarding the character and teachings of the Bible are not only held, but promulgated accordingly. Stronger objections, therefore, could logically be offered against a "careful reading," if the ideas I have given be accepted, than any that could be advanced against a thorough and total prohibition of the Bible from our public schools.

In the several states, different conditions exist with regard to the use of the Bible in our schools. We have but one state—Washington—which, by the constitutional law as interpreted by the state attorney, forbids the reading of the Bible, entirely, within the schools under the jurisdiction of that state. In other states the question is left to the discretion of the school commissioners, and in others the same powers are conferred upon the teacher.

In both of the latter cases, grave objections are to be found, for they give rise to possibilities of too dangerous a character for the safety of our secular institutions. When a majority of the commissioners favor some particular phase of Christian teachings, or may belong to one particular church, great care is always taken by that body to engage only such teachers as shall belong to the same sect, and they are authorized only to read such passages as may coincide with their own views. Instances are on record where teachers have been summarily dismissed, while others have been compelled to resign their positions, because they could not, or when they have been honest in the matter, would not, conform to all the requirements demanded of them by those in authority over them.

In the first case the teacher may be orthodox, and yet refuse to instruct the children in a manner contrary to his or her own views, then through the pernicious influence of sectarian bigotry and intolerance, the teacher is requested to resign, and another one is appointed who shall be more in harmony with the views held by a majority of the commissioners. In the latter case, the teacher may from conscientious scruples refuse to read the Bible at all, and their services are then quickly dispensed with; or else, taking the bull by the horns, they hand in their resignations before dismissal falls upon them. All this has a decided tendency toward a sectarian education, and should not be tolerated for one moment in our midst.

Enlightened jurisprudence revolts at such conditions, the feelings of the parent and the statesman are outraged by them, and they deserve only the contempt and opposition of all enlightened and intelligent people in our land. Better by far to abolish the Bible from our public schools altogether than that our children should be raised under the influence of sectarianism. We object to discretionary powers being conferred upon the teachers, for the majority of our teachers in every state belong to some orthodox Christian sect, and every opportunity would be taken, every advantage seized, by individual teachers, to instill into the youthful minds under their care the private and particular opinions entertained by the teacher upon the subject, and a tendency toward sectarianism would still exist. Parents would then be brought into conflict with the teacher, and the innocent children would be the victims of both. We must oppose anything that approaches toward a sectarian education, for sectarianism has been at the root of every evil. The countless millions slain upon the field of battle are the direct results of its influence upon mankind. It has forged the chains that bound the martyr to the stake, it has retarded the progress of the race, and deluged the world with human blood. It has ever stood a stumbling-block to science, a bar to social progress, and is a deadly pool, generating only the miasma of bigotry, selfishness, and superstition.

Listen to the general voice of history, witness the Waldenses and Albigenes on the continent of Europe, the Covenanters in Scotland, the Protestant persecutions in England, the Bartholomew massacre and the horrible butcheries performed in the name of Roman Catholicism, the Puritan persecutions in America; in fact, the world has been made one vast field of carnage wherever the blighting touch of sectarianism has been felt. Scarce any country has been free from it, and I doubt much if any one country is entirely so even to day. The recent trials for heresy by an orthodox church in our land are but exhibitions of the strife and discord which find their origin in sectarianism. Thus it engenders religious rancor and hatred; it has set man against man; it has destroyed the peace of the family circle; it has degraded woman, and terrorized little children; it has held in iron bonds the march of civilization; it has subdued the intellect and exalted ignorance. In short, just in proportion as it has been the purpose of wise men to retrench the evils of life by a system of philosophy, so has it ever been the employment of fools to multiply them by the influences of sectarianism.

Ye mother, with thy prattling babe upon thy knee, look into its laughing eyes sparkling with delight, its rosy cheeks dimpled with smiles, watch well thy charge, guard it and keep it safe from the dangerous foe that lurks behind the garb of sectarianism.

I have clearly shown the dangers that lie in a sectarian education. I have also shown how and whence these sectarian influences may arise. We must now do all in our power to prevent such influences from obtaining the control of our common public schools.

We must now fall back upon the two first methods mentioned here, as to how the Bible should be read, if read at all, in our schools. Either the Bible must be read in its entirety, or certain parts must be avoided so as not to corrupt the minds of our young. If the Bible is to be read as a whole, is there a parent or teacher who could read aloud certain passages to be found in holy writ (or as the cynic has termed it, "holy rot"), without a blush of shame surmounting their cheeks? And would not their confusion be more apparent should they attempt in any manner to explain it? Could we allow with impunity the minds of our children to be tainted with a recital of the infamous conduct of Lot's daughters, the murders and debaucheries of David and Solomon, the brutal wars and massacres carried on in the name of God and under his supervision? I say no, a thousand times no; rather that such a book should rot away in our public libraries, and our children be kept in total ignorance of its existence, than that their minds should be brutalized with such grossly indelicate and indecent narratives. The Bible, then, could not be morally read as a whole in our public schools, so only one proposition remains: namely, should the Bible be read, carefully omitting such parts as may be regarded as indecent, selecting only those containing good moral precepts? This practice largely prevails to-day, and it is equivalent to a "careful reading" mentioned in the beginning. To omit any portion would be to impart only an imperfect knowledge and its attendant evils. Owing to an imperfect knowledge of the book, how frequently will an orthodox believer emphatically deny the existence of certain passages or texts quoted before them? We know at once that such an individual does not know what really is to be found in the Bible, and is the direct result of sectarian influences, or a "careful reading" while young of the Bible literature. Those who know their Bible least, believe it most, while those who are better acquainted with its nature and tendencies believe it less, and some believe not in it at all. The great mass of society to-day know but very little concerning the Bible and its character, which accounts for such a wide belief in it among them. Society goes to hear some popular preacher, his opinions concerning it become their opinions, his thoughts become their thoughts, his prejudices become their prejudices. They are never taught to think for themselves, and should one be bold enough to break the chains that bind him, the passions of his fellows find vent, the sectarian serpent lashes its tail with frenzied rage, and with venomous bite seeks to poison the minds of its votaries against him. The only conditions by which the Bible could be read at all in our public schools are those with which I have dealt, and as none of them can with safety to our similar institutions be allowed to prevail, the only conclusion to which we are forced is, that it should not be read at all. Ample time may be found when our children are approaching maturity, to study its literature closely and well and make themselves thoroughly acquainted with its character. They will understand it better and need depend upon no one to interpret its text and meaning. But where our children in their youth and innocence are concerned, contaminate not their minds with such vile stuff. We say then: "Hands off," keep our public schools free from such corrupting influences. Put an end to these sectarian disputes over our school system by removing all such possibilities. Try and arouse the people to their duty, awaken their interests in the welfare of humanity, and instead of religious discord, peace and goodwill toward mankind will reign.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.
345 W. Randolph st., Chicago, Ill.

A Book Christians Should Read.

From the Investigator.

"The Resurrection of Jesus: An Agnostic's View." By Don Allen. This author does not believe in the resurrection of Jesus, and regards the story of his second appearance as almost too absurd to deserve serious criticism. He, however, does review the so-called evidence in favor of this event, and finds that it is insufficient to establish the event as a historical fact. We do not believe that a Christian can read this book through and believe that Jesus rose from the dead. Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place, New York; 160 pages—cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

The Cause in Oregon.

ORE., May 2, 1893.

KATIE KEHM SMITH, Oregon City, Dear Sister: Yours received. It is a source of no small regret to me that I cannot afford to join the Oregon State Secular Union, but my infidelity has been a damage to me. One must live in this world, and as nineteen out of twenty who think as I do are without the courage of their convictions, why should I not be so also? Infidels will not combine, they will not fight, and that is the end on't. Why should I spend the rest of my days on earth "kicking," and get the worst of it?

I am not much disposed to become a martyr myself, or to martyr my family. The cause is all right and has my sympathy and best wishes, but I am too old to longer stand in the breach for those who won't stand in it for themselves. . . . Nothing short of being shot at or having his house burnt will rouse up the average infidel. . . . Fraternally yours,

This is a sample of a small and—it pleases me to say—a very small per cent of the many letters received since the work of reorganizing the Oregon State Secular Union was commenced.

What our friend says seems at first glance to contain much truth.

The apparent indifference of Liberals is indeed remarkable, and yet I cannot say that I am surprised, at least so far as the indifference of Oregon Liberals is concerned.

Freethinkers, generally, are very practical people; they are for the most part willing to give financial aid if they think they see some return. In looking over my files of Freethought, I noticed that Liberals all over the state responded very promptly, and unhesitatingly gave their financial support, when the first effort was made to organize. Everyone seemed to realize that "in union there is strength;" they saw the necessity of repealing all laws which gave precedence to Christianity; they knew that chaplains in our legislature should be abolished; they saw the injustice of being compelled to support penitentiary chaplains to continue the same teachings which had been the support of the criminal through his wicked career; they looked forward to the taxation of church property, and they thought the Union would be effective in rooting out these evils.

Four years have passed away since then; conventions have been held; hundreds of letters have been written; petitions have been sent to the legislature; hundreds of dollars contributed have been spent, and now those who so willingly supported the Union at first are withholding their assistance.

Many letters have reached us filled with "sympathy" for the cause and the sincerest wishes for its success, but the necessary membership fee is not forthcoming.

One correspondent writes: "I have given money time again and again, and yet I can see no good—that is, permanent good—that the state organization has accomplished." There are few, however, who have watched the development of Liberalism in this state who will agree with this sentiment, for the agitation of thought which the state organization has caused has certainly resulted in permanent good. If the writer had said nothing had been done in the way of repealing any law granting special privileges to the Christians, he would have been right.

The efforts of our Union in this respect have not been marked with success; our petitions have failed to command attention and respect. Again, of all the Secular Unions organized under the old organization, few, if any, are in existence now.

In my humble opinion, all these shortcomings can easily be accounted for. The parent organization was not incorporated; it had no such thing as a legal existence; the efforts made to build it up were not sufficiently systematic; the work was spasmodic—it came in jerks.

A few weeks, or perhaps three months, before holding a convention, everybody was appealed to to get right in and collect all the money they could, so that good speakers and good music could be obtained, and a splendid show made at the convention. And this was done; the conventions were always a grand success; for three days enthusiasm was created; speakers drained the treasury and gave their eloquence in return; pledges for future support were made, many of them only to be broken; people had a good time, became better acquainted with one another, and those from the country had an opportunity of enjoying the sights of the city. But then? The convention adjourned; the enthusiasm waned; the support for the organization was practically withdrawn, and only now and then, when one of our lecturers came among us, was any interest shown. These lecturers awakened enough enthusiasm to organize a few Secular Unions, which would soon become purely social affairs, and finally, after having held perhaps a score of meetings, would die, and the general verdict would be, "Freethinkers can't organize."

Now, as evidence that they can organize, when the work is properly undertaken, I want to call your attention to the first Secular Union organized under the charter granted by the Oregon State Secular Union (incorporated), which auxiliary is known as the First Secular Church of Portland.

This was organized by the writer on Thomas Paine's birthday—Jan. 29, 1893—and since that time I have given regular lectures each Sunday evening. I undertook this work because I thoroughly believed that just as soon as the Liberals adopted the methods of the church and had one regular lecturer in a city, town, or district, who would speak once or twice every Sunday and be the leading spirit in organizing Sunday-schools and arranging socials, picnics, dances, excursions, debating clubs, etc., then, and not till then, would Freethinkers be able to build up organizations which must command the attention and respect of our legislative bodies and be a power in the land.

The large, intelligent audience assembled at each meeting; the enthusiasm manifested; the rapidly increasing membership; the fact that the new organization is not in debt and that it contemplates erecting a church—a hall of its own—in the not far distant future is proof of its permanency.

Spiritualists, Materialists, and Agnostics—people of all sorts of "isms"—have united on the Nine Demands of Liberalism, and it is because, like the church, a regular lecturer holds regular meetings at regular times and places—not meetings where any crank may get up and talk as long as he pleases and tire everybody, but simply a recitation or two, music, and a Freethought or scientific lecture.

The audience are restricted to writing their questions on a slip of paper and placing the same in the contribution-boxes, when the speaker answers them. No discussions are held or allowed.

This is the form of blank used for membership:

MEMBERSHIP BLANK.

FIRST SECULAR CHURCH OF PORTLAND, ORE.

Organized Jan. 29, 1893, under charter granted by the Oregon State Secular Union.

E. Alisky, president. Paul J. A Semler, secretary.
Charles Hagner, treas. Katie Kehm-Smith, lecturer.

OBJECTS:

First: The repeal of all laws that exempt church property from taxation; that force observance of Sunday as the Sabbath; that appropriate public funds for sectarian institutions; that tolerate any religious exercises, reading, display, or prayer in any school, body, or institution maintained wholly or in part at public expense; and generally to accomplish the total separation of church and state and effect the complete Secularization of government—local, state, and national.

Second: To prescribe, adopt, publish, sell, and distribute books, pamphlets, leaflets, and papers advocating its objects and principles, and the maintenance of a free reading-room and library; also to establish a Secular Sunday-school.

Third: To protect by every lawful means any member whose equal religious or civil rights are infringed.

Having read the foregoing objects I hereby desire to become a member of the First Secular Church of Portland, Ore., and do all in my power to advance and further said objects, and agree to pay the sum of $..... dues on the first of each month.

There are many names on the old membership book to whom I have not sent blanks. The owners of them may be dead; they may have moved away; they may have left the ranks. So I ask each one of you to whom I have not written to send for blanks and by-laws and learn what is contemplated by the Union as now organized. KATIE KEHM-SMITH.

Sec. Oregon State Secular Union.

Oregon City, Ore., May 17, 1893.

Is There Cause for Alarm?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Dear Sir: Not long ago a well-educated minister made the remark that the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday was the greatest triumph religion and the church could have and that we were fast verging toward a Christian nation. But now the gates are open, church people are—or pretend to be—stirred from center to circumference, claiming that sin and iniquity have been let loose, and that all who dare to differ with them in opinion are Atheists.

Now, having no church proclivities or affinities, I am classed with that number. But, while I am not anxious to justify myself, I can truly say with Emerson, "Oh, my brother, God exists!" And I think it was Thoreau who said that Atheism might be comparatively popular with God.

That there is a vague unrest permeating society is true, and many predict a revolution, and all believe that a crisis of some kind is at hand. But is there ultimate danger? I think not; for the law of compensation is, it is a plus quantity, and can no more be thwarted or avoided than can the stars abandon their courses. And while the outcome of events may not be apparent to us, we know that the eternal balance is always poised, and that good will fructify and evil reap its own reward. And disguise it how we will, it is ignorance that makes us stumble and fall, for ignorance is of the night; it generates fear and cruelty. And yet, while fear is a bird of ill omen, and there is always rottenness wherever hovers its dark wing, much of our cruelty comes from thoughtlessness. We are like the Mexican women, who weave themselves a chaplet of fireflies, whose brilliancy rivals the diamond, but they do not stop to think that for every point of light in their gaudy diadem a life goes out.

Now, let us lay aside cowardice—the child of fear—and look things squarely in the face. Revolutions come, and must come; but who dare say they are an unmixed evil? They are cruel, but necessary. Is not mankind the better to-day for the French Revolution? Such things are always contrary to established law at the outset, and success alone can justify them in the eyes of society; and unless all history is at fault, revolution has been one of the most potent means in the elevation of the masses, for revolution means evolution. True, they are not always bloody, but the principle of revolt is the same. It is a desire for something we have not; a protest against the effete. It makes no difference whether it is political or religious. The Reformation, as an example, will suffice—peaceful in its inception, bloody in its course, but glorious in its outcome. But the spirit of persecution was as rife in the Reformers as in those it tried to reform, and yet this upheaval benefited mankind. Hence we exclaim, Verily there is a hand that guides.

Leaders of men in every age and clime have grasped for power, and the priesthood is no exception. Always and everywhere, when the sect was weak in numbers, it pleaded for toleration and freedom, but the moment it gained strength, its arrogance appeared. The same is true in all departments of life; and with shame be it confessed, that science has often been as dogmatic as religion. It should seem that there is some specific organic truth underlying all thought, which is trying to work itself out in belief, and the so-called Christian religion, with its multiplied creeds and sectional strife, is no exception. And why should it be? It is but one of the religions of the world; and religion itself is but one of many factors, the product of all of which is the sum of civilization.

Does this religion contain any new principle? Whoever they were, were not the writers of the Old Testament compilers and copyists of former thought, the origin of whose copies is shrouded in the morning mist of time? All honor to the noble Nazarene—but did he formulate a new philosophy, or teach anything the world has not before known? Is it not a fact, that all his precepts had been uttered by lips that had been dust ages before he was born, and often in nearly the same words? Can anyone successfully deny that modern orthodoxy is an accretion, a concrete, a precipitate of old formulas, having their root in ancestor- and nature-worship practiced long centuries before the historic Indra, with his lightning lances, voiced his wrath in storms, or Serosh drew his protecting sword at evening? Justinus in his "Apologies for the Christians" claimed that, if men would only consider, they would find plain proofs that Christianity was then existing in heathen communities, and had been in the world long before the time of Christ. St. Augustine claimed that what had become known as Christianity was known to the ancients, and had not been wanting from the beginning of the human race. It would be easy to verify their statements, but enough—humanity has traveled a long and weary road, but it is and always has been on the upward grade, utilizing its mistakes as rounds in the ladder of ascent; but there is yet room for vast improvement. In some respects our social condition is as vile as the life of Messalina. In our large cities vice is a festering sore; and plutocracy and beggary—luxury and poverty—death and revelry confront each other. Now, while it is admitted that, as we are at present environed, evil cannot be wholly eliminated, it can and should be diminished, and an approach to justice made. And to do this many of our legal enactments need amendment or repeal, not the least among which are our Sunday laws. Sunday—do men forget that when Constantine ordained it as a day of rest he did it as pontifex maximus and spoke of it only as the Venerable Day of the Sun, and that his rescript commanding its observance makes no allusion to its sanctity as a Christian institution? No reference was made to the law of Moses or a risen Christ, and the form of prayer sent by him to his legions to be recited on that day could have been repeated with the same fervor and unction by a worshiper of Zeus, Mithra, Apollo, or Serapis as by a Christian, for "it was the aim of Constantine to make theology a branch of politics," while "it was the aim of every bishop in the empire to make politics a branch of theology." But, whatever his aim, no one has the right to say what I shall or shall not do on any day, so long as I do not trespass on my neighbor, for each owes the other fealty; and as for the infinit, it may well be asked how an unconditioned being can be injured. Civil liberty without entire religious freedom is a travesty, and spiritual coercion is the worst form of slavery, which can never be enforced in this country unless the sun of civilization goes a long way back on the dial; and the moment there is an appeal made to the secular power it heralds the weakness of the church, whose only throne should be the heart and its kingdom—the brotherhood of man. It is an old saw that the best way to repeal an unjust law is to enforce it; but I do not think our Christian friends had that motto in view in their late religious persecutions in the states of New York, New Jersey, Illinois, Michigan, and Tennessee. They also succeeded for a time in closing the gates of the World's Fair to the laboring man on the only day available to him. Now it remains for them to have some meek, inglorious Blair to force through Congress a universal Sunday law and put God in the Constitution to launch us on the full tide of intolerance, but whose reflex wave would undermine the church, engulf their altars, and give us a larger religious liberty. These may be ungracious words, but we are not "gathering nosegays just now."

Our modern Zion, with its storied cathedrals and tall minarets, its mystical, dubious, and cruel creeds and hoarded wealth, stands reflecting some of the light of civilization—but it is a glacial glare; it is not in touch with the multitude like the Master it essays to serve. It has passed the meridian of its power and usefulness, and its followers (happy sign) are honeycombed with unbelief, and judging from the threnody of some of its leaders, it is in the throes of dissolution. Every trial for heresy turns on the light and probes its follies; while in our country, the three-to-one unchurched millions are asking for works, not creeds; brotherhood, not rituals.

Does this portend the death of religion? By no means; changelessness is an attribute of death, not life; and to doubt and question is the first step in philosophy. What is this never-satisfied longing of the soul for universal justice, but a fine innuendo of its enormous claim on the future, in the great onward sweep of cosmic evolution? Such religion is too deeply seated in the soul to be uprooted by any human violence on this storm-swept sea of life, for it is as much a part of our nature as is mathematics or any other power or faculty we have. It rests in depths unfathomable; and all the schism, this discarding of old ideas and idolatry of the past, is an escape, a safety-valve, not an alarm. This tide of human progress, though beset by many an eddy, is ever at the flood, and cannot be stayed or turned back.

But I hear my critic say, 'You have arrived at a fine Pyrrhonism. If we must improve, what boots it whether we do well or ill?' Ah! my friend, you forget that to strive is a law of our nature, and can not be abrogated; and besides, while we cannot square the circle, we can approximate it. We can not swim the Atlantic, but we can cross it by human appliances. We cannot clasp the earth in our arms, but we can circumnavigate it; and because we can not "hitch our wagon to a star" and control the universe does not excuse us from the duties of life we can perform.

It is no use finding fault with environment, we are and must accept the circumstances. Nature, so to speak, set bounds to everything but herself. We are under the jurisdiction of law, morally as well as physically, with which it is useless to contend. "He who resists the moral law," says Emerson, "fights with an enemy not subject to causality."

That very law which molds a tear,
And bids it trickle from its source,
That law preserves the earth a sphere,
And guides the planets in their course.

We are circumscribed in all things—knowledge, will, belief, and action. The scale of nature is infinit; and when we attempt to solve her mysteries, we are confronted by the fact that absolute knowledge is impossible; and yet, of relative information we may rear a vast structure. This relative power being delegated to man, it behooves us to make every defile of life a Thermopylae, every plain a Marathon, every battle with error a "wingless victory." So shall our lives be as sweet as the honey of Hymettus and pure and stainless as her marble.

A. J. STACKPOLE.

Freethought Funeral Sentiments.

At the burial of the worthy old Freethinker Samos Parsons, there was read among other pieces the following poetry, which had been selected for the occasion by the deceased:

When o'er my cold and lifeless clay
The parting words of love are said,
And friends and kindred meet to pay
Their last fond tribute to the dead,
Let no stern priest with solemn drone
A funeral liturgy intone,
Whose creed is foreign to my own.

Let not a word be whispered there
In pity for my unbelief;
Of sorrow that I could not share
The views that give their souls relief.
My faith to me is no less dear—
No less convincing and sincere
Than theirs, so rigid and austere.

Let no stale words of church-born song
Float out upon the silent air,
To prove by implication wrong
The soul of him then lying there.
Why should such words be glibly sung
O'er one whose lively, tuneful tongue
Such empty phrases never rung?

But rather, let the faithful few
Whose hearts are knit so close to mine
That they with time the dearer grew,
Assemble at the day's decline,
And while the golden sunbeams fall
In floods of light upon my pall,
Let them in softened tones recall—

Some tender memory of the dead,
Some virtuous act, some words of power,
Which I, perchance, have done or said;
By loved ones treasured to that hour;
Recount the deeds which I admired,
The motif which my soul inspired,
The hope by which my heart was fired.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

The Swedish Freethinkers will hold a summer congress.

Das Correspondenzblatt, the organ of the German Freethought Federation, will in the future be published under the name Der Freidenker.

Fritänkaren and Correspondenzblatt are the first foreign journals to announce the International Freethought Congress at Chicago, on October 3d.

Two new Freethought societies have been formed in Sweden: one founded by Mr. Ljungdahl at Rättrineholm, the other at Halmar by Mr. Weüdel.

During the past year the Berlin Freethought society's school for children has been attended by 500 pupils, an increase of 200 over the preceding year.

There are eighteen cities in Germany that can boast of a crematory. Eleven hundred and thirty-six cremations have taken place; of these, 122 in Gotha during the year 1892.

The Freethinkers at Luik, Belgium, have now a daily paper of their own. L'Aurore is its name, and we are confident that ere long "Daybreak" will appear in the province Luik. Success to our Belgian confrères.

The Freethought society at Eskilstuna has founded a free reading-room for workingmen. Besides a good library, a dozen different newspapers of the Liberal stamp are at the service of the visitors. We consider this a good plan, which American Freethinkers might well follow.

The German Freethinkers of Rheinland and Westfalen held their annual congress at Káln. There were present representatives of six societies, each numbering 50 to 100 members. In the evening Mr. Waldeck Manasse, Berlin, delivered to an audience of 900 persons a lecture on "Dangerous Truths."

The annual congress of the German Freethought Federation was held at Karlsruhe. During the past year seven societies joined the Federation, among these the Berlin society, with a membership of 400. When the July number of Der Freidenker reaches us we will give a detailed account of the congress.

H. H. the pope has conferred the Order of the Golden Rose upon the queen of Belgium. This order is given as a reward for the highest degree of female virtue. Ex-queen Isabella, of Spain, whose virtue is less than nothing, can pride herself on the same favor from Pius X., the originator of papal infallibility.

The Sunday-school attached to the Stockholm Freethought Society has closed for the summer. Fifty-seven children attended regularly, and were instructed in natural philosophy, practical morality, comparative mythology, and singing. The superintendent during the last term was the well-known Freethinker, Mr. Johan Andrin.

The minister of education has introduced in the Hungarian House of Commons a bill providing for liberty of conscience. The main points are the following: Any religious belief may be exercised that does not conflict with public morals; no one can be compelled to perform religious acts; no one can be debarred from a public office on account of his religious belief.

News comes to us from Halle and Rummelsburg, Germany, that a Freethinker in each place has been sentenced to a fine for not giving their children to religious institutions. There is union of church and state in Germany. Americans, join the Freethought Federation of America, and let us assert our political power, that we too shall not be treated in the same manner.

Jacob Moleschott, a prominent scientist and advocate of scientific Materialism, died suddenly in Rome, May 20th. He was born Aug. 9, 1832, at Herzogenbush, Holland, studied at the university at Heidelberg, where he later occupied a chair. His Freethought views offended the orthodox Germans and he had to resign. He then moved to Zurich, Turin, and was since 1878 professor at the academy at Rome.

April 17, 1892, the French Freethought Federation consisted of 196 societies besides 237 individual members. April 20, 1893, it had increased to 220 societies besides 310 individual members. During the past year the receipts were 3,000 francs; the expenses, 2,909 francs. The penny fund (Dernier de la Libre-Pensée) during the year amounted to 301 francs. The subscription to the "Freethinker's Home" amounted to 206 francs collected during the last three months. At the congress E. Pasquier received the largest number of votes—77.

A Swedish Freethinker, Jacob Hauson, of Skönmon, who died February 25th, in his testament willed 600 crowns to Mr. Lennstrand. Of these, 200 crowns were to be divided between two of Mr. Lennstrand's best helpers, 100 crowns were for the spreading of Freethought, while the final 300 crowns were at the disposal of Mr. Lennstrand. Unfortunately, the will was not signed by any witnesses, hence is of no good in court; a fact of which a Christian relative of the deceased has taken advantage, and has contested the will. Mr. Lennstrand will not go to law. American Freethinkers should take care that their wills will not be dealt with in the same manner, hence it is best to give while we live.

We regret to have to inform the American Freethinkers that Victor E. Lennstrand will not be heard at the coming Congress. In a letter of June 9th, Mr. Lennstrand informs us that his lecture trip to the United States will have to be postponed till next year. The Swedish Freethinkers are to undertake a grand demonstration at the occasion of the four-hundredth celebration of the introduction of the Lutheran state church in Sweden. It is proposed, and the status of Freethought in Sweden makes it possible, to gather one hundred thousand signers to protest against the state church. The celebration as well as the Freethought demonstration will be held at Upsala, and our friend has already given public notice of his wish to debate with any bishop or minor sky-pilot that may be foolish enough to do so.

We are sorry Mr. Lennstrand cannot come, but at the same time it is evident that his presence is needed in Sweden.

Not for the Pews to Read.

From the Sunday Gazetteer.

"Crimes of Preachers" is from THE TRUTH SEEKER, being statistics of an unsavory character transcribed out of the original newspapers and with previous translations diligently compared and revised. Its 125 pages are mostly taken up with a condensed statement of names, places, dates, and character of the clerical "indiscretions" reported by the press for a number of years back. The inference to be drawn from these statistics is that the men of the cloth are as liable to go astray when they fall into temptation as other people. A careful perusal of this book might prove useful to this class by pointing out the direction in which their danger lies; but it would be advisable to keep it out of sight of the laity. The price is 25 cents.

Letters of Friends.

Filled With Indignation at Religion.

OREGON, ARK., June 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Our country here is a hot-bed of Christian fanaticism. We have several Protestant denominations and a new aggressive sect called Adventists. Send me "Sabbath Breaking," by Remsburg. I want to inform myself on the Sabbath question for their benefit, or rather for their discomfiture. I will try to keep myself informed from now on as well as my financial ability will allow. I do hate Christianity worse than the Christians hate their devil. I am a farmer and a laborer on my farm, hence have little time to spare. But the weather never gets too hot or cold nor am I ever too busy to tell my neighbors what I think of their God, their devil, and their effete and blighting religion.

I notice that you request the names of Freethinkers. On the other side you will find a list of names. I am, very sincerely,
Your brother in Liberalism,

W. B. BREECE.

An Unfulfilled Bible Prophecy.

STAPLES, MINN., June 9, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: You will find herein $5 for the renewal of my subscription, and one new subscriber, whose address is on slip inclosed. He is a new convert to Free-thought and has taken the full degree up to Wettstein Atheism, and will prove a stayer. I was bound to bring a new subscriber into the fold. I have the promise of another subscriber—one of the godless kind. Make evolution the basis of your argument and you will make a convert who has no use for a God.

What truth is there in the story regarding Volney's weeping over the ruins of Babylon? Also the fulfillment of the prophecy regarding the fall of Babylon—that it should never be inhabited again, not even an Arab should set up his tent on its ruins? Will you answer and oblige,
Yours truly,

D. C. JENKINS.

[We do not know what is meant by the story of Volney's weeping over the ruins of Babylon. In his book entitled "Meditations on the Ruins of Ancient Empires," more briefly called "Ruins," he contemplates lamenting the ruins of all the ancient nations and cities, and speculates on the causes of their fall. Perhaps this has been twisted into some Christian yarn or other. The scriptural prophecies (Jer. xxv, Isa. xiii) that Babylon should become "a perpetual desolation" in which no Arabian should pitch tent have not been fulfilled. They are emphatic examples of the falseness of biblical prediction. The traveler Layard in his book "Nineveh and Babylon" (pp. 417, 422, 427) describes the town of Hillah still existing on the site of Babylon, containing eight or nine thousand inhabitants. The Arab quarters, he says, "showed the activity of a hive of bees." In our issue of Oct. 11, 1890, we gave a full exposition of this and other connected prophecies. One can likewise be found in Greg's "Creed of Christendom."—ED. C. C.]

Rejected Communication.

PORTLAND, KAN., May 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR OF THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES: Without a fair representation of both sides of a question how can your readers judge which is the right or wrong side?

I would like to say a few words in reply to W. F. Hillman. He asserts that the Bible is of divine inspiration, and then to prove it uses Bible assertions. This is like the man proving that John was not a liar. John was not a liar because he (John) said he was not. This kind of evidence is not allowed in any court of justice. This the brother well knows.

He asserts that "civilization and all of its refining influences follow the prevalence of Bible knowledge." Does he forget the thousands who have been killed in the name of the Lord? Because that book mentions witches, its refining influence caused the death by torture and otherwise of hundreds of innocent, helpless women. Does he forget the conspicuous part the Bible and Bible Christians have taken in nearly all of the wars? Look at the late Rebellion—hundreds of preachers earnestly upholding slavery, and proving their views by direct assertions of scripture; again its refining influence is seen. I am sure there are more neighborhood quarrels over religion (the Bible) than of any other one kind; thus we again see the refining influence of the Bible. No one will deny that we as a people are advancing in knowledge and refinement, but many of the best minds of to-day claim that the Bible has been a drag, holding back to some extent all progress. In spite of the Bible men now claim that the earth is round.

He also claims much for the morals taught in the Bible. Does he forget that God used deceit, put a lying tongue in the mouth of all the prophets? That God rewarded certain women for lying? That Christ says we must hate our parents, our brothers, etc., in order to be Christians? The chosen men of God in those days will average much worse than the Infidels of to-day.

He thinks because the heroes of the Bible were pictured as imperfect that is proof of its divinity. Pshaw! The Bible hero was without sin, more perfect than common heroes.

He accuses all Infidels of being careless in Bible study, for by very little careful study they could all see where they were wrong. He says that nearly all scholars agree in the essentials. Yes, they almost to a man agree that the Bible (King James translation) is fallible. While anyone who takes the Bible just as it reads and uses the meaning of words the same as they would in any other book will have to admit that it contains hundreds of direct contradictions.

And any other book containing as much obscene matter would not be allowed to go through the mails. Thus how high are its morals? How refining its influences?

You will not publish this because there is too much proof in it. I would be much surprised to see this printed in a religious paper. They don't want both sides.

Yours for the truth, S. F. DAVIS.

THE REJECTION.

OAKLAND, CAL., June 8, 1893.

S. F. DAVIS, Portland, Kan., Dear Sir: Yours of May 15th replying to W. F. Hillman was duly received, for which we have no place in the Signs of the Times. The inspiration of the Bible is established too fully in our mind to permit of the publication of mere flings at some one's assertions concerning it.

Mr. Hillman's article was by no means exhaustive, nor did it present the best proofs in the clearest manner. There are both internal proofs and external.

When you can meet an argument that can overthrow the power of the one which has existed for eighteen centuries, or the power of the other which has changed the face of the world, as well as millions of hearts which have believed, then it will be time, perhaps, for you to offer an argument against the book of God. He who is for the truth certainly ought to be willing to discriminate between the Christianity of Christ and the perversion of Christianity by apostate churches.

Very truly yours,

EDITOR OF SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

The Kind of Laws the Preachers Want.

LEECHBURG, PA., May 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: You would oblige me very much if you would publish a few of the old Puritan Sunday Blue laws in your worthy paper. The "sky-pilots" of this town are trying to stop every Sunday newspaper, milk-wagon, and everything of that kind. One of the drones read what he called the "Blue laws" in his bombastic braggartism and said anyone could see them in Squire Kifer's office. I called in a week to see those old Blue laws at the squire's office. He said he had not those laws and he had never had or even seen them. I was at church one Sunday and the dear old anathema said he "longed for good old Sabbath laws of New England." If I had those old Blue laws I would show them to him and see if he would read them to his dupes.

F. W. TINKER.

[We append a few of the pleasant statutes.—ED. T. S.]

LAW OF CONNECTICUT.

No one shall be a freeman, or give a vote, unless he be converted, and a member in full communion of one of the Churches allowed in this Dominion.

No man shall hold any office, who is not sound in the faith, and faithful to this Dominion; and whoever gives a vote to such a person, shall pay a fine of £1; for a second offense he shall be disfranchised.

Each freeman shall swear by the blessed God to bear true allegiance to this Dominion, and that Jesus is the only King.

No Quaker or Dissenter from the established worship of this Dominion shall be allowed to give a vote for the election of Magistrates, or any officer.

No food or lodging shall be afforded to a Quaker, Adamite, or other Heretic.

If any person turns Quaker, he shall be banished and not suffered to return but upon pain of death.

No Priest shall abide in the Dominion; he shall be banished, and suffer death on his return. Priests may be seized by anyone without a warrant.

No one shall run on the Sabbath day, or walk in the garden or elsewhere, except reverently to and from meeting.

No one shall travel, cook victuals, make beds, sweep house, cut hair, or shave, on the Sabbath day.

The Sabbath shall begin at sunset on Saturday.

Every ratable person who refuses to pay his proportion to the support of the Minister of the town or parish, shall be fined by the Court £2, and £4 every quarter, until he or she pay the rate to the Minister.

CONNECTICUT CODE, 1733.

Non-attendance on public worship, to be punished by a fine of three shillings.

NEW HAVEN CODE, 1655.

Whosoever shall profane the Lord's day or any part of it, either by sinful, servile work, or by unlawful sport, recreation, or otherwise, whether willfully or in a careless neglect, shall be duly punished by fine, imprisonment, or corporally, according to the nature and measure of the sin and offense. But if the court upon examination, by clear and satisfying evidence, find that the sin was proudly, presumptuously, and with a high hand, committed against the known command and authority of the blessed God, such a person therein despising and reproaching the Lord, SHALL BE PUT TO DEATH, that all others may fear and shun such provoking, rebellious courses (Numb. 15: from 30 to 36 verse).

MASSACHUSETTS CODE, 1634-35.

For ye honor of ye aeternall God, whome only we worpp and serve [it is ordered that] no pson within this jurisdiction, whether Xtian or pagan, shall wittingly and willingly psume to blaspheme his holy name either by wilfull or obstinate denying ye true God, or reproach ye holy religion of God, as if it were but a politticke devise to keepe ignorant men in awe, . . . or deny his creation or goummt of ye world, or shall curse God, or shall vtter any other eminent kind of blasphemy, of ye like nature and degree; if any pson or psons wtsoever within our jurisdiction shall breake this lawe they shall be putt to death.

MASSACHUSETTS CODE, 1646.

That wheresoever the ministry of the Word is established, according to the order of the gospel, throughout this jurisdiction, every person shall duly resort and attend thereunto, respectively, upon the Lord's days and upon such public fast days and days of thanksgiving as are to be generally held by the appointment of authority. And if any person within this jurisdiction shall, without just and necessary cause, withdraw himself from hearing the public ministry of the Word, after due means of conviction used, he shall forfeit for his absence from every such public meeting five shillings.

PLYMOUTH COLONY CODE, 1651.

It is enacted by the court that whatsoever person or persons shall neglect the frequenting the public worship of God that is according to God, in the places where they live, or do assemble themselves upon any pretense whatsoever, contrary to God and the allowance of the government, tending to the subversion of religion and churches, or palpable profanation of God's holy ordinances, being duly convicted, viz., everyone that is master or dame of a family, or any other person at their own disposing, to pay ten shillings for every such default.

VIRGINIA CODE, 1623.

Whosoever shall absent himself from divine service any Sunday without an allowed excuse, shall forfeit a pound of tobacco; and he that absents himself for a month shall forfeit fifty pounds of tobacco.

Witchcraft.

ALLIANCE, O., May 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I take the liberty to mail you to-day a copy of the Alliance Critic, on first page of which you will find a synopsis of the trial of a Miss Loop before the church authorities of the Methodist Episcopal church at Salem, O., fourteen miles east of Alliance. This defendant was a member of Hart's church three miles south of Salem. She accused her brother-in-law, one Jacob Culp, of sorcery and witchcraft, in this that said Culp had by sorcery and communications with the evil one caused the death of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Loop; had caused the illness and death of several domestic animals; caused one cow to give bloody milk, etc. It is true Mrs. Loop sickened and died in a natural way, so did several animals owned by different members of the family. Thereupon one Hoff, a pow-wow doctor, came into the neighborhood, who was consulted by the defendant about the mysteries of these sicknesses and deaths. The doctor convinced her that Mr. Culp was a wizard and caused all these evils, and that they must avoid him—not speak to him for six months, not allow him to look in their eyes or breathe on them—that he, Culp, must be removed and would die in six months. This Dr. Hoff resides at Alliance, No. 818 North Park avenue. Hoff's first name is Andrew. His wife's name is Sara. The troubles, delusions, and slanders arose last fall, so that the Salem witchcraft of Ohio is two hundred years after the Salem witchcraft of Salem, Mass. The 1692-'3 witchcraft punished the witches and saved the believers in sorcery; that of 1892-'3 punished the believer in the delusion and saved the wizard. The parties in the squabble are members of Hart's Methodist Episcopal church, but the trial was moved to Salem. Geo. B. Smith, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Alliance, presided as judge at the trial of Miss Loop. The parties and church officials concerned in the trial are well known here and at Salem. The parties are farmers and the deluded are rather ignorant. This man Hoff is really the cause of the trouble. W. L. PARTHE.

The trial of the witchcraft case was continued Tuesday afternoon. The witness following Mrs. Cordelia Dunlap was Mrs. Emma Hendricks. Having been sworn she testified as follows:

A. Miss Sadie Loop came to our house and claimed that Culp was a wizard.

Q. Did she say after that statement why she believed it?

A. No, she did not. She said something about a man lying. I can't remember all she said. Miss Loop came to me and claimed that Norman Bleam had a cow that was bewitched and that they were unable to churn the milk, it being bad, although tasting good.

Q. Was this the result of Culp's machinations?

A. Yes, it was, and she also claimed that Howard Hughes had a horse that was under the influence of witchcraft and would die.

Q. Was anything said concerning the death of persons?

A. No, she did not say anything to me along this line.

When cross-examined by the counsel for the defense, the witness became confused as to certain things.

Q. Were you impressed that Sadie Loop was seeking to injure Culp?

A. It seemed to me that such was the case.

Q. Do you know of anything that happened before this that would cause Miss Loop to seek to injure Culp?

A. No, I do not.

Q. In what Miss Loop said, did you understand that he was the source of the sorcery or Dr. Hoff?

A. I think she referred to him.

Q. Did Miss Loop tell these things about Culp as though she believed they were true?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Did she give any reason why she believed thus?

A. No, except that she mentioned Hoff.

Q. Did you know that Hoff had been teaching Miss Loop this doctrine of witchcraft?

A. I did not.

Q. Explain what you mean by saying that you knew of no reason why Miss Loop should try to injure Culp and why you now say that trouble previously existed in the families.

A. There has only been trouble between these families since this witchcraft business came out.

The witness was then excused and the next, Miss Lizzie Badger, was sworn and her testimony coincided with the former witness. A few more points were brought out in her statements.

State what, if anything, you heard about Culp being a wizard and practicing sorcery.

A. I went to the home of Miss Loop the evening her mother died, and asked her concerning it. She said that Culp filled the description of the wizard given by Hoff, and that Hoff had named the person.

Homer B. Shelton was then recalled and added to his former statement such things as were obtained by questioning.

He stated that Miss Loop had said we should not think it strange if we did not see them at church. They had been advised by Hoff to remain away from the church for two Sabbaths, but that they could read their Bibles at home. That also the Loops had full confidence in Dr. Hoff and obeyed him implicitly.

Q. Was there anything said as to whether it was necessary to kill Culp in order to effect recovery in the cases of sickness and to remove the trouble from the neighborhood?

A. She said that Culp must be killed in order to have peace and health.

Q. Have these reports had any effect on Culp's character and standing in the church?

The prosecution here objected, but the court overruled the objection.

A. It did.

Q. Have these reports had any bad effect on the church?

A. I do not think it has had effect on the membership, but has brought the church into bad repute by people who are not members.

Miss Sadie Loop then took the stand and testified in her own behalf as follows:

"We thought the affliction of our mother very strange, and the old doctor Hoff told us strange things. I went to our pastor, Rev. J. E. Cope, in the utmost confidence, seeking counsel and advice. He directed me to our class-reader, H. B. Shelton, who said he would inquire into the affair, and for us to think no more about it, as he would see to it that the wizard bothered us no more. Mr. Jacob Culp is a brother-in-law of mine, and I knew nothing of the witchcraft business until Hoff told me. When I went to Rev. Mr. Cope he looked up the word witchcraft in the dictionary and explained it to me. I had no faith in Hoff's sorcery; but he cured where all others failed. There was an air of mystery about Hoff's movements, but we could not understand it. It was through the counsel of Hoff that I mentioned sorcery to my pastor and leader, and would not have done so otherwise."

Neither side had any more witnesses to present and the case rested.

The counsel for defense made an able and eloquent plea to the jury.

Then S. Y. Kennedy, of Columbiana, pleaded long and earnestly for the church.

We give a portion of his plea:

"I desire first to call attention to the accused being charged with uttering falsehood, as per charges, in that she said many things detrimental to the character and general standing of Jacob Culp, saying that he was a wizard and practiced sorcery. That the accused is guilty has been clearly shown by the testimony produced, principally by H. B. Shelton. Has the accused established the fact that she did not circulate stories of witchcraft? No, the testimony of Shelton and Culp clearly shows that, and also shows that trouble previously existed and her veracity has been brought into question, a number of times. The story of sorcery is no less false because it was whispered about under the cloak of secrecy and confidence. First consider: did the accused circulate these stories? Secondly, were they false? By competent testimony we have shown that she did circulate the stories of witchcraft and that they were false."

This ended the argument and after a few remarks the jury adjourned to form a verdict. It took only ten minutes for the jury to decide unanimously. The following is their verdict:

We, the committee, in the case of Miss Sadie Loop charged with falsehood under the specification in that she had on or about the 25th day of April, 1893, published contrary to the word of God and the discipline the following false and evil matter of and concerning Jacob Culp, to wit: That he (Jacob Culp) was a wizard and practiced sorcery, find that the said specification is proven and the charge of falsehood is sustained.

WM. KELLEY, W. J. PARISH,
ROBT. HOLE, EMMETT FREED,
JAS. A. BONSALE.

An Eloquent Funeral Address.

LAWRENCE, KAN., May 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find manuscript of a funeral oration delivered by Dr. E. B. Hazzard over the remains of my youngest daughter, Annetta Christina Palm, at my residence at Lawrence, Kan., April 30, 1893. I should be pleased if you will publish this in THE TRUTH SEEKER, not only for my own satisfaction, but I think it would probably be interesting reading to most of your readers as well.

Respectfully, A. PALM.

Human existence is a labyrinth of mysteries. Whence, what, whither? are questions that confront each and every person. The mystery of evil, of sorrow and suffering, the mystery of death, of birth, of life itself—our whole career is a chain of mysteries.

What shall we say of the mystery of evil? Is there any solution of this problem that will give comfort in sorrow and consolation in grief? The basis of existence must be good or bad. If bad, the world is chaos, life is bedlam, rationality disappears, hopes are vain, pessimism is the true philosophy. If good, we shall find order in the world, law in its constitution, reason as its rule, love at its heart, progress its career, harmony and happiness its finality and triumph. If the core of things is sound and not rotten, if the essence of existence is divine, if the universe is governed by law, we must conclude that whatever happens is for the best. That we cannot escape from our highest good, that the particular ills of life are swallowed up in the general harmony—that all is good and that good is all.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity,
Which like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Yet doth wear a precious jewel in its head."

"All nature is but art unknown to thee,
All chance, direction which thou canst not see,
All discord, harmony not understood,
All partial evil, universal good,
And spite of pride, in erring reason's spite,
One truth is clear—whatever is, is right."

And the mystery of death? What of this shall we say? Its solution is found in the phrase "eternal life." Not as recited in creed or chanted in hymn, but as expressed in the new science of the present hour: life essentially eternal. Life is everywhere and everything is alive. All life that is is always life. Life has no beginning or end. Birth and death are two sides of the same thing, two processes of life. The "dead" body is not dead. Its disintegrating molecules are manifesting life in what we call dissolution and decay. The green leaf on the tree you say is alive, but the "sere and yellow leaf," the shriveled and shrunken leaf, is also alive, but has a different manifestation of life. Our death in one world is a birth into another. Our birth is an entrance into this world and is a death to another.

"Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting.
The soul that rises in us, our life's star,
Hath elsewhere had a setting,
And cometh from afar."

And this brings us to the old, old question of immortality—"If a man die shall he live again?"

There are two kinds of immortality of which we are certain. We are immortal as to the constituents of our material organism. Every atom of our bodies is eternal. Every particle of our composition is everlasting. Matter is indestructible, force is imperishable, life is eternal. Forms may change, the substance is permanent. There is a story of a Hindoo sage whose wife asked him if he should live hereafter. He held up before her a piece of salt. "See," said he, "I throw this salt into the river. It disappears, but nevertheless the salt lives on. It is not destroyed. Only the form is gone."

We are also immortal in the life of the race, in the great being, the "grand man," humanity. Man lives forever in his work of good or evil. He has a real immortality in the life of his race, purged of all grossness, free from all selfishness. We live in humanity; we are vitally connected with it as members. The human race is an organic being, that lives and grows from age to age, animated by one spirit, actuated by one power. Men may come and men may go, but the race lives on forever. As Lessing says: "The immortality of souls is indissolubly associated with the development of the race. We who live are not only the offspring of those who have lived before us, we are really of their substance, and it is thus that we are immortals, living forever."

But am I immortal as an individual? Have I a private and personal immortality? In answer to this question we are compelled to leave the domain of science, certitude, and knowledge, and enter the realm of belief, of speculation, of hope. I can only say: I believe with all my soul that I shall live again and through eternity as an individual. I believe that our young friend whom we meet to-day to remember and to honor is more alive now as an individual than ever before. I believe she is here and looking in our faces. I believe that, individually and personally, with you and me, she will live through the glad ages of eternity. I do not know it. I cannot prove it. I cannot answer the arguments of those who honestly are incapable of such belief—I only hope and believe. To me there is no death.

There is no death:

'Tis but a change
From this old house into a newer,
But passing from a sham life
Into a truer.

There is no death:

'Tis but a step
That leads up to the higher;
Each setting of the sun doth bring Us one day nigher.

There is no death:

'Tis setting free
From clay's incumbering fetters
Where spirit grows in wisdom's ways
Far better.

There is no death:

'Tis but a law,
A mandate that no man can sever;
Progression's forward course will be
On, on forever.

Annetta Christina Palm was born Feb. 16, 1874. She was nineteen years, two months, and eleven days old.

She was young as men count time, but as Mr. Emerson has said: "We must consider the depth not the length of years."

"We live in deeds not years; in thoughts not breaths;
In feelings not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs.
He lives most who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best."

She was born in this house and lived in it during the whole of her young life.

She went through the various courses of study in all the grades of the different public schools in Lawrence and graduated from the high school with unusual distinction, taking a leading part in the closing exercises and attracting universal commendation by proficiency and accomplishments.

As an illustration of the strength and faithfulness of her character, the fact may be stated, that during the eleven years of her school attendance she was never tardy a single morning nor absent from a single recitation.

She was a teacher in Lawrence and Douglas county for two years, exhibiting great skill and capacity and achieving unexampled success.

On several occasions she was selected as an assistant in the examination of other teachers by the superintendent of instruction.

In all positions and situations, wherever she was found, she displayed the same constancy, nobility, strength of purpose, propriety, and excellence. In all things she was a true, noble, good little girl. She was an obedient and respectful child.

She was an affectionate and dutiful daughter. She was a generous and loving sister. She was a faithful and forgiving friend.

She was kind-hearted, good-natured, of happy and amiable disposition.

She was greatly interested in the welfare of others. She was kindly to the unfortunate, sympathetic with the suffering, benevolent to the poor, just and honest with everyone. She was, consequently, loved and respected by all who knew her.

She was a great sufferer in her last sickness, but she bore her sufferings with patience and marvelous fortitude.

She was anxious to live for the benefit of her parents and friends, but often said that if her health could not return it were better that she should go. She was not afraid to die, because she did not believe in those gloomy creeds and dogmas that make people cowardly of the future—afraid of the unseen and unknown. She was conscious that she had never done any harm to any human being.

She was a great believer. She believed in truth, beauty, and goodness. She believed in justice, mercy, and an honest life.

She believed in the brotherhood of man, the sisterhood of woman, and the motherhood of nature, as her own good father and mother had taught her. She believed in science as a savior, in humanity as a messiah, in society as a providence, and in the grand future of the human race as a millennium and heaven. She believed in the Bible of humanity—universal literature, whose books she loved and studied. She believed that an intelligent mind was better than god or angel, that intuitiv reason was more than priest or revelation, that self-control was greater than fasting or prayers, that charity was larger than temple or sacrifice. Like the great and good Thomas Paine, the world was her country, to do good was her religion.

She did not believe in religion in the ordinary sense. She did not believe in a great tyrant above the skies. She did not believe in an infinit divinity who could thrust himself into the limits of a human form, or a divine father who could plunge three-fourths of his own children into eternal pain. She was never converted, never joined a church, never went to Sunday-school a day in her life.

She did not think it necessary that in order to be good we must look back eighteen hundred years for the blood of a murdered saint or the cross of a crucified redeemer. She did not feel that she could shuffle off her sins upon the back of an innocent divinity and escape thereby the penalties thereof. So she did not believe in God or Christ in any ordinary sense. She did not believe a book could be infallible that criticism could shatter in pieces or that could be torn into fragments by its own contradictions. Concerning a future life, she believed that we know absolutely nothing. Whence we are and whither we are going is an unsolved and perhaps unsolvable mystery. All that we can do, she said, is to so live that when we come to die we may feel, if death ends all, that we have lived nobly, usefully, and for the improvement and the highest good of our fellow-beings, and if there is another life, we should then be best fitted to enjoy it. And in this faith she died the death of the wise, the just, and the really righteous.

What a lesson was this life! She taught you and me and all who may know her till "the last syllable of recorded time," that a human being could be good and true and pure and wise and free, happy and useful; a noble, sweet, and beautiful character, and not believe in church or creed, in Bible or devil, in God or Christ, and without the help of priest or catechism, prayer-meeting or Sunday-school, "faith" or sacrament.

This was a lesson better and greater than ever was formed in the life of prophet or martyr, or ever fell from the lips of Apostle or saint.

And now, as we bid her good-bye, and as our poor eyes shall see her no more, it may be asked by those of other faiths than hers, what consolations can her sincere and womanly reasonings give to sorrowing souls and lonely hearts? I answer that there are two certainties of which we may be sure which outweigh all the contents of all the mythologies.

If there is no future life then she, like all of the human race who have passed to "that bourne from whence no traveler returns," is free from care and sorrow, from affliction and anxiety. "After life's fitful fever, she sleeps well." She has a peace that passeth understanding. From this point of view, "What is death?"

"Tis to be free:

No more to love, to hope, to fear;
To join the greater equality.
All alike are humble then.
The mighty grave wraps lord and slave.
Nor pride, nor poverty,
Dares come within that refuge-house the tomb."

If there is a future life, what then? If there is a heaven, and it were a heaven in which she could not enter, it were no heaven!

If there is a God and he is a good God, he would not stay in a heaven from which she was excluded.

If there is a God and heaven both, how could a soul as good, as true, as really holy as hers be shut out from them?

Poor McDonald Clarke, the mad poet, once said: "Heaven is a place full of flowers, music, little children, and plenty of pure air."

If such is heaven, how she would delight therein. If there is such a heaven, surely she is there.

So if there is no future life, with her it is well. If there is one, I am sure that no man or woman, living or dead, is better off than she, and I would that all men and women living and dead were as happy as I know that she is now.

So with no fear and with great hope we lay her body away in the bright spring-time she loved so well.

The wild flowers will bloom over her grave and mingle with the violets and roses which the never-forgetting hand of affection will plant.

The tears of our good sister and brother, her father and mother, will cluster with the glittering dew-drops on many an early dawn, when the morning stars shall sing together and the great king of day shall climb his glorious path.

The wild, free breezes of her native state shall stir the long, green grass as they bear to her their tributes in the perfume of the sunflower and many a prairie blossom.

The rustle of the trees, the song of birds, the murmuring of the brooks, the prattle of little children, borne from far shall be a never-ending requiem.

The blue sky shall be her covering by day and the solemn stars her watchers by night till the heavens are no more.

"Transplanted May!

Thou couldst not stay!
Who gave took thee away.
Come, child, and whisper to me,
Say, must I wait, or come to thee?
I list to hear thy message clear."

"Cease, cease new grief to borrow!"

Last night I heard her say,
'For sorrow hath no morrow,
'Tis born of yesterday.
Translated thou shalt be,
My cloudless daylight see,
And bathe, as I, in fairest morrows endlessly."

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Little Giffen, of Tennessee.

Out of the focal and foremost fire,
Out of the hospital ward as dire,
Smitten of grapeshot and gangrene,
(Eighteenth battle and he sixteen!)
Specter such as we seldom see,
Little Giffen, of Tennessee.

"Take him—and welcome," the surgeon said;
"Much your doc'or can help the dead!"
And so we took and brought him where
The balm was sweet on the summer air;
And we laid him down on a wholesome bed—
Utter Lazarus, heel to head!

Weary war with the bated breath,
Skeleton boy with skeleton death,
Months of torture, how many such?
Weary weeks of the stick and crutch!
Still a glint on the steel-blue eye
Spoke of the spirit that would not die.

And didn't! nay, more! in death's despite
The crippled skeleton learned to write!
"Dear mother," at first, of course; and then,
"Dear captain"—inquiring about "the men,"
Captain's answer—"Of eighty-and-five,
Giffen and I are left alive."

"Johnston's pressed to the front, they say!"
Little Giffen was up and away.
A tear—his first—as he bade good-bye,
Dimmed the glint of his steel-blue eye;
"I'll write, if spared." There was news of a fight,
But none of Giffen—he did not write.

I sometimes fancy that were I king
Of the princely knights of the Golden Ring,
With the song of the minstrel in mine ear,
And the tender legend that trembles here,
I'd give the best on his bended knee,
The whitest soul of my chivalry,
For little Giffen, of Tennessee!

FRANCIS O. TICKNOR.

Talks on Political economy.

Some days had passed before the young girls could find the opportunity or feel the inclination to resume their former talk. But during the brief elapse of time neither of the girls had been idle. Isabella had eagerly employed all her leisure moments reading the books her aunt had supplied her with, and Ethel, though she had no books to refer to, had been doing some earnest thinking. She pondered long and deeply upon what Isabella told her, and longed to receive more information on the subject. Ethel was an ambitious and a very intelligent girl, and gave promise of developing into a very beautiful and accomplished woman, for she had great intuitiv powers and was, for her age, quite a brilliant conversationalist. But Ethel's parents were of that well-meaning but mistaken class of people who, blind to their child's talents and desires, had sent her to various schools to receive all her education there. They never thought of such a thing as teachers who instead of educating the child were only dwarfing its intellect. And if such a thing was mentioned, they would have been shocked and indignant. Why is it so? Why haven't parents more intuitiv powers and clearer ideas? Or, better still, why do they not take their children into their confidence and seek to win theirs in return? It would help the child in older years and tend to do away with a great deal of pain and vexation, that the lot of young, aspiring minds is subject to.

Yet Mr. and Mrs. Carlton would not willfully neglect their children. Mr. Carlton was, as I said before, a civil engineer, and so engrossed in business that he scarcely knew more of his family than his brother in Washington. It was not always so. When he was a young man a more devoted, brilliant, and affectionate gentleman it would be hard to find. But gradually, as his children grew older and required less attention, he was, all unconsciously, allowing the cares and vexations of commercial life to crowd out all the sweet anticipations and comforts of home. Mrs. Carlton was a fashionable society woman. Perhaps that would be all that was necessary to say about her. But it might seem to a disinterested reader that Mrs. Carlton was a frivolous butterfly. But she was not. And often she was heard to congratulate herself upon so skillfully fulfilling her duty to both children and society.

I have mentioned before that Isabella Lloyd was an orphan. Her parents died when she was too young to realize her loss. She was immediately adopted by a wealthy and very kind aunt, who was something of a woman suffragist and took great interest in politics. She attended all the political meetings at Congress, and so became well known in Washington. If Isabella was well posted upon the current topics of the day, it was small wonder, for her aunt took great pains to impress upon her niece the great importance of woman's education.

About two weeks after the last conversation took place Ethel was standing by the long French windows gazing wistfully out, wishing for Isabella. As if in answer to her wish, that coveted young lady appeared. "Why are you indoors this beautiful spring day?" she asked gaily. "Come, ma chere, and hear the birds sing." And she playfully drew Ethel toward the door.

"And talk about political economy?" asked Ethel, childishly eager. "Oh, yes, do let's."

Isabella laughed gaily. "All right, we will. Let us go to our favorite nook under the old elms. I love that place. Come."

Ethel needed no second urging. She willingly took her seat beside her companion in the mossy rustic seat that Madam Hauton's splendid grounds were noted for.

"Belle," said Ethel, breaking the little silence, "I am going to write and ask papa a few questions on this subject. He will tell me, I know. What do you think of the idea?"

"It is a good one," Belle answered generously. "I am most unwilling that you should depend upon me for your ideas, for I am not well enough versed. Well, let me see," she continued thoughtfully; "I gave you before something of a definition of political economy. But I might have shortened that definition by saying that it is a 'science of wealth.' It is a study that inquires into the origin, the promotion, the division, and exchange of wealth. It takes into consideration the nature, the production, the distribution, and incidentally its taxation. Macleod says that 'wealth is anything whatever whose value can be measured in money; consists exclusively of exchangeable rights.' And he also says that 'Pure economics is nothing but the science of exchange.' So wealth in political economy is only considered as capital, or, as some call it, stock. It is that wealth used for the purpose of profits, and terms used in political economy, such as rent, interest, wages, value, exchange, properties, and rights, are factors in the productions, possessions, and exchange of wealth. Do you understand, dear?" asked Isabella absurdly, as though she were talking to a child.

"Yes," answered Ethel with a dimpling smile, "I understand. Then the true definition of Political Economy shows that there is nothing political about it. Neither is there any economy about it. It reminds me of the definition I once read in an old school-reader, that an amateur lexicographer gave the lobster, 'A little red fish that runs backward,' and the correction Mr. Webster gave when they submitted the question to him. He said, 'Unfortunately the lobster is not a fish, and as matter of fact it is not red, and finally it never runs backward.'"

Isabella looked a little chagrined at the manner of Ethel's translation of her words, though she laughed, and admitted a little reluctantly, "I admit that you are right, Ethel. I think I told you before that Political Economy does not really mean what its name would imply. Quasnay, Turgot, and others who constituted the first school of political economy, thought that the state might establish a system of economy, and many believed that had their ideas been adopted the horrors of the French Revolution might have been averted. But they learned to their cost that the state was composed of gentry who had a most supreme contempt for any economy, and the school was closed and their thesis almost forgotten in the stirring scenes which ushered in the Reign of Terror? The first school claimed the land as the basis of all wealth, and the state should assume possession of the soil, and its systems should constitute political economy. The next school began with Adam Smith as principal. He is spoken of as 'the founder of political economy as a separate branch of human knowledge.' He differed from his predecessors by making labor the basis of all wealth and mechanical arts and trade the true source of national wealth. While agreeing with the first school in the freedom of all exchange, I might mention that restricting trade, seeking to control its channels, by very early politicians, known as the 'balance of trade' method, was tried to bring money into their country. The next school succeeding Smith was Ricardo, Malthus, and Mill. They elaborated the theory of Smith and former schools by making labor and land equal factors and basing wealth upon 'supply and demand.'" Here Isabella paused, as she caught sight of a schoolmate coming down the gravel walk.

"Oh, Miss Lloyd," she apologized, "I am truly sorry to interrupt you, but Miss Vincent wishes very much to see you."

She lingered and took the seat beside Ethel that Isabella had just vacated. But not before the latter took the occasion to whisper, "I'll try and resume our conversation soon, Ethel."

Ethel nodded and soon Isabella's slight form disappeared up the gravel walk.

IDA BALLOU.

In Memoriam.

From the Lawrence, Kan., Journal.

On the twenty-seventh day of April, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, at the home of her parents, occurred the dissolution of Annetta Christina Palm. She was born in Lawrence, on the sixteenth day of February, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, thus having lived, in all, less than a score of years of this life.

Nettie, as she was fondly called by all, filled an active and useful station, her talents were in constant employment, her resources and energies seemed boundless, her labors were directed toward the general good rather than in self-interest, and it was in the success of this alone she sought or found her chief reward. Nothing ever daunted her, and thoroughness alone would satisfy. This was a marked feature of her entire life. From the time the little six-year-old heroine commenced her course at the city schools until it closed with her graduation in the high school in the class of '91, a decade and more had passed, yet not in all these years was she ever once tardy or absent. Summer's suns, winter's storms, or childhood's interests were alike powerless to prevent her following duty where it called. In her classes she ranked with the most brilliant and highest. A pleasant voice and a happy smile always made her appearance upon the rostrum well received. Habits formed by years of such environment were not to be lightly thrown aside. Leaving her alma mater, and feeling that she owed to the future some of the benefits she had received from the past, she entered the profession of teaching, and to perfect herself in this joined the normal class, of which she was still a member. Nature as well as application seemed to have peculiarly fitted her for this work. Her schools were marvels of order and punctuality. The same careful regard to thoroughness, even in her school days, followed her here, and evinced itself in all her work. She taught two years, the first being spent in district Number One, and the second in district Number Eighty-one, giving eminent satisfaction in each instance. She was an active votary of the public library, having read during the term of her membership over three hundred works of fiction, travel, and history.

Hers was an illness of one week, and her sufferings, though intense, were borne with the patient resignation equal to the heroism of her life. Bravely she met the silent mystery; her departure was as gentle as the coming of dawn. An intellect which could find individual advancement only in the general good of humanity could not be bound by creed or dogma. The fiendish doctrine of total depravity and the atonement she rejected, and laughed to scorn the portentous threats of those who love their enemies and forget their friends. Often did she repeat, "Heaven and hell are conditions not places. God should be spelled with two o's and devil without a d." Her life was of purity, sincerity, and love, joy and happiness its handmaidens, and deeds—not creeds—its moving factors. A glorious success here, it could not be sought else there.

The funeral was largely attended. The beautiful grounds and residence were filled with admiring friends. The address delivered by Dr. E. B. Hazzard was eloquent and touching. He dealt with the actual immortality of life and its scientific demonstrations in nature. Sweet music was furnished by a quartet of mixed voices, with an organ accompaniment. The floral decoration was something seldom seen; the funeral bier was a pyramid of wreaths, emblems, and bouquets, sent by admiring friends. It might be called a lilac funeral, for the air was laden with the perfume of those sweet flowers. Six of her young gentlemen acquaintances, with sorrowing friends and mourning relatives, accompanied her to her last resting-place amid the flowers and trees and singing birds of Oak Hill cemetery.

A FRIEND.

[Nettie Palm was among the earliest contributors to the Corner. From her first letter to the last well-written essay, she displayed the noble and attractive qualities of intelligent womanhood. We are sorry she has so soon and so suddenly left our ranks, for the world needs such as she to carry forward its best work. While we mingle our sympathies and regrets with her parents and friends, we shall cherish her memory, that still exhales as the fragrance of the flowers. In the hearts of those who loved her she is immortal.—Ed. C. C.]

[We notice that our friend and always interesting correspondent of the Corner, Geo. J. Remsburg, has three articles on archaeological subjects in the Archæologist, a monthly magazine published at Waterloo, Ind. This magazine is the official organ of the American Archaeological Association. Mr. Remsburg has made several interesting discoveries while pursuing his investigations in the attractive fields of archaeology. We wish him great success.—Ed. C. C.]

Correspondence.

GORE BAY, ONT., June 3, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my second letter to the Corner. I am very lonely this evening, so I think I will try to write a letter. I would like to get your picture. What does the "H" in your name stand for? My second name is Elizabeth. I go to the Methodist Sunday-school, as I want to hear "both sides of the story," and think for myself. There are some very funny things in the Bible; among the funniest is about a prophet making an ax swim (in 2 Kings vi, 5, 6, 7).

I have been down to Toronto since I wrote my last letter. I had a birthday party on my birthday, and then I went away for a trip the next day. Was not that nice? I expect to go to the World's Fair this summer. Are you going, Miss Wixon?

All the children around here call me "little bother" because I am always whistling. I whistle and play the piano too. I have relations coming to visit us from Australia. One of these is Mr. John Childs, who is a Freethinker. He wrote a book on "Skepticism." I have saved the paper with my last letter in, to let him see it. Papa has very many books on "Freethought." He lends THE TRUTH SEEKER to people here, and it does them a lot of good. He used to lend them to a minister named Mr. Rutledge. I asked some person to write to me, but they are a very long while in doing so.

I guess I will come to a close now. From your little Freethinker friend, GRACIE BRAZENOR.

P. S.—My address is Gracie Brazenor, Gore Bay, Manitoulin Island, Ont.

[The H. stands for Helen. Yes, we may go to the World's Fair, but have made no decided plans yet. We hope to hear from Gracie often.—Ed. C. C.]

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

GOLD. SILVER.
MINES AND STOCKS.
CHAS. F. BLACKBURN
 Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL. MINERAL.
 3mo14

"Everybody's Law Book,"

Is the title of the new 768 page work prepared by J. Alexander Koonce, LL.B., member of the New York bar.

It enables every man and woman to be their own lawyer. It teaches what are your rights and how to maintain them. When to begin a lawsuit and when to shun one. It contains the useful information every business man needs in every state in the Union. It contains business forms of every variety useful to the lawyer as well as to all who have legal business to transact.

Incise $2 for a copy, or incise two-cent postage stamp for a table of contents and terms to agents. Address BENJ. W. HITCHCOCK, Publisher, 385 Sixth Avenue, New York.

WANTED.—A Liberal with $100 to $200 capital, who will go in partnership on a farm, will meet a good opportunity by addressing the undersigned for further particulars. The farm is situated in the northern part of Alabama. J. G. DIERS, 4t24 519 S. 3d st., Philadelphia, Pa.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Free-thinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. (Full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.)

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's
ARGUMENT
 IN THE

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
 At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
 Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
 28 Lafayette place, New York.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians. Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History. Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Free Thought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50

During the year other standard Free Thought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquirendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquirendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 519 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Graeco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c.; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.
 A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BARK. Price, 25 cents.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIBER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

The Agnostic Annual

—FOR—1893

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:

The Moral Sanction, Leslie Stephen; Reverent Agnosticism, Amos Waters; The Mother Nature: A Poem, Gerald Massey; Dogmatism in Theology, Alfred Moberg; Sermons on the Mount, Samuel Laing; The City of the Dead, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin); On the Duty of Honesty in Our Convictions, C. E. Plumtree; Scientific Religion, R. Bithell; The Blight of Superstition, Charles Watts; Anthropology and Orthodoxy, Edward Clodd; The Disappearance of the Nether World, F. J. Gould; Religious Ideas: Their Origin and Development, Frederick Millar; Signals with Mars: A Poem, G. H. Martin; Materialism and Idealism Harmonized, Lucian Armstrong. Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. 40 cents.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOOK.

Price 10 cents.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE. By Samuel P. Putnam.

Mr. S. P. Putnam is one of the strongest writers in the ranks of Freethought to-day—terse, vivid, philosophical, and convincing. The above title to his last work seems, at first sight, almost harsh, so forcible and cutting is it; but when we look into its pages and observe how clean-cut and to the point are its sentences, we perceive that the force and directness of the title is well maintained. The reasons showing that the fashionable religion of the day is just that which Mr. Putnam claims are well founded and unanswerable.

Religion, born of dependence in the childhood of the race, when man was an ignorant and tottering weakling, would seem at this stage of developments a thing to be cast aside with the swaddling-clothes of infancy. Man is now able to stand alone. He needs no props. Honesty and virtue should stand him in stead of religion and fear. He should have straight-forward, manly independence of character and upright conduct more than aught else.

The latter pages of the book contain Mr. Putnam's able argument before the Columbian Exposition committee of the House of Representatives against the Sunday closing of the Fair, and is a lucid and candid presentation of the case, showing that Sunday in any aspect is entirely outside of and beyond any Congressional enactment. There are added also six poems in Mr. Putnam's vigorous and original style, all earnest and gemmed with truth and beauty. At the low price of 25 cents this book ought to sell by the million copies.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES. A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being. By the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

This is another excellent work and is a fitting companion for Mr. Putnam's book on Religion. The stereotyped phrases in favor of design are popped over like tennis balls in the hands of an expert. The much-vaunted goodness, wisdom, and mercy of God are shown to be less than thin air. Investigation discloses clearly enough that there is not a particle of evidence of design by any sort of a creator or "Great First Cause" in all the universe known to man. In all the research among the spaces, as far as reason, investigation, science, and common sense have been, not a scintilla of proof can be brought forward logically to show that the world had an original, intelligent, thinking designer.

The design fallacy is brought forward so frequently by the opponents of Freethought that this handy little pamphlet of sixty pages, as a complete refutation of the idea, must meet with a cordial welcome. It should be in the hands of every Liberal to quote from as showing the utter weakness and absurdity of a theory born of ignorance and maintained by superstition. The low price of 15 cents should aid materially in its circulation, and the thanks of the multitude are due the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER for his skill in preparing and sending out this neat little brochure for the instruction of the masses upon a matter that has attracted the attention more or less of almost everybody in the world.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

Helen H. Gardener's New Book.

The following is the publisher's circular of Helen H. Gardener's forthcoming book. We shall have the work as soon as out; the price being, cloth $1, paper 50 cents.

In reviewing Helen H. Gardener's first novel, "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" Moncure D. Conway said: "Another thinker has been let loose upon the world." Each succeeding year has had its book from the brain and pen of this brilliant and gifted writer, and has shown that Mr. Conway was a clear-sighted and correct critic.

Whether her publishers have issued a volume of essays, a book of short stories, or a novel, it is equally apparent to her readers that indeed a "thinker has been let loose upon us;" a bright and logical thinker who has the splendid courage of her convictions and does not fear to so express her thoughts that he who runs may read them.

At the International Congress of Representative Women, held recently in Chicago, the intense desire to hear what Helen Gardener had to say on any topic resulted in packed halls whenever she spoke and in repeated demands for her reappearance. The first night she spoke hundreds had to be kept out of the hall for want of standing-room. Hundreds of demands were made that Helen Gardener be urged to repeat the same speech in the same large hall or a larger one if it could be obtained, to enable those who had been shut out to hear her.

The enthusiasm of the men who heard her was quite as sincere and demonstrative as was that of the women, and before she left the city of Chicago she had been urged by a number of publishers to allow them to publish and distribute large numbers of copies of her speeches. Physicians called upon her and urged that this be done immediately, and professors in colleges and teachers did the same.

Steps were at once taken to put her speeches made at this congress, together with other of her essays, including "Sex in Brain," into book form to meet, in the readiest and cheapest way, the demand for them.

This book, entitled "Facts and Fictions of Life," will be ready for the public about July 15th.

Already application has been made by accredited representatives of four foreign nations to translate this book into their several languages, and the demand for it is sure to be a large and increasing one, as it has been for every book she has written.

Helen Gardener is the kind of thinker who does not run to mere fads. One of her reviewers has said of her work that it is free from all personal color; has no taint of personal prejudice nor of sex bias or narrow one-sidedness. What she writes is the acme of logic glorified by the fire of sincere conviction and the generous warmth of a strong and earnest personality. It is the work of genius made practical by a rare common sense—a genius so well balanced and so free from eccentricity that even those who do not agree with all her conclusions are enthusiastic admirers of her and her work. This is evidenced by the fact that though she is known to be a frank and outspoken Agnostic, yet clergymen all over the country urge her to read and speak in their pulpits, and they preach upon her works and use her essays and books as texts for sermons to their congregations.

It is a cause of surprise to those who meet her for the first time that she is not large, that she is young and pretty, vivacious, and not at all pessimistic. She writes of the ills of life, but she is as optimistic as is the surgeon, who sees the abscess and the ill it can do and fearlessly puts in the keen-cutting scalpel to cut out and to cure.

Persons who do not think very seriously, or who, as Helen Gardener says, only "think they are thinking," at odd and fugitive times wonder how a woman, and a young woman at that, can write as Helen Gardener does unless she has had a personal experience of the things of which she writes. As if the preacher who depicts the torments of the damned must have had these torments, or that a Shakespeare must have been something of all of which he wrote, or that a Thackeray must have either been a Becky Sharp or had one in his family, or Dickens a Uriah Heep or a Pecksniff or a Fagan. Of course all this is absurd when we come to think of it. Helen Gardener's home life with her parents was markedly simple and happy and pure and as free as possible from the troubles and ills of the world. Her married or domestic life is simply ideal. Her husband, who is a college-bred professional gentleman, is in entire harmony with all her work and all she desires to do, as she is with all he thinks and does. She has no more earnest admirer and at the same time no more careful critic. He frequently tells her she needs only to be entirely natural to be entirely irresistible. From a home where unbroken harmony and perfect good fellowship uninterruptedly reigns Helen Gardener looks out upon the world and sees the strifes and struggles and ills of life, and from her own life knows how much better all this can be, should be, and she seeks to make it so.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Christianity a Fiction.

THE Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Scientific Works.

Three Introductory Lectures on the Science of Thought. By F. Max Müller. 1. The Simplicity of Language; 2. The Identity of Language and Thought; and 3. The Simplicity of Thought. With an appendix which contains a correspondence on "Thought Without Words," between F. Max Müller and Francis Galton, the duke of Argyll, George J. Romanes, and others. Neatly bound in cloth. Price, 75c.

Three Lectures on The Science of Language. By Prof. F. Max Müller. The Oxford University Extension Lectures. With a supplement, "My Predecessors," an essay on genesis of "The Science of Thought" 112 pages; cloth. Price, 75c.

The Psychology of Attention. By Th. Ribot, professor of Comparative and Experimental Psychology at the College de France, and editor of the Revue Philosophique. Authorized translation. Treating of the following topics: 1. Spontaneous, or Natural, Attention. —a, Emotional states; b, Physical manifestations; c, Surprise. 2. Voluntary, or Artificial, Attention. —a, Its mechanism; b, Inhibition; c, The feeling of effort. 3. The Morbid States of Attention. —a, Distraction; b, Hypochondria; c, Fixed ideas and ecstasy; d, Idiocy; e, Attention in sleep and hypnosis. Cloth, 75c.

Fundamental Problems. The Method of Philosophy as a Systematic Arrangement of Knowledge. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.

The Psychic Life of Micro-Organisms. A Study in Experimental Psychology. By Alfred Binet. Translation from the French with the sanction of the author. Treating of the following subjects: 1. The Psychology of the Cell —Introductory. 2. The Structural and Psychological Character of Proto-Organisms: Motory and Sensory Organs. 3. The Psychology of Nutrition: Holophytic, Saprophytic, and Animal Nutrition; Predatory Habits of Certain Animals. 4. Colonies of Unicellular Organisms. 5. Fecondation of Proto-Organisms. 6. Fecondation of Higher Animals and Plants. 7. The Physiological Function of the Nucleus. 8. Correspondence between Alfred Binet and Ch. Richet (professor of physiology in the Faculty of Medicine at Paris) respecting cellular psychology. 10mo, 135 pages; cloth, 75c; paper, 50c.

Wheelbarrow Articles and Discussions on the Labor Question, Including the Controversy with Mr. Lyman F. Gage on the Ethics of the Board of Trade; and also the Controversy with Mr. Hugh O. Pentecost, and others, on the Single Tax Question. Elegant cloth binding, portrait of the author, and autograph letter. Price, $1.

The Idea of God. By Dr. Paul Carus. Being a disquisition on the development of the idea of God in human thought and history; discussing: 1. The Nature of Ideas. 2. The Etymology of The Word God. 3. God an Abstract Idea. 4. The Conceptions of God (Polytheism, Monotheism, Pantheism, Theism, and Atheism). 5. Definitions of the Idea of God. 6. Entheism, the Monistic Conception of God. Price, 15c.

Epitomes of Three Sciences. 1. Comparative Philology: The Study of Sanscrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg, of the University of Kiel. —a, Sanscrit Research; b, From Jones to Lassen; c, The Discovery of the Veda; d, The Interpretation of the Veda; e, The History of the Vedic Epoch. 2. Experimental Psychology. By Prof. Joseph Jastrow, of the University of Wisconsin. —a, Aspects of Modern Psychology; b, Psychology in Germany; c, Psychology in France and Italy; d, Psychology in Great Britain and the United States. 3. Old Testament History: or, The Rise of the people of Israel. By Prof. C. H. Cornall, of the University of Königsberg. —a, The Traditions of the People of Israel; b, The Migrations of the Tribes of Israel; c, The Conquest of Palestine and the Kingdom of Israel. With especial introductions by Professors Oldenberg and Cornall, and prefatory remarks by the editor of the Open Court. Elegant cloth binding. Price, 75c.

The Ethical Problem. By Dr. Paul Carus. Three Lectures delivered before the Society for Ethical Culture of Chicago at the invitation of the Board of Trustees: 1. Ethics, a Science; 2. The Data of Ethics; 3. The Theories of Ethics. 112 pages, cloth. Price, 50c.

On Double Consciousness. Experimental Psychological Studies. By Alfred Binet. Table of contents: 1. Introductory; Experimental Psychology in France. 2. Proof of Double Consciousness in Hysterical Individuals. 3. The Relations between the Two Consciousnesses of Hysterical Individuals. 4. The Hysterical Eye. 5. Mechanism or Subconsciousness? 6. The Graphic Method and the Doubling of Consciousness. 7. The Intensity of Subconscious States. 8. The Role of Suggestion in Phenomena of Double Consciousness. 9. Double Consciousness in Health. 93 pages, paper. Price, 50c.

The Lost Manuscript. A Novel. By Gustave Freytag. A handsome, elegantly bound edition of this famous and popular German romance. The author writes as a motto for the American edition: "A noble human life does not end on earth with death. It continues in the minds and deeds of friends, as well as in the thoughts and the activity of the nation." In two octavo volumes; boxed. Price, $4.

Diseases of Personality. By Th. Ribot. Authorized translation. Treating of the following subjects: 1. Nature of Personality and consciousness. 2. Organic Disorders. 3. Emotional Disorders. 4. Intellectual Troubles. 5. Dissolution of the Personality. Cloth, 75c.

The Soul of Man. An Investigation of the Facts of Physiological and Experimental Psychology. By Dr. Paul Carus. With 152 Illustrative Cuts and Diagrams. Price $3, paper 48c. Printed on extra fine paper, handsomely bound in cloth. The subject-matter of the work is divided into the following sections: 1. The Philosophical Problem of Mind. 2. The Rise of Organic Life. 3. Physiological Facts of Brain-Activity. 4. The Immortality of the Race and the Data of Propagation. 5. The Investigations of Experimental Psychology. 6. The Ethical and Religious Aspects of Soul-Life. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 25 Lafayette Place, New York

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW. WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR. By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - 15 cents

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, - - - - - 15 cents

Gems of Thought.

The history of intellectual progress is written in the lives of Infidels.—Ingersoll.

MENTAL involution shows another phase in habit. Habits are well-knit associations. They make us machines, committed forever to a determined manner of acting and thinking. A habit is itself a mental bias. Stereotyped and inherited, it becomes instinct, where we see the full fruition of the involution movement and the dead level of automatism. From this point of view, instinct has been well called "lapsed intelligence," if by intelligence we mean power to adapt ourselves to new surroundings and to avail ourselves of new impressions. Habit is opposed to progress. In history, our reformers—Jesus, Savonarola, Luther—have been habit-breakers. Genius, too, is only the name of that disposition which rebels against the law of mental involution, breaks away from systems, and goes out in search of the objective truths of nature. Thus, side by side with the involution movement, we find the evolution movement. In the animal kingdom, it is represented by the persistent but mysterious tendency toward variation; in human history, by the comet-like appearance of the reformer; in art, by the lawless product of genius. All these are factors in the upward world-movement which saves us from the stagnation of the relentless law of habit.—Professor Patrick on the Psychology of Prejudice.

THE attempt at theocratic organization appeared at an early period, both in the acts of the court of Rome, and in those of the clergy in general; but, from the commencement, such obstacles were thrown in its way, that, even in its greatest vigor, it never had the power to overcome them. When the church aspired to dominion, it had to encounter the pride and the resistance of the feudal nobility. Europe is greatly indebted to the laic members of the feudal system in the eleventh century: the people were almost completely subjugated by the church; sovereigns could scarcely protect themselves from its domination: the feudal nobility alone would never submit to its yoke, would never give way to the power of the clergy. The feudal nobility always considered themselves as not only independent of the church, but as its superior—as alone called upon to possess, and in reality to govern, the country; they were willing always to live on good terms with the clergy, but at the same time insisting that each should perform his own part, the one not infringing upon the duties of the other. During many centuries it was the lay aristocracy who maintained the independence of society with regard to the church; they boldly defended it when the sovereigns and the people were subdued. They were the first to oppose, and probably contributed more than any other power to the failure of the attempt at a theocratic organization of society.—Guizot's History of Civilization.

STILL another development of the theological spirit, mixed with professional exclusiveness and mob prejudice, wrought untold injury [to the science of medicine]. Even to those who had become so far emancipated from allegiance to fetich cures as to consult physicians, it was forbidden to consult those who, as a rule, were the best. From a very early period of European history the Jews had taken the lead in medicine; their share in founding the great schools of Salerno and Montpellier we have already noted; and in all parts of Europe we find them acknowledged leaders in the healing art. The church authorities, enforcing the spirit of the time, were especially severe against those benefactors; that men who openly rejected the means of salvation, and whose souls were undeniably lost, should heal the elect, seemed an insult to providence; preaching friars denounced them from the pulpit, and the rulers in state and church, while frequently secretly consulting them, openly proscribed them. Popes Eugene IV., Nicholas V., and Calixtus III., especially forbade Christians to employ them. The councils of Beziers and Alby in the thirteenth century, the council of Avignon in the fourteenth, the synod of Bamberg and the bishop of Passau in the fifteenth, with many others, expressly forbade the faithful to call Jewish physicians or surgeons, under penalty of excommunication; such great preachers as John Geyler and John Herolt thundered from the pulpit against them and all who consulted them. As late as the middle of the seventeenth century, when the city council of Hall, in Wurtemberg, gave some privileges to a Jewish physician "on account of his admirable experience and skill," the clergy of the city joined in a protest, declaring that "it were better to die with Christ than to be cured by a Jew doctor aided by the devil."—Ex-President White of Cornell University.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.
6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During American Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks of Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Port. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

23 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
3 " The Church Robbing the People.	5 " Missionaries.
4 " Thanksgiving.	6 " The Lord's Instruments.
5 " Sabbath Laws.	7 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
6 " Children and the Church.	8 " The Church and Slavery.
7 " Woman and the Church.	9 " Priests and Politics.
8 " The Church and Thomas Paine.	10 " Ireland and the Church.
9 " Studies in Natural History.	11 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
10 " The Bible and Science.	12 " The Uses of the Cross.
11 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.	13 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
12 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	14 " Persecutions of the Church.
13 " The Atonement Scheme.	15 " Some Allegories.
14 " The Lord and His Works.	16 " Heaven.
15 " Prayer.	17 " Hell.
16 " The Creeds.	18 " Miscellaneous.
17 " Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOSTER.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as 'Scripture' Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION.

OR, THE Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.....	5
3 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood.....	25
4 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller.....	10
5 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison.....	15
6 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall.....	10
7 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin.....	10
8 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin.....	50
9 Tyndal's Belief in Inaugural and Portrait.....	25
10 Essays on Miracles. David Hume.....	10
11 I and Question. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
12 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
13 Why Do Men Suffer? Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
14 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh.....	10
15 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.....	5
16 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake.....	5
17 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts.....	5
18 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts.....	5
19 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts.....	5
20 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts.....	5
21 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts.....	5
22 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts.....	5
23 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake.....	5
24 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake.....	5
25 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts.....	5
26 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
27 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
28 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.....	10
29 Science and Bible Antagonists. C. Watts.....	10
30 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts.....	5
31 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake.....	10
32 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen.".....	5
2 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
3 20 Questions Without Answers.....	5
4 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin.....	10
5 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian.....	10
6 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake.....	5
7 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh.....	5
8 A Few Words about the Devil.....	5
9 New Life of Jacob.....	5
10 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake.....	10
11 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake.....	10
12 Acts of the Apostles: A Page. A. H.....	10
13 Lullabies Aspects of Christianity. A. H.....	10
14 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
15 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh.....	5
16 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.....	5
17 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
18 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh.....	5
19 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz.....	10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

150 AMERICAN WATCH

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 50 days. Is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.

It has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lantern Pinion, 240 beats to minute. No key required to wind and set weight 4 oz.; exactly like our Postpaid for $1.50, $3 for $4.00, 12 for $15.00, by express. Mention paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CHARM. AGENTS & Storekeepers send for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL. Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons, { 10 Ounces per doz. }	each $2.50
" " { 14 Ounces per doz. }	" 3.00
" " { 10 Ounces per doz. }	" 3.00
" " { 10 Ounces per doz. }	" 3.50
Orange " { 10 Ounces per doz. }	" 2.75
Sugar " { 10 Ounces per doz. }	" 3.25
" " { 10 Ounces per doz. }	" 3.00
" " { 10 Ounces per doz. }	" 3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl. "The Time To Be Happy Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Ba ges, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer.

(If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN.

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy. Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and Reports free. Prompt attention. Send drawing and description to T. Rogers & Co., Attys Washington D.C.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only.

is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr Fellows is an Infidel.

To regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABULETS. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

JERRY GETS A MESSAGE FROM HIS JOSS.

And it came to pass after ten days, that the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah.—Jere. xlii. 7.

"A Digest of Science."THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.
Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

John E. Remsburg's Works.False Claims. Revised and Enlarged.

As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Church's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiotcy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbatic Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies $1.Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason," are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.The Apostle of Liberty. An Address.

An address delivered in Pine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers's Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.News of the Week.

It is being heralded abroad as a significant fact that in a fire which consumed a theater at Sheffield, Eng., a Bible would not burn.

WHILE the ancient Church of Romano at Borisoglebsk, Russia, was crowded with pilgrims who had come to take part in a religious procession, an alarm of fire caused a panic in which one hundred and fifty persons were trampled to death.

AN Albany, N. Y., telegram says that, acting under the attorney-general's construction of the law prohibiting sports on the first day of the week, the state fish and game commission will instruct fish and game protectors to prohibit fishing on Sunday.

At Reading, Pa., Pietro Bucciari, who murdered Sister Hildaberta for some reason still unexplained, was hanged on the 29th ult. Fathers Isorelli and Janauksiewicz administered his spiritual counsel, which, dispatches say, "was received very devoutly."

THE Russian government is striving to prevent its subjects from attending the World's Fair, being afraid that they will learn something. The Russian press is lying about it and Chicago preposterously. In Odessa Gaze's tourist tickets are not allowed to be sold.

EX-POSTMASTER-GENERAL WANAMAKER, with two associates, Brown and Pratt, are pushing their suit to close the World's Fair on Sundays. They allege that their interests as stockholders would be injured by keeping it open and returning the gift of Congress, as the Sunday admission fees would not cover this loss. They fear damage, too, from the reduction of Sunday admission to twenty-five cents that has been proposed. Last Sunday the attendance was larger than on any preceding one. Religious services were held on the grounds.

THE publication Printers' Ink, which was charged third-class postage by Wanamaker on the ground that it was an advertising sheet only, has won its legal fight against this ruling and will hereafter pay but second-class rates. Its publishers, in the original plea against Wanamaker's decision, showed that it was of exactly identical nature with Book News, the periodical issued by the postmaster-general himself and admitted to second-class rates. Printers' Ink has expended $30,000 in unjust postal charges.

THE South Carolina law making the state the monopolist of the liquor trade, one of the oddest ever passed, went into effect on the 1st. The government had provided itself with stock worth $300,000. It will sell only absolutely pure liquor. The cheapest prices will be $3 a gallon, 75 cents a quart, 40 cents a pint, and 20 cents a half-pint. It is expected that there will be difficulty in suppressing private selling. A large part of the people are opposed to the law. But Governor Tillman vows to stamp out all the "blind tigers" started, at whatever cost. As Charleston could establish no government dispenser, owing to inability to furnish the required signatures of two-thirds of the citizens, its inhabitants previous to the 1st inst. laid in stocks to last six months. Most think that that is as long as the law will last.

THE pardon of the imprisoned Anarchists by Governor Altgeld of Illinois is receiving furious denunciations. The press says that it was done to win him the labor vote, but that he shall never hold office again. He was born in Prussia and came here a boy. He is charged with partiality for foreign interests. He cannot, it is said, "forget that he is of foreign birth, and foreign ideas are at all times dominant in his mind. He looks upon America as a place in which to make money, not as a place in which to make a home and surround it with such precautions as will insure peace and happiness. It is probable that the governor would have developed into an out-and-out Anarchist if his lucky real-estate speculations had not turned the course of his natural tendencies." It is charged, besides this, that he won part of his fortune through dishonest dealings. His Socialistic leanings, critics say, have not moved his selfish nature to share his millionaire fortune with the poor. The point most urged against his action is that it is presented by him not as an exercise of clemency but as a presumptuous invasion of the province of the judiciary, for he reviews the proceedings of the judge and jury at great length and in a partisan tone, and usurps their functions. His impeachment is suggested. On the other hand, the opposite party is supporting his course with reasonings equally numerous.

EAGLE BRAND.

—THE BEST—

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO.,
Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.

13118

HEAVEN AND ITS WONDERS

From Things heard and seen in the Spiritual World, by EMANUEL SWENDBERG;

THE LAST JUDGMENT,

as witnessed by him in 1757.

Both books (the first in cloth 375 pp. and the second in paper 208 pp.) sent by mail for $1.00. Address exactly Am. Swedenborg Printing & Publishing Society, Dept. "A," 20 COOPER UNION, N. Y. CITY.

6teow17

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price 25 cents.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

Water of Life

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12

34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 28. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, July 15, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

COMPARATIV PROGRESS.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers: "Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

New Publications.

S. P. Putnam's Latest Pamphlet.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1893, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Free-thought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for His Processes Are Egregiously Slow, They Are Egregiously Wasteful, They Often Serve No Use, They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impatched; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain. Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR

Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN. Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK--AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages, Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The

Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 28. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, July 15, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - JULY 15, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Materialism vs. Idealism.

In the debates over the existence of a God, and other points of religion, there is frequently involved the question of materialism vs. idealism or spiritualism. Whether everything is matter, or everything is idea or spirit, or the universe consists partly of matter and partly of idea or spirit, is considered to have a bearing on the existence of a God, of spirits, of a future life, and so on.

It does have such a bearing, yet not so important as some suppose. The settling of this question of materialism vs. idealism would not at the same time settle the problem of a God, etc. It would influence that question, it is true—it would throw the probabilities in it more to the one side or to the other—but it would still leave it open in the main; it would not conclusively settle it. To be sure, if it should be proved that all is material, this would pretty nearly settle that there is no God, for that being has ever been supposed to be a spiritual one; but if it should be proved that all is idea or spirit, this, while perhaps rendering the existence of God a trifle less unlikely from some points of view, still would affect it but little.

Idealism and spiritualism mean the same thing. They are interchangeable terms. What we mean by spiritualism here is philosophical spiritualism. We do not mean the spiritualism which teaches the future existence as a separate personality of each human being who dies. The two doctrines have few points of similarity. A person may entertain the one without in the least believing the other.

Thus materialism stands opposed to two kinds of spiritualism. It is adverse to philosophical spiritualism, that system which denies the existence of matter, body, substance, as a thing outside of and foreign to spirit, and which affirms that the universe is wholly spirit or idea. And it is adverse to that spiritualism of mediums, materializations, etc., through which persons supposed to be dead communicate with the living.

These things are somewhat confused in the minds of many. They need to be cleared up, that persons may not fall under certain misapprehensions. If Miss Chapman should compel Mr. Wettstein to abandon his position that all is matter, she would still remain about as far as ever from having proved a God. If Mr. Wettstein should grow to think that part or all of the universe is spirit, he still would not by any means be required to think that a certain portion of that spirit is an intelligent personality, resembling ourselves only so much mightier as to have created the universe. In other words, it is not necessary, in order to the denial of a God, to declare that all is matter. There may be a great deal of spirit, or all of spirit, and yet no God. Then, too, if a Christian tells us that some great unchristian scientist, such as Spencer or Huxley or Tyndall, has repudiated materialism and declared a belief in philosophical spiritualism, otherwise called idealism, we are not to admit therefore that the scientist believes in a future life of mankind in spirit form, or in a God, or, least of all, in the Christian God. A friend writes:

“FRANKLIN, MINN., June 7, 1893.

“E. M. MACDONALD, Dear Sir: I see by the papers that Prof. Henry Drummond, of England, says, ‘There are no materialists now. Huxley has expressly repudiated materialism, as have also Herbert Spencer and Tyndall.’ Will you please say in THE TRUTH SEEKER when they changed their views, and what they believe now, and if it is known why they changed?”

“What is the real difference between a materialist and an Atheist or Infidel. Huxley has said that he was an Agnostic; but I cannot see by his writings that he believes anything spiritual. Please give us some light on the subject, and oblige, Yours truly, C. W. WOODBURY.”

We will endeavor to make some of these matters clear to the view.

In answer to one of the questions above we will say: a materialist believes either (1) that all is matter, and that there is no God or future life; or (2) that part of the universe is matter, and matter is the most important, and the generative part, and that there is no God or future life. And there are a very few who call themselves materialists yet do not pronounce against a God or future life. An Atheist is one who denies a God, whatever he may believe otherwise. An Infidel is one who denies the Christian God and religion, whatever he may believe otherwise—whether he believe in a god of some other kind than the Christian, or in what he will.

Huxley, Spencer, and Tyndall have not changed their views on this subject. None of them is a materialist. Yet none is a spiritualist or idealist. They are unable to decide between the two systems. They find considerations for, and considerations against, and, with the modesty and honesty so lacking in quick-concluding Christians, declare themselves to be on this point Agnostic, or ignorant. And none of the three believes in the spiritualism which affirms future existence. Of that system, Huxley is a very active and bitter enemy. We have not space for an exposition of the beliefs of all three. We will give an account of that of Huxley. The beliefs of the others are not far dissimilar.

First, however, we must spend a few minutes in gaining an understanding of the doctrine of philosophical spiritualism, or idealism. Persons who have never chanced to study philosophy will find it needful. And it is highly interesting. The idealistic philosopher will usually set out with an examination of just what our knowledge of a given object really consists of. For instance: This table is brown, long, wide, three feet high, judging by the eye: that is, it forms a little spot in the field of vision; in other words, it produces a certain sensation on the optic nerve. It weighs ten pounds: that is, it would require to lift it an effort less than for a weight of eleven pounds, and greater than for a weight of nine pounds; in other words, it produces a certain muscular sensation. It is hard and square, which means that, if first pushed, and then run over by the hand, it will excite two distinct kinds of muscular sensations. And so on. When I examine closely what I know of it, I find that I know nothing else except the impressions it makes upon me. Our idea of a body comprises nothing else than this: we know nothing of it but the sensations it excites in us; we determine it by the nature, number, and order of these sensations; we know nothing of its inner nature, supposing it has one; we simply affirm that it is the unknown cause of these sensations. When we say that a body has existed in the absence of our sensations, we mean simply that if, during that time, we had been within reach of it, we should have had sensations which we have not had. We never define it save by our present or past, future or possible, impressions.

Having taken us thus far, an idealist who wishes to adhere to the most thoroughgoing school will say: Here let us drop the practice, used in the last few lines, of referring to any “unknown cause of these sensations.” If it is an unknown cause, if we know nothing about it, what is the use of our talking of something that we know nothing about? Logic admonishes us to assume nothing that is uncalled for. Why not suppose that our sensations or ideas cause themselves, and stop there, instead of going on to imagine a something called matter behind them which causes them? If we unnecessarily assume this matter to account for the ideas produced in us, we are as reprehensible as the Theists who will not stop short with the universe and call it self-existent, but insist on an unknown cause of it. Let us then lay down the principle that ideas are all that we can ever know; things that are not ideas, or things in themselves, we can never have the faintest perception of; and as there is not the slightest proof that they exist, it is folly to declare that they do. Then, our knowledge consisting wholly of states of consciousness, our mental work, in extending science and the like, will be simply grouping those states of consciousness in the order in which they naturally occur.

That this idealistic view is the only safe and certain one—the only one that can be termed scientific in the strict sense of that word—is insisted on especially by several of its exponents. In the preceding paragraphs we presented mainly the views of Berkeley; here we will describe those of Fichte, the most notable of those who emphasize the scientific certainty and demonstrableness of idealism. This German philosopher, when he came to contemplate the systems of preceding thinkers, saw in them, he said, as their fatal vice, that they had not been built on a foundation that was solid and immovable. For the supposed outer causes of our ideas had been taken for granted; so that here was one whole branch of these systems resting on a conjectural basis, and therefore, as he supposed, lying out of the region of strict scientific truth. Fichte's object then was to find out what we can be said absolutely to know, and having discovered this, to erect a system, not of philosophy, but of rigid scientific knowledge, against which no skepticism could possibly rear an objection. Scientific truth, according to Fichte, is that which, starting from one self-evident basis, infers every succeeding position, step by step, with demonstrative certainty. Then the question is, From whence must we start, in order to be perfectly secure in every succeeding step? Not, as others had done, from the supposition of a world of external objects standing in match to the facts of consciousness, and as though it were just as certain as they; but simply and solely from those facts of consciousness themselves. All that we are immediately conscious of, argues Fichte, are the states and processes of our own thinking self. Our sensations, perceptions, judgments, impressions, ideas, or whatever we choose to designate them, these form the material of all the knowledge that is immediately given us—knowledge that no skeptic ever disputed; nay, which cannot be disputed without our performing, in order to do so, one of the very processes, and admitting some of the very conceptions, whose existence we dispute. Knowledge, that which has about it no element of mere faith, must commence absolutely and solely with my inner, mental self. Whatever I experience immediately, i. e., whatever forms a part of my own direct consciousness, is surely and certainly known—known in a manner in which nothing whatever can possibly be that does not pass through my mental experience. Suppose, for a moment, that there were an outer world: how could we affirm this to be the case, when everything that lies without us can become known only by passing through our own consciousness? If it be said that our inner consciousness is so formed as to give us a perfect representation of the world without, then we reply, How can you verify this fact? The means of verifying it, if they exist at all, must arise from the capacity of comparing the reality with the representation—a process which implies (what has just been admitted impossible) the power of perceiving things out of the consciousness, without any representation by idea whatever. Try as we will, therefore, we must, after all, confess that we have consciousness, and consequently knowledge, only of the states of our spiritual inner self. Whatever resort we try, we still find ourselves confined within the boundaries of our soul, without the possibility of a passage into an external and different world. What we know is simply the contents of our own consciousness; if there is a different world, it can exist to us only when it becomes part and parcel of those contents. And hence we cannot assume its outer and different existence at all. In some discussions men may assume, and proceed well enough on the assumption; but in a strictly scientific philosophy, where nothing is to be assumed, but every point known, Fichte considered that a rigid consecutive method did not allow us to go a single step beyond what is to us absolutely real, namely the facts of our mental experience. He imagined the mind to be, as it were, an intelligent eye placed in the central point of our inward consciousness, surveying all that takes place there; and it was from this point of view, the only absolute and scientific one, that he proposed to give an account of our moral and intellectual history, detailing the rise, the progress, and all the events of our real inward life, from its commencement to its termination. Whether the scenes which take place within this circle of mentality betoken any outer and distinct existence or not, was to him a matter of no consequence; assured he was that, if this were the case, it were only just in proportion as the objects could lay aside, as it were, their outer and distinct nature, and become of the quality of mind, that they could be observed and known; or what is the same thing, that to us they could exist. The real history of every man, urged this philosopher, is the history of his mind, the flow of his conscious existence; for what to us are woods, mountains, or stars, but groups of our states of consciousness? what are all forms of what is falsely called the material world, but certain visions which have passed through our own minds, certain sensations which we have inwardly experienced?

Such is philosophical spiritualism, or idealism. It will seem strange to many. Yet our own Anti-christian Huxley, one of the most hard-headed of mortals, inclines toward it. For ourselves, we have no opinion to offer on it. Huxley asserts that the physical science of the materialist does not comprise all that we come across in the universe. No, he says, a great many important phenomena lie quite beyond its limits. He proceeds:

"I cannot conceive, for example, how the phenomena of consciousness, as such and apart from the physical process by which they are called into existence, are to be brought within the bounds of physical science. Take the simplest possible example, the feeling of redness. Physical science tells us that it commonly arises as a consequence of molecular changes propagated from the eye to a certain part of the substance of the brain, when vibrations of the luminiferous ether of a certain character fall upon the retina. Let us suppose the process of physical analysis pushed so far that one could view the last link of this chain of molecules, watch their movements as if they were billiard balls, weigh them, measure them, and know all that is physically knowable about them. Well, even in that case, we should be just as far from being able to include the resulting phenomenon of consciousness, the feel of redness, within the bounds of physical science, as we are at present. It would remain as unlike the phenomena we know under the names of matter and motion as it is now. If there is any plain truth upon which I have made it my business to insist over and over again it is this. . . . Physical science may and probably will, some day, enable our posterity to set forth the exact physical concomitants and conditions of the strange rapture of beauty, but if ever that day arrives, the rapture will remain, just as it is now, outside and beyond the physical world; and, even in the mental world, something superadded to mere sensation. I do not wish to crow unduly over my humble cousin the orang, but in the esthetic province, as in that of the intellect, I am afraid he is nowhere. I doubt not he would detect a fruit amid a wilderness of leaves where I could see nothing; but I am tolerably confident that he has never been awestruck, as I have been, by the dim religious gloom, as of a temple devoted to the earthgods, of the tropical forest which he inhabits. Yet I doubt not that our poor long-armed and short-legged friend, as he sits meditatively munching his durian fruit, has something behind that sad Socratic face of his which is utterly 'beyond the bounds of physical science.' Physical science may know all about his clutching the fruit and munching it and digesting it, and how the physical titillation of his palate is transmitted to some microscopic cells of the gray matter of his brain. But the feelings of sweetness and of satisfaction which, for a moment, hang out their signal lights in his melancholy eyes, are as utterly outside the bounds of physics as is the 'fine frenzy' of a human rhapsodist.

"I understand the main tenet of Materialism to be that there is nothing in the universe but matter and force; and that all the phenomena of nature are explicable by deduction from the properties assignable to these two primitive factors. That great champion of Materialism whom Mr. Lilly appears to consider to be an authority in physical science, Dr. Buchner, embodies this article of faith on his title-page. Kraft und Stoff—force and matter—are paraded as the Alpha and Omega of existence. This I apprehend is the fundamental article of the faith materialistic; and whosoever does not hold it is condemned by the more zealous of the persuasion (as I have some reason to know) to the Inferno appointed for fools or hypocrites. But all this I heartily disbelieve; and at the risk of being charged with wearisome repetition of an old story I will briefly give my reasons for persisting in my infidelity. In the first place, as I have already hinted, it seems to me pretty plain that there is a third thing in the universe, to wit, consciousness, which, in the hardness of my heart or head, I cannot see to be matter or force, or any conceivable modification of either, however intimately the manifestations of the phenomena of consciousness may be connected with the phenomena known as matter and force. In the second place, the arguments used by Descartes and Berkeley to show that our certain knowledge does not extend beyond our states of consciousness, appear to me to be as irrefragable now as they did when I first became acquainted with them some half century ago. All the materialistic writers I know of who have tried to bite that file have simply broken their teeth. But, if this is true, our one certainty is the existence of the mental world, and that of Kraft und Stoff [force and matter] falls into the rank of, at best, a highly probable hypothesis."

After these passages, Professor Huxley declares that with "the effete mythology of spiritualism"—i. e., the spiritualism of mediumistic table-tipping, etc.—he "certainly would have nothing to do." While if he "were forced to choose between materialism or idealism," he "should elect for the latter." But he is not aware that he is "under any compulsion to choose either the one or the other."

We May Be Thwarted by the Sunday-closing Bigots, After All.

When Sunday opening of the World's Fair was effected shortly ago, we did not exult over it as a full victory. We were not sufficiently certain of its continuance. And, according to the present outlook, that continuance may be terminated. Our apprehensions seem not unlikely to be fulfilled. In addition, we were not suited with a large part of the exhibits being closed Sundays, and with the absence of Sunday excursion trains which proceeded from the uncertainty of the matter. In this point likewise our dissatisfaction is being justified by the unfortunate results that have flowed from these two circumstances. For owing to them, the attendance is small Sundays. Perhaps a third cause of its being small is the Christian boycott. At all events, small it is. The Sabbatarians are jubilant.

This scanty attendance, displeasing enough in itself, may even occasion the closing of the Fair on Sundays altogether. Ex-Postmaster-general Wanamaker, with an associate or two, has again applied in the United States circuit court for an injunction closing the gates, and he represents that the attendance Sundays is so small as to damage the stock that he holds in the corporation. He shows that on the four last Sundays the average receipts amounted but to $32,850, while it would be necessary to take in $83,874 each Sunday to liquidate the debts due the government. The court took the case under advisement. The slimness of the Sunday attendance is thus presented in another form, in a dispatch dated Monday:

"It is beginning to dawn on the World's Fair managers that Sunday opening is a failure. The forty-seven thousand persons who entered yesterday hardly paid the expenses of running the show. To-day the attendance was double that of Sunday."

The matter has even been taken up again by the national commission. At a meeting of that body the opponents of Sunday opening were eager to renew the battle. Commissioner Hundley, of Alabama, was the leader of the anti-opening forces. He presented a resolution with many preambles that the commission place itself on record as opposed to the opening of the gates on Sunday. Commissioner Tousley, of Minnesota, in support of the resolution said:

"Has Sunday opening been a success? I say no. You have worked the poor man for all he is worth. But that thing don't work. It's a downright fizzle so far. Now the directors want a twenty-five-cent admission. This thing will result in a conference and the addition of another rule for Sunday opening."

"Why don't you act like men? If the commission could have enforced the Sunday-closing rule in a lucid interval the Fair would have had an average daily attendance of two hundred thousand. You will find that Sunday opening will be a failure. The poor man will not pay twenty-five cents for a four-fifths show or a one-fifth show. The directors have worked the poor dodge too far. When you make Sunday a pauper's day you make a class distinction, and the poor man in this country wants as good a show as the rich man. Sunday opening is paralyzed from this time on. In the first place the exhibitors are not in favor of Sunday opening. Some of the best exhibits are covered up. In the second place, the poor men are against Sunday opening."

Commissioner Clendinning, of Arkansas, said he was tired of the commission giving semi-assent to everything the board saw fit to do. The commission could celebrate the Fourth of July in no better way than by declaring its repudiation of the directors' action in opening the Fair Sunday. The matter went over for a few days. Several hundred telegrams and letters from various religious organizations protesting against Sunday opening were received and ordered placed on the record.

The clergy continue to rage and blatter against infringement of other attractions on the day of which they think they should have a monopoly. At a weekly meeting of Baptist clergymen at Chicago Rev. Justin D. Fulton, of Brooklyn, who was visiting these ministers, said of the scant Sunday attendance:

"This knocks the bottom out of any financial reason for Sunday opening. It also shows that there are more godly people on earth than the newspapers have bargained for. I have been thinking of this matter night and day, and I am thoroughly convinced that it is time for action. We have passed many resolutions to no purpose. What is needed now is for a delegation to see the directors personally, and I suggest that your body appoint a committee to confer with the Exposition authorities with a view to having the gates closed from next Sabbath on. The committee wants to go in the name of God, and not in the name of the almighty dollar; in the name of America, and not that of some narrow clique."

"We are on the edge of a great possibility to please God, and the opportunity must not be lost. If we act in this matter in the proper manner we will have a great item with which to defend ourselves on the great judgment day."

The parsons all took to this notion of getting something to defend themselves with on the great judgment day—perhaps feeling smart need thereof—for they passed the resolution called for unanimously. More sentiments of this species were expressed by Rev. Dr. J. Emory Price, Methodist Episcopal, in the Independence day oration at Ocean Grove, New Jersey. In denouncing what he called "the infamous action of the Chicago directory," he said:

"We must concede to President Cleveland a certain downright honesty and a good purpose to do the best he can for this government, but how long would it take to settle this question of a national defiance by a body of men in Chicago if we had an Andrew Jackson in the White House?"

"If Andrew Jackson were there he would say: 'You must either close your gates on Sunday or give back the $2,000,000 you got from the government, or by the eternal I'll send the troops of the United States to enforce my orders.' The directors of the Chicago Fair have rejected one of our noblest exhibits, the American Sabbath, and instead of it have given an exhibition of deliberate fraud. They have pawned their honor for a measure of gate-money. If a member of the New York Stock Exchange should be guilty of such actions he would be promptly branded as a thief and a defaulter."

"We may laugh at the Puritans for their distorted conception of the Sabbath, but they would have scorned to steal $2,000,000 from the national government, as the Chicago Fair directors have done."

Cheer after cheer followed the remarks of this bloody-thoughted doctor, and as he finished everyone in the audience went to the platform to shake the hand that itched to slam the door in the face of the masses seeking mental and moral elevation.

The Sabbatarian bigots are powerful. They have thwarted our efforts to give the people pleasure and instruction on Sunday. They have defeated and mutilated our right. They call for the exercise of our most active antagonism.

Our Pictures Talk Too Loud.

Allusion was made recently to the resolution passed by the managers of the Santa Ana, Cal., Public Library excluding from the library newspapers containing cartoons attacking religion. The object of this was to exclude THE TRUTH SEEKER. It was also a side thrust at the Investigator, for the resolution was broadened to cover all magazines or newspapers "the avowed or manifest purpose of which is to overthrow the Christian religion."

The movement which culminated in the resolution was started some time ago by a minister, naturally. The papers were hurting his trade, which is what they are published for. When the resolution was before the trustees it was debated at length. Mr. Baker, editor of the Santa Ana Standard, who is also one of the trustees of the library, announced that he was opposed to the resolution, every part and parcel of it, from top to bottom, first, last, and all the time. He then stated that he knew what the resolution was aimed at; that it was meant to exclude the two most ably edited Free thought journals in America—THE TRUTH SEEKER and the Investigator. Then warming to his subject, he proceeded to elaborate upon free speech, free press, and free thought in an eloquent, if not to many an elegant, manner. For fifteen minutes he was in his element, for if there is any one thing more than another in which Editor Baker takes an especial delight, says our Boston contemporary, it is in making a speech upon his favorite topic, Free thought. He closed with an appeal to the members of the board to think well before they voted on the resolution, and, therefore, established a criterion in the matter of selecting for and admitting to the library tables and files reading-matter for only a portion of the taxpayers, and not all who help to support the institution by direct taxation.

In the columns of the Standard, Mr. Baker said further:

"At the library meeting of the trustees on Tuesday evening a resolution was adopted by a vote of four to one to exclude from the reading tables all papers and magazines attacking any religion by our cartoons. The object of the resolution was to strike at THE TRUTH SEEKER, one of the best Free thought papers in America, but the rule applies to any religious organ as well as THE TRUTH SEEKER."

"We are individually opposed to any and all such resolutions that control, restrain, or exclude publications that ridicule other sentiments than its own. An inspired religion can't be hurt by ridicule or cartoons. Neither can science and truth. The Boston Investigator, Advance Thought, and the War Cry will still remain on the tables. We cordially recommend all of them as samples of modern intelligence."

We advise the visitors to the library to read the Investigator, which is still to be found on the tables. After this, ask for THE TRUTH SEEKER, which is tucked away on the shelves, to be seen only upon application, like some precious work of art which has to be carefully guarded.

We feel proud of this distinction, naturally. It shows that we are really doing what we are trying to do—hurt the trade of priestcraft, and destroy its foundation, superstition. The preachers are afraid of our paper, and that pleases us. We will risk their attempts to suppress it.

To Mr. Baker, the fearless editor, we extend our thanks for his attempts to stay the action of bigotry. He lost the fight but he won the victory, for Free thought will have more friends in Santa Ana now than before the minister started his crusade.

We had written this far when the postman interrupted to hand us this letter:

"CLINTON, LA., July 8, 1893.

"TO THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, New York, Gentlemen: In my Investigator I find some of the damned fools in California are doing what they can to injure you. It therefore becomes the duty of us who are saved from theological humbug to come to the aid of the truth. With that end in view, I send you a post-office order for $10 to aid THE TRUTH SEEKER in its fight against error. Hope to meet Eugene Macdonald at the coming Congress. Think I saw you once in the old stamping-ground, Clinton place. But was not fledged enough at the time, as an infidel, to stand up to be counted, so did not feel that boldness of the spirit, or words to that effect, to strike up an acquaintance, but now I would count it a pleasure to go a good many miles to touch your hand. Last October I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Wakeman, and one thing I regret very much was not seeing D. M. Bennett when he passed through our town on his way home on his tour around the world. Leroy Dutton and Wettstein both had a visit with him, but he was past before I knew. Noble man! Hope to have a rousing time in October. Would be willing to give $10 toward bringing 'Saladin' to the Congress. Payable on demand.

"Fraternally, JAMES A. GREENHILL."

It is very evident that the Santa Ana minister's scheme to suppress THE TRUTH SEEKER has miscarried, for $10 will circulate a lot of TRUTH SEEKERS. And we should like, if some Liberal in that town will send us the names, to put that $10 worth of heresy right into Santa Ana. And we will add another $1 worth—donation by Collin McLarty, of Brooklyn, to help along.

And to let the minister see that his work for his Lord has borne fruit, we hope every Liberal in Santa Ana will go to the library and ask to see THE TRUTH SEEKER.

We thank Mr. Greenhill for his generosity, and will say so to his face at Chicago in October.

Helen H. Gardener has in press another book, entitled "Facts and Fictions of Life." It will contain among other essays her celebrated paper on "Sex in Brain," and her essays on Heredity, which were read before the World's Columbian Woman's Congress. The book will be out some time in July, and orders for it may be sent now, and will be filled as soon as the books are finished. In cloth covers, the price is $1; paper covers, 50 cents.

The doctrines disseminated by J. G. Shaw in and around Waco, Texas, seem to be having effect and rising into popularity, for that industrious Free thought worker, and publisher of the Independent Pulpit, instead of experiencing his neighbors' resentment for circulating those notions is steadily mounting into the highest place in their scale of esteem. This no doubt is due in part to the admirable personality of himself, who gives the Texans a good example of how excellent may be a character regulated on the modern and unchristian principles. Among the honors which they have accorded him, in last year's campaign he was pushed on the stump in behalf of Democracy to the extent of twelve speeches in different parts of the state, and given a hearing that he felt very proud of. Later, on Confederate decoration day and the unveiling of a monument in that city to Confederate dead, he was chosen to deliver the oration before five thousand people. And again, on the national decoration day he spoke for the Union soldiers.

It is reported that there have lately been discovered, in different places in the East, two early manuscripts of the gospels. When these finds have been looked into, such points of interest as they may present will be given in THE TRUTH SEEKER. A correspondent sends us the remark of Rev. James Brookes, of St. Louis, on that one which is in Syrian text. This remark is: "If the manuscript reported by Professor Harris agrees with Tischendorf's Greek text and our accepted version of the gospels the world of religious thought and study will be immensely benefited." Our correspondent points what we are afraid we must call the finger of scorn at the condition in the above sentence, If it agrees with our accepted version. He says, with what the pulpit-revering mind will with pain perceive to be bitter sarcasm: "If it does not agree with our accepted version, I presume the cause of truth 'will be immensely benefited.'" We will submit this caster of doubt on the makers of scriptures to such treatment as our readers deem appropriate.

The accidents at the World's Fair last Sunday and Monday we suppose will be held up by the parsons as testimonies of the Lord's wrath at Sunday opening. The Sunday calamity is narrated on our last page. The catastrophe of Monday befell two of the Fair buildings. One paragraph in Samuel Putnam's "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair" reads: "The Cold Storage House is on the Stony Island avenue boundary. It is built for use, not ornament. It has a complete apparatus for the manufacture of ice. There is a promenade on the roof, with observatory towers." One of these towers took fire at the top. Firemen ascended. Burning fragments fell to the bottom of the tower, and its great hollow shaft, one hundred and fifty feet high, was in an instant filled with roaring flames. Some of the firemen jumped and were killed. The tower fell and crashed through the roof. Those remaining on it were burnt to ashes. About a score perished. The whole building, and the World's Fair stables near by, were consumed. This horror will be made the most of in the back-country pulpits of the land, and, we suppose, incite a simple soul here and there to redoubled opposition of the movement for turning the preachers' day into the people's day.

On the announced determination of the New York state fish and game commission to prosecute Sunday fishermen, a correspondent of the New York Sun writes: "There are about half a million anglers in the state of New York who can only enjoy their sport on Sunday, because they are compelled to attend to their daily labors during the week. To attempt to interfere with them in the quiet, peaceful, and retired way in which they practice what is called 'the gentle art' would be an outrage; and in these days, when the workingmen evince a disposition to complain, often even without just grounds, it is unwise to attack them wantonly in their innocent amusements." After citing the law under which the proposed prosecutions will be made, which reads: "All shooting, hunting, fishing, playing, horse-racing, gaming, or other public sport, exercises, or shows upon the first day of the week, and all noise disturbing the peace of the day, are prohibited," he says: "There is no hunting in the neighborhood of villages and churches, except perhaps that kind in which the preachers and deacons are past masters, judging from the records of a few years back. If this is sound legal doctrine, then we must put into jail all the fellows who shoot on Sunday, who hunt on Sunday, who fish on Sunday, who 'play' ball on Sunday, who 'play' the piano on Sunday, who 'play' the organ on Sunday, who 'play' the devil with the deacons or with the ladies on Sunday, who 'exercise' on horseback on Sunday, who 'exercise' on bicycles on Sunday, who 'exercise' on foot on Sunday, and who make noise by shouting and yelling at revival meetings or other church meetings on Sunday, thereby disturbing the peace of the day. Then let us stop the running of the ferries and the railroad cars on Sunday, stop the ringing of all the church-bells on Sunday—many of them are cracked and unmusical—stop all the clocks on Sunday, and stop the world from going around on Sunday."

Send for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Communications.

These letters will be published in pamphlet form within two or three weeks, as a guide-book and description of the Fair. Send 25 cents for "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair."

Pen Pictures of the World's Fair.

THE FORESTRY BUILDING.

The Forestry Building, for instance, is one of the prettiest in the whole Exposition. Its architecture is of the rustic order. On its four sides is a veranda. Its roof is supported by a series of columns composed of tree trunks in their natural state, with bark undisturbed. These are contributed by the different states and by foreign countries, each furnishing a specimen of its most characteristic tree. The sides of the building are made of slabs with bark removed. The window frames are also in rustic fashion. The main entrance is elaborately furnished with different kinds of wood. The roof is thatched with tan-bark. The interior is finished in various woods, to show their beautiful graining and polish. This building displays the forest wealth of the world, logs and sections of trees, worked lumber, shingles, flooring, casing, etc. There are dye woods, mosses, abnormal woody products, lichens, vegetable substances used for bedding, gums, resins, vegetable ivory, cocoanut shells, gourds, wood pulp, rattan, willow-ware and wooden-ware such as pails, tubs, and brooms. It is delightful to walk through these scenes painted by nature herself, and see how attractive and useful are the innumerable trees that adorn the planet.

THE DAIRY BUILDING.

Near by is the Dairy Building, and of course everybody wants to see this, not only those who make butter, but those who eat it, for after all who can live without butter? and good butter is what helps to make a paradise of this world. This building is devoted to a complete exhibit of dairy products and to a Dairy School, and tests for determining the merits of different breeds of cattle as milk and butter producers. There is also a cheese exhibit, only partially prepared, however.

THE ANTHROPOLOGICAL BUILDING.

This is sometimes called the Educational Building. The inscription over the door is "Man and His Works." It is just west of the Forestry Building. Connected with it are the Bureau of Charities and Corrections, and the Bureau of Sanitation and Hygiene. There are also out-door exhibits of the Yucatan ruins, the Portals of Labna, etc. These are exceedingly interesting and set one to thinking of the remote life of the American continent. These uncouth and somber ruins are suggestive of melancholy. The people who made these dwelling and temples centuries ago do not appear to be of a very bright or progressive nature.

Prehistoric America can be better studied than ever. The glacial period is illustrated by several collections. Burial places in the Ohio and Trenton valleys are shown by models, maps, and photographs. Earthworks are reproduced, with skeletons, and the implements and ornaments taken from them. Ancient Pueblos from Arizona, New Mexico, and Colorado, the ruined cities of Central and South America, with models of sculptures, human heads, hieroglyphics, etc., are shown.

There are costumes, utensils, implements of war and peace, and ornaments of the various Indian tribes. In the British Columbia exhibit is a model village of Skidegate, with its ornate totem pole and other curious specimens. Ancient Greek art and life are chronologically arranged. Roman, Egyptian, and Assyrian archaeology has place, and Russia has filled one thousand square feet with an almost complete exhibition of the costumes and customs of the Slavic races. The Pacific islands make a valuable show. There are games, idols, amulets, charms, and ceremonial objects. There is the evolution of modern amusements—dice, dominoes, and playing cards, etc.

The south gallery is given up to stuffed birds and mammals, birds' eggs, insects, fossils, land and fresh-water shells.

There will be an exhibit of Indians living in native huts and wigwams and engaged in weaving, basket-making, etc. Sixteen Indians from Vancouver's island have erected two large wooden houses. The Six Nations of Iroquois Indians are building six bark houses, a council house, canoes, etc. An Eskimo family will dwell in a tent of skin. Three tribes of British Guiana have sent representatives. There are also one hundred Peruvian mummies. The Dark Continent has sent its quota.

The proper study of mankind is man, and surely in this building and its appurtenances we can study man alive and dead, savage and civilized, in every portion of the globe. We can study his religion and his morals. We can study his home life in cave and hut and tent. We can see how he dresses and eats, how he hunts, how he tills the soil, how he thinks and dreams, and grows apace and then decays in the long centuries. We see the roots of the life of to-day. We see the grotesque of human history. It is a continual surprise to discover "what fools we mortals are." One can have very little respect for his far ancestry after a thorough study of anthropology. It does seem as if it were true, what a certain wise man has said, that the world has been fit to live in only for the last fifty years. I am thankful that I am born to see the World's Fair and ride in a palace-car, and did not have to hunt and fish with prehistoric man, who I am sure must have had a hard time of it.

Running across the south line of the park are a number of ornamented sheds, in which will be placed everything that is attractive in blooded horses, cattle, sheep, and swine. In front of these, in somewhat desultory array, are the Cliff-dwellers, the Arctic whaler, the Viking ship, the White Horse Inn, the Dutch windmills, the French colonies' exhibit, the oil exhibit, the sawmill and loggers' camp, the stock pavilion, and the agricultural machines. These places at present are not much thronged and the exhibits are not complete.

People have not got into the habit of going so far from the main central attractions. This we might say is the prose part of the Exposition. One comes here mainly for information, and he finds plenty to interest and much to charm. Variety is the spice of life, and certainly there was never a greater variety packed on six hundred and thirty-three acres than in the Fair. The poet, the artist, the mechanic, the farmer, the antiquarian, the inventor, every taste and talent will find room and verge enough. Nothing has been disdained. All human history apparently is spread out before one. Every animal and every plant are somewhere in this vast museum. Every day we can take a different path, and something novel is sure to be seen. We can walk; we can climb; we can swing; we can ride; we can sit down; we can almost fly; we can grope through caves and grottoes. The sea is before us and the sky: great ships, palaces, cottages, flowers, and grass. The beautiful, the sublime, the grotesque, the graceful, the immense, the minute, are on every side. Never was there such a school as this, such a university, such a trip around the world, such a panorama, such a circus, such a whirligig of time, such an annihilation of space, such a meeting of extremes, such a checkerboard of life, such a drama, such a symphony, such a medley, such an all-round show and universal delectation, as this Exposition. The stream of time never bloomed and blossomed with such a "century plant." I do not know what the twentieth century will produce, but the nineteenth has done its level best, and the twentieth century will have to hustle to give the world a better show.

Among some of the minor attractions of the Fair which I have not reported yet, but which every visitor will want to know about, is the Bureau of Public Comfort. In a large and handsome building near the vista of states are spacious reception and waiting rooms, commodious parlors for women and children, reading matter, stationery, etc. If you want a telephone, or stenographer, or typewriter, this is the place of supply, and also all information that a stranger might require.

The Cold Storage House is on the Stony Island avenue boundary. It is built for use, not ornament. It has a complete apparatus for the manufacture of ice. There is a promenade on the roof, with observatory towers.

There are Hospital Sub-stations for emergency service—one on Midway Plaisance, one near Machinery Hall, and one in the "Backyard."

The Life-saving Station is near the battle-ship, two stories in height, with lookout. It has all modern appliances.

Manitoba's exhibit is just outside the grounds, south of Midway Plaisance. The Northwestern Territory makes a grand display in this gaily decorated and roomy structure.

The Merchant Tailors' Building is near the Fisheries Building and is neat and stylish in appearance. Every fashionable garment meets the eye, and each visitor can suit himself. The evolution of clothes, as Carlyle points out, is a very significant and intricate affair.

The hungry Yankee, of course, will gravitate to the New England Clam-bake Building, near the naval exhibits.

The Model Hospital, near the Women's Building, is for those who take homeopathic doses.

The Police Station is near Fifty-third street. It has patrol wagon, ambulance, and corps of officers. I did not visit that.

The Service Building, in rear of Choral Hall, is headquarters for all the minor officers of the Exposition.

The Terminal Railway Station, near Administration Building, is one of the most beautiful railway stations in the world. It is entered by thirty-five tracks. It is one of the ornamental structures of the Fair. It has a capacity for loading forty-three thousand passengers at once.

White Star Building, erected by White Star Steamship Company, is in front of Puck Building.

I have mentioned and located over one hundred buildings. Those who visit the World's Fair must find the rest provided the one hundred already mentioned are not sufficient. I doubt if the most persevering explorer will go over more than I have listed. Those I have not indicated do not contribute anything to the magnificence of the Fair. They are a kind of utensils, and might as well remain in obscurity behind the scenes.

The Intramural Railway is an exhibition in itself. This is the first electric elevated railway ever built. A complete circuit of the Exposition grounds can be made in twenty minutes.

I suppose I must mention the Columbian Guards. There are two thousand of them. They are superbly ornamental affairs. They realize the dignity of their station, and are generally on their good behavior, especially when two hundred thousand people are marching over the grounds. If you want to know anything always ask them. They are willing to answer, with encyclopedic affability, even if they have to consult a guide-book.

If you are tired you can patronize a wheel-chair. You may thus meet an angel unawares, for I understand that most of those who tote the chairs are theological students. What they know about heaven is nothing to what they know of the World's Fair. They will find more materials for sermons behind these chairs than in a thousand seminaries.

Chicago, Ill., 1893.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Bigotry Astounded.

After months, or rather years, of waiting and anxious expectations for the triumph of justice, the United States court of appeals has rendered a decision which has practically put the Sunday-opening question at rest. Everyone who loves liberty has reason to rejoice at this victory of law over Sabbatarian Anarchy. Those who favor Sunday laws are pleased to designate all opposers thereof as Anarchists and enemies of the public peace. On the other hand, I maintain that the real Anarchist, the real enemy of society, is he who tramples upon human rights. Hence the church is to-day, as it ever has been, the foe of liberty, and its stand upon the Sunday-opening question furnishes the best evidence of this fact. It is hard to convince some very good people that the Christianity of to-day is in its spirit the same as the Christianity of the Inquisition. True, it has been compelled to alter its methods, but when clothed with power its real nature returns. Christianity means force. It never did stand for liberty, except when liberty would be advantageous to itself. The Ethiopian could as easily change his skin, or the leopard his spots, as this religion turn from its true instinct and acknowledge fully and without reserve the natural rights of man. What is more, the church has generally had the law on its side. It thought it had this time, and its savage ardor was increased to a proportional extent. For Joe Cook and Wilbur F. Crafts gloried in the expectation that the gates of the Columbian Exposition would be guarded by troops, and that those who attempted to gain admission would be shot down. If John Calvin and Torquemada are yet hovering about this mundane sphere, how they must have rejoiced at these sentiments, and longed for a return to this scene of action!

Bigotry has been astounded by this decision of the United States court, and well may it be. They thought, having once secured a decision from the Supreme Court, that this is a Christian nation; that every event from henceforth would add to their gain; but they were mistaken.

Now that they have been routed, the Sabbatarians are going to exert their puny energy to injure the Fair. We hope they will do all they can for the benefit of the Exposition itself, and that the people may see that the institution which professes to be the friend and savior of mankind is in reality a gigantic machine for the aggrandizement of the priest, and that it is the enemy of everything that militates against his prosperity.

While the claim of the clergy that they will persuade their people to remain away from the Fair and thus injure it financially is absurd at the start, their success in the matter would amount to—what? The principle of human rights, which is involved, would be the same. It would only indicate that the church dare not deal with principles; but, being defeated from the standpoint of right, it can only resort to disreputable methods to injure its adversaries not only financially, but to ostracise them before the public. We think the World's Fair too great an institution to suffer injury from the band of small men that is assailing it, and that in the attempt they will beat their heads against a rock.

Des Moines, Ia.

FRANKLIN STEINER.

Bible Prophets: What Are They?

They are pretenders of a right given them by their particular spook God to predict his jealous, wrathful vengeance to come upon all those who show honor to any other god—to the sun (Baal) or to any natural thing.

According to their own showing they are the sourest and most revengeful specimens of human kind. Each canonical prophet tries to surpass his predecessor in the luxury of picturing his brotherman in suffering. Jeremiah says: "The prophets that have been before me of old prophesied against great kingdoms, of war, of evil, and of pestilence." Jerry is a success in the business, but Ezekiel distances him. Group the headlines of all the chapters in Ezekiel into one paragraph, and then see the sickening dose of threatened calamities. What a fiend the author! It should satisfy the cruelest saint! And "God is love."

All tribes of men are afflicted more or less with prophets; but the fanatic Jews have had them the worst. Occupying a spot of earth in southwestern Asia about the size of New Hampshire, that peculiar people had an almighty god all to themselves, and more prophets and angels than all the world beside. The original Arabic tribe or tribes, though afflicted with many priests, had for a long time only their chiefs—Abraham, Moses, etc.—playing the prophet. But Samuel extended the prophet business, and created an order of prophets to assist him. He trained young men for the office—gave them a kind of theological schooling.

The prophet outranked the priest. While the Levites attended to the ceremonials, prepared the sacrifices, made the fires, cooked and carved the lambs, and scoured the pots and pans, the prophets interpreted existing laws, and, by "Thus saith the Lord," declared new ones whenever the spirit moved them. They did the preaching and threatening, and singing praise with the harp, the cymbal, and the gong. And they fooled the people occasionally with a miracle to prove their commission. Thus was the prophet often quite busy.

From Samuel's time the prophets increased in numbers prodigiously, and soon became rivals in mischief. While showering imprecations in all directions, they hated and denounced each other. "Because of all the evil of the children of Israel which they have done to provoke me to anger, they, their princes, their priests, their prophets," etc. (Jer. xxxii). They are confessed liars, and some of them say their Lord lied, too—practiced deception (Ezek. xiv, etc.). They are notoriously false—six hundred such being slaughtered in one batch. And God is love.

Many Bible stories illustrate the rivalry, treachery, and cruelty of the Lord's prophets (see 1 Kings xii). The Lord had made Jeroboam king over ten tribes, and Rehoboam over but two; and these kings quarreled all their days. Each had his prophets. Jeroboam is at the altar one Sunday morning offering sacrifice when an opposition "man of God" prophet appears and objects. Jeroboam disregards him, and immediately his arm is withered, etc. Spies carry the news to a prophet in Bethel, who with lies and treachery entraps and slaughters the man of God rival. And "God is love."

The conspiracy between the prophet Nathan and Bathsheba (wife of Uriah and mother of Solomon) to induce old David to declare Solomon to be his successor is dramatic. While David is struggling between life and death, and the people are preparing to acknowledge and honor Adonijah as king, Bathsheba approaches the dying king and coaxingly tells him that he had solemnly promised her that Solomon should have the kingdom. David remembers nothing of the sort. She persistently repeats the alleged promise and slowly retires. Nathan, who is within hearing, now comes in from the opposite wing and importunes David in the exact words used by Bathsheba. David in his weakness yields and dies. Then from the tower Nathan, with a "Thus saith the Lord," proclaims Solomon the king. Now the first official act of the wisest man is to order the death of his half-brother. And "God is love."

The Old Testament abounds with fabulous stories—all sacred—about the prophets. Now, when from some other book the Christian reads an Arabian story of magic he sees the joke; but on reading a similar one in the Bible he is stupidly blind. When in the "Arabian Nights" he finds persons through enchantment changed to stone, he does not feel obliged to believe the story literally true; but when he reads the story of Lot's wife, to save his soul he must believe it true. When in the former he reads of a merry fellow who, with the aid of a magic rug, flies from one province to another, he does not feel particularly serious; but when he reads the story of the prophet Elijah, who by the virtue of his magic mantle flies up out of sight, he is afraid to doubt.

Christians generally esteem the prophets in proportion to the strength of their malignity. For solid hate toward everything on earth Jeremiah and Ezekiel stand high; but they fall short of the Christian hope of eternal torment. Daniel is the only Old Testament prophet that can be forced to carry vengeance beyond the grave; and he appears modest when compared with John's Revelation.

The Revelation itself shows that the early Christians quarreled and differed widely among themselves; that each group hated the others more than they did pagans. John thought that he alone possessed the true joker, and he vents his spite against the brethren in general, and the seven churches in Asia in particular, through a pretended Revelation. He was mad all through. He pursues them with fire and brimstone into the next world, and pictures the smoke of their torments ascending forever in presence of the lamb! And "God is love."

This terrible Revelation was not concocted till some fifty years after the time of the supposed crucifixion, and for a long time after that it was not accepted as having any divine authority. But when the Latin or Roman branch of Christians became dominant, the Revelation was added to the canon. Its fiery anathemas could be turned against heretics. And thus has it ever been used. The Protestant priest, too, takes solid comfort in turning back its venomous oracles on the papacy. How many "able sermons" have been preached in which the application of its terrors to Rome—the seat of the scarlet woman, the great whore of Babylon, etc.—constituted all the ability. And God is love.

The prophets spent their sour lives prognosticating all manner of calamities; hence, all the woes that befall mankind are to the Christian fulfillments of prophecy. The Christian tries to believe that the prophet could look at future events through time just as a boy steals a look at the circus through a knothole. Some pious historians so believe. Rollin in his general history adds frequent notes giving chapter and verse where he sees prophesied the events related in the text.

The Revelation is an inexhaustible fountain of delights to the Christian who loves his enemies. There he can fancy them floundering with fiery dragons in blazing sulphur till he becomes oblivious to all things natural.

In pouring out the vials of John's wrath upon heretics and antichrists the priest had been so generous that when he comes to the French Revolution the last vial is drained; but he is not satisfied. Since that evolutionary period more attention has been given to the prophetic closing up of all earthly things, and the Christian hope of soon scooping most of the human race into John's lake of fire and brimstone. How many pious students have prayerfully wrestled with the prophetic data of "time, time, and a half time," hunting a date when time shall end, and figured themselves into the grave or a madhouse, while the heedless old world jogs on! Sometimes whole communities go daft with the expectation of a sudden wind-up, prepare ascension nightgowns, and neglect to feed the pig.

Six years ago Rev. M. Baxter, Episcopal clergyman and editor of the English Christian Herald, came here and kindly informed us that within thirteen years from date England would lose Ireland and India, France conquer Germany, great spread of Socialism and Spiritualism, culminating in a massacre of myriads of Christians by the antichrist powers during three and a half years, and then the millennium of a thousand years would begin! He figured it all out, and illustrated his knowledge with twenty large paintings in a Broadway hall. There were Daniel's brass-headed statue, he-goats, etc., and John's fiery dragon, smiling harlot, grinning Satan, etc. This wise man from the East knew a prodigious amount that isn't so, and consequently drew and edified large gaping audiences that contributed freely for Jesus's sake.

Pagan Greece and Rome had their inspired oracle prophets; but the time came when the people lost faith in them, and the renowned temples were deserted. When the people of Christendom lose faith in the lying prophets of the old Bible—come to know that the echoes of their maledictions died out in their own land and generation, and have courage to say so, then will their temples of superstition be deserted, and the priest driven to some useful employment—perhaps ferreting the causes of idiocy and the potato-rot.

L. G. REED.

The Great Governor of Pennsylvania.

The very last item in THE TRUTH SEEKER of July 1st makes a nativ's hair stand on end and wonder why it is that Governor Pattison would be in favor of the enforcement of a law passed one hundred years ago, which taxes Sunday newspapers $25. The great governor in his veto has the following startling sentence: "The instincts of a moral and law-abiding people find it as much needed to-day as when written into the laws a hundred years ago." The above is not so startling when taken into consideration that this governor was one who so bitterly opposed the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. The governor's actions are the very fairest illustrations of hypocrisy among this very class of people. Does "Bobby" Pattison have any conscientious scruples about holding stock in the Philadelphia Record, which prints a Sunday edition? No! Why? Because it is alleged that the Sunday edition of that paper pays its owners, above all expenses, about $1,500 every Sunday for fifty-two Sundays every year.

Surely the great governor of Pennsylvania does not mean to say that he is not one of "a moral and law-abiding people." But if "Bobby" has stock in a Sunday newspaper, does not his own veto make him a citizen who has no regards for morality and the law of his state?

I have only quoted the governor's own words in which he infers that anyone connected with a Sunday newspaper is not of sound morals or a law-abiding citizen.

And what does all this help to prove? Nothing if not that the almighty dollar is the supreme ruler of this universe, instead of the gentleman commonly known as Jesus Christ.

J. WARD DIEHL.

Watsonstown, Pa., July 5, 1893.

Christianity Encourages the Sinners and the Vile.

From Modern Thought, Bombay, India.

The Bombay Guardian quotes from the New York Independent the following extract:

THE TRUTH SEEKER is an infidel paper which is engaged weekly in giving caricatures of scripture subjects. . . . A recent issue carries on the first page a representation of a stream of desperate characters—liars, thieves, perjurers, murderers—entering "the fold of Christ." It is called "The Sinner's Hope and Last Refuge of the Vile." The picture is not a caricature. It truthfully represents a great Christian doctrine. There is salvation for thieves and liars and murderers. This is a great and glorious truth. It is indeed the "sinner's hope," the "last refuge of the vile." It is in this that the divinity of the Christian scheme of salvation appears. The vilest may enter the fold of Christ, leaving their villainy at the gate. Unbelief is fatalistic. It holds that the vile can never be anything but vile. The Christian doctrine is a nobler and truer doctrine. It has hope and the power of reformation in it. For once THE TRUTH SEEKER has drawn better than it knew.

Evidently the New York Independent and the Guardian do not, or pretend not to, understand THE TRUTH SEEKER caricature. The caricature shows what a license to commit sin the Christian scheme of redemption is. Scarcely anything has been done by the gospel of Christ, which has been preached for the last eighteen hundred years, to make sinners leave "their villainy at the gate." Gallows, jails, brothels, and reformatories still exist. In Christian England they are required more than in pagan India. It is indeed the "sinner's hope" the "last refuge of the vile," inasmuch as the vile start afresh each time they are forgiven through the merits of a savior called Christ. Science treats crime as a disease to be cured by scientific means, while Christianity treats it as a corrupted state of man's nature born with him and to be cured by belief in a redeemer. Which is the nobler? which the truer?

We Have Done a Valuable Service.

From the Investigator.

"A Handbook of Freethought." Containing, in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. Selected by W. S. Bell. This book is a perfect arsenal of weapons against the superstitions of Christianity. With this book in his possession the Freethinker is armed to overcome his religious opponent at every point. Mr. Bell has done the cause he serves a valuable service in the compilation of this volume, and The Truth Seeker Co. in issuing it in paper covers has placed it within the reach of all. Truth Seeker Co., 28 Lafayette place, New York. 381 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

An Illustrated Freethinkers' Guide-Book to the World's Fair.

We shall print Mr. Putnam's letters from Chicago in a pamphlet to be called "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," before their complete appearance in THE TRUTH SEEKER. We shall get the book out in time to be used as a guide-book for those who visit Chicago during the last three months of the Fair. These letters have been highly commended, and deservedly so, for the descriptions are veritable poems, and all the statements are as accurate as official information can make them. Those who go to the Fair will find the book exceedingly useful, for Mr. Putnam has laid it all out from beginning to end, and the book will save visitors' time. Those who read it will know what to see, and where the sights are. It will contain as much information as is possible to crowd into a work of its limit. It will be illustrated with a bird's-eye view of the Fair, giving visitors a general idea of the place, a map of the Park, enabling them to find their way around, and with pictures of the principal buildings of the Exposition. Those who do not go to the Fair will in this book see it in all its glory, and certainly will know more about the Exhibition than those who attend without this guide-book, trusting to memory. Those who go to Chicago will receive great benefit from it; those who do not, still greater. The price of the book is 25 cents.

A Book Every Freethinker Will Hav to Hav.

We placed in the pressman's hands last week Mr. Remsburg's new book, "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" and we ought to get it away from him and the binder in ten or fifteen days. The work will be handsomely finished, in fine paper, and be a thing of beauty as well as a quieter of religious tales.

One of the most noted controversies of the century has been waged over the question of Abraham Lincoln's religious belief. Soon after the remains of America's most illustrious son were laid to rest at Springfield, one of his biographers, Dr. Holland, put forward the claim that he was a Christian. The claim was promptly denied by the dead statesman's friends, but only to be renewed again, and again denied. And thus for a quarter of a century the question of Lincoln's belief has been tossed like a battledore from side to side.

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

NOTED WITNESSES.

Hon. W. H. Herndon, Col. Ward H. Lamon, Hon. John T. Stuart, Col. Jas. H. Matheny, Col. John G. Nicolay, Judge David Davis, Col. Jesse W. Fell, Hon. Leonard Swett, Dr. William Jayne, Judge Stephen T. Logan, Joshua F. Speed, Hon. Jesse K. Dubois, Hon. Joseph Gillespie, Dr. C. H. Ray, Col. F. S. Rutherford, Judge Robert Leachman, Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Leonard W. Volk, Joseph Jefferson, Hon. E. B. Washburne, Hon. E. M. Haines, Hon. James Tuttle, Hon. M. B. Field, Hon. Geo. W. Julian, Hon. John B. Alley, Hon. Hugh McCulloch, Gen. M. M. Trumbull, Rev. David Swing, Rev. Robert Collyer, Judge Jesse W. Weik, Hon. J. P. Usher, Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, Salmon P. Chase, Wm. H. Seward, Hon. John Covode, Hon. A. J. Grover, Hon. W. H. T. Wakefield, Gen. D. W. Wilder, Judge Aaron Goodrich, Judge James M. Nelson, Rev. Edward Eggleston, Rev. John W. Chadwick, Donn Piatt, H. K. Magie, Dennis F. Hanks, Mrs. Sarah Lincoln, Mrs. Mary Lincoln.

The foregoing and sixty other reputable witnesses testify that the greatest man born on this continent was a Freethinker.

Large 12mo, 336 pages, in handsome cloth, $1; in paper, 50 cents.

We desire to call the attention of readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the benefits of subscribing to the Truth Seeker Monthly Library. The yearly subscription is only $3, and subscribers to the Library receive a paper-bound copy of each book issued in it; or, if they desire the books in cloth binding, subscribers to the Library can remit the difference in price between paper and cloth binding, and get the books in the latter shape. So far this year subscribers to the Library have received "Paine Vindicated," by Colonel Ingersoll, price 15 cents; the "Creation of God," by Dr. Hartmann, price 50 cents; the "Resurrection of Jesus," by Don Allen, price 40 cents; "Crimes of Preachers," price 25 cents; the "Handbook of Freethought," by W. S. Bell, price 50 cents; "Religion a Curse," by S. P. Putnam, price 25 cents; "Design Argument Fallacies," price 15 cents, making two dollars and twenty cents' worth in five months, or at the rate of $5.40 worth per year; and all for $3 paid in advance. J. E. Remsburg's "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" will be ready very soon, and other books besides are in preparation. Two of these, we may mention, are "Progress and Pleasure," by A. M. Lorentz, LL.B., of which further notice will shortly be made, and Mr. Putnam's "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," of great value to visitors to the Fair, and still greater to those who cannot attend. Send $3 and receive at once the books already published, and, as they appear, those which will be published between now and January, '94.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought."

In connection with the World's Fair and International Freethought Congress no subject can be more interesting than the progress of Freethought since the landing of Columbus on these shores. The most brilliant and alluring pages of human history are open before us. The greatest events and the greatest geniuses of the world are seen in their relation to the glory of to-day. Only by understanding the progress of Freethought for the last four centuries can we understand the present time. It is a wonderful record, more beautiful than any romance. Every Freethinker interested in the advancement of the race, and wishing to see the true meaning of civilization, should read this history.

I propose to show the progress of Freethought for the last four centuries in philosophy, science, literature, education, and government. It will be a book of permanent value, for it deals with the most fruitful portion of history. I shall devote my time from now until the meeting of the International Congress to writing this book, and the book will conclude with a report of the Congress itself, in the best manner in which I can do it, giving a living picture, I hope, of this great gathering; of those who take part in it, the representatives of our cause throughout the world. I intend to make this book not only a correct history of the last four centuries, but of organized Freethought to-day, and therefore it will be valuable for reference. I do not mean, however, to give a bare abstraction of events, but to clothe them with life and color, to show the heart and brain of humanity in its eternal struggle for truth and liberty.

I shall issue a souvenir edition of this book in commemoration of the International Congress. I propose to make it in every respect a book worthy of the cause. It will be elegantly bound. It will contain the portraits of over fifty Freethinkers, living and dead, who have adorned the history of our work. It will be a gallery of Freethought, as well as its written record. It will be something worthy to preserve and valuable as a gift to friends, illustrating what Freethought has been and is to-day.

I shall sell this book by subscription, and I desire subscriptions from friends at the earliest possible moment. The subscriptions will be for the benefit of the International Congress as well as for the publication of the book. The names of all subscribers will be enrolled in the book along with the members and officers of the International Congress, whether they attend the Congress or not, and in this way in permanent form there will be a list of the pioneer Freethinkers of the world. I hope everyone will feel it an honor to be on that list, and will hasten to enroll their name. I do not mean to do things cheaply, but generously. I want to make this one of the best and handsomest books ever published in the interests of Freethought. Therefore, I shall make the price per copy $5.00. All above the cost of publication will be for the benefit of the Freethought International Congress.

Friends, I ask you to subscribe for this book;

you will thus help to secure in permanent form the history of Freethought in its noblest career; you will thus put yourself upon the roll of the pioneers of the great cause, and you will at this important time aid financially the Congress of the Freethinkers of the World. Address,

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,
TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Coercive Laws and Their Instigators.

There is a truth which neither logical presentation nor practical illustration seems sufficient to impress upon a certain limited class, who make up in egotistical aggressiveness for what they lack in intelligent perception, and who are as noisy in their irrational positivism as a flock of chattering jays. It is, that coercion is so directly hostile to human nature that it ever produces resistance; and not one in a million will consent to be even pleased upon compulsion.

The class in question is that whose views are ever dogmatically opposed to opinions, practices, and objects which, not more than ordinary acumen is requisite to see, are always those for which the dogmatists have no natural inclination, and which are incompatible with their peculiar interests and designs. It is this class too that arrogates the right of censorship over all the rest of mankind. As Teodoro Serrao says: "There are still in this world a great many people who pretend to make rules for others, who assume to give a general measure for human feelings and sentiments, and do not hesitate to declare that somebody has overgone the limits, if he does not restrict himself within their bounds. And these philosophers, these judges of human actions, think they are quite right in trying to adapt their general rule to each man, fancying that their rule is like an umbrella, that can cover all sorts of men."

The self-conscious goodness of such persons is wonderful. Judged by their utterances, they have the power of unerring discrimination between right and wrong; a gift the more remarkable since their belief even at the threshold of the twentieth century is apparently identical with that of the doleful Pollock, who thus croaks in his poem, "The Course of Time:"

Earth's cup

Is poisoned; her renown, most infamous;
Her gold, seem as it may, is really dust;
Her titles, slanderous names; her praise, reproach;
Her strength, an idiot's boast; her wisdom, blind;
Her gain, eternal loss; her hope, a dream;
Her love, her friendship, enmity with God;
Her promises, a lie; her smile, a harlot's;
Her beauty, paint, and rotten within; her pleasures,
Deadly assassins masked; her laughter, grief;
Her breasts, the sting of death; her total sum,
Her all, most utter vanity; and all
Her lovers mad; insane most grievously;
And most insane, because they know it not.

The undue proportion of evil to good in that pessimistic presentment reminds one strongly of the "intolerable deal of sack" to a half-pennyworth of bread in Falstaff's tavern bill. If Pollock be accepted as an oracle, Pope must have been afflicted with mental strabismus when he wrote, "Whatever is, is right."

They of whom we speak have been personified in a pen-portrait by "Max O'Rell." "Anglo-Saxon land," says that writer, "is governed by the unco' guid. Good society cordially despises him; the aristocracy of Anglo-Saxon intelligence, philosophers, scientists, men of letters, sculptors, painters, simply loathe him; but all have to bow to his rule, and submit their works to his most incompetent criticism." That is true, more's the pity. So, too, is the declaration, "The Anglo-Saxon unco' guid is the successor of the Pharisee;" and in whatever is innovativ, progressiv, liberal, pleasurable, care-alleviating, above all, popular, the Pharisees of to-day are sure to imagine wickedness. Ingersoll has described them in words that burn: "They do not walk the streets of the city of life; they explore the sewers; they stand in the gutters and cry 'Unclean!' They pretend that beauty is a snare; that love is a Delilah; that the highway of joy is a broad road lined with flowers and filled with perfume, leading to the city of eternal sorrow."

As Blouet intimates, art and literature are not exempt from fanatical persecution. An exquisite painting like the Temptation of St. Anthony must be veiled; a classical statue like the Venus de Medici must be swathed. To morbid minds "the most beautiful thing is hypocrisy adorned with a blush;" they cannot understand that "drapery about the perfect was suggested by immodesty." Well-meaning authors of physiological treatises are sent to state prisons, for the heinous "crime" of publishing truths abhorred by the dilettanti, whose "policy of silence" is nothing less than tacit approval of the abominations such outspoken truths expose. The works of able, conscientious writers, like Tolstoi and Helen Gardener, are seized from booksellers' stands, excluded from the mails, and burnt in the custom-house at Washington. Institutions and agencies, patronized by the Pharisees themselves every day in the week, become sources of pollution and disseminators of vice with the advent of Sunday. Public libraries and art galleries open on that day are fiercely denounced; the newspaper is branded a "cesspool of corruption." The rich man may take his family to church in his own carriage, without reproach; the poor man who goes in a horse-car encourages "Sabbath" desecration—a most anomalous thing to do. Jews and Seventh-day Baptists, guiltless of violating the only Sabbath recognized in the Bible, run the risk of compulsory worship in prison chapels, if they insist upon working on the day substituted by Constantine's edict, 321 A.D. Verily! Christian consistency is a rare jewel! It may seriously be asked, why is not Sunday an evil day, since it makes things corrupting that at other times are held to be pure?

The question naturally suggests itself, Why is the rule of narrow minds in the ascendant, if it is not backed by public opinion? The stability of our society is supposed to depend as much upon opinion as upon law, and more upon opinion than force. The anomalous state of affairs depicted is not conducive to stability: why does it exist?

One among a number of reasons that might be advanced is the failure of the great body of the people to appreciate the texture of the net whose meshes fanaticism, bigotry, and superstition are insidiously multiplying and constantly endeavoring to draw closer around personal, mental, and popular liberty. The masses are too disposed to contemptuous indifference to machinations against their rights and liberties. By concentrated, properly organized and directed efforts they were brought to realize and reject the iniquity of "protection" in the interest of the plutocracy; by such efforts only can they be made to understand and reject protected intolerance. Every well-informed person knows that most of the trouble-making fanatics consort with a faction of less than one-third the population of the United States. They do not truly represent a large minority of that faction, but they work together for the perpetuation of their medieval theories and practices with a systematic persistency which the Liberalists would do well to emulate. It is these posing paragons that compose the class referred to in our opening proposition. We have described that class as limited, but the same cannot be said of their self-exalting claims, all of which are built upon the fallacies, "We alone possess truth; we alone represent the highest moral sentiment of the community." Necessarily, intolerance with all its detested accessories is as inseparable from such immaculateness as heat from fire.

Added to these are the advocates of slavery, with the state for a master; the defenders of caste, the supporters of exclusiv class privileges, and an aristocracy of wealth, all of whom have taken to aping the habits of thought of effete monarchies, and stand ready to adopt any means for depriving the people of that equality of opportunity which the Constitution of the United States ought to but does not guarantee.

De Tocqueville makes it an accusation against democratic societies that, while they have banished "fettors and headsmen, the coarse instruments which tyranny formerly employed against freedom of thought and action, they have refined the arts of despotism." An individual can no longer say, "You shall think as I do upon pain of death," but a single class says: "You are free to think differently from us and retain your life, your property, and all that you possess; but if such be your determination you are henceforth an alien amongst your people; you may retain your civil rights, but they will be useless to you, for you will never be chosen by your fellow-citizens if you solicit their suffrages; and they will affect to scorn you if you solicit their esteem. You will remain among men, but you will be deprived of the rights of mankind. Your fellow-citizens will shun you like an impure being; and those who are most persuaded of your innocence will abandon you, too, lest they should be shunned in their turn. Go in peace! I have given you life, but it is an existence incomparably worse than death."

De Tocqueville is at once right and wrong. Canting morality does indeed say to non-conformers, "You may think differently and retain all you possess," but occurrences are not wanting to give the lie to the formula. Witness the demand of the bigots that the army be employed to suppress freedom of opinion and action in the matter of closing the Columbian Exposition Sunday. "You shall think as we do, or be murdered," is their ultimatum. Ordinarily, we grant, the outward symbols of persecution have disappeared (to the sorrow of some who would unquestionably welcome the resurrection of the rack and the thumb-screw), but its spirit and habit remain, unshorn of a complex, insidious, flagrantly misused instrumentality—the law.

Now, it is an axiom that the fewer the parts composing a piece of machinery the less liable it is to derangement and the greater the chances of its working smoothly and effectively. It is equally true that the fewer and simpler the laws under which a government is administered—provided of course they be wise and beneficent—the greater the probability of their enforcement and the better the condition and contentment of the people. Yet, self-evident as that proposition is, or ought to be, to every reasoning observer, it receives but slight consideration from legislators and the press, and is apparently scouted by the pulpit. The clergy especially seem as incapable of understanding that the multiplication of laws indicates distrust of the people, as of noting that the people are not blind to the distrust. "March without the people," said a French deputy from the tribune, "and you march into night." Few men of the cloth can bring themselves to believe with Emerson, "The instinct of the people is right." Fewer still possess the mental breadth which prompted Hamlin Garland to declare: "I, for one, have such faith in human nature, such trust in the ever-growing altruism of expanding individuality, that I am content to work for freedom, for less government, for less militancy, less meddling with spontaneous co-operation among the units of society." Too many ministers approve underhanded efforts to secure statutes and constructions which, it has been well said, may at an early day be used to fetter thought, crush liberty, and throttle the vanguard of progress. "Be it enacted," is the clerical catholicon for all moral and social ailments, and not the mythical "Word" on which they profess to rely. A business man whose every rule and act betrays suspicion of his subordinates cannot have studied human nature in his own interest, since the respect and best services of employees are seldom, if ever, given under such a regime. No more can a government expect general respect for, or lasting peace and prosperity under, a complexity of laws, which indicates want of confidence in the proletariat, particularly if the laws themselves are aimed at the suppression of individualism, as is too often the case in this country at the present time.

Says the editor of that Liberal, impartial, and progressive magazine, the Arena, speaking of Nationalism, which, in his opinion, contemplates the reduction of mankind to a governmental vassalage: "The great point has been emphasized time and time again and never been satisfactorily met, that in proportion as the power of government is increased, and laws multiply, persecutions increase. . . . As laws are repealed and the people enjoy greater liberty, progress and advancement mark man's onward march. And while it is obvious that humanity is far from the point where no law is necessary, our faces should be set toward freedom. And we should steadfastly oppose the law-making mania which is so cursing our people with onerous and unjust legislation. . . . I have been forced to the conclusion that progress, advancement, and happiness lie in the wake of less law and wider liberty."

And not only should there be fewer laws, but milder treatment of the violators of some laws that cannot be abrogated under existing conditions of society; for nothing is truer than that decrease of the severity of the laws tends directly to increase their efficacy; and the most sanguinary enactments will become more and more inefficacious in proportion to the increased rigor employed in their administration.

Says Prof. Joseph Rodes Buchanan: "The people of any age have no suspicion whatever of the way in which they will be regarded by posterity." Certain it is, there is little realization now of the view that will ultimately be taken of many of the laws enacted in the name of justice. Once in a while the reforming energy is aroused against unreasonable and excessively severe legislation, as it was during the decline of the Whig ministry in England, a little over half a century ago; and it is significant that at such times public sentiment is always far ahead of the inclinations of constituted authority, with the result that the concessions made are far behind those demanded. It was said by the "conservatives" of the time that the abolition of the death penalty for many offenses cheered every rogue in England. Was the reform, therefore, unwise? That which the rogues approved resulted in the surer punishment of roguery. The advocates of hanging for stealing a joint of meat denounced Sir Samuel Romilly as opening the jails and giving up England to thieves; but he would be regarded as a monster who should now propose to reenact that accursed law. We look back with abhorrence at the bloody persecutions of the Vaudois and the Covenanters, and the work of the pious stranglers in Salem. Yet these outrages were perpetrated under the forms and protection of the law; and the spirit which prompted them has not disappeared. The "late lamented" John Calvin—he who waged war against worldly pleasures of every description, compassed the burning of Servetus at the stake, and had unfortunate women at Geneva sewn up in bags and thrown into lake Lemane—is still held in high esteem in some quarters, though there is none that dares to openly approve the dastardly methods he employed in support of his fiendish morality.

These remarks will, of course, arouse the ire of those conspicuously just and merciful individuals who, regarding as wicked everybody with whom they do not agree, and as criminal everything they do not practice or approve, are constantly endeavoring to increase an already flagrant evil by the creation of new statutory offenses and accompanying penalties. Yet it is as true to-day as it was two thousand years ago that "Fear is a bad preserver of that which is intended to endure; on the other hand, considerateness will secure fidelity forever." It is also well to remember that "the evils which have been produced by fanaticism, prompted by motives really good, are equal to those that have sprung from confirmed vice."

"The chronic distrust of the people felt among book-educated and professional men," is cited by that rigidly orthodox theologian, Rev. Carlos D. Martyn, D.D., as one among a number of dangers that immediately threaten the country. Had he added that this distrust finds its expression through a steadily augmenting labyrinth of laws for the abridgment of popular and individual liberty, he would have spoken no more than the simple truth.

Of late years the combination of politics with religion has had an enlightening effect, but not in the way desired by political preachers. No less an authority than General Clarkson has declared that young men have been alienated from the Republican party by the intolerance of morality. His perception is not at fault; but the eyes of many older members of that party also have been opened, greatly to its advantage. It has been remarked, and the public utterances of President Cleveland show it to be his belief, that the centralizing tendencies of the Republican party have strongly reinforced the drift of thought toward Nationalism, which is governmental paternalism in its most obnoxious form, and would engulf the nation in a maelstrom of inexorable law. Edgar Fawcett, Professor Buchanan, Mr. Pentecost, and other thinkers, fear a cataclysm in the near future, and many signs point thereto as surely as they did in France in the days of the Encyclopedists. We are sufficiently optimistic, however, to think that there are present indications that the great majority of the people are not "looking backward" to pattern by legalized despotism supported by military force, but forward to a government which shall guarantee the utmost rights and liberties of the individual, under the fewest laws consistent with the welfare of the state.

JAMES TYTLER CUMMINGS.

Lectures and Meetings.

W. F. JAMIESON has received a call to California. His Liberal friend writes: "I am appointed to write you and open negotiations with the object of having you make your home here. We mean business, and will furnish you a house and lot free of incumbrance as a gift if you will come here to live. We do not expect you to lecture to us only when you wish to and are not away. But if you live here we will be satisfied, and will take hold of the work with a will." Mr. Jamieson has accepted the call from his California friends, which he says is better than a "call from the Lord," and is making his arrangements to go in the course of a few weeks. He will deliver courses of lectures this fall and winter along the Pacific coast, and requests the Liberals of California, Oregon, and Washington to address him for the present at Mosca, Col.

THE Newark Liberal League made their excursion to Glen Island on the 7th, as intended, and had a very enjoyable and interesting time. The Lord was very kind, and arranged the weather with a due regard toward those who he must feel are advancing his cause. They were met by a large delegation from the Philosophical Society, Brooklyn, and Manhattan Liberal League, New York, and together they formed a solid phalanx that could do good battle with any church or creed in existence. After a sumptuous repast and posing for the photographic fiend, they journeyed to the Paine monument, where a handsome design in immortels was laid with appropriate ceremonies by Henry Bird, Esq., president of the League. It was suggested by those present that a Union Picnic be held each year by the Freethinkers of neighboring clubs, and some even went so far as to suggest that a sort of Chautauqua Club be formed, with meetings quarterly or oftener. We trust that this sociability will grow and be a leading feature in advancing the cause.

Letters of Friends.

Thoughtful Appreciation.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., June 27, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5 for renewal of my paper and the books named. And a word about THE TRUTH SEEKER. For a Freethought paper, it is all one's ideal could suggest, and on its arrival I devour all that is in it with greediness, and then, like Oliver Twist, would ask for more. But it is best that one should rest between these mental repasts, and give one's brain time to digest the good things it has received.

I have been taking your paper a little less than two years, and in that time I have become so attached to it and its contributors that I find myself looking for it before it is due.

From cover to cover it is interesting and instructive.

Samuel P. Putnam's articles need but to be read to be appreciated. Teeming with beautiful thoughts, beautifully expressed, they are indeed a wealth.

Watson Heston's pictures express the pith of many volumes, and from almost every pen-stroke one gets a reminder of something he has heard or read against religious intolerance.

I have been very deeply interested in the discussion on the God question between A. Augusta Chapman and Otto Wettstein, both worthy champions of their cause. But up to date Mr. Wettstein is on top, to my mind. But whether we agree with Miss Chapman or not, we must admit that she is a deep thinker and a most lucid expounder of her theories, and one is all the better for having read her written thoughts.

The editorials are always fine, and after having consumed all the rest I turn to them, left until the last because of their fitness as a dessert to top off such an intellectual feast.

The star of Freethought is in the ascendant, and with such champions it will continue to rise until it reaches its zenith, and by its very brightness dispel the black fogs of superstition that enshroud so many thousands of our fellow-men.

Let the watchword that speeds us be Freedom and Right; push onward and upward and never say die.

Yours for Freethought,
WM. A. COUBIG.

Congress's Act Was Unconstitutional.

VINELAND, N. J., June 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The present Congress of the United States gave by enactment the sum of $2,500,000 for the benefit of the World's Fair. They provided in said enactment that the money was given in consideration that the gates of the Fair grounds should be closed on Sundays. In a second enactment Congress voted that the gates of the Fair grounds should be closed on Sundays.

This law of Congress has been appealed to the United States district court and overruled by Judge Fuller with the full bench deciding that the gates shall be kept open on Sundays. The court also decided that the money given the World's Fair was not a gift and could not be a consideration for closing the gates on Sundays.

Now, the above enactments of Congress show a want of wisdom in the present Congress that must tell for future decisions of legislative bodies of no small consideration for good. The acts were unjust as well as unlawful, for the Constitution expressly declares, "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishing of religion." Was not the closing of the gates a law respecting religion which included the superstitious reverence of Sunday? And yet there is no day in the week that is not held by some denomination as a holy-day against common sense and reason.

That Congress has made itself noted for future men or legislators of thought and ought to be known by name, to show what men will do for their religion and against plain law, for there it is before my eyes, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." The law is as infamous as was the Dred Scott law—both repealed—and each will be looked at with contempt in the future archives of legislative history as examples of perversion of justice and truth on the most important of all subjects, having the interests of thousands at stake.

Mr. Editor, if you can spare the space in your noble paper to place the few lines I write you by the side of the article from my good old friend, Brother Hacker, who is almost my next-door neighbor and who is so nobly showing up the old heathen book of obscenity, fables, and nonsense, I shall feel proud. I shall feel proud also to see it in the paper so ably written for by Brother Putnam, who so excellently defended the cause at Washington.

Please send me the pamphlet, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie."
RILEY McADAMS.

A Heavy Broadside Against the Bible.

KEARNEY, NEB., June 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I will state why I am not an orthodox Christian. People are sometimes compelled to make statements to the thoughtless listener that seem too radical or too horrid to be true. Ministers are always making statements of God creating everything perfect. To this I say no. Man has improved on his domestic animals, on fruit and flowers, and on himself. How is it with the apple? You say God made it. I say nature made small, sour crab-apples, and right here on this continent we have red, white, and yellow ones. Man has taken those poor, sour, and almost useless crabs and grafted one on the other and budded back and grafted until he has produced a fine, large, and mellow fruit. Who made it? You say God, I say nature and man. Take man's eye in his prime and it is about as perfect a thing as there is about him, and still man with his own ingenuity can take a piece of glass that he makes himself or a stone, and he can convex and concave it so that he can see things too small for his eye. History tells us that the men that God made were too lazy to work and when a famine came on them they would kill and eat their mothers and the old ladies among them and save their dogs. This corresponds with God's commandments to his holy people. Man has made himself too civilized for this now. And more than this, man never came on earth as he is today. Darwin's theory of evolution will be a study in our public schools in less than fifty years, and would now if it were not for the teachings of the church.

Now for the morals of your Bible. Certainly, if it is God's holy book and so good, everyone ought to know what is in it, and no one ought to object to hearing it. But they do. Take Deut. xiv, 21. Here is a square commandment from God to Moses to sell anything that dies of itself to othersto eat. And in the twenty-sixth verse it is said that you can spend the money for anything that your soul lusteth after, for oxen or sheep or wine or strong drink—that is, get drunk on the money if you please. Deut. xiii is fine from verse 6 to 10, where it plainly says, kill your brother or wife or friend. And Lev. xxvi is still finer, for here God gives man a commandment and then tells him if he does not do it he shall eat of the flesh of his sons and daughters. Who believes that the common male parent of our mule stood up or sat down and told his master in Hebrew, Greek, or Latin that he had been faithful to him? Why did not God kill Moses (Ex. iv, 24)? Ladies, do not read 2 Tim. ii, or the first twenty verses of Ezek. xxiii, or the first few verses of Deut. xxiii. Christ says in Mark xi, 24, when you pray for anything believe that you receive it and you shall have it, but my honest opinion is, if the church-members of Kearney county, Neb., or anywhere else, think that is true of their prayers for my conversion they are likely to pray a long time. Well, this is enough of the old novel for this time. Thirty years ago I might have been a Deist, but to-day I am a Pantheist.
C. W. GORR.

A Finance Letter "Rit Sarcastik."

PORTLAND, KAN., June 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: My! how my little note makes Mr. Geer squirm, and send forth more absurd assertions, a few of which I wish to notice if you will kindly allow me space.

He says that it would be impossible for sixteen million laborers to save $1 a week for a year, without causing a panic. Now, friend, this is not claiming that they can not save $1 a week, but simply shows the result if they do save that much, and at best it is simply an assertion that he takes back in this last letter by admitting the correctness of my statement, for he says, "The wage-earner saves money for a special purpose, either keeps it or puts it in a bank till some one wants and borrows it." Thus he goes back on his fine-spun theory and admits that the savings of the wage-earner are still in circulation. Oh, where are you, Mr. Geer?

The government no more gave the bankers ninety per cent of the bonds (as you say) than the bankers gave the government one hundred per cent of the bonds. You must be very good at financing—here is a question: Can you start a bank without the savings of some one?

Come now, Mr. Geer, doesn't every dollar in circulation represent so much wealth? And wealth is produced by labor, therefore it belongs to some one, just as I said.

If you understand money matters so very well and know that bank money does not have to be earned, why do you not start a few banks? Of course a financier like you could get the bonds all right enough and get the government to give you money. Oh, how nice it is to be a great financier like Mr. Geer!

Now, Mr. Geer, look here a moment. Do you know how much the mortgage debt of Kansas is? If you do, why did you make such a statement as you did? Sir, do you claim that the homes and farms of Kansas are mortgaged to an amount over $900,000,000? Say, friend, how much do you know about it anyway? Don't you think a wonderful financier had better look at his own state? At best it was an awful big one, that story of Kansas homes and farms being mortgaged to an amount averaging over $17 per acre for every acre in the state. Please tell us where you found that out.

Oh, dear, here you go again, worse and worse! The railroads charge one hundred times cost for passengers to the Fair. Mr. Geer, that immense brain of yours is overtaxed. I would advise a rest and to think just as little on money matters as possible. You are too far advanced for this age, anyway. One hundred times cost! A round-trip ticket from here to Chicago is $30. Please, how many railroads are you running now? Oh, how I wish you would take the railroads in hand, you understand them so well. Why, just think, a round trip on your road would cost but thirty cents from here to the Fair and back. Oh, I beseech you, Mr. Geer, to take the money matters in hand too. A man like you has a duty to perform. There are so few who thoroughly understand money matters, railroad business, etc.

After reading your letter I have to agree with you that there is more nonsense written on money matters than almost any other.

My, what a scattering smoke your blank cartridges raise! England gets a dose. The wonderful "Hazzard circular" gets beclouded. Then comes our turn and the smoke pours over our moneyed men. Then the World's Fair gets a whiff. And original sin is not missed. And last, the poor grasshopper is mentioned. But the large majority are not so wise as our friend, for he says they don't know more than a horse about voting. Oh, please don't be so hard on us. Without a hard thought,
S. F. DAVIS.

Deathbed Utterances.

FLAT CREEK, LA., Feb. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: After a painful illness of about five weeks, my wife, Mrs. Louisa C. Shumaker—formerly known as Miss Lou Noble—breathed her last at ten minutes before 2 P.M. on Saturday, Feb. 4, 1893. I will not adopt the Christian conventionality and say, "It pleased almighty God," etc., for I do not know whether it pleased God or not. But it ought not to have pleased him to cause such a kind and tender-hearted daughter to suffer such agonizing pains as she did.

Miss Noble was the first Infidel woman that I ever met. She was always in perfect harmony with me on the subject of religion and Freethought, except that she was less combative—a milder type of Liberal—and would sometimes try to hold me down. Like myself, she sought religion with the Methodists in her young days, failed to find it, and became an unbeliever. She attended church and treated the ministers and other Christians with respect and kindness, but the most frantic efforts and impassioned oratory of the pulpit-pounders had no other effect upon her but to amuse and sometimes to disgust. She loved THE TRUTH SEEKER, and always read the letters of correspondents first and "News and Notes," by S. P. Putnam, next. In the month of March, 1880, I went to New Orleans and found Colonel Ingersoll's lectures exposed for sale by George Ellis, No. 11 Decatur street, and purchased a copy of each. My wife had never seen any Freethought literature before except Thomas Paine's works and Volney's "Ruins." When I would read Ingersoll's lectures to her she would become as happy as a Methodist at a camp-meeting and could scarcely refrain from shouting. Colonel Ingersoll was her ideal man. Although living in an orthodox community she was proud of her Infidelity and did not try to conceal it; but she never had any trouble with her Christian neighbors about religion. She was fifty years and twelve days old.

Her only fault was extreme generosity and open-handedness. Her heart was full of love for her friends when she knew that she was dying. Love was her religion. She told me before she took to her bed that she believed that she was going to die. She talked to me several times about dying while she was rational and the only thing that she expressed a desire to live for was to raise our adopted daughter Minnie.

On the night of the 24th of January she called me to her bedside to deliver her farewell message in the presence of four young female teachers. Her mind appeared to be supernaturally lucid. She could think of everything which needed to be thought about. She talked calmly and sensibly. She said to me: "I want you to continue to be just as you always have been. I want you to be kind to these girls and help them all that you can. They are good girls; they mean well. The light has not come to them as it has to us, but it will come to them."

She never said anything about her future or anything beyond the grave until she commenced dying and reason began to fail. About 4 A.M. on Monday, March 30th, she waked out of a nap and commenced saying: "I want to go home! I want to go home! A sweet voice is calling me and I am going home with my dear mother! Oh, doctor, turn me loose! Let me go! Oh, doctor, don't keep me here in this misery! Oh, it is so sweet to go home with my mother and get out of this misery!" She became very happy over the thought of going home to her mother and getting out of her misery. Her mother died twenty years ago. When daylight came her vision and her reason were failing and she desired that her friends come to see her. About 10 P.M. the same day she waked out of a nap again and commenced kicking and pushing the cover off and trying to pull her clothes off and saying: "Take these clothes off me! Take these clothes off, I say! I must be cleansed—I have to be cleansed for heaven. Take these clothes off me. I have to be clothed for heaven." Then she commenced holding up her hands and talking to her dead father. She said: "Dear father, take your child. Take me up, father. Help me, dear father. O dear father, help me to my paradise! O dear father, help me up to my paradise!" She spoke in sweet, affectionate, pleading tones and she uttered the word paradise with a peculiar sweet emphasis, and I never heard the word more clearly articulated or more correctly pronounced. She then got into a frenzy and talked irrationally and continuously for about three hours, when she broke down and became sightless and speechless. Her eyes were set in her head and she could not see anything for four days and she could only speak a few names so that we could understand her; but she could understand our talk and appeared to be rational until Friday night. A good Christian lady who nursed her a part of a day and night has told me that she begged for prayers and wanted the Christians to pray for her. I cannot believe this, because she had no sins to be forgiven and had no use for prayers. I know that she had no faith in prayer and I was with her more than anybody else and I heard nothing of the kind. Twice, while suffering agonizing pains, I heard her say, "Lord, have mercy on me!" And once I heard her say, "Help me for Christ's sake!" Her deathbed utterances are a problem to me. I have no creed or ism to defend, therefore I have no interest in concealing or distorting any facts. I have given an honest statement of the deathbed utterances of an infidel. Let the people make what they can out of it. I am a Freethinker and a truth seeker, and that is as many names as I care to wear. The clergy have made much capital out of deathbed utterances and have told many lies in the interest of their profession about the deathbed utterances of infidels. I have witnessed the death of two infidels—my wife and her father. Neither of them got frightened at any hell or devils. And if deathbed talk is to be relied upon, the spirit of Mother Noble called for her husband and her daughter when their time came to cross over Jordan, and my wife's mother and father both came for her; and my wife is gone to heaven without sailing on the wings of faith or taking passage on the old ship of Zion and without ever submitting herself to that solemn mummery called baptism.

She is now at rest in the same condition as before birth or she is happy in the land of spirits—I do not know which. Deathbed utterances are the only evidence which I have ever received to prove that the spirits live after the death of the body, but with my knowledge of chemistry and physics I cannot conceive how that can be possible. I do hope that my wife has not gone to the same heaven that the ministers send people to who get hanged. She was too kind-hearted and pure-minded to enjoy that kind of society. If she still lives and it is possible for her to communicate with me I believe that she will send me a message that I cannot be mistaken about.

PETER F. SHUMAKER.

He Once Thought Sam Jones Better Than a Horse.

CINCINNATI, O., April 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Since I owe you and your paper an old grudge (for once starting me to thinking) I have made up my mind to pay it by writing to you.

Some four years ago I was a Christian—yes, a real out-and-out, sure-enough Christian, who thought that all the good in this world was contained in the Christian religion, and all the bad contained in everything opposed to it; who thought that such men as the Rev. Sam Jones, who oppose all the pleasures of the world, were better than a good horse or cow who add to them. I thought that such people as the Rev. Mr. Moody, who think that prayers can save a sinking ship, had more brains than an intelligent dog without an ounce of superstitious blood in its body. I thought that all the brutal and cruel men, if they were Christians, were deserving of and would receive eternal life, while all the harmless and useful animals would die and stay dead. I confess I used to wonder why it was that a bad man's life was held more sacred than a good dog's, when death to the man meant only a change of residence to a happier country, while death to the dog meant the end of its life forever.

If a preacher like Mr. Moody were driving along with a horse and buggy and the buggy should happen to slide into a deep ditch, Mr. Moody would pray and the horse would pull, and when he got out he would fall on his knees and thank God instead of the horse, and then his friends would have the nerve to claim that he had more sense than the animal.

You know, Mr. Editor, there is one way you can get a large cucumber into a bottle of its own size or a little larger, although the bottle may have a very narrow neck. It is to get the cucumber into the bottle when it is very young, and, without detaching it from the vine, leave it in that position to grow until it has filled the bottle. Then it must either stop growing or burst the bottle. Well, this cucumber who is writing to you was bottled up in Christianity when quite young. I actually thought there was more room to grow inside the bottle than there was on the outside. I do not remember how I kept from seeing through the bottle, for it was as transparent as the air. All the young ones on my family vine were similarly penned up, and we thought those who were not were rotten to the core.

One summer—one happy, lucky, blessed summer, circumstances threw my younger brother and myself, owing to the temporary absence of the rest of the family on a visit to the West, in the way of taking our dinners with a highly respectable family not far from our working-place. It was not the dinners that made me think myself so blessed, not the food for the stomach, but the food for the brain that I accidentally received by being thrown into their circle. I will explain.

One day I came into the house a little too early for dinner, and sat down by the library table to read the newspapers. I saw one with a strange heading, and, looking again, read in large letters: "THE TRUTH SEEKER." "Very good," said I to myself, "I'll read you, and see if you find it." All but the heading had been under some other papers, and I pulled it out to examine. For a long time I had been indifferent to anything religious, but I confess that the picture which met my gaze made my heart jump into my throat. There, upon my soul! there, upon a respectable gentleman's table, was actually a picture which, if what it was intended to illustrate were true, made the Christian church out to be not all that was good and holy, but, in fact, just the opposite.

The picture was of a great swarm of pests, in the shape of musketoes, bugs, bats, beetles, etc., coming out of the church to torment an old gentleman named "Uncle Sam," while from across the sea came another colony of vile insects with the compliments of the pope.

Now, if I had seen a caricature aimed at Christianity in a paper under the head of "The Lie Seeker," "The Defender of Immorality," or "The Falsehood Advocate," I would not have been nearly so shocked. I had always thought, being a Sunday-school scholar (not, to do myself justice, so much for the sake of religion as for the happiness of hearing the music and from being sociable and circulating among my friends), that anyone who was an "infidel" (and, oh, how ugly that word used to be) was confessedly in favor of everything that was vile and wicked, and cared nothing for the truth. Do not blame me, that's how I was raised. And do not, I pray you, blame it on my folks, for they were raised no better themselves; and if I had not been accidentally started to thinking by your excellent paper I might, impossible as it seems now, have kept on thinking the same thing, and if I had ever had the raising of children would probably have raised them, or caused them to be raised, in the same old school. To be sure, I had heard of a gentleman named Robert Ingersoll whom most people admitted to be a good man, who claimed to be an infidel, but, never having read any of his works on religion, thought, as a great many other Christians did and do, that he was either pretending to be such for a joke (think of it! going to jump into a lake of fire forever for fun; but that opinion actually prevails among many Christians to-day), or that he was insane on this particular subject. Neither of these opinions quite satisfied me, but when I got that far I always dismissed the subject from my mind, as I did with all the other difficult problems which confronted me while trying to swallow Christianity. I know that when quite young I have asked (and what three-year-old child has not?) many an unanswerable question of my elders as they "explained" their religion to me. But these questions were received, as such questions from children always are, with laughter, and I, poor child, not knowing that they were really laughing unconsciously at the absurdity and impossibility of their own religion, not knowing that they saw (unconsciously) for the moment that their dogmas were so foolish and inconsistent that even a child's mind could see their impossibility. But thinking they were laughing at me because my mind could not grasp it, always dismissed the questions from my thoughts. I thought it must be that, since my elders saw it, it was undoubtedly true and I was too young to comprehend it and would understand it all when I got older, but my experience did not prove it, so I kept dismissing the objections from my mind, until when I met you, Mr. Editor, I had almost dismissed the dogma features of religion from my mind altogether and taken them as a matter of course.

I am sure that had I been born with the least bit of self confidence I should have been an infidel at five.

Well, to return to the caricature. The picture started me to thinking. I had often thought of my religion as being impossible, but had never once dreamed of its being harmful or immoral. So when I saw all these pests coming from the church I got to thinking. The first thought I thought was that some good Christian should draw a picture showing that these pests did not come from the church at all and send it to all of your subscribers to correct the erroneous impression your picture had given them. But then I "thought another thought." Do not these pests really come, after all, from the church? So I looked at one pest labeled Woman's Christian Temperance Union, at the Sunday-law fanatic, the God-in-the-Constitution nuisances, the faith-cure murderers, and at the colony of vipers coming from Rome to oppose our public schools and inoculate the brains of our young with the poisonous germs of superstition, and concluded that the picture was true to life and could not be answered. So then I thought, as Christians generally do under such circumstances, that a law should be made to stop your publication. The first thing Christians have always done when they found that reason could not save them is to appeal to force. So you see there can be no doubt that I was a "real, out-and-out, sure-enough Christian."

Next I turned over to the last page, and found, to my horror, a pun on a name from the Bible. I threw down the paper and swore I would never look at it again. But, oh, how the human heart doth crave for the truth, and I knew the truth could never be found by listening to but one side of any question; so within sixty seconds I had it up again and was looking at the inside. Surely I had been hearing and reading defenses of Christianity since my earliest memory, and should not fear to read a few lines on the other side. About the first thing my eye fell upon was a paragraph which declared that Christians were afraid of investigation, afraid to look at both sides. Although I knew in my heart this was true, for I never knew before there were two sides to this subject, I indignantly refuted it by reading the paper through. For the next two months I read your paper regularly every week. I tried to keep my hands off it, but it seemed that something irresistible attracted me to it, which is unexplainable, except by the following verse, slightly altered from the original:

Truth, though crushed to earth, will rise again;

The eternal years of man are hers,
But error, wounded, writhes in pain,
And dies amidst her worshippers.

Well, when the folks came home again I was separated from my TRUTH SEEKERS; but I had been confronted with a great many new questions, which I determined to set about and find the answers to. So I descended into the arena of investigation. Had I consulted a spiritual adviser he would have told me I was on the wrong track if I wanted to be "saved." He could have told me that I must again "become as a little child" and dismiss all doubts from my mind. But I could not do this now. I had found that good people could be unbelievers. I must find the answers or find another religion. I had no doubt I could find the answers, so I debated the matter with myself for a long time, but instead of finding them the more I hunted for the answers the more questions I found. So the result was—well, you know what becomes of Christians who investigate.

I once heard of a sponge that went down into a barrel of water to argue with and convince his brother sponges on the bottom that they should not absorb the liquid.

What becomes of a soap bubble when it is hit by a sledge-hammer? I don't know. What becomes of a Christian when he investigates? I don't know.

What becomes of a drunkard when he quits drinking? What becomes of a Christian when he begins thinking? They cease to be such.

After I had satisfied myself that my religion was ridiculous, I got to thinking: "Is it cruel? Is it really cruel enough to justify all these bitter and passionate onslaughts of the infidel?" Of course it did not require much study to settle myself on that score. If any Christian doubts that his religion is cruel, let him sit down for a minute or two on a red-hot stove, and then think if he can—but he cannot—how much more, how infinitely much more painful his hell must be.

So the natural result of all this thinking was that this cucumber I told you about grew and grew until it broke its orthodox prison, and ever since has been growing in the pure air and warm sunshine of Freethought.

Ever since, I have been an enthusiast in the cause. I think if I had never been a believer I would not feel so belligerent toward orthodoxy as I do; but, as it is, it arouses my ire when I think that several years ago, when I was some two weeks old, a preacher was called in and poured water on my poor little innocent head to save my soul from hell. Not that I feel anything but gratitude toward the well-meaning Protestant priest, but oh, it makes me indignant with myself to think that I was fool enough—even at that early age—to lie there quietly and allow such idiotic proceedings to be peacefully carried on. I am not sure—maybe I did squall and kick; I will ask some one who was there some time, and if they say I did I will forgive myself and a load will be lifted from my heart.

The other day I met an elder brother for the first time in two or three years—in fact, for almost the first time since my eyes saw the light of reason and I became free. I was anxious to know whether or not he was still worshiping the God that is going to damn his brother. So the first chance I got to broach the subject I waded right in and handled him and my childhood's God without gloves. I found that, although he was not worshiping the old devil—I mean the old God—to any very great extent, he was still a little prejudiced in his favor, for, when I had presented him some arguments and asked him some questions, I waited to see what he would say, and his answer was—just as I had thought it would be—"What would your dead mother say if she knew this?"

I never yet asked a Christian friend or relative an unanswerable question in regard to their religion but they said: "What would your mother say?"

Upon my soul, this is aggravating—the assumption that I do not honor my parents because I do not profess the same religion. My mother died when I was quite young, but still I can remember when she took me on her knee and taught me to be honest and truthful. I also remember—still more plainly—how my father also took me on his knee, but with the other end up, and taught me the evil consequences of not being truthful.

I imagine she would still say: "Be honest; be truthful."

On the other hand, what would she say if she knew that I had discovered the things which deceived her and refused to expose them; had found the lamp and refused to light it; had found the truth and refused to speak it?

I can imagine, if her soul is living now—and I can almost believe it is—that I see the same sweet smile—which is almost the only thing I remember distinctly of her—which was on her face one day during her last illness, when I, a six-year-old child, ran home from school at recess to kiss her and then ran back again.

I say these things to encourage other young Freethinkers who may, like myself, be made to feel sad by some one's asking, because they can ask nothing else unanswerable: "What would your mother say?"

Yours and Freedom's,
HARRY TRICK.

Children's Corner.

Edited by Miss SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

In Prairie Groves.

In prairie groves of planted trees
A summer song of birds and bees,
And roses in the dewy grass
Are morning pilgrims in the pass.
Green spears, like lances in a row,
Hedge round the strange, wild indigo,
And any bird that dare go through Confronts a guard in soldier-blue,
By prairie groves.

Sweet williams flare their yellow lights,
As stars dropped down from summer nights,
That gem the plains and pastures green,
Where speckled cows may feed between,
And pretty calves and young colts play—
I passed them there but yesterday—
Where cottonwoods had walled the lines
Whose leaves sing sweet as southern pines,
In prairie groves.

The thrush awakes the golden morn,
The lark is singing in the corn,
And boys and men are in the rows,
Where breath of balm so lightly blows
A fragrance in the warm, brown earth,
Where Nature broods 'bove each new birth;
And birds and breezes all in tune
Proclaim a joyous day in June
Near prairie groves.

Box-elder, elm, and ash trees sway
So gladly on this perfect day;
And willows wave, and gleam, and shine
Along this prairie-land of mine,
Where soon catalpa's tossing boughs,
As brides in white that murmur vows,
Will deck our way with tropic bloom
And bridal flowers and sweet perfume
In prairie groves.

Pueblo, Col. MARY BAIRD FINCH.

Persecution.

Persecution in whatever form is tyrannous, and especially so when one is persecuted for his religious belief. History is full of persecutions, and the day of that tyranny is not yet over. It forms many a theme for writers, and if the reader will give attention a short story will be related.

The day had been warm, but the night was cool. The moon with unusual brightness shone down upon a Canadian village, a village full of bigotry and where strife continually reigned. In a small cottage in the center of a small farm lived an old man, his wife, and two grown-up lads. They were Freethinkers, and this was what they suffered for.

Coming up the quiet country road were four men, who had been detailed by a crowd of others of the same mind to burn down the house of this family. Silently they approached, and each went to a corner. The cottage was more of a frame building rather than brick and stones, and would easily burn. Each man had a bundle of oily papers and rags, and for these they dug a little hole under the side of each corner. They then put the rags in and lighted them, and soon they had disappeared to a spot where they could watch with safety.

Slowly the wood caught, and then faster and faster the flames began to consume the place. Would those inside be awake in time enough to escape? It seems impossible.

A voice! One of the young men had awakened and was calling in loud tones for the others to bestir themselves. Meanwhile the flames seemed to fully envelop the building, and the brightness of them could be seen from a distance. Inside they threw on what clothes they could lay their hands on, and the two men made a rush for the door. It was in flames, but an ax being near them, it was a minute's work to knock it down. The flames then were met, and they with one bound were on the outside, safe but for a scorching.

But what of their parents? After shouting fire, and waking those in cottages near by, they again entered the building and went straight to where their parents were. The father was dressed, but the mother, an invalid, was only in her night robes. Despair seemed written on their faces, for the old man had tried to carry his wife, but was not strong enough.

"Father," said one of the lads, "hurry down stairs while we carry mother. You will have to rush through the flames, so take this blanket."

He went, and reached the outside in safety. The sons wrapped their mother in a blanket and went down stairs, only to share a miserable fate. All around them was fire. Even used to the house as they were, they could not find the entrance. A noise, as though something was breaking, was heard, and then the roof fell in, the walls fell down, bringing on top of them the floor that they had just left. Crushed and burnt was their death. The noise of the flames, the shouts of the neighbors, the frantic cries of the father, this was the song that chanted them on to death.

Tears filled the old man's eyes, as he saw the escape of his beloved ones was impossible. Gradually he became frantic and would have rushed into the mass of flames had he not been held back. Slowly the flames died out. The house was one heap of ruins. He was still lamenting, but by degrees he became pacified, and viewed the ruins with a melancholy eye.

As the fire abated, the crowd that had watched wended their way to their homes and beds. The old man seemed alone. He sat upon a heap of stones, and was rocking himself to and fro. Where the flames had destroyed his house and killed his loved ones, the crowd had destroyed his crops of vegetables and fruits by malice and partly by curiosity to get near the fire so as to see it.

A young man approached the figure seated on the stones. He laid his hand upon his shoulder, and he that was full of sorrow looked up.

"I'm very sorry this should have happened, but for your kindness in helping me and mother to get on, you must find shelter with us."

"No, no," he sadly murmured, "it will not do. They will only point their fingers at you in scorn for sheltering me. This was not the work of an accident. It was done on purpose. I had not used a fire this day."

"But, come, you must," was gently urged. "You have been kind enough to help me and mother when we had needed it, and when I had even been one of those who mocked at you. Come."

"I can't—I cannot leave this place. There, there," pointing to where the ruins were, "there are my loved ones—my wife and sons. I cannot leave them, I cannot leave them," and he sobbed violently, which affected the young man.

"You must—you cannot stay here. Let them say what they will, so long as we have it you will find a home with us."

He allowed himself to be led, and with the couple he had befriended found a home. The bodies were found and were buried, not in the churchyard some few miles away, but in a corner of his farm, shaded by a tall tree on which grew the maple leaf.

The cause of this fire was never known—never investigated. To satisfy a crowd of persons whose sole delight was to persecute those who differed with them in religious belief, a home was destroyed, three lives were lost, and one was left sorrowing for those whom he loved. In the next year, he again built a home and cultivated his farm; but he was still mourning, and would often weep when alone, for the dear ones gone never to return.

So it is, Freethinkers are not yet safe from persecution. You can still hear of those who suffer, and in some parts silence is their safety. In the future, at no distant date, the day of success seems at hand. The power of the church has been broken; thousands are thinking, and thousands are refusing to believe the impossibilities Christianity puts forth. That mighty octopus is becoming smaller, and will soon be like a worm, which has to get under the ground to find shelter from the mighty throngs that would trample it down. The church will be trampled down, not because of persecution, but because reason has decreed it.

EDWARD DOBSON.

Correspondence.

MADRONE, WASH., June 16, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I will try and write again to the Children's Corner. I like to read the Children's Corner. My papa does not take it, but my grandpa takes it. I go to school. I study reading, spelling, arithmetic, hygiene, history, grammar.

I am eleven years old. I have five brothers, one older than me and four younger.

I still remain your Liberal friend,
IRENE WILLIAMS.

PAULINA, ORE., June 1, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to the Corner. There is no school this summer. I like to go to school very well. I am a reader of the Corner; I like to read the Corner. My father has sheep, and I love to watch the little lambs play. I am eight years old. I have three brothers. Well, I will close my letter now. I am
A little Freethinker friend of yours,
PEARL HARDISTY.

[Thanks, dear, for your letter. Next time tell us about the town, all about the sheep, and anything else you please.—Ed. C. C.]

MADRONE, WASH., June 16, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I promised to tell the children about my home. Well, I live on the Pacific coast, nine miles west of Seattle, the great city of the West. We live on an island. We can see Seattle from our place. We live in a cosy little harbor. We have a very backward spring for this country; it has rained nearly all the time, but our garden looks very well considering. I should have written before, but I have not felt well, and put it off. I was sorry to not see any letters this week from the little ones. Well, I will have to close or this will go to the wastebasket. I do hope the children will continue their Corner, for I take deep interest in them. I am sixty years old.

Yours for right and truth,
A. W. R., or "GRANDMA."

HYDESVILLE, CAL., June 19, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. I went to school two weeks; I had a bad cold; mamma would not let me go until school was out. There are three churches in Hydenville; they are holding prayer meetings and revival meetings, and quarreling among themselves. We only went once, and then we were disgusted, and did not care to go again. The subject was darkness, not a dark night but eternal darkness! Oh, you ought to have seen the face that he put on when he said dark-ness! I will tell my age—it is ten. I have two sisters younger than myself, one eight, and one five; we have no brothers. My sisters' names are Addie and Daisy. Those verses in the Corner were lovely—that's my name, May. I like THE TRUTH SEEKER and the Children's Corner very much. I would like to correspond with some of the little girls of the Corner.

As my letter is getting long, I will close, hoping to see this in print.

I am your Liberal friend,
MAY E. KIRBY.

Miss Wixton: Please excuse poor writing; it is her first letter she has written to you. She has tried several times, but wrote so poorly I would not let her send it. Excuse her.
MRS. KIRBY.

[May's letter is good. Practice makes perfect. Study and improve.—Ed. C. C.]

CROMWELL, IA., June 4, 1893.

MISS WIXON AND FRIENDS OF THE CORNER: When we receive THE TRUTH SEEKER I always look at Mr. Heston's cartoons and then turn immediately to the Children's Corner.

In the paper of June 3d the first thing upon which my eye fell was a letter from Cromwell. Imagine my surprise and delight when I noted the name signed, Charlie H. Moore. It was, as we girls say, "just splendid," and just such a letter as I had been wanting to see. I had sent forth THE TRUTH SEEKER on its mission of enlightenment, and in return I read in its columns a good and intelligent letter from one of "my boys." It was just as might be expected, however, for intelligence wants truth, and that is what they receive when they read THE TRUTH SEEKER.

I wish to thank Charlie for this step toward liberty and free speech through the Corner, so that all the readers and contributors to THE TRUTH SEEKER can see the amount of benefit it is doing. I am sure all of the Cornerites welcome Charlie just as we do all the young but intelligent heads which bob up among the thousands of older ones.

I feel safe in saying that he, his brother, and his two sisters will never be roped into the church, and be classed as "one of them."

May they always be as free from the dogmas of the church as they now are.

Very respectfully,
MINNIE M. GEIER.

[Yes, we are glad to call Charlie one of the family of the bright boys and girls by means of whom the Corner is kept fair and fresh.—Ed. C. C.]

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABOOK. Price, 15 cts.

GOLD. SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE.

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL.

MINERAL.

3mo14

"Everybody's Law Book,"

Is the title of the new 768 page work prepared by J. Alexander Koonce, LL.B., member of the New York bar.

It enables every man and woman to be their own lawyer. It teaches what are your rights and how to maintain them. When to begin a lawsuit and when to shun one. It contains the useful information every business man needs in every state in the Union. It contains business forms of every variety useful to the lawyer as well as to all who have legal business to transact.

Inclose $2 for a copy, or inclose two-cent postage stamp for a table of contents and terms to agents. Address BENJ. W. HITCHCOCK, Publisher, 385 Sixth Avenue, New York.

4125

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. Full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. BALL.

Price, 25 cents.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth, a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 38 Lafayette place, New York.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged.

As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiotcy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Sabbath; the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason," are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers's Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
18 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French
Catholic Priest, who renounced
Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Pres-b-ter-ian Paper, 50
cents;
cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that Infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Agnostic Annual

—FOR—1893

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:

The Moral Sanction, Leslie Stephen; Reverent Agnosticism, Amos Waters; The Mother Nature: A Poem, Gerald Massey; Dogmatism in Theology, Alfred Momerie; Sermons on the Mount, Samuel Laing; The City of the Dead, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin); On the Duty of Honesty in Our Convictions, C. E. Plumptre; Scientific Religion, R. Bithell; The Blight of Superstition, Charles Watts; Anthropology and Orthodoxy, Edward Clodd; The Disappearance of the Nether World, F. J. Gould; Religious Ideas: Their Origin and Development, Frederick Millar; Signals with Mars: A Poem, G. H. Martin; Materialism and Idealism Harmonized, Lucian Armstrong.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's

ARGUMENT

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equalled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. 40 cents.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABOOK.

Price, 10 cents.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures, and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Price, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 888 pages, $2.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 188 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS: AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

Don Allen has taken this old and somewhat threadbare subject, and in a book of 161 pages presents to the public his idea regarding the stupendous story of the revivifying of an alleged dead body. He shows, as has been done by other authors, that the Bible account of the resurrection of Jesus is not well attested, either by humans or by the nondescript creatures called "angels." The fact is, the story is of mythical origin, ingeniously woven and changed from time to time to suit different nations and varying periods of civilization.

Don Allen has said some very good things in support of his theory. In writing of inspiration he says: "No amount of supposed inspiration can make truth out of falsehood. God himself cannot do it." Very true; and it is sheer nonsense to waste time in speculating about what God thinks or does not think.

Mr. Allen doubts that the resurrection ever occurred, and so do a great many others. His book will only strengthen that doubt in the minds of those who give any thought and reason to the subject.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

THE CREATION OF GOD. By Dr. Jacob Hartmann.

This book appears in blood-red paper covers and comprises 432 pages, for the most part attractive and readable matter. Dr. Hartmann is evidently a well-read man and is connected with no less than six famous colleges. He has given some attention to the science of astronomy and portrays a good many interesting scientific facts. The chapters on "The Earth" and "The Sun" are good reading, but many will skip the biblical records of creation as savoring too much of an old, old story. All will be interested in the doctor's treatment of organic life—vegetable and animal—also in the pages relating to food substances, digestion, nutrition, and elimination of waste particles. The chapter treating of alcohol and its effects on the system is worthy an attentive perusal. Doctor Hartmann has made search for the "soul," and like other seekers for the same, has found it not on the face of the earth, in the deep, or in any of the aisles of space.

The conclusion of the author of this book is that God never created anything, simply because there never has been any God to create, which is ingeniously proved. The summing-up of the whole matter in "The Rules and Duties of Life" is worth more than the mere price of the book, and if lived up to by men and women earth would soon become a blooming paradise, precluding forever the wish to seek any other.

There are many excellent things in this book, giving abundant food for thought, and he who buys it will not be sorry, for he can learn much from its pages.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. An Outline of Practical Coöperative Individualism. By Henry Olerich. Published by Gilmore & Olerich, Holstein, Ia. Cloth, pp. 467, price $1.50.

This work presents what it considers a remedy for the evils of our present economic and social institutions. This remedy is to be a system of coöperative individualism. It will be individualism, for each individual will be given personal liberty in an extreme degree. And the individuals will nevertheless unite coöperatively in a good many functions. This occasional combination they will enter into willingly. They will not be forced, as at present.

We agree with the author where he sets forth in the preface that there is vast abuse and suffering now. There is so much that we should earnestly turn in every direction in search and examination of means to remove it. It is, as the author says, true that in our cities we meet countless men, women, and children with pale faces, who are starving for want of sunshine, pure air, and outdoor exercise. Thousands of industrious persons are enforced idlers. A countless army of men, women, and children are mere machines, working a long, toilsome day in a mill, factory, or workshop. Many women are forced to sell themselves into hateful marriages. Our farmers stunt their mentality and make dreary their lives toiling in solitudes, too often for railway magnates or other extortionate capitalists. A vast multitude, in fact nearly all of our so-called laborers, are toiling so hard and so long daily, for their mere material subsistence, that little, if any, energy is left for personal cleanliness and mental culture. Husband and wife, parent and child, often quarrel and fight and some kill each other and commit suicide. Care and sorrow are stamped on nearly every brow one meets. Strife, revenge, and jealousy are absorbing a large share of our best energies.

Accordingly the author casts about for a social system free from these ills. Such a one he professes to find in "a system which recognizes extensive voluntary coöperation as its fundamental principle of production and distribution, and which concedes to every individual the right to do as he wills, provided he does not infringe the equal right of any other person." In the harmonious and intelligent union of these two factors, says this writer, consists the solution of the social and economic question.

This indictment of the present system, and presentation of the new one, is given in the form of a story or dialog. Into a pleasant family in some village in the United States suddenly pops a native of the planet Mars who has by a curious means arrived at this earth; and the dialog between him and the family canvasses the present evils and results in an elaboration of the remedy.

The first expressions of this Marsite are ones of amazement and horror. He was, he says, "as much frightened among you as you would be if you were accidentally dropped among your American Indians or among the cannibals. I saw the idle boy sportively fling stones, with apparent delight, at the joyful birds that were singing their sweet songs. I saw the teamster strike his beasts of burden so cruelly, even when they were almost completely exhausted. I saw the hunter, with apparent delight, project the burning shot into the sensitive nerve of his game. I saw him beat his dog unmercifully for what the dog did not know. I saw the butcher not only slaughter, but torture and flay with satisfaction, creatures which were entitled to life as much as he. I saw the fisher jerk the hook out of the fishes' throat, as if fish had no feeling, and then starve them in an atmosphere of air. I saw the parent scold, kick, and cuff his child with an air of delight and duty. I saw the politician deceive and defraud his constituents. I heard the minister threaten his devotees with everlasting hell-fire. I saw the judge take a bribe. I heard the witness perjure himself, and the lawyer misrepresent his case. I saw the stockman keep his stock in small, filthy, cold stables and pens. I saw the rich trample the poor into the mire of poverty. I saw the editor praise, for the money that was in it for him, things that he knew were worse than worthless. I saw the landlord evict his tenant for the only crime of being unable to pay his rent. I saw train-robbers wreck trains regardless of the human lives they contained. I saw incendiarism practiced with the sole object of material pelf. I saw countless women live a life of sin and shame in order to make a livelihood. I saw the toilers, men, women, and children, on every hand bent and deformed under their burden of toil and care. I heard the minister preach that the only good and truthful man your world ever had—your Redeemer—was crucified by a ruling mob for expressing his honest opinion. I saw the policeman club his victim; the hangman strangle the fallen. I saw the 'state' imprison men and women for telling the truth and investigating the so-called laws of nature. I saw the teacher flog his pupil often only for telling the truth and for following his inquiring nature. I saw the soldier shoot his fellow-man in countless numbers. I saw the husband subjugate and otherwise misuse his wife. I saw the 'state' compel married husbands and wives to live together after they did not love one another any more. I saw people starve, freeze, go ragged and filthy, and have no home to go to. I heard quarrels, oaths, curses, moans, and sighs. I saw tears of sorrow, frowns; sullen, pouty faces, furrowed brows, anxious, care-worn countenances, decrepit, emaciated, diseased human frames; slow, clumsy gaits and countless premature deaths. And I saw time and again good men and women ostracised, imprisoned, and hanged for expressing their honest thoughts and for giving to the world the fruits of their honest toil of observation and investigation."

Then by describing the institutions of Mars, this traveler makes it clear what ours should be. In the chapter on "The Marsian Theory of Creation and Formation" he relates a supernatural doctrine on that subject which is evidently a hit at the Christian theory held here, and next delineates a scientific account on the subject which he says has superseded the old one. The "Marsian Home and Family" is next shown to be superior to that of the earth. The next two chapters, on "Wealth" and "Labor," give what are supposed to be improved schemes for regulating those things. In four chapters the "Big-house" which forms the typical dwelling in Mars is portrayed. The foreigner tells us: "Our smallest dwellings accommodate about a thousand men, women, and children. These dwellings or Marsian homes are grand, magnificent structures about eight stories high, the main building 150 x 600 feet, with three wings on each side 60 x 300 feet. There is an electric engine in each dwelling, which heats every apartment; it lights them with soft brilliant electric lights; it does all the culinary work—cooking, baking, etc.; it pumps the water to all parts of the building; it does all the laundry work—washing, drying, and ironing, warms the water for the bath-rooms and for all other apartments; it runs the elevators, heats the conservatories and green-houses; it runs the sewing-machines, dish-washers, and all other machinery in the building which I cannot mention at present. In the summer it cools apartments by creating currents of air."

Next we are enlightened by our friend from the skies in chapters on "Happiness and Truth," "Commercial and Mercantile Systems," "Money, or Medium of Exchange," "Some Connections between Wealth, Labor, Commerce, Intercommunication, and a Medium of Exchange," "Ownership of Land," "Government," "Sex Relations," "Comparison of Our Sex Relations with Yours," "Education," and "How the Transition from the Old to the New Order of Things Was Accomplished." At last the Marsite takes passage, in the flying-machine, or whatever it may be termed, that brought him hither, for his own native shores.

It is our opinion that the book will repay perusal.

8% GUARANTEED by a leading Trust Company is offered at par. Suitable for large and small investments. Full information furnished by W. E. Lowry, Mills Building, New York.

CHOLERA, DIPHTHERIA, Dysentery, Piles, Quinsy, Catarrh. The Antidote for $1. Agents wanted. Dr. G. H. MILLER, 1441 South Twelfth street, Denver, Col. 20128

Force and Matter;

OR,
Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:
Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things in Immortality of Matter, Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Force, Man,
Infinity of Matter, Brain and Mind,
Value of Matter, Thought,
Motion, Consciousness,
Form, Seat of the Soul,
Immutability of Natural Innate Ideas,
Laws, The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Personal Continuity,
Laws, Vital Force,
The Heavens, The Soul of Brutes
Periods of the Creation Free Will,
of the Earth, Morality,
Original Generation, Concluding Observa-
Secular Generation, tions.
Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Landaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

Christianity a Fiction.

THE
Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

TRUTH speaking, as an obligation paramount to partisanship, friendship, and all personal ends, is not an ingenious invention which, when once discovered, is speedily adopted by every one. It implies a quality of character such as, in a high degree, is not often found, and toward which man rises with extreme slowness. For almost two thousand years religion has laid its chief ethical stress upon belief and benevolence. Truthfulness, in its double sense of seeking the truth and speaking it, has hardly yet got beyond its Bethlehem.—Life of Samuel Bowles.

MANY contend that the doctrine of future rewards and punishments, even if untrue, has a restraining influence upon the masses of mankind. That Lincoln did not share this fallacious opinion, is shown by the following extract from an address delivered in Springfield in 1842: "Pleasures to be enjoyed, or pains to be endured, after we shall be dead and gone, are but little regarded. . . . There is something so ludicrous, in promises of good, or threats of evil, a great way off, as to render the whole subject with which they are connected easily turned into ridicule. 'Better lay down that spade you're stealing, Paddy—if you don't, you'll pay for it at the Day of Judgment.' 'Be the powers, if ye'll credit me so long I'll take another.'"—Was Abraham Lincoln a Christian? by John E. Remsburg.

MAN cannot wait quietly for the slow growth of knowledge in him, through gradually made closer interaction with things, but is ever tempted to anticipate sound knowledge by speculative intuitions, from the high and special personal station which he usurps for himself, or by revelations which he claims and professes to have from some higher source than sense. Experience is neglected or ignored where experience ought to be rigorously made and sincerely incorporated; an arrogant impatience of research allowed to prevail where the difficulties of observation make a humble patience of painstaking search necessary to the discovery of truth; a supreme confidence and self-granted full swing of imaginativ invention where a modest subordination of self is alone suited to win Nature's confidence and discover her secrets.—Maudesley.

An essential part of his [the theological student's] intellectual training is to make him expert in so manipulating language as to show that the words in the sacred books were intended to express something very different from the meaning originally attached to them. To the words in daily use a well understood meaning is attached. We hardly know how we could otherwise live as we do. We call these their natural meanings. Divines, who guide the studies of their pupils in religion, teach them how to use the words of the sacred books in a non-natural sense. Teachers of science use no such subterfuges. As new truths dawn upon them, they correct their mistakes and alter their language. They do not pretend that the same word means first one thing and then another. When they thought that the earth stood still they said so. They afterward discovered that the earth moved, and they said it moved; but admitted that they did not mean that it moved when they said it stood still.—Studies of Man, by a Japanese.

BUT let us first consider, with a little more accuracy, how it comes to pass that written history is not a truthful representation of facts. The sources of truth, whether legendary or fictitious, are mainly two—observation and narration. We all know the opinion of the criminal lawyer on the relative value of direct testimonies and circumstantial evidence—a question on which he ought to be the best judge. Such a man holds that, in cases where the accused is convicted on the force of concurring circumstances, there is as a rule, less reason for doubt than where the conviction ensues on the mere testimony of an eye-witness. This, at first, seems strange and unreasonable; but we are disposed to believe that the professional opinion is sound. The ground of that opinion consists in this, that all observation involves discrimination and valuation of the evidence of our fallible senses. Experience soon satisfies us that testimony, where not wholly to be rejected, should be received with suspicion. A very small percentage of even honest, intelligent, and educated men are competent observers, and few have the slightest notion of the difficulties involved in the simplest observation. The fact is, prepossessions and assumptions are unconsciously mixed with facts. What we look for we are apt to imagine that we see, or to believe that we have seen. In narration we are still more liable to error. It is exceedingly hard to remember exactly what we have seen and heard, and even harder to describe or reproduce it. What we dream or read we are prone to mix up with the memory of fact.—Dr. Ingleby.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
 Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
 Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
 Crisis. Written During American Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $8; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
 Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
 Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 80c.
 Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
 Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
 Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
 Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
 Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
 Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
 Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By
G. W. ROOTS.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
 Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
 Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
 Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE
Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

- IRON-CLAD SERIES.
- 1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 - 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake. 5
 - 4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood. 25
 - 7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller. 10
 - 8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison. 15
 - 9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
 - 10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin. 10
 - 11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin. 50
 - 12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural and Portrait. 25
 - 13 Essays on Miracles. David Hume. 10
 - 14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 - 15 Were Adam and Eve Our first Parents? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 - 16 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 - 18 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh. 10
 - 19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake. 5
 - 20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake. 5
 - 21 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts. 5
 - 22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts. 5
 - 23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts. 5
 - 24 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts. 5
 - 25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
 - 26 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts. 5
 - 28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
 - 29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake. 5
 - 30 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts. 5
 - 33 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 - 39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 - 40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H. 10
 - 42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts. 10
 - 43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts. 5
 - 44 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake. 10
 - 47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- MANNA SERIES.
- 1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen." 5
 - 3 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 - 5 20. Questions Without Answers. 5
 - 6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin. 10
 - 7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian. 10
 - 8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake. 5
 - 9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
 - 10 A Few Words about the Devil. 5
 - 11 New Life of Jacob. 5
 - 12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake. 10
 - 13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake. 10
 - 14 Acts of the Apostles: A. F. A. H. 10
 - 15 Lucriferous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
 - 16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 - 17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh. 5
 - 18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh. 5
 - 19 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 - 20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 - 21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz. 10

- On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS,
HISTORY,
STATISTICS,
AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF
THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
WITH PORTRAIT OF
THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

- 16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
- 1 The Church Robbing the People.
- 1 Thanksgiving.
- 6 Sabbath Laws.
- 24 Children and the Church.
- 20 Woman and the Church.
- 4 The Church and Thomas Paine.
- 4 Studies in Natural History.
- 4 The Bible and Science.
- 15 The Clergy and Their Flocks.
- 15 Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
- 4 The Atonement Scheme.
- 4 The Lord and His Works.
- 20 Prayer.
- 20 The Creeds.
- 1 Christians and Mohammedans.

- 2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
- 5 Missionaries.
- 1 The Lord's Instruments.
- 25 Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
- 1 The Church and Slavery.
- 2 Priests and Politics.
- 4 Ireland and the Church.
- 1 Church's Idea of Civilization.
- 1 The Uses of the Cross.
- 4 Unkind Reflections on the Church.
- 9 Persecutions of the Church.
- 12 Some Allegories.
- 8 Heaven.
- 6 Hell.
- 7 Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

POPPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and The Truth Seeker one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and Truth Seeker, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL.
Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $30, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	{ Oxidized,	each $2.5
" "	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	" "
" "	{ Oxidized,	" 3.00
" "	{ 14 ounces per doz.,	" "
" "	{ Oxidized,	" 3.00
" "	{ gilt bowl,	" "
" "	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	" "
" "	{ Oxidized,	" 3.50
" "	{ sectional gilt,	" "
" "	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	" "
Orange "	{ Oxidized, plain bowl,	" 2.75
" "	{ gilt "	" 3.25
Sugar "	{ satin "	" 3.00
" "	{ gilt "	" 3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list. My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Bangles, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer. (If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.
Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST,
For Men Only.

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicose, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,

Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

JERRY'S JOSS IS OUT OF HUMOR AGAIN.

But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods. Wherefore my fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.—Jere. xlv, 5, 6.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.
Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature—i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.
WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.
By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - 15 cents

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, - - - - - 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

EAGLE BRAND.

—THE BEST—

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO.,
Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.
18t18

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price 25 cents.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.
12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

Water of Life

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

News of the Week.

RELIGIOUS services are held at the World's Fair each Sunday.

THE placards inciting against Christianity and foreigners that are posted in China have produced the killing of two more missionaries.

REV. MR. HILL, the well-known anti-Mormon preacher, of Utah, has disclosed what, if we may believe him, is a scheme of the Mormons to buy statehood from Congress. A million dollars is said to have been raised for the purpose.

MUHAMMED ALEXANDER RUSSELL WEBB, the missionary for the conversion of Americans to Mohammedanism, made a report to the syndicate of rich Mohammedans in India, for whom he has been securing estimates on lands in Georgia, Alabama, and Florida for the formation of Mohammedan colonies. He expects an answer from the syndicate in a few weeks.

THE device of a detachable flap for a postage-stamp, inscribed "Not to be delivered on Sunday," which has been adopted in Belgium, originated with T. Vanderveveboon, minister of railways, telegraphs, and posts of Belgium. He is an extremely religious man, and while he cannot stop the collection and delivery of mails on Sunday, he has adopted this postage-stamp scheme hoping to lead the people up to his own ideas.

THOMAS RYAN, of Boston, has been refused a divorce on the ground of desertion. He, like his wife, was a Catholic, till he attended a revival meeting, and, to use his own words, "for the first time in his life experienced religion." He went over to the Methodist Episcopal faith, and then his wife left him without justifiable cause. In answer to a question on the witness stand he said: "My wife deserted me because I loved my savior better than I did her."

LAST Sunday at 5 o'clock a short but violent storm broke upon Chicago. Four persons on the yacht Chesapeake were drowned, as well as several others on smaller boats. The World's Fair boats lost no passengers. A part of the glass roof of the Agricultural Building fell, but harmed no one. Other buildings were damaged. A report spread that the captive balloon had been carried off with several passengers. It was afterward learned that the balloon only had been destroyed.

GOVERNOR ALTGELD says that the attacks on his pardon of the Anarchists "do not mention the fact that the man who was chief of police at the time says that he has investigated the case thoroughly, and that he doesn't believe there was much in it. They do not mention the fact that the juryman said they could not give the case a fair and impartial trial. They do not mention the fact that the man who threw the bomb was not brought into court, and gave no evidence whatever at the trial; that it was not proved in the slightest measure that the man who threw the bomb had any connection with these men, or was incited to the act by the conduct of these men, or that he had ever even heard them make speeches."

A CURIOUS mode of treating the social evil, which perhaps may be regarded as placing it under high license, is being practiced in Baltimore. Two hundred keepers of immoral houses have been called to court and fined. For three days they filled the court-room. The fines ranged from $5 to $125, with an average of about $10 costs. Several thousand dollars were collected. The greatest objection urged against the method adopted this year is the assembling in court of all the persons indicted, which naturally attracted a crowd to the court-house. In former years the fines were imposed and collected without those indicted going to court. Under the law half of the fines are distributed among the incorporated dispensaries of Baltimore.

By the new liquor law in South Carolina the state will pay a large part of its expenses out of profits which formerly were reaped by private enterprise. It charges fifty per cent profit on the liquor sold to the county dispensaries as its share of the gain. Then the dispensaries are required to sell the liquor at fifty per cent additional profit, that gain to be divided between the town and the county. This is quite Socialistic. The law is strict both as to its provisions against its violation and as to the manner of obtaining liquor from a dispensary. One has to carry a certificate of good character with him before he can obtain liquor. If he is a known drunkard he cannot purchase. The quantity one can purchase is not less than a half-pint and not more than five gallons, and in every event it can be obtained only once a day by any one individual. The bottle is sealed and cannot be opened on the premises. Minors cannot obtain it under any circumstances.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 29. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, July 22, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

A PRACTICAL APPLICATION OF DIVINE JUSTICE.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU LAUGH.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

*Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.*

*Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice.
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel.
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.*

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

ated. Price, cloth, $2.

Address. THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY
PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent
Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

New Publications.

S. P. Putnam's Latest Pamphlet.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1892, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Freethought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for His Processes Are Egregiously Slow, They Are Egregiously Wasteful, They Often Serve No Use, They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subservency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]
Price, ----- $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.
Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subtleties, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages, Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification;

The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The

Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER,

28 Lafayette place, New York City.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 29. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.}

New York, Saturday, July 22, 1893.

{28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - - JULY 22, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

The Design Argument.

Among the discourses in which divines continually reason for the existence of a God, and delude the many into believing in such a being, one of the latest and most noticeable is that of Rev. John Gerard, of England. Originally published in the Month, it has been copied in numerous other periodicals, and doubtless seems to many an unshakable piece of reasoning. The Rev. Mr. Gerard takes up the Law of Variation. This law is simply a statement of the fact that offspring do not resemble their parents exactly, but vary slightly from the type of their progenitors in many directions. This seemingly unimportant fact became of extraordinary significance when held up by Darwin as the fundamental principle in the evolution of living creatures—in the gradual development of such beings as man from forms of life as simple as, say, a jelly-fish or an oyster. For, pointed out Darwin, if offspring did not vary, but were just like their parents, then no change in the species could ever have taken place, and instead of the high and complicated organisms of to-day there would be only the poor and simple ones that filled their places eons ago; but the offspring do vary, and as they are so numerous that all cannot find room, only those survive that have chanced to vary in such a way as to be better fitted for gaining their living, and so the species is at each generation represented by an improved specimen. The fact that the offspring vary he gave the name of the Law of Variation, while the fact that only the fittest survive was elevated to equal fame under the designation of the Law of Natural Selection. Rev. Mr. Gerard, reciting that Darwin professes to find in this law of purposeless variation and selection a sufficient instrument for the production of present organisms, denies that it can be such, and declares that it affords no explanation of the said production. He gives this illustration:

"It is, for example, by a succession of 'slight accidental variations in the required direction' that Mr. Darwin himself explains the development of the eye, from the simple apparatus of an optic nerve, coated with pigment, and invested by transparent membrane, to the complex organ of inimitable contrivances which we now behold. What such an explanation really means it is worth while to inquire. We all know that the friction to which bodies at the bottom of a river are exposed inevitably changes their form—that is, makes them vary. If we were to throw in amongst the gravel ten thousand or ten million cubes of glass, is there any probability that any one of them would be shaped into a lens fit to use in a telescope, such a lens as the variations wrought by an optician produce every day? Yet this is exactly what we are asked to believe that a system of variation equally random has actually done in the eye, and might be counted upon to do."

Just how to meet this argument will not be apparent to all of its readers. But there is an answer to it—an exposure of its fallacy—which is conclusive; and it is this. In the example, we contemplate the same glasses as being operated on by the water throughout the period of time assigned for the experiment; but in the case of living creatures the same individuals are not the subjects of the whole course of experiment. At short intervals the living creatures are removed from the earth and replaced by another set which by the survival of the fittest have been approximated nearer to the final type; and so to make the cases parallel the glasses would have to be removed from the river at short intervals and replaced by a set approximated nearer to the final type. In other words: every few years each living creature produces several fresh individuals to take its place, and among these the one that finally does get into its place and hold it is the one that chances to vary most in the direction of the final type; so in the instance of the river and glasses we should have to take up the glasses every few years, and, for each of them, take several glasses obtained from some other source, and select the one varying most in the direction of a lens, and restore to the river that one in each case. Under such a method a lens could be produced.

The Church Injuring the Poor.

The revenue of the Roman Catholic church largely comes from the poorest classes, who can only by the greatest injustice to themselves spare the money. Servant-girls, for instance, are among the freest contributors, and their lot is one of hardship and privation to ameliorate which every cent that they can get should be devoted. To take from their puny means of support and comfort is a shame of the blackest. An instance of the rapacity with which the church does nevertheless devour the means of this class was given at the Sacred Heart church at Trenton, New Jersey, the other Sunday. The account reads that Rev. Father Hogan "edified his people" with a remarkable statement of whole-souled generosity, and this not on the part of some wealthy parishioner, but at the hands of a servant-girl. "This good woman," said Father Hogan, "made it her ambition some time ago to see that the church should be presented with the beautiful tabernacle which graces the high altar, and with this in view she set about collecting subscriptions from her friends. When she had something over $100 subscribed, she made up her mind to subscribe the balance herself. The entire cost was $500. The girl thereby left herself penniless, but said that she was only lending to God, who would take care of her. She had not long left the parochial residence when her return was announced, and Father Hogan, being summoned, inquired, if she had changed her mind. "No, father," she replied, "but I have found another dime in my pocketbook, and as I promised to give God all, I cannot hold anything back." Father Hogan, says the account, "was much affected by this wonderful exhibition of self-sacrifice." This incident happened months ago, but was alluded to by Father Hogan on this recent Sunday as the preface to another statement that the same woman had just presented the statue of an angel, worth $45, to be placed on one side of the tabernacle above referred to. He added, incidentally, that there was room for another statue of a similar character on the other side. Church services were not long over before another servant-girl waited on the pastor and made an offering of this statue. Still another girl at service, says the account, has just presented the church with a handsome statue of the sacred heart to be placed in the sanctuary and has supplemented this with the gift of a pedestal on which to mount it. The double gift represents $100. Father Hogan spoke of "the rare liveliness of faith which prompted these good deeds" and contrasted it with "the niggardliness of many with long purses." The church still needs a pulpit, and it is thought that some of the parishioners will club together and buy it. It will cost $1,000.

To the consideration that the poor who thus deprive themselves to give to the church injure themselves, there is to be added the further consideration that they also injure us. Society is interdependent, and the prosperity, health, and intelligence of one enhance the prosperity, health, and intelligence of all. If, instead of contributing to the worthless priest, the poor man would keep his money, he would not require our funds in his frequent pauperism. If he would expend it in drains for his lands and pipes for his buildings, he would not infect us with contagions. If he would buy books with it, he would not keep us in eternal turmoil struggling against his ignorant administration of popular government. By draining his support from the scanty purses of the working-people, the priest injures them, and injures us, and in the support of himself maintains the greatest bane that history records.

Early Religious Restrictions.

The third and latest volume of McMaster's History of the United States gives amusing particulars of the religious restrictions that prevailed in the states of our Union for some time after the Revolution. In places a man's right to vote depended upon his religious opinions. Thus in South Carolina "a free white man must believe in the existence of a God, in a future state of reward and punishment, and have a freehold of fifty acres of land." A queer mixture this of piety and pelf! And this was not all. Between the right to vote and the right to hold office there was a wide distinction. Thousands of men who, on election day, came to the polls, were by law hopelessly debarred from ever, in the whole course of their lives, holding the office of sheriff, or taking a seat on the bench, or becoming a member of the legislature, or reaching the high place of governor of a state. No Atheists, no Freethinkers, no Jews, no Roman Catholics, no man, in short, who was not a believer in some form of the Protestant faith, could ever be governor of New Jersey or New Hampshire, Vermont or Connecticut. Any rich Christian might be the executive of Massachusetts or Maryland. Elsewhere he must be a Trinitarian and a believer in the inspiration of the scriptures, or a Protestant and a believer in the divine authority of the Bible, or acknowledge one God, believe in heaven and in hell, and be ready to declare openly that every word in the Testaments, both Old and New, was divinely inspired. At first these restrictions were submitted to without protest, but the leaven of the Revolution was at work, and bit by bit they were quietly removed.

The generation that removed these restrictions was that of Thomas Paine, and had been horrified by witnessing the effects of European unions of church and state. The present generation does not have in mind those fearful examples, and is far from being so alive to the necessity of resisting church encroachments as we wish. It is to be hoped that the old-time tyrannies may never be reinstated.

Catholics' Private Different from Their Public Sentiments.

Protestant missionaries having been distributing copies of the book divine through Sinaloa, Mexico, the Catholic bishop there addresses his flock in a letter which one of our readers desires us to notice. The bishop exhorts: "It having been brought to our notice that certain foreigners have come to our city lately with the object of establishing a Protestant temple here, and that they have begun to distribute Protestant tracts and Bibles, in virtue of the obligation that is on us to care for your spiritual good, we hereby notify you, our very dear children, that you must not buy, receive, nor read these Bibles, nor other tracts or papers which the persons to whom we refer are distributing; all of which Our Mother the Holy Church prohibits to her children under the severest penalties. But that you may have more exact knowledge of your duties in this particular, we present to you the following instructions, published under similar circumstances by some distinguished prelates of our republic." The "very dear children" whom the "Mother the Holy Church" has kept scienceless preys to disease and all the ills of ignorance for fifteen centuries, are in succeeding paragraphs warned not to venture into a church of the Protestants, "even from pure curiosity," not to read any printed matter circulated by them, and not to associate with any one of them.

Truth seekers know that the only way of becoming able to take correct views of the many problems which life thrusts on us for solution, is to attend the meetings, read the publications, and experience the society of all possible kinds of people—those who differ from us most of all. Instructions like those of the bishop above are given not to aid people in finding and preserving truth, but to prevent them from doing so. They proceed from an institution which knows that truth would be fatal to its existence.

In one passage of his letter the hierarch counsels against violence to the Protestants. This is the customary public advice of the Catholic clergy in this age. Their privately expressed desire, however, is often detected to be of another nature. This bishop, it was found, privately instigated his people to maltreatment of a Bible-seller. They hanged and burnt the colporteur in effigy; at another time stoned him and shot at him five times. One young man followed him several days with a concealed knife seeking an opportunity to stab him. The Catholic clergy will employ force against dissenters from their creed just in proportion as they are allowed to by public opinion and the state of the times in general.

Our Treatment of Criminals.

Governor Altgeld's present prominence before the public has caused attention to be directed to a book of his published in 1884, "Our Penal Machinery and Its Victims." In it he says that we should endeavor more to reform criminals instead of herding them together where the evil ones corrupt all the rest. He desires "indeterminate sentences," under which the penal term depends on the prisoner's behavior, the prospect of his reformation, etc. He deprecates the effect of unjust arrests. He says: "The report of the chief of police of Chicago shows that of 32,800 arrested in a year 10,743 were discharged by the police magistrates, to say nothing of those bound over to the grand jury and then discharged. So that during the year there were in that city upward of 10,000 young persons given a regular criminal experience without having committed any crime. And if so many in one city, what a multitude must there be throughout the land! . . . Now what effect will this treatment have on them? Will not every one of them feel the indignity while life lasts? Will they not abhor the men who perpetrated what is felt to be an outrage? Will they not look on this whole machinery as their enemy and take a secret delight in seeing it thwarted? Will they not almost unconsciously sympathize with those who defy this whole system, and are they not thus suddenly brought a whole length nearer crime than they were before?" In chapter xv on Grand Juries he says: "Grand juries should be abolished. They work a great injury to the innocent and greatly assist the guilty. For the delays incident to the action of the grand jury keep hundreds in jail who are, on examination, discharged. At the same time, the great delay incidental to their action is of the greatest advantage to the real criminals. Courts should always be open for the trial of criminals. Then they should be tried on information, so that a trial could take place directly after the offense. This would protect the innocent and at once bring the guilty to justice. The speedy trial is what the guilty always dread." In general, the governor's notion is that we still follow medieval ways and blindly make local applications of brute force for ills that require constitutional treatment. As we have been trying the crushing policy with such unsatisfactory results, he says, let us dispense with a little of the brute force and try a system of development which, while it will protect society better than the present system, will make it at least possible for the accused to come out with more character, moral strength, and self-respect than he had when taken into custody. This governor's action in regard to the Anarchists we have nothing to do with in this paragraph. We merely give his sentiments on the above important question of penology, as desirable by our readers, whose interest is claimed by all species of social reform, and whose attention has already been drawn to the subject by Colonel Ingersoll's little work on "Crimes Against Criminals."

Nothing But the People's Money will Satisfy the Clergy.

On the shameful attempt of the Sabbatarians to prevent people from enjoying on Sundays even the innocent pastime of fishing, the Sun remarks that this occupation surely cannot be objected to as disturbing the quiet. The Sunday exodus to the country, it says, is accompanied with very little disturbance. The sport is quiet and peaceful, and necessarily so for its successful pursuit. A thousand fishermen in a single small bay will not disturb the devotions of a village church, no matter how near it may be to them. If there is any amusement suggestive of Sunday calm and congruous with it, is it not fishing? If the people are to be allowed to enjoy themselves at all on Sunday, in what more peaceful way can they get their amusement? If fishing is outlawed, what else in the way of recreation may not consistently be made illegal? If the fishermen may not fish, why permit the railroads and the steamboats to carry them where they hope to find the fish? If it is unlawful to drop a line from a boat, why should it not be unlawful to go out in a boat?

Fishing is as quiet and unobtrusive as is asserted above, yet it must of necessity disturb the parsons. For what they wish is not simply that those who choose may assemble and worship unmolested, but that all others be compelled to do so likewise. To force these others to do so, they procure laws forbidding them to do anything else, so that they will from sheer inability to employ themselves otherwise come to church and join in the services as a last resort. The preachers are not satisfied with the devotion of some of the people, freely rendered, but clamor for the attendance, compulsory and unwillingly rendered, of all of the rest. This is because the unwilling attendants, though bringing no voluntary choice of the parsons' discourses, do bring money, which is just as good as the money of the devout, and money, money, is the great and essential end of the clergy's desires.

Probable Defeat of Sunday Openers.

On Sunday, the 14th, the directors of the Columbian Exposition voted to close the gates of that concern Sundays. An exception was made of last Sunday, the receipts of which were to be devoted to the relatives of the brave firemen who perished in the destruction of the Cold Storage Building. The reasons were those given in these words of Edwin Walker, attorney for the directorate: "I question whether it is right for us to keep the Fair open on Sundays if attendance is no greater than it has been the last two Sundays. It requires the employment of about sixteen thousand people to keep the Fair open, and that is too many in proportion to the attendance. Last Sunday there were only forty-three thousand visitors."

Why the attendance was so small Sundays is busy-ing many heads in conjecture. But however minds may differ as to the exact means by which the forces which seem to have killed Sunday opening have operated, all agree that those forces are Christian. It is the fight of Christianity against opening that has dealt this blow against it. Owing to the demands of that religion, the exhibits of the national government, and of many states, have been closed Sundays. So have those of numerous individual exhibitors. In the second place, the uncertainty whether the Fair would be open prevented the running of Sunday excursion trains from the country round about. Again, the abstinence of pietists from Sunday attendance was an item of some amount, though difficult to estimate. And many Christians vowed that while the Fair was open Sundays they would boycott it altogether and not attend on week-days even. That they would and did carry out those threats is believed by the management. Some deem the number of these boycotters small, others large. We will quote one of these estimates, that of the New York Times, a journal of excellent judgment:

"It is idle from a commercial point of view to point out that the reasons of these people for staying away are absurdly inadequate. The only practical question is how many of them there are. Nobody knows, but it cannot be disputed that there are many. The Societies of Christian Endeavor undoubtedly represent a large number of persons outside of their actual membership, and their membership is great. They have resolved and proclaimed that they will not go to the Fair on week-days if it is to be opened on Sundays."

On account of these people and their disposition, the management believe that Sunday-closing will now produce an increased total attendance.

There is, however, an obstacle yet undisposed of to closing Sundays. A temporary injunction, obtained several weeks ago by Charles W. Clingman, one of the stockholders in the Exposition Company and a taxpayer of Chicago, compelling the gates to be kept open, still stands in the way. Judge Stein, of the superior court of Cook county, who granted the decree, says: "The injunction is still in force. If the court's attention is officially called to any violation of the order it will, after due consideration, take such action as may appear proper." But Edwin Walker, the counsel of the Exposition Company, says: "The gates will be closed. Unless Mr. Clingman consents to an amicable adjustment of the matter relative to the injunction, we shall simply go into court and have it set aside." William E. Mason, Mr. Clingman's lawyer, declares that the gates will be open next Sunday unless his client decides to back down. It would not be an easy matter, he says, for the Exposition Company to override an order of the court as long as anybody insisted that that order should be enforced.

The jubilation of the Sabbatarians is indescribable. There was an excited scene in the Baptist convention at Indianapolis on the 15th, just before the noon adjournment. It was caused by the reading of this message from the local Christian Endeavor Union of Chicago: "Fair closed tighter than a clam." Delegates stood on their chairs, cheered, waved hats and fans, and it was several minutes before order was restored. A hymn of praise closed the session. Rev. R. V. Hunter, national president of the Christian Endeavor Sunday-Closing committee, says: "I am delighted with the announcement that the World's Fair is not to open on Sundays, and I feel that our work is well done. We have labored hard for such a result. We shall henceforth take a deep interest in the Fair, and thousands who were staying away will get together their grips and start for Chicago. I am glad the closing comes as a result of lack of patronage rather than as a decree of a court. The people have spoken, and there is no room for dispute now. The hypocritical plea made for the laboring men has been exorcised. The American people have convicted the Chicago local directory and Sunday has been vindicated. The American people can be counted upon to do the right thing ultimately." Secretary Baer of the United Society of Christian Endeavor sent the following telegram to Mr. Higinbotham, president of the World's Fair: "Accept congratulations. You will never regret your action of yesterday and the click of your turnstiles will be heard in the land, made merrier than ever by thousands of Christian Endeavorers—no longer antagonistic nor indifferent, but heartily enthusiastic. I, for one, mean to do everything in my power to make the Fair a financial success."

We will mention, by the way, that a convention at Pittsburgh, Pa., of all denominations, on Monday the 10th declared the conflagration of the Cold Storage Building, with its loss of life, a visitation of divine wrath against Sunday opening.

In order that a certain trade or profession, whose business it is to sell their ideas as to a future state, may have a monopoly of a whole day for the earning of their livelihood, great masses of our people have already been prevented, and greater masses probably will be prevented, from entertaining and elevating themselves.

An Illustrated Freethinkers' Guide-Book to the World's Fair.

We shall print Mr. Putnam's letters from Chicago in a pamphlet to be called "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," before their complete appearance in THE TRUTH SEEKER. We shall get the book out in time to be used as a guide-book for those who visit Chicago during the last three months of the Fair. These letters have been highly commended, and deservedly so, for the descriptions are veritable poems, and all the statements are as accurate as official information can make them. Those who go to the Fair will find the book exceedingly useful, for Mr. Putnam has laid it all out from beginning to end, and the book will save visitors' time. Those who read it will know what to see, and where the sights are. It will contain as much information as is possible to crowd into a work of its limit. It will be illustrated with a bird's-eye view of the Fair, giving visitors a general idea of the place, a map of the Park, enabling them to find their way around, and with pictures of the principal buildings of the Exposition. Those who do not go to the Fair will in this book see it in all its glory, and certainly will know more about the Exhibition than those who attend without this guide-book, trusting to memory. Those who go to Chicago will receive great benefit from it; those who do not, still greater. The price of the book is 25 cents.

A Book Every Freethinker Will Have to Have.

We placed in the pressman's hands last week Mr. Remsburg's new book, "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" and we ought to get it away from him and the binder in ten or fifteen days. The work will be handsomely finished, on fine paper, and be a thing of beauty as well as a quieter of religious tales.

One of the most noted controversies of the century has been waged over the question of Abraham Lincoln's religious belief. Soon after the remains of America's most illustrious son were laid to rest at Springfield, one of his biographers, Dr. Holland, put forward the claim that he was a Christian. The claim was promptly denied by the dead statesman's friends, but only to be renewed again, and again denied. And thus for a quarter of a century the question of Lincoln's belief has been tossed like a battledore from side to side.

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

NOTED WITNESSES.

Hon. W. H. Herndon, Col. Ward H. Lamon, Hon. John T. Stuart, Col. Jas. H. Matheny, Col. John G. Nicolay, Judge David Davis, Col. Jesse W. Fell, Hon. Leonard Swett, Dr. William Jayne, Judge Stephen T. Logan, Joshua F. Speed, Hon. Jesse K. Dubois, Hon. Joseph Gillespie, Dr. C. H. Ray, Col. F. S. Rutherford, Judge Robert Leachman, Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Leonard W. Volk, Joseph Jefferson, Hon. E. B. Washburne, Hon. E. M. Haines, Hon. James Tuttle, Hon. M. B. Field, Hon. Geo. W. Julian, Hon. John B. Alley, Hon. Hugh McCulloch, Gen. M. M. Trumbull, Rev. David Swing, Rev. Robert Collyer, Judge Jesse W. Weik, Hon. J. P. Usher, Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, Salmon P. Chase, Wm. H. Seward, Hon. John Covode, Hon. A. J. Grover, Hon. W. H. T. Wakefield, Gen. D. W. Wilder, Judge Aaron Goodrich, Judge James M. Nelson, Rev. Edward Eggleston, Rev. John W. Chadwick, Donn Piatt, H. K. Magie, Dennis F. Hanks, Mrs. Sarah Lincoln, Mrs. Mary Lincoln.

The foregoing and sixty other reputable witnesses testify that the greatest man born on this continent was a Freethinker.

Large 12mo, 336 pages, in handsome cloth, $1; in paper, 50 cents.

A Book Which We Warmly Welcome.

We believe that everyone will agree with us in warmly welcoming Mrs. Matilda Joselyn Gage's new book, "Woman, Church, and State," which is now ready. Mrs. Gage is one of a trio—Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony being the others—whose names are household words among the workers for and supporters of woman suffrage. Two of this trio, Mrs. Gage and Mrs. Stanton, are outspoken, ardent Freethinkers, and Susan B. is more than half-way out of the woods. Mrs. Gage is one of the authors of the "History of Woman Suffrage," but was not content as a clear-seeing historian with that volume, and has supplemented it with this volume to more plainly show the real facts. "Woman, Church, and State," is, says Mrs. Gage, one of the most radical presentations of the church question ever laid before the public; and although especially presented from the point of its injustice and injury to woman, it yet shows the destruction of human rights and human will in case of man equally as well. Mr. Green, in his Magazine, said of it some time ago: "Every friend of woman's rights, every advocate of the entire separation of church and state, in fact every worker in the cause of human advancement, will be much interested in the forthcoming work. It will strike orthodoxy a very heavy blow where it has seldom been hit before, and by one of the sex upon which it now depends for its existence. It will be a publication that ought to be read by every intelligent woman in the land, for it is a woman's emancipator from priestcraft slavery. . . . As an argumentative work in behalf of Freethought, it has no superior. It is a book the world needs, and Mrs. Gage is justly entitled to the thanks of every friend of human progress for producing it. It has cost her much hard work and much money, and the Liberal public ought now to show their gratitude by giving the book a large circulation."

The work is a historical account of the status of woman through the Christian ages, with reminiscences of the matriarchate, fortified with voluminous notes that can be used in verification of the main statements and argument. The author considers it by far the most important work of her life. It is printed in crown 8vo, contains 556 pages, and is bound in cloth and half leather. The price in cloth is $2; half leather, $3. We have it for sale and shall be gratified to receive numerous orders.

During the great storm which occurred in Iowa July 6th, the pavilion built for J. E. Remsburg's meetings at Pierson was blown down. The orthodox of the village were sure that they saw in this a manifestation of God's displeasure, and were not slow to proclaim it. When a little later, however, the news reached them that at another town seven churches had been demolished, they assumed a painful silence.

Pauperism and crime are decreasing. In 1860, when the population of England and Wales was a little below 20,000,000, there were 900,000 paupers. Now, with an estimated population of 29,000,000 souls, the number has fallen to 685,000. As to crime: Sir Edmond du Cane, a student of criminology, says there were 85,250 "habitual criminals" known to the London police in 1864, and that in 1890 the number had fallen to 52,000. As religion declines, man rises in prosperity and in morals.

The Santa Ana bigots who adopted a resolution excluding THE TRUTH SEEKER from the Public Library are not likely to succeed very well in their ultimate object of having our paper less widely read. Their action rouses indignation whenever considered and the result is that money is freely given to put THE TRUTH SEEKER in just the places the Santa Ana ministers do not want it. Captain Silas Latham landed a cargo at Fulton market last week and then set a course for Lafayette place to tell us about it. Ten dollars' worth of the fish went to the Federation for the International Congress at Chicago and ten dollars' to fill Santa Ana with TRUTH SEEKERS. The action of the Santa Ana ministers works that way. We hope they like it.

We are also indebted to Louis Levine for $1.50 to send TRUTH SEEKERS to the Carolinas, a virgin field for Freethought, and a section of the country Mr. Levine, who lives there, would like to have cultivated.

Governor Tillman of South Carolina has received a letter from Dr. Joseph Allard, pastor of the French Congregational church of Fall River, Mass., asking what inducements would be offered to French-Canadians, including a large number of Roman Catholics, to settle in South Carolina. The doctor states that he was selected to make inquiries at a meeting of French Congregational ministers, who are worried as to how they can best free themselves from "the increasing persecutions" of their Roman Catholic compatriots because they had the courage to "break away from the superstitions and tyranny of Romanism to accept evangelical Protestantism and become devoted citizens of this republic." Dr. Allard says that his people are greatly alarmed at the constantly invading progress of the Roman Catholic church in New England. He avers that Lafayette's prediction, "If ever the liberty of the American republic is destroyed, it will be the work of Roman Catholic priests," will be realized if things go on as they have been going. We hope that the French Canadians, all of whom will in event of annexation become voting American citizens, will not make trouble for our nation at some future conjuncture.

We desire to call the attention of readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the benefits of subscribing to the Truth Seeker Monthly Library. The yearly subscription is only $3, and subscribers to the Library receive a paper-bound copy of each book issued in it; or, if they desire the books in cloth binding, subscribers to the Library can remit the difference in price between paper and cloth binding, and get the books in the latter shape. So far this year subscribers to the Library have received "Paine Vindicated," by Colonel Ingersoll, price 15 cents; the "Creation of God," by Dr. Hartmann, price 50 cents; the "Resurrection of Jesus," by Don Allen, price 40 cents; "Crimes of Preachers," price 25 cents; the "Handbook of Freethought," by W. S. Bell, price 50 cents; "Religion a Curse," by S. P. Putnam, price 25 cents; "Design Argument Fallacies," price 15 cents, making two dollars and twenty cents' worth in five months, or at the rate of $5.40 worth per year; and all for $3 paid in advance. J. E. Remsburg's "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" will be ready very soon, and other books besides are in preparation. Two of these, we may mention, are "Progress and Pleasure," by A. M. Lorentz, LL.B., of which further notice will shortly be made, and Mr. Putnam's "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," of great value to visitors to the Fair, and still greater to those who cannot attend. Send $3 and receive at once the books already published, and, as they appear, those which will be published between now and January, '94.

Communications.

These letters will be published in pamphlet form within two or three weeks, as a guide-book and description of the Fair. Send 25 cents for "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair."

Pen Pictures of the World's Fair.

Before I close this narrative for good, I want to call attention to the CLIFF-DWELLERS' EXHIBIT.

This is entrancing, weird, and wonderful. A rocky mound is before you. You plunge into its bosom by a winding recess, and a strange bit of human history is unfolded, an endless field for study and speculation. The "palaces" and lofty haunts of the Cliff-dwellers in brilliant phantasmagoria spread away in the heart of this mimic mountain. The Rio De Los Mancos canyon of Colorado, the ancient residence of the Cliff-dwellers, unwinds in marvelous perspective. Ten thousand years ago, it is said, these mysterious people made their home in these wild precipices where to-day the foot of the white man can scarcely tread. Who were the Cliff-dwellers? Whence came they and why have they vanished? They were evidently quite intelligent and civilized. Here are displayed thousands of utensils and articles of dress, and skeletons, and these tell a wondrous story. It is noticeable that no metals are found. Even the rungs of the ladders with which they used to climb to their lofty houses are fastened with animal and vegetable fibers. It is evident from the specimens of cotton cloth that this race understood the art of weaving. There are fragments of a rough wooden loom. The process of making cloth from the yucca plant is also illustrated. There are feather robes, upon which are downy feathers of some extinct birds. There are rare potteries. Vases and bowls are painted with geometric designs, while on others are figures of men and animals. On one huge bowl a hunter is represented shooting an arrow at what looks something like a deer. On one of the walls hang a number of soft skin sandals with which the Cliffmen were able to climb the steep paths to their monster fastnesses. There are mats made of reeds, strung together with animal sinews. Wooden implements of warfare are shown, and wooden tools supposed to be for tilling. There are belts which they wore across their foreheads to help support burdens, also stone axes and knives, bone spoons, necklaces of tiny shells, and jet beads skillfully drilled.

At the end of the museum are a number of mummies excavated from the cliff-houses. They were buried as they died—rolled first in cotton cloth or skin, then in feather cloth, next in matting, and lastly in a covering of reeds. The Cliff-dwellers were not dwarfs, and the shape of the skulls, with high foreheads, betokens intellectuality. The most interesting mummy is that of a young woman, evidently a princess, an American beauty who lived before the days of Cleopatra, or even of Adam and Eve. She was found perfectly preserved, wrapped in soft sea-island cotton, and hidden in a niche carved out of the solid rock. What was the romance of this maiden ten thousand years ago? There is nothing more deeply pathetic than these records of a people who were perhaps the first dwellers upon the American continent.

As we pass dreamily forth from these caverned relics, gaily festooned, attracts our gaze. Let us look at this weather-beaten vessel, and from the mystic heights of the past travel into this century to the poetic sea life of New England.

THE ARCTIC WHALER,

This is the whaler Progress of New Bedford built in 1843, and it has seen nearly fifty years of service in the Atlantic, Pacific, Indian, and Arctic oceans. Everything is in place, boats, charts, compasses, quadrants, lances, harpoons, bomb-lances, guns, etc. Below deck is a museum with hundreds of curiosities—ambergris which costs $450 per pound; whales' teeth and whiskers, as the sailors call them, and whalebone the dressmakers; a turtle seven feet long, 1,400 pounds weight; a salt-water saw-fish, the costumes of the ladies of the Arctic regions and South Sea islands, delicate laces from the cactus plant, rare shells, sponges, sea fans, star-fish, horns of the narwhale, pure ivory, Eskimo skin boats, etc.

The Progress is a typical Yankee whaler. It has battled with many a storm and sailed over many a league of waters. In 1871 she lay with thirty-eight other ships in the ice of the Arctic ocean. The Progress with five other ships escaped the thickening perils and reached clear water. The rest of the fleet was lost beyond hope of rescue. Twelve hundred souls, some of them women and children, were shut up in these ice-bound vessels in momentary danger of their lives. The captain of the Progress and the officers of the other five ships resolved to throw overboard their valuable cargoes of oil and make room for these shipwrecked ones. This they did, and all were saved by the heroic action. The whaler Progress, of such romantic history, is one of the most notable exhibitions of the Fair. It smacks of old times, of the toils and dangers of the rolling deep.

THE ESKIMO VILLAGE.

As you pass out at Fifty-seventh street do not fail to drop into the Eskimo village, where there are real Eskimos—men, women, and babies—huts, utensils, canoes, etc. These gentle and oily people are on the make, however. Not an Eskimo woman meets you but she will ask for a nickel. The chief fun of the Eskimo lad is for somebody to plant a quarter of a dollar deep in the ground, and then a half-dozen with their long whips, standing in a circle, go for it and endeavor by hitting the ground with the lash to knock out that quarter. It is unearthed sooner or later, and the whipster who does this pockets the quarter. It is a rather animating contest and the descending lashes make a noise like the rattle of musketry.

THE WILD WEST SHOW.

Although the Wild West show is no part of the World's Fair, yet everybody goes to it and it is worthy of report. It is a stunning Sabbath-breaker to the tune of twenty-five thousand admissions a Sunday, and for that reason I like it. It has been an eyesore to the orthodox. Of course they boycott it, but what's the use? It's crowded all the same. It's a valuable object-lesson. After roaming about the Fair one blessed Sunday and trampling the Sabbath under our feet from Midway Plaisance to Agricultural Building until I was somewhat weary, Otto Wettstein with his usual generosity takes me to the Wild West show, and here underneath the ample covering we have a long and jolly rest, just the kind of a Sunday rest that I admire. The band plays splendidly. Ten thousand people are with us. The lights play upon the vast campus and the mad, whirling spectacle begins. There isn't anything very artistic about it, but it is simply ravishing in its wild splendor and noise. To see a hundred horsemen—the Arabian, the Cossack, the Teuton, the Gaul, the Saxon, the American, and the Indian—with bright pennons and brilliant colors, dash forth swift as the wind forming into ranks, thundering and plunging along with reckless speed yet harmonious movement—this certainly is one of the most exhilarating displays of physical life that one can look upon. It stirs the blood like nothing else. It is a magnificent regalia of horsemanship. It is grace, strength, velocity, audacity, elan, in one overflowing, ever-changing stream of irrepressible energy. It is like the motion of the ocean itself, like the leap of its great surges, the swaying and swinging of its mighty billows—the rush of these powerful animals, so tumultuous and yet so obedient. Outside of the horses I don't care much for the Wild West show. There's nothing extra, unless perhaps the shooting. The acting is of the rudest sort, but the horses are superb; and a hundred horses, with a hundred daring riders, with military precision and enthusiasm, amidst martial strains and blazing electric lights, sweeping, curving, darting, now forward straight as an arrow, then round the vast circle, then across and back in thundering gallop, with cries furious and unearthly from men more frantic and savage than the steeds themselves—well, there is a vigor about this, an eclat, a stupendous Niagara-like vivacity of motion, that is simply immense. Every lover of the horse will like to look upon this triumphal procession—the involutions, evolutions, and convolutions of these radiant battalions. Never was the glory of the horse so elaborately displayed—with such force, beauty, impetuosity, variety, and magnificence of action.

FAREWELL.

I will bid farewell in true oriental fashion. As I labor through the Midway Plaisance after a day's long tramp the sedan is temptingly within reach, and so I ensconce myself in its luxurious domain, while two stalwart Arabs carry me buoyantly along. It is a somewhat outré sensation to have men for beasts of burden, but one can get used to anything in this world, especially on the Midway Plaisance. Nothing seems incongruous as I wander through this vast medley of the nations, and witness not only every variety of men and beasts, but every variety of gods. It is just the sunset hour when I take my imperial seat, borne on the shoulders for the time being of obsequious slaves, and the turbaned figure of a muezzin appears in the minaret of the mosque, and in a chanting monotone warns the faithful that the hour for prayer is at hand. They bend their faces toward Mecca, and ejacula-tions break forth. So amidst eastern pomp and eastern religious ceremonies I journey on, and while I rest my feet my brain is filled with a thousand imageries. Still throng upon my sight the most extraordinary scenes in the world. The Plaisance occupies 80 acres, and it is crowded with at least 50,000 people. The electric lights begin to mingle with golden sunshine, as it disappears, and fantastic pictures of every land under the sun, the most savage and the most civilized, are seen in the bewildering masses of flame, while every musical instrument adds to the tumult and the melody. Eye and ear are kept constantly busy. The sublime and the ridiculous jumble into each other with delightful celerity. Form, color, sound, movement, are everywhere, in infinite change. Even the wild beast joins in the procession and gambols for my entertainment. As I pass the big menagerie the band begins to play, and five lions leap into the arena above the entrance, tremendous in strength and ferocity. One man leaps into their midst, and with the crack of the whip compels them to fiercely obey. They show their grim teeth and growl and snarl and plunge over each other, and their eyes burn like lightning. They could tear the man to pieces like a wisp of straw, and yet they follow his slightest command. It is a marvelous exhibition of human power—the glance of man ruling the most turbulent and majestic of animals.

What a journey—of less than a mile and less than a half an hour. Ariel who girdled the earth in forty minutes couldn't beat the record for sight-seeing. Under the viaduct I pass and the freighted cars roll over my head. Then the broad paths of the Fair Grounds beyond the Woman's Building stretch before me to the lagoon and the Wooded Island and around and away to the sparkling shores of the lake itself. It is now night but a blaze of splendor accompanies every step. I flow on with the crowd. I must visit once more the great basin. I must look again upon the lighted domes of the Administration Building, the vast fountains with their illuminated spray, and the surrounding palaces flooded with effulgence as if a thousand stars were fallen from heaven. I must behold again the grand columns, white against the dark luster of the waters, and the hundred figures poised with such living grace that it seems as if they too looked with ardent soul upon the glittering scenes. The sedan chair bears me onward and I imagine myself in a gently tossing boat swept along the surges of some mighty tide. The innumerable multitude presses forward, a hundred thousand feet making music on the silvery paths. My oriental guides trip along with a kind of rhythmic swing as if they too were inspired by the harmony of the environments. Winding through the accumulating throng they bear me just in front of the Peristyle. As I lazily stretch forth and find myself on solid ground, I might fancy that I were really in heaven such a burst of grandeur meets my eyes, and such sweet symphonies are in the air. But not being a saint, and not believing in heaven, I know that I am looking upon the surpassing glory of this earth, created by man's genius, the triumph of science, and I am happier and more exalted than any saint could be at the throne of his vanishing deity. Hundreds of thousands of beaming gems of light are in the joyous atmosphere. Like gold and silver, topaz, opal, are the waters that flow at my feet. Right across are the shining fountains. A hundred naiads, nymphs, and mermaids seem glancing in and out of the glistening chambers of those many-colored waves. Beyond towers the dome, the golden dome, more golden than is day's resplendent flush, and around are the greatest and loftiest structures on the planet, belted with immeasurable pomp. For an hour—which to my mind appears only one dazzling moment—I look upon this glowing canvas that man has so deftly and wondrously painted, a canvas in which life itself throbs with poetic realism, a picture limned on night's expressive face. I cannot any longer keep still. Like Shelley's Alastor, I must plunge into the stream—I must seek the unknown. Like Columbus, I must be an explorer. And so I hail the graceful gondola, which like a swan moves over the liquid expanse. What an exhilaration it is to bend over and watch the diamond surface! I dip my hand in the waters, as if from every flying crest I could pluck riches that would make me a monarch. I could almost think there can be no cold spaces beneath, but only beautiful dwellings, fairy haunts, the jeweled home of Undine and the genii of the sea. I do not wonder that people sometimes think that in the heart of the ocean is the sweetest repose. How lovely water is—what gems it has that no queen ever wore. What undiscovered depths of rarest ornament. I speed over the bosom of the lagoon dreamily, delightfully, as if one with the flowing, fleeting billows. The gondolier propels me onward, keeping time, time, with the exquisite strains that make the air like an impassioned spirit. I pass by the murmuring fountains. I leave behind the grand basin, with its multitudinous torches. Diana is lost in the starry darkness and the golden dome. I pass by the huge walls and radiant roof of the Manufacturers' Building; by the gorgeous Palace of Electricity; underneath the sculptured archways of the illuminated bridges; alongside the Wooded Island with its perfumed walk, its gilded arbors, and million flowers; by the dusk glory of Horticultural Hall, and Woman's gracious shrine; by the Temple of Art and winged Victory blazing like an angel; by the beautiful foreign buildings that in the electric radiance crowd upon my vision vistas of the illustrious past; by the great battle-ship glooming in the drapery of war. Out into the great lake I sweep, out upon its luminous bosom, and then before me shines the whole emblazoned shore. I see it all, the circling, glimmering efflorescence, the bloom of the ages, flinging its luster upon the lake afar, which like an animated being drinks in its countless rays. Then on the decks of the "Whaleback," I voyage from the poetic, artistic, dreamy city to the real city itself, to Chicago, whose imperious energy has made this marvel of delight.

And as I voyage homeward my heart beats exultant, for the beauty that I have looked upon—so inspiring, so potent, so enchanting, the flower of supremest human effort—is linked, and linked forever now, with the triumph of human liberty. The black flag of bigotry has been torn from these glorious battlements. The standard of superstition is trailed in the dust. The contest has been long and arduous. Tyranny has won in the dreary and hypocritical halls of Congress, where baseness, cowardice, and blind folly carry the day; but in the shining fields of art and industry—on the battleground where human genius displays its most splendid trophies—where common sense and business rule, where the heart of the people is felt like volcanic fire—there the pennons of Freedom flame the heavens with victorious colors. What a mean, shallow, insignificant, and contemptible thing is the political world, compared with the world of Art, of Commerce, of Industry, of the Universal People; and in this world the church has received its most irretrievable defeat. I am glad the church has forced the issue. Its wound is mortal, and in impotent wrath the despot howls. With all its beauty I would have disdained the World's Fair had it joined itself with tyranny.

It has not. It is a true World's Fair. It is liberty. It is justice. It is progress. So I voyage on. The magnificence of the White City drops beneath the horizon from my unsatisfied gaze, but the future looks wondrously beautiful. To-morrow and to-morrow do not creep on with petty pace. In distant shining days I see the happy evolutions of man, and it is a glory indeed to know that on the side of Freethought are the garnered treasures of the past, the heroic genius of the present. When now I look upon the paintings, the statues, the architecture, the golden harvests, the limpid stream, the flowers—when now I walk through the palaces, arcades, chambers, pavilions, and halls, it is with ineffable joy, for the Venerable Day of the Sun has here been conquered for human happiness and the liberty of the world. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Chicago, Ill., 1893.

Review of Mr. Putnam's Essay on Religion.

The first characteristic to impress the disinterested reader of this essay is the boldness, the undaunted courage of the writer; the next is his keen sensibility. While with stoical fortitude he undertakes to "confront reality and make the best of it," hoping "by courage to win something of happiness from our dark surroundings," his heart fails him when he contemplates the woes of others, and he turns away his eyes from the spectacle of their misery with the despairing cry: "Oh, the horror and the agony of human life! We cannot, must not know it all. It would make one insane." And so it would.

The third feature is his heroic devotion to truth. "Better be crucified with a fact than rot with some splendid lie." And fourthly, his mental bondage to orthodox habits of thought, instilled into him from childhood, is apparent throughout. He seems to have no conception that any but the orthodox view can be taken of the affirmative side of this question; and having broken loose from the strait-jacket of orthodoxy, and not dreaming, evidently, that doctrinal garments can be anything else but strait-jackets, he prefers to trust himself naked and defenseless to the pitiless elements, though his sensitiv flesh quiver and shrink at the contact, and ever and anon a cry "as of some strong swimmer in his agony" is wrung even from his dauntless heart. "It is a strong, tender, heroic, and sympathetic soul that is here engaged in a desperate struggle with the terrific problems which this life offers to every thinking mind. And the only way to understand the tangled maze is to view it, not from the dark, mist-laden vale of appearances wherein most of us dwell, but from the commanding, sunlit heights of Reality. To him and to every earnest seeker after truth the answer is the same: Friend, come up higher."

Mr. Putnam's definition of religion—which he persistently identifies with orthodoxy, and Christian orthodoxy at that, i. e., the orthodoxy of Calvin and of old-school Presbyterianism, which has ceased, however, to be orthodoxy with the large class of religious minds that can think as well as believe—differs essentially from that given by St. James, who may be presumed to speak with some degree of authority on the subject. According to the Apostle: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and the widows in their afflictions, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." I think it would puzzle Mr. Putnam to show that such religion—the religion of helpful human sympathy and personal purity and uprightness—could possibly be a curse, a disease, or a lie; nor indeed would he attempt to do so. The religion which he arraigns so severely is a very different thing.

Accepting for the sake of argument Mr. Putnam's definition of religion as "that feeling in humanity which always results in a belief in a God, in a personal God or a personal manifestation of a God; and also results in a belief in immortality as necessary to the vindication of the justice and goodness of God," etc., it strikes me that the argument he employs in the arraignment of this belief is a two-edged sword that cuts both ways, maiming the hand that wields as well as the foe that opposes it, and as fatal to the position he holds as to that which he antagonizes. For, having charged upon religion about all the ills with which human society, and many if not most of those with which human flesh, is afflicted, he goes on to show conclusively that religion is, after all, a very insignificant quantity in human nature and is chiefly conspicuous by its absence from the thoughts, the interests, and the concerns of mankind, which, if it proves anything, demonstrates that not too much religion but the lack of it is what generally ails humanity.

That God is "conspicuous by His absence" from the affairs of this life is sadly true, but this proves neither the non-existence of the Deity nor the undesirability of His more evident presence in, and control of, human activities and relations. For many other things are equally conspicuous by their absence which must nevertheless be believed in and sought after if life is to be anything else but a terrible tragedy, among which are justice, mercy, and pure, unselfish brotherly love. The belief in immortality is but an expression of the ineradicable conviction that somewhere or at some time in the experience of every soul its innate sense of justice, its unquenchable thirst for love, will be satisfied.

"Religion has never benefited the race—it has never given it one truth, one art, one invention, or one discovery." This is a sweeping statement, which it would not be difficult to refute, but for the present let it pass. "It has been a despot and a murderer from the beginning." Substitute for religion the word bigotry as the antecedent of that pronoun and there can be no disputing that proposition. But is there no such thing as scientific bigotry? Can science, the proffered substitute for religion, show a perfectly spotless record?

When doctors disagree is the dispute confined wholly to doctors of divinity, or does it likewise extend to doctors of medicine? of whom the Latin proverb says that "where there are three physicians there are two Atheists," so that religion can hardly be chargeable with their variances. Could scientific bigotry avail itself of the secular arm to enforce its decrees, would it show itself more merciful or tolerant than religious bigotry has done? Has nothing of the sort ever been witnessed? Not to rake up old scores, but confine ourselves to comparatively recent times, has not the "regular or orthodox school of medicine more than once successfully invoked legislative interference to prevent homeopaths, hydropathists, and other medical heretics from practicing the healing art in hospitals and other public institutions, thus evidencing the same determination to monopolize the healing of bodies that religious orthodoxy has to monopolize the cure of souls? And can it be doubted that if physicians had the power, even in this liberal and enlightened age, it would be made as great a crime to be born or die without medical assistance as it is now, in some countries, to be married or buried without priestly interference?

No, Science is not altogether the innocent, beneficent creature Brother Putnam would have us believe. She has been the all too pliant tool of kingly tyranny as well as of priestly persecution. Chemistry is a branch of science, and we owe to her not only the healing medicine and the pain-deadening anesthetic, but the subtle poison and the maddening draught which treachery and malice have employed to remove obnoxious rivals to their ambitious schemes. We have to thank scientific invention for the guillotine and the electrical chair as well as for the steam engine and the telegraph, for the death-dealing bomb as well as for the peaceful spinning-jenny, for the long-range Gatling gun as well as for the far-seeing telescope. She furnished the rack and the thumbscrew to the Inquisition as well as the wheel-chair and the surgical instrument to the hospital, and has been ever ready to obey the Spirit of the Age whether it was the spirit of persecution or of beneficence.

Political bigotry has shown itself capable of attaining the same bad eminence, and political feuds have been most desperate and unrelenting. Men of the same nationality and the same religion, nay, even of the same family, have freely shed each other's blood for political differences of opinion. I have known a popular Methodist minister to be insulted to his face by the wealthiest member of his congregation because he differed from him in politics, and it is well known that a somewhat too frank confession of political faith nearly cost the most eloquent of Brooklyn divines his pulpit. Yes, bigotry is a bad, mad thing whether it be religious, scientific, or political.

"Religion originates in a desire for happiness—the very nature of religion, therefore, is absolute selfishness." Granted that the religion of selfish men will reflect their selfish nature and that much that passes for religion is naught but arrant selfishness, is the craving of the human heart for comfort any more selfish in itself than the craving of the human mind for knowledge? Is not selfishness, after all, the root of all the miseries, crimes, and follies charged upon religion?

And what blessing of life, even to life itself, may not be poisoned and transformed into a curse by the direful power of selfishness? As the servant of self-love what a fearful engine of destruction and misery is science! Selfishness has made merchandise of the precious things of science as well as of the sacred things of religion, including the bodies and souls of men. For in former ages the truths of science, which have always been accessible to the race, were monopolized as the exclusive property of the select few by whom they were jealously guarded from the masses of mankind who had no more recognized right to them than they have to-day to the land on which and from which, nevertheless, they must all live.

Government, whose office it is to preserve the social order and protect individual life and property, has been transformed by selfishness into one great system of legalized oppression—a means by which the favored few are enabled with equal impunity and rapacity to plunder, outrage, and destroy the helpless many to whom government denies the right of self-protection. It may be affirmed without exaggeration that for every crime that human governments have ever prevented, they have deliberately perpetrated a thousand and provoked ten thousand by their unwarrantable interference with human rights and human liberties.

Our own government, "the best that the world has ever seen," is no exception to this rule. The gigantic monopolies under which we groan—chief of which is the monopoly of land—are but so many stupendous but legal robberies of the people, instituted and sustained by the strong arm of government, without whose support they could not subsist a day. Is it any wonder that human and thoughtful minds, appalled by the abuses to which even the best forms of government are liable, advocate the abolition of all government by coercion, preferring to trust for the maintenance of social order to that public sentiment that is more powerful than Gatling guns to put men and women on their good behavior?

Of all good gifts of heaven to mankind, the most precious is the priceless gift of love, and the richest in their possibilities of happiness are the two dominant passions of the human heart on which the very existence of the race depends—conjugal and parental love. But when the demon of selfishness enters the domestic circle what havoc is wrought there! Instead of their joy and blessing, children become the plague and torment of their parents, these in turn the tyrannical oppressors of the children, whose best friends they should be, while men and women look aghast into each other's faces in search of that happiness that seems to fly faster the more eagerly it is pursued, and ask hopelessly if marriage is a failure and love but an empty delusion.

The pride and boast of the nineteenth century is our wonderful civilization. But is it an unmixed blessing to all? What is our boasted civilization doing for the masses of the people? Is it not adding to the miseries as well as the happiness of mankind? The difference between the savage and the civilized man is that the former has few wants and thus few gratifications, while the latter has many. But while every additional want may be an added source of gratification, every unsatisfied want is but an added misery. And is not the tendency of modern civilization to concentrate wealth—i. e., all the means of gratification—in a few hands, leaving the toiling masses, by whose labor it was produced, out in the cold, privileged, to be sure, to look upon the magnificent display and envy its fortunate possessors, but without any rightful share therein? And is not the lot of many a wage-worker, even in this land of freedom and plenty, worse than that of the barbarian? What victim of a sweater's den but might envy the naked savage his liberty to roam the fields and woods at will, to breathe the pure, free air of heaven without paying any man rent for the privilege, to satisfy his simple wants by the exercise of his simple skill without asking any man's permission to do so, or without being obliged to surrender to an employer the greater part of the products of his labor for the privilege of retaining the rest? Can it be denied that the triumphant chariot of modern progress, like the glittering car of Juggernaut, is stained with the blood of thousands of hapless victims crushed beneath its remorseless wheels?

Life is generally counted a blessing, but to the daily increasing number who come upon the stage of action only to find all of nature's free gifts pre-empted by earlier arrivals, who claim everything as theirs by right of primogeniture, refusing to surrender any portion thereof to the later comers except on their own terms—to those who find their right to existence thus practically denied, and the privilege of existence itself only to be secured on conditions that make it intolerable; who are doomed all their lives to pine of want in the midst of plenty; who must ever toil to produce, but can never hope to possess; for whom is no justice, no mercy, no Power that makes for righteousness, no God to whom they can appeal for redress, no hereafter to make amends for the cruel wrongs and woes of the present—nothing but the hard necessity of a soulless, mindless, pitiless "evolution," tending no man knows whither—is not the pessimist's deduction inevitable? Are they not justified in believing that life itself is the greatest curse and the perpetuation of the race the one unpardonable crime? Better that the race should end at once and the dismal farce, the awful tragedy of human life end with it, if this be all.

And what can redeem and save us from this fell power of selfishness that makes both marriage and religion a dismal failure; life a curse; progress a disease, destroying its thousands of victims yearly; civilization, with all its splendors, a glittering lie, keeping the word of promise to our ear only to break it to our hope—turning knowledge to despair and thought to madness—what but the divine power of heavenly, altruistic Love, which is described in detail in 1 Cor. xiii under the sweet name of Charity—the love that "never faileth"? Thank God, as Brother Putnam says, "we do have some human sympathy. There is some love here and joy." And there are encouraging signs that this heavenly tide of sympathy and love from its inexhaustible Divine Fountain is rising ever higher in human hearts, that it will continue to deepen and widen till it covers the whole earth, sweeping away misery, want, and woe as bad dreams are dispelled by the coming of the dawn and restoring us our long-lost Eden.

It is a significant fact that the two Great Commandments on which hang all the law and the prophets, and which are the life and soul of all genuine religion, are inseparable. It is impossible to truly love God save by loving our neighbor. "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" asks the Apostle James. On the other hand, only as we love God can we know how to love our neighbor aright. We may think we love our brother when we desire to take charge of him "for his good," to do his thinking for him, to be the custodian of his conscience, and to regulate all his actions according to our ideas of what is best for him. But when the love of God, who is essential Truth and Righteousness, takes possession of our hearts, we see clearly that we could not do a greater wrong to our brother than to attempt to impair in any way his God-given freedom, to interfere with his inalienable right to think for himself and be himself and no other, and "love worketh no ill to his neighbor."

Love never coerces; it cannot do so. To attempt to win or bestow love by force, to compel its acceptance or return, would be to love, as says the immortal bard of Avon, "against the nature of love." And yet Freethinkers, while stoutly championing liberty of thought and freedom of action, are constantly railing against the Almighty because He does not compel perverse, corrupt, self-willed mortals to be pure, just, and unselfish against their inclinations—does not force them to love Him and each other in spite of themselves!

No, Infinite Divine Love, guided by Infinite Wisdom, deals in no such arbitrary way with the creatures of His care. With a patience and long-suffering passing all human comprehension, He permits His children to wander in many and devious ways of their own choosing, ever seeking to draw them gently and surely to Himself by the varied lessons of experience through which we learn to know and realize, as we could in no other way, that Wisdom's ways alone are ways of pleasantness and only her paths are peace. For we must realize this truth as rational human beings—not as automatons; so it is better that we should wander forty times forty years if need be, in the wilderness of our own making than when we do return at last to the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls our return may be voluntary. Nothing less is compatible with the dignity of true manhood; and as we learn to realize and revere the sacredness of this divinely imparted and divinely respected human freedom we shall deal more rationally with each other, and bigotry and intolerance with all their evil brood of miseries will cease from among us.

While Infinite Truth is absolute and unchangeable, all human apprehensions of truth must of very necessity be relative and ever-changing, otherwise there can be no growth or development. Orthodoxy is an attempt to impose upon the necessarily temporary and changing, because imperfect, phases of human perception the permanency and immutability that belong only to the Infinite and the Absolute. Between the home and the prison—the garment and the strait-jacket—the only essential difference is the lack of freedom to adapt. Orthodoxy, by withholding this freedom of individual adaptation, changes the ecclesiastical home into a dungeon, the doctrinal garment into a strait-jacket. Every formulation of truth, however crude, will be found to adequately fit some minds, while at the same time it is too large for others which have not yet developed up to it, and too small again for others still who have already outgrown it. To attempt to set a Procrustean limit in matters of belief which all must reach but none may surpass, is like seeking to confine growing youth or adults in the garments of their childhood which, however ample covering for them once, become in time but so many bonds and ligatures, hampering motion and arresting development.

It is worthy of note that no doctrine or formula ever becomes orthodox until it has outlived its usefulness and is about to be shelved as a mere curiosity. Then ecclesiasticism, ever jealous of its "vested rights," likely to be imperiled by change, comes to the rescue, sets the stamp of orthodoxy upon the about-to-be-discarded formula, preserves it in the alcohol of an artificial sanctity, and in the sacred name of religion seeks to force upon us the worship of dead things. Scientific orthodoxy is as bad and bigoted in its essence, and would be as intolerable in degree if its vested rights were of equal extent. But ecclesiasticism, besides wanting the earth, claims the power and right to "corner" building-lots in the next world. Science owes its wonderful advancement to-day largely to the fact that it no longer attempts at any stage to be orthodox; and religion, gradually but surely following its example, is beginning to live again and become a vivifying influence in the development of the race.

Science and religion ever have and ever will go hand in hand, and their nature and development will depend upon whether they are regarded as dead things to be embalmed and kept intact, or as living principles to be acted out. For science is but the revelation of nature or the world without—the world of effects, while religion, justly speaking, is the science of the world within—the spiritual world, which is the world of causes; and to both science and religion freedom to grow is essential to their very life.

It has been well said that freedom is the cure for most of the ills from which the world suffers to-day, and for freedom Brother Putnam makes a valiant fight. But if the Secular Pilgrim would behold the Truth as the very form and embodiment of Love, the right hand of Beneficence, instead of a Medusa head chilling its horrified worshiper to stone, he must come up out of the narrow vale of prejudice and ascend to those sunlit heights where the outlook is broader and more comprehensive. Friend, come up higher. A. AUGUSTA CHAPMAN.

International Congress of Freethinkers.

For the purpose of reminding our friends we again state that the Congress will meet at 517 W. Madison street, Chicago, on Sunday, October 1st, at 10 o'clock A.M., and will continue in session for a period of eight days. Learning of the inability of our gallant Swedish co-worker, Victor Lennstrand, to attend the Congress, we can scarce help expressing our regret; but as the situation in Sweden demands his presence there, we feel that the work he may be able to accomplish will fully compensate us for our disappointment.

Acting upon the advice of friends, the committee has decided to set apart one day during the Congress to be known as "Woman's Day." Upon this day the ladies in the ranks of Freethought shall assume entire control—the only speakers on that day being women, who shall discuss topics relating to women and their attitude toward Freethought and the world's progress in general. We have several lady lecturers on the Freethought platform, and an interesting and instructive day is assured to all.

In this relation Susan H. Wixon, the esteemed editor of the "Children's Corner," has promised her assistance and support, and writes me that upon that day she will be present and give an address upon the subject of "The Progress of Woman for Four Centuries." This is an interesting theme and one which every woman in our land, inside or outside the pale of church creeds, should gather and listen to. Lillie D. White, of Topeka, Kan., who during the incarceration of Moses Harmon assumed the cares and responsibilities of the editor of Lucifer, and who is now assistant editor of the New Era, a reform journal, has also written me approving "Woman's Day" and wishes to be assigned as an orator on that day and will speak upon the subject of "The Emancipation of Woman." These, together with Mrs. M. A. Freeman, Dr. Juliet H. Severance, and others, will tend to make this day an interesting feature of the Congress. I have also written inviting Voltairine de Cleyre, Mrs. Krekel, and Katie Kehm-Smith. These will form a splendid galaxy of Liberal thinkers among women and they will be able to show what women can do if they are given an opportunity. The committee hopes by the aid of "Woman's Day" to interest the women of our land in our work and to secure their services, their talents, and their enthusiasm in the great service of humanity as against Christianity. We want all women to see that their services are appreciated, and that we, as Freethinkers, believe in the equality of sex. "Woman's Day" ought to be made a success. We have plenty of material, and now, how many women have we who will help us in this direction? How many women will send us a subscription to assist us and help us to make "Woman's Day" the success we desire that it should be?

G. W. Foote, of England, has written me that he and Charles Watts will both be present, and will represent the National Secular Society at the Congress.

These, together with our own lecturers, will afford a rare treat, and every Freethinker should take the advantage this occasion offers, for such an opportunity may not occur again for years. The annual Congresses of the Freethought Federation and the American Secular Union will be held in conjunction with this Congress, and the members and friends of both organizations should certainly be present and give them their support and encouragement.

The premiums offered to those subscribing toward the Congress are still good, and will be given to all irrespective of the society to which they subscribe. For $25 you can be made a vice-president of the Congress, your name will be published in the souvenir copy of the proceedings as such and thereby handed in that capacity to future generations.

Anyone subscribing $5 or more, but less than $25, shall receive Mr. Putnam's book, "Four Hundred Years of Freethought," as a special copy containing the souvenir copy of the proceedings. And anyone sending us $1 or more, but less than $5, shall receive the Federation button mentioned in our previous letters. These are in course of preparation, and when ready shall be distributed to subscribers.

Friends, once more we ask you to help us, we ask you to assist in the promulgation of mental liberty.

The object of this Congress is universal in character. Such a gathering is but one of many we hope to see inaugurated within the United States. Free-thinkers, bestir yourselves, make this Congress your own, this work your own. Arm yourselves with the magic weapons of truth, and reason and victory shall soon embrace them.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. of Committee of Arrangements.

The following donations have been received by the Federation since my last letter:

Manhattan Liberal Club, New York city.....	$25 00
R. H. Bliss, California.....	2 00
J. Maxfield, Boonton, N. J.....	5 00
Capt. Chas. De Rudio, Seventh United States Cavalry, Fort Riley.....	5 00
E. W. Rodes, Golden Pond, Ky.....	2 00
Lawrence Hofner, Grand Rapids, Mich.....	2 00

Total..... $41 00

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.
345 W. Randolph st., Chicago, Ill.

A Rejected Manuscript.

[The following reply to a preacher was offered to the Sidney Gazette, but met the usual fate:]

In last issue of the Gazette "A Reader" accuses the local committee of the World's Fair of forgetting honor and honesty in asking Congress to reverse its action respecting the closing of the gates on Sunday. Congress had no right to make such a law. The Constitution of the United States says: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." This law establishes the religion of those sects that believe the first day of the week is the Sabbath, as against those who keep holy the seventh.

The passage of this law was effected by false pretenses; the church party sent petitions to Congress from all over the Union in favor of Sunday closing. The names of millions of persons who had been dead from one to fifty years were signed to these petitions. Over a million more names were sent in from Ohio as favoring Sunday closing than there are living men, women, and children in the state. The writer has made diligent inquiry for months, and has found no one who signed the petition. Was it not the church party who "forgot honor and honesty" when they committed this monstrous fraud?

Not one-fifth of the population of the United States are church-members. Is it right, is it just that four-fifths should be ruled by a small minority merely because they are organized and capable of stooping to falsehood and forgery?

The Columbian Exposition will contain the highest and latest triumphs of human genius and skill in every department of art and industry. It will be the grandest educational opportunity of the century, and its effect cannot but be morally elevating. It will be an outrage if the gates are closed to the working classes on the only day they are released from the drudgery of life, yet the churches, forgetting the Golden Rule, are making great efforts to shut them out; and the proprietor of every saloon, gambling-house, and other place of ill repute in Chicago is assisting and wishing them success.

Thousands of busy men from hundreds of miles distant may visit the Fair, if open on Sunday, who cannot spare the time if closed on that day, and closing or opening may mean financial failure or success to the management.

It is time a free people were independent of those meddlers who would compel all others to follow their example.

Sidney, O.

EMORY ROBINSON.

A Historic Document from Inquisition Times.

[The following historical document I find published in Germania, a paper published in the German language in the City of Mexico. Germania gives a verbatim translation from the Spanish original as it was used in those times, and to some extent maintains the long-winded circumlocutory phraseology, also retaining the idiom of the old Spanish; while I have tried to reduce the whole to plain English without changing its meaning in the least.

The document is part of the yet existing record in the City of Mexico, and shows the absolute intolerance of those fiends in human shape in charge of a doctrin which claimed universal love and charity as its chiefest of all virtues.—St. ELMO, San Antonio, Tex., July 8, 1893.]

In the holy name of God we herewith inform the S. E. the Inquisitor Lic. Barnabi de la Higuera y Amarillas, that Maria Verastegui 22 years old, daughter of Don Rodriguez Verastegui a proprietor of mines in Zacatecas and who lives here in Capuchinas St. No. 13, has committed the great and abominable crime in not attending holy mass for two Sundays in succession, but preferred to promenade instead, the same being scandalous and derogatory to and against our sacred and holy faith.

Signed

JOSÉ DELGADO Y PINSON.

After receiving the foregoing complaint, I caused the arrest of the aforesaid Maria Verastegui at two o'clock to-day, and had her turned over to the holy Inquisition for judgment.

Mexiko, May 11, 1652.

Signed,

LIC BERNALÍE DE LA HIGUERA Y AMARILLAS.

Seeing the decision of the Inquisitor, the aforesaid heretic, Maria Verastegui, was taken to the chamber of torture and examined by Dr. Emperau, and declared to be a maiden of twenty-two years of age, the daughter of Mr. Rodrigo de Verastegui and Mrs. Catalina Alzures.

After having been informed of the complaint against her, she declared the same as false and a slander against her.

It was ordered to undress her, but she undressed herself weeping and declaring her innocence.

She was put on the rack, and, crying, declared and repeated that she had heard the mass at the church of San Fernando.

After due admonition, the cords and wheels were drawn tighter, she screamed terribly, and begged for mercy, but at last confessed that she had not heard the mass, because she had to attend to other necessary matters, and that this was the truth.

In accordance the following decree was made:

Whereas the crime is confessed by the aforesaid Dona Maria de Verastegui, maiden, twenty-two years old, it is hereby adjudged and decreed that the said maiden be led through the streets of this city, naked and shorn, riding on a mule, and after her crime having been published by the public crier she shall be led to the outer court of San Hipolito and there at the specified place be burnt alive. Her furniture shall be burnt, her chamber be strewn with salt, and in the court-yard of her house there shall be erected a "stake of disgrace," with the inscription of her crime as a "heretic."

This decree we make final, and order its execution.

[Signed in the City of Mexiko May 17, A.D. 1652.

DON FRANCISCO DE ESTRADA Y ESCOBEDO,

LIC. D. BARNABI DE LA HIGUERA Y AMARILLAS.

(Approved)

DON GARCIA DE LEON CASTILLO, Secretain.

This decree was executed May 19, 1652.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought."

In connection with the World's Fair and International Freethought Congress no subject can be more interesting than the progress of Freethought since the landing of Columbus on these shores. The most brilliant and alluring pages of human history are open before us. The greatest events and the greatest geniuses of the world are seen in their relation to the glory of to-day. Only by understanding the progress of Freethought for the last four centuries can we understand the present time. It is a wonderful record, more beautiful than any romance. Every Freethinker interested in the advancement of the race, and wishing to see the true meaning of civilization, should read this history.

I propose to show the progress of Freethought for the last four centuries in philosophy, science, literature, education, and government. It will be a book of permanent value, for it deals with the most fruitful portion of history. I shall devote my time from now until the meeting of the International Congress to writing this book, and the book will conclude with a report of the Congress itself, in the best manner in which I can do it, giving a living picture, I hope, of this great gathering; of those who take part in it, the representatives of our cause throughout the world. I intend to make this book not only a correct history of the last four centuries, but of organized Freethought to-day, and therefore it will be valuable for reference. I do not mean, however, to give a bare abstraction of events, but to clothe them with life and color, to show the heart and brain of humanity in its eternal struggle for truth and liberty.

I shall issue a souvenir edition of this book in commemoration of the International Congress. I propose to make it in every respect a book worthy of the cause. It will be elegantly bound. It will contain the portraits of over fifty Freethinkers, living and dead, who have adorned the history of our work. It will be a gallery of Freethought, as well as its written record. It will be something worthy to preserve and valuable as a gift to friends, illustrating what Freethought has been and is to-day.

I shall sell this book by subscription, and I desire subscriptions from friends at the earliest possible moment. The subscriptions will be for the benefit of the International Congress as well as for the publication of the book. The names of all subscribers will be enrolled in the book along with the members and officers of the International Congress, whether they attend the Congress or not, and in this way in permanent form there will be a list of the pioneer Freethinkers of the world. I hope everyone will feel it an honor to be on that list, and will hasten to enroll their name. I do not mean to do things cheaply, but generously. I want to make this one of the best and handsomest books ever published in the interests of Freethought. Therefore, I shall make the price per copy $5.00. All above the cost of publication will be for the benefit of the Freethought International Congress.

Friends, I ask you to subscribe for this book; you will thus help to secure in permanent form the history of Freethought in its noblest career; you will thus put yourself upon the roll of the pioneers of the great cause, and you will at this important time aid financially the Congress of the Freethinkers of the World. Address,

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,

TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Paul Pry of the Air.

The buzzard soars as proudly as
An eagle in the air;
But then the eagle never stoops
To feast on carrion fare.

The former is a fitting type
Of certain folks we know,
Who hold their heads exceeding high,
Yet stoop as buzzards low.

Gettysburg, Pa., Apr. 24, 1893.

M. R. S.

Figures for Liberals.

The following table is taken from the "World Almanac" for 1893:

Whole population of the United States.....	62,622,250
Whole number of members of the various religious bodies, unclassified.....	20,489,697
	42,132,553

It is taken for granted that the Young Men's Christian Association and similar organizations do not recruit very largely, if at all, outside of the above religious bodies.

This is a Christian nation—made so by acts of Congress and decisions of the United States Supreme Court, not by the vote of the people. These figures should show that while about one-third of the population, being religious, has succeeded in securing such action on the part of an otherwise free country, then the remaining two-thirds who peacefully rest under the term "unclassified" could, if they were organized, secure far broader action and make this truly a "land of the free."

A union of church and state, which all deplore, even the church people when it happens to be the state and some other church, already exists, and the "unclassified" and people of churches other than the church controlling the state will find, if the old thing once gets a-going, a hotter and more disagreeable hell right here on earth than they ever will off in the sugar-coated ultimately. The time to organize is now. There is work to do for the "unclassified."

Here Is a Description of Hell.

As Mr. Benson is the acknowledged standard orthodox writer of Methodism, his description will suffice for the Protestant hell. Hear him: God is present in hell in his infinit justice and almighty wrath as an unfathomable sea of liquid fire where the wicked drink in everlasting torture. The presence of God in his vengeance scatters darkness and woe through the dreary regions of misery. As heaven would be no heaven if God did not manifest his love, so hell would be no hell if God did not display his wrath. It is the presence of God which gives virtue efficacy, without which there could be no life, no sensibility, no power. God is therefore himself present in hell to see the punishment of those rebels against his government, that it may be adequate to the infinitude of their guilt. His fiery indignation kindles as his incensed fury feeds the flame of their torments, while his presence and operation maintains their being and renders all their powers acutely sensible, thus setting the keenest edge upon their pain, making it cut most intolerably deep. He will exert all his divine attributes to make them as wretched as the capacity of their being will admit.

This is his description of hell and of its endless duration. But it is all outside of the Bible and not taught in it. Such a horrible doctrin is not taught in the scripture. But the wages of sin is death—not torment after one is dead. Can the dead be tormented? No, never. I cannot believe it.

S. METZLER.

Letters of Friends.

Thinks It the Best Paper.

ROSLYN, WASH., June 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $3 for a year's subscription for the paper I like best of all. I never regretted subscribing for it yet. I wish you always success. I think S. P. Putnam takes the cake. I remain,

Respectfully yours in Freethought,
JOSEPH HASHKE.

For Our Congress.

FRANKLIN, PA., July 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Here is $10 for benefit of the International Congress to meet soon in Chicago. And as I cannot be there—too old—I suggest they coalesce and fraternize with all Liberals. I think a good test would be—all in favor of the Nine Demands of Liberalism.

Respectfully, ALEX. COCHRAN.

What He Has for Sunday Reading.

CLIMAX, MINN., June 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find one year's subscription to your valuable paper. I never skip Samuel Putnam's "News and Notes." When I do not get that for a Sunday reading I feel very strange and uneasy, as if something was not right. May Putnam live long and enjoy good health, and be strong mentally as long as he lives. Wishing you success, I am,

Yours truly, ANDREW STEENERSON.

Hell Better Than Heaven.

CHATHAM, July 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find check for $10—$3 for renewal, $3 for Truth Seeker Library, $2 to help Brother Heston picture out Bible nonsense, and the balance to help along the World's Fair Congress at Chicago. Ha! ha! for the World's Fair; the bigots have gone to the wall. Hell has cooled off considerably since I was a boy. Some are now preferring it to the other place. Since they have got it irrigated, trees and grass growing, and the fire poked up one side to cook with, it is certainly better than wearing the skin all off your fingers playing on a harp.

Respectfully, T. R. BURROWS.

Thinks the Pictures Deserve Gratitude.

SNOWVILLE, VA., July 10, 1893.

DEAR FRIENDS: I hope you have helped Heston. I regret that I cannot do so myself. He is one of the lights of our TRUTH SEEKER. Without his pictures it would seem bereft of one of its greatest charms and at least one-half its effectiveness. No one can ever forget one of them. Words spoken, penned, or printed may pass away and be forgotten, but these pictures are ineffaceable. We cannot value them too highly as workers for Liberalism. Be kind and helpful then to one who is doing so much for a cause we all have so much at heart. Hopefully, AUNT ELMINA.

Were All Towns Like This, Ecclesiasticism Would Fall.

NORTHPORT, L. I., July 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have just forwarded to the secretary of the Freethought Federation of America a list of names, all from this place, corresponding to the following, for enrollment as members of the Federation; also check for the amount of their subscription ($18.25). I would like you to publish the list of names and amount subscribed in your next issue, and send a copy to all those who are not already subscribers so they may know the money has been forwarded, and perhaps they may become subscribers for the paper.

Dexter K. Cole.

Dexter K. Cole.....	$5 00
Charles W. Call.....	5 00
J. W. Olmsted.....
Nelson L. Pidgeon.....	1 00
D. A. Arthur.....
Joseph Eldridge.....
H. F. Valentine.....
M. F. Burke.....
Christian Williams.....
Edward E. Sammis.....
J. K. Rudyard.....
John Scott.....	5 00
Harvey W. Bishop.....	1 00
W. K. Benedict.....
James F. Seymour.....	0 25
Seeley Hall.....
Charles Ketcham.....
A. F. Laughlin.....
Charles H. Scudder.....	1 00

Sold Books on Sunday.—Was Attacked by a Bigot Newspaper.

GREENSBURG, PA., Apr. 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: On Sunday, April 9th, Miss Voltairine de Cleyre delivered a lecture in the Jeannette Opera House under the auspices of the Greensburg Progressiv Liberal Union. Subject: "What Does Freethought Offer in Place of Christianity?" A very fair audience was present when Mr. J. G. Smith introduced the lecturer and the closest attention was paid throughout the speech. Although the president invited criticism no one seemed anxious to avail himself of the opportunity and the meeting was closed with the recitation of a radical poem entitled, "The Gods and the People." The speaker offered a number of books and leaflets for sale after the lecture, which offer was taken advantage of by many persons notwithstanding the presence of a constable, policeman, and justice of the peace, who seemed to be rather dazed at the open violation of the Sunday law prohibiting sales. An idea of arresting her floated about in a nebulous condition, but it did not take form and shape, expending itself rather in explosiv indignation the following day in the Jeannette Star. With customary disregard for truth where Freethought is concerned, the reporter misrepresented the lecturer freely—all we suppose, for the glory of God. Through the courtesy of the editor of the Jeannette Dispatch, however, Miss de Cleyre was permitted to insert a correction and challenge to the Star to debate. No reply has been forthcoming up to date.

With best wishes for the good cause of Freethought, I am, Yours truly,

J. P. LEASURE, Secretary.

A Follower of Altgeld.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed herewith is a copy of the resolutions drafted by your correspondent and passed recently by the Chicago Question Club in defense of Governor Altgeld's pardon of the so-called Anarchists. They were published in the leading Chicago papers—the Herald and Inter-Ocean—of July 3d. After several hours' debate thereon, the Chicago Single Tax Club last night rejected the same resolutions on the ground, that while none of its members individually objected to anything in the resolutions, yet the public might construe their adoption as an indorsement of Anarchy, and thus injure the club's reputation.

D. WEBSTER GROH.

WHEREAS, Anarchy (as commonly understood) is as infamous when practiced by officers as by private citizens; and,

WHEREAS, The records show that police captains, bailiffs, and judges anarchistically violated established precedent and justice in imprisoning those men Governor Altgeld recently released; and,

WHEREAS, For lack of argument, Governor Altgeld's critics substitute abuse and epithet, and appeal to the anarchy of angry opinion in 1886; and,

WHEREAS, The men now pardoned were convicted on the ground that their words incited the deed, even though it was never shown who threw the bomb or how their words influenced the throwing, or whether the thrower ever heard or read their words; therefore, be it

Resolved, That were the senseless clamor against Governor Altgeld to culminate in his assassination by some unknown crank, each of his clamorous critics would stand convicted out of his own mouth of complicity in the act and as deserving of imprisonment and death as were the Anarchists; and be it further

Resolved, That it is extremely significant that his critics object more to the irrefutable and damaging facts he exposes than to his act of granting the grudging pardon; and be it further

Resolved, That, instead of ambiguous generalities, his critics should specifically point out some errors in his statements or themselves stand convicted of unfairness and slander; and be it further

Resolved, That in braving this inevitable torrent of hot-headed abuse for the sake of doing justice Governor Altgeld merits the hearty support of all fearless champions of justice, truth, and liberty and all who place principle above expediency.

A Recreant Freethinker Reproached.

WHITEHALL, WIS., June 23, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Herewith I send you sixty cents, for which please send me "Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen Gardener.

This is the second order I have sent you for this book; the first one found a place where needed most.

I would like to tell the readers of your valuable paper about the funniest sort of a Freethinker I ever heard of. He is an acquaintance of mine, and the other day he came into my office for a chat. After we had been looking over some of the books and pamphlets that I received from your office, as also a few copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER, all pleasing him immensely, when he was about to depart I thought I would put the question to him straight—that I had heard it stated as a fact that he had joined the Presbyterian church. Now, to fully appreciate his reply I must state that he is an outspoken Infidel, and never misses a chance to give a Catholic a sharp dig in the ribs. "Oh, I will tell you," says he, "how that story came about. You see the preacher asked me to accept the office of trustee of his church, and I told him that if it would help him any he might put my name down as he desired." Just think of it, friends, an Infidel joining the church just to help them along! Do you think our worthy Putnam would have given him that kind of a reply? I don't exactly understand him, and that is what appears so funny to me. I know he has not met with a change of heart. It must be he yearns for better company than we poor Infidels can afford him. I think, too, he still yearns for the fleshpots of old. We must surely be a devilish poor lot if they can entertain him better than we. On the other hand, what in the name of goodness do they want of an Infidel trustee? Does it not seem as though they were getting hard up for material to make their officers out of to be obliged to come over into the enemy's camp and take one of our best (no, I will not say best, for the best would not stoop to such a thing), one of our most outspoken Infidels and take him under their wing and dub him trustee? Perhaps he does not realize or care what his friends will think of him when they find out what he has done. It will not be necessary to mention his name, for a majority of your readers would not know him, but those of his friends who read this will readily recognize him when I say the church is located at Blair, Wis.; and for fear he should not borrow my copy of this paper (should you deem this worthy of print), I inclose ten cents for you to mail a copy to Henry Olson, Grand Rapids, Wis., so he can borrow a copy and learn what, at least, one old Infidel thinks of him.

Yours very truly, CHAS. A. ECKER.

A Divine's Foolish Notions.

TRINIDAD, COL., July 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Some time ago I wrote you I would send you a letter I received in the year 1889 from a reverend gentleman and a Presbyterian. This reverend informed us of the sad news of Mother Berleth's death, and said in his letter that we all ought to bow before God and thank God that he had relieved her from her sufferings. I answered him in this way, that I did not think we need thank God for anything in regard to her case, as her case was continual suffering for more than three years. It took God a long time to make up his mind to relieve her, one of his followers for years. You can infer about all I said in my answer to him from this one I send you of his. Please give it space in your valuable paper if you can spare the space of such a lengthy epistle. I want all the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to read this godly letter from an intelligent divine. Adam was the youngest child, and had gone for some of the other members of the family. Mary was not alone. I do not see that Mary should be obeyed in this case, as there were other members of the family that had to be considered also. One might infer from the reverend's letter that Adam had gone out on a pleasure trip for the night. When you have it printed send the reverend a copy, if you deem it proper.

Yours for Truth and Liberty,

MRS. C. A. BERLETH.

GALVESTON, July 31, 1893.

MRS. C. A. BERLETH, Dear Friend: I had promised in my last letter that I would write again in a few days, but circumstances would not permit me to fulfill this promise until now, and I beg your pardon for letting you wait thus long. The expression in your letter that you have lost faith in the supposed divine power, because you could not have your will, was really a surprise to me from a professed Christian and intelligent lady. You forget, my friend, that while the Lord's hand is so heavy upon you he is afflicting you not through his anger, but because he loves you and wills your everlasting salvation, for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth. You say the Lord has not answered your prayers. You are wrong in this, my friend. I say the Lord has answered your prayers, but not according to your wish and desire, but according to his own will, and his will is always the best. Why he has not answered your prayers according to your will is a mystery to you now, but you will understand it after a while, and if not here in this life you will understand it in the world to come, and you will bless the Lord for it. God in his wisdom and omniscience sees farther than you do, and knows what would have become of you and yours if he had answered your prayers according to your own will; so he has done according to his own foreknowledge for your own good and the good of your family. I suppose you would act the same with regard to your own son, according to your own will, as you would see best, and not according to the will of your son.

My dear friend, you say God is not merciful in the least; but I say he is too merciful, else he would long ago have sent us to eternal destruction on account of our sins. And who could dispute his right to as our maker and as our father? I often think of this and wonder why God has spared me thus long. That God laid his hand of affliction so long on Mother Berleth is a mystery, and that Adam broke his leg just at the time while his mother was dying is also a mystery, but to a thoughtful mind it is clear, and shows the goodness of God. In the first place, Adam had no right whatever to leave Mary alone with mother while she was dying, but he followed his own will and inclination, would not listen to Mary, and so he had to bear the consequences, which though very sad may turn out to be for his good. You may say that God might and could have prevented this accident, but why did Adam not mind? Why did he not stay with his dying mother? That most surely was not God's will, that he should leave his mother in such a time. God could have prevented him from breaking his leg, and I suppose he would if Adam had made use of the means by giving the signal to the driver. From this you see, my friend, we have to look at the thing on both sides, and not blame God for it. Adam broke his leg not because it was so ordered in the wisdom of God, but because of his disobedience. With regard to your dear son, I sympathize with you, and if it is God's will that he shall get his eyesight again he will surely get it, for he is able to give sight to the blind. But if it is not his will, you must think that the Lord knows best what is good for him, and you as the mother have to submit patiently to the will of the Lord, saying, "Thy will be done, O Lord." There is even happiness in suffering and in tribulation if we only know how to act and how to bear it, for the Lord lays the burden upon us but he helps to bear it, too.

In conclusion, I would assure you that you did not hurt my feelings with the expressions you made in your letter. But I feel sorry, very sorry; and therefore beseech you for Christ's sake, and for your own soul's sake, and for the sake of your husband and son, to return again to the old and only standard of faith in God and Jesus Christ, our dear savior. Lean on the strong arm of God, pour all your troubles out in prayer before him, pray for strength and faith in his almighty power and that he is willing and able to save you. Trust in him and in him only, and depend on his grace and mercy. Wrestle like Jacob in prayer. Pour out your whole heart before him, and drink out of the fullness of his love, and be a mother in Israel.

Adam is doing well so far, and is trying to walk on crutches now and then. Mary still carries the burden—poor Mary!

With kind regards to you all, I am your sympathizing friend,

HENRY P. YOUNG.

Obituary.

LONE ROCK, July 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: It becomes my solemn duty to inform you of the royal death of his satanic majesty the devil. He was brought to the end of his jolly career by one Methodist skylark by the name of Rollins, a born-again poker sharp. He gave us more lies about Ingessoll and saloon slang than Bible. Probably he was afraid to dip into it very deep for fear of Comstock. He shamelessly bragged in the pulpit the last night of his burning, pick-pocket sojourn in this vicinity that he had retailed, curtailed, detailed, dehorned, and dehoofed the devil. The coroner brought in a verdict of death by those wounds. While all in the front of the house were bellowing Amen! Hallelujah! Glory to Gawd! etc., I heard a still, small voice in the rear saying: "Skin him, sir, and wear his hide; it would fit you like a glove." This is the second choker gentleman we have had in here that has had a personal combat with the adult rawhide-and-bloody-bones. The second mentioned that he was walking along one day meditating, when he heard something behind him go Zip! zip! and he turned and it was the devil. He told him in thunder tones to get behind him, Satan, and although he was already there he did it in a trice; and consequently he had not sinned a sin for fifteen years by the watch. By the way, he had a sawmill in here, and he left us so suddenly that he owed nearly every honest, hard-working man in here, besides $400 to his engineer. But then he may not be to blame for not paying them, for he may have gone up like Enoch and only had time to sell the mill, which he did. One day he preached here; it was very warm, and he walked. He said he got so hot that the sweat just streamed down his back. He said he just rolled his eyes up into space and asked God to bring a cloud over the sun, and he did it as quick. Then his back cooled down, and he came tripping on down to church as nice as a fawn. I think if there isn't a lake or pond of some kind to put liars in it is a great mistake in the creation. What do you think?

I wish you would tell my dear friend, Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel, that I have heard from that little, narrow, contracted, pusillanimous cannibal preacher at Prinesville, that wanted to cut her tongue out for a fry. The last news of him was that he had stolen some goods and had to go away Rebeck, skip out. I feel "kinder solemn like" as the funeral goes by of God's right-hand bower (preachers' slang), and I say peace to his ashes, while meditating on the past and thinking of some of the little kindnesses he has done the human family. In the first place, it was he that taught them to know whether they had a shirt on or not, and that in itself is considerable. I expect he was thinking of Comstock; but whether he was or not, Comstock has come all the same, and, it seems, to stay. Like every other curse, they stick closer than a brother.

I feel lonely to-day, and would like for some of my brothers or sisters to rise and say something sensible and cheering, for I am tired to death of twaddle. Seeing nearly all of my old neighbors and friends going into the embrace of the old dragon with seven heads and ten horns is very depressing, to say the least of it. And while they say I should be rejoicing over the death of the devil with them, I keep thinking of more serious things, and say, "Behold, a greater than he is here."

I was told I would be alone and would be compelled to come in. Time will tell. Is it not time for us to awake, and hold up the hands of our noble, brave, and self-sacrificing defenders of Liberty and Truth, when the enemy is leaning into our very door, saying, "No custom to any but religious merchants, mechanics, and all other business the same?" I have seen them pressing them in with all manner of dishonest ways, and then Brother Rope Them-In gave them, with his benediction, the advice to shun their old associations and associates. But I cannot help but forgive them in pity for their ignorance, and you can tell dear old Brother Ingersoll that while he is hating Presbyterianism I will try to do justice to the Methodist and Catholic religions, which are only worse than others because they are fatter, consequently more like well-fed horses in the morning.

I can still hear the Lone Rock choir singing—

I am so glad the devil is dead,
The devil is dead, the devil is dead,
etc. MRS. A. M. CRAWFORD.

An Ingersoll University Proposed.

KEARNEY, NEB., June 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As a reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER, I have noticed with pleasure the recent letters of two persons, who suggest the building of a monument to that grandest of men, Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, while he is yet living, that he may see and know that the great throbbing heart of humanity appreciates his labors for freedom. But I would like to suggest a plan for a monument which has long been in my mind, and one which I think is an improvement upon the plans of these persons, and it is this: Let the friends of Freethought unite and build a great college, and let them call it Ingersoll University. Let there be secured the very ablest corps of teachers that can be found, and let reason and science reign supreme, and banish all religious and superstitious teachings. Let them build it, not in the cathedral-jeweled cities of the East, where luxury, misery, and superstition vie with each other in strange commingling, and where so many schools already exist, but let them place it here in the broad, free West, midway between the oceans, where the very atmosphere invites the spirit of progress, and where it could be easily reached from all sections of the country, and the Western people would give it their whole-souled support. The young men and women who should receive their training there would go out into the world to lead honorable and useful lives, and prove to the world that a firm moral character can be formed and a purely secular education obtained in a college conducted without a divinity school attachment, chapels, Bible teaching, and all those things which our colleges and their clergymen professors now insist must accompany all secular education, or it is worse than useless. This would be a monument which would do untold good to coming generations. It would stop the sneering remarks of those who say that Infidelity has never given to the world any great colleges or other institutions. It would be a monument which would far surpass any shaft of marble, because it would spread the principles of Freethought, and thus be a living, breathing testimonial to the great character in whose honor it was erected. It would bless humanity in so many ways, while the marble shaft would stand costly, dumb, and cold, to be gazed upon by the few who could afford to visit the place where it might be situated. Humanity has been too much given in the past to this old custom of remembering its heroes and heroines with marble shafts, which is, I think, entirely consistent with the old orthodox notions, which have never blessed anyone. But here is an opportunity for Freethought to set a common-sense and economical example, as well as a mark of appreciation, and show that it truly believes, with its silver-tongued advocate, in doing good here and now, and for our children. The Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, and all other denominations are filling the land with their schools, and the inevitable divinity school attachment which always goes with them is filling the minds of the young people with the old orthodox notions which years will not eradicate. Freethought should have a school where its young people may go, and not be compelled to study and do those things in which they do not believe or be ostracized. There are millions of Freethinkers in this land, and if each one would give even the small sum of $1 (many would give a thousand times that), the Ingersoll University would be an assured success. Nothing would give Freethought such an impetus and standing. I would like to have the friends express their views upon it, and if the opinions warrant it no time should be lost in starting a subscription for it at the World's Fair next summer, and there is no doubt that the money would be forthcoming.

This is a cause worthy the great army of Freethinkers, and it is a monument worthy of that illustrious name, Ingersoll.

V. MARCIA GOFF.

Details of a Spiritualistic Seance.

CORNWALLIS, IDA., July 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: There has been so much excitement in Garfield county, Wash., over Spiritualism, originating in a certain Mr. Hutchinson's family, that I deem it expedient to tell what I know of those seances. Now, your humble servant was, for the motive of investigation, in constant attendance at these meetings for three months. I was there when they commenced. The Banner of Light has published written statements from those people, and a more deluded lot of people it has never been my lot to meet with before.

At the beginning the first night's meeting was a failure. The circle was composed of four girls, one boy, and two men, myself being one of the number. The second night we sat in silence from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m. before there was any manifestation, and then it came in gentle raps like the sound of water falling in drops. Excitement then grew, and of course as the seances were held every night the spirit (so called by the poor deluded victims of ignorance) became powerful and developed fast. In one week after the opening of those seances the medium (which was the boy) could by simply touching the table with his hand compel it to stand on one leg and balance itself, or walk by standing on two legs and shifting alternately one of its two legs forward, etc. Nor was this all. The medium could receive messages from the spirit land by (as they said) allowing the spirit to take possession of his arm and hand. Of course they were commands to pray, read the Bible, go to church, etc. The spirit (which was a holy one) told them that they were surrounded by a horde of evil spirits, which would do them harm, and could only be dispersed by repeating the Lord's prayer. Of course, a code of signals was arranged between those composing the circle and their holy, supernatural visitant, who should give the alarm when the devouts were about to be overpowered by his satanic majesty and minions. Of course, these signals came very frequently; and the way those good people were kept repeating their prayers, and commanding the evil ones in the name of the Lord Jesus to depart, would have filled a rational observer anticipating a little fun with the keenest delight.

Naturally, as time and the seances were dragged forward, the presiding spirit developed tremendous power. One night in particular I remember. It seems the devil gained power as fast (and naturally enough he should, considering the source the power was emanating from) as the holy spirit, and was equally anxious to demonstrate it. So the holy spirit appeared to the medium (couldn't appear to me, you understand) and told him to warn all of us to be prepared with firearms and be ready to do battle with the devil this night, as the conflict for good or evil would be warmly contested, and at the peril of our lives. Of course the family were terribly frightened. The father set about procuring firearms of all designs and patterns. At dark an inventory was taken, and the result figured up as follows: One shotgun, one of its two barrels useless; one magazine Marline rifle, with forty rounds of ammunition; two butcher-knives; one double-edged dagger. Now permit me to say right here that I should have gone away, but being young and full of fun, I wanted to see them whip the devil. Anyway, one of them came near passing in his chips before the saltpeter burning was done, as you shall see. Promptly at 7 p.m. the lamp was turned down, and the guiding angel was called up to see if the preliminaries were arranged all right. He answered in the affirmative. Then the women were placed in the corner and the table was drawn in front of them; the old man took his stand to the left of the table facing the stairway (where the devil and his backers, it was said, would appear), and armed with the lamp and two carving-knives. I came next. I was placed on the table and armed with the Marline repeating rifle. Perry, the boy medium, came next, and was on my right, armed with the shotgun. The guns were loaded and primed. Then the lamp was turned down, and to Perry was left the task of espionage on the devil when he should appear. Soon he screamed, "There he is! Fire!" Suiting the action to the word, he banged away. I began pumping lead into that ill-conditioned corner by the stairway at a rate that threatened to annihilate the devil and the house as well. Oh, my, how hot that gun-barrel grew! How I longed to drop it and seize my handkerchief and brush from my eyes the tears which the luminous perdition that was flying from my gun-barrel drew there. To tell the truth, the devil who was armed and sitting at my left hand was the one I felt afraid of. Well, this was the rôle, until suddenly we were short of ammunition. Then a new terror presented itself. What with the devil's power undiminished could he not do when we had no lead to fire into him? The good spirit was again called on for advice. It said to fight to the last; when our guns failed we were to fight with knives. So we did, Perry always heralding the presence of the devil with the cry, "There he is!" Never in my life had I seen people more terror-stricken. Finally I had to lay aside my gun for the dagger, before mentioned, and resumed my place. Again the light was turned down. Soon Perry, with a cry of terror, announced his satanic majesty. Now mind you, up to this time I had seen nothing supernatural. Suddenly, with Perry's cry of "There he is!" I thought I caught sight of the source of all the trouble moving just ahead and right in front of me, never having noticed the head of the house on my left leaving his seat. Now here was my chance—whip the devil, carve him all up, and I would reap fame undying forever. Moreover, four girls, if he triumphed, were in his power. Now for it. I took one step forward, followed by a vicious lunge, and my knife was buried in a very material devil, who cried: "Turn up the light, quick! I am a dead man—come to me, wife, I'm dying! I knew it would be thus—the devil has killed me. Oh, look out for him! Oh, how I wish I had lived a Christian man!" His family flocked around him, uttering lamentations and heaping execrations on the devil. I meanwhile had been standing by, a mute and paralyzed witness. Now I recovered somewhat, and stepping to the wounded man's side began to examine him to find the extent of his injuries. "I'm a dead man!" he exclaimed. "Be quiet," I said; "the devil used rather strong argument. You are doubtless hurt, but not fatally. He has struck your arm with his spear, I presume. You are only hurt in the arm and will get along all right."

Tying a bandage on his arm, I left the house, and never attended another seance.

Now, gentle reader, what is your opinion? Here was this family who accepted the teachings of the supernatural, which existed only in their brains (if they had any), in place of common sense, and they to-day believe honestly they talked with heavenly visitants and fought devils; that the devil came near killing one of their number. Why, it's ridiculous.

I can and will explode and explain Spiritualism. For instance, some months after the events which transpired and are herein explained, I happened one day to meet the youngster who acted as medium in the foregoing. I inquired how they were getting along with the spirits. He told me that so much time elapsed since they had a circle that the spirits had lost their power, and he could have no manifestation from them any more. I invited him to my room, where I had an electric battery. I had him put his hands on a table to call the unearthly visitants, but he failed. Next for my experiment. I dampened the wires of my battery, and persuaded him to take hold. I gave him an unmerciful shock, and kept it up until pity forced me to desist. Then I caused him to once more place his hands on the table, when all the maneuvers of rappings, table-tippings, and spiritual manifestations were gone through to my satisfaction.

Now here we are. Doesn't this prove to any rational and thinking mind that Spiritualism is a farce? Doesn't the experiment prove conclusively what all the spiritual manifestations emanate from? A medium may be compared to a dry sponge. Dip the sponge in dampness or water, and the dampness will be absorbed by the sponge, for there is nothing in it of its own. Just so with the medium, for he is like the sponge. Possessing nothing in his own individual right, he absorbs what electricity or magnetism comes his way from the persons sitting with him around the table holding the seance, and, of course, as he is overcharged with the surplus electricity, it is emitted from his fingertips at will.

I could go more fully into details to explain, but don't think it necessary, for all who are willing to think for themselves will literally scout superstition. If this is answered I will be ready with a reply.

JAMES W. FOSTER, JUN.

Children's Corner.

Edited by Miss SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Robin's Complaint.

I remember once a robin,
Whose breast was very red;
Close within a cage they kept him,
And this is what he said:

"Far off in a distant greenwood,
My brother's flying free;
And I know he's very lonely
While flying without me.

"True, my cage is gaily painted,
And bright as it can be;
Yet, oh, how I miss the sunlight
That dances on the lea.

"I cannot behold the morning
Climb up behind the hill,
Nor the silver moon a-shining
Through tree-tops, calm and still.

"I am pining for the woodland,
For fronded fern and flowers,
For the daisies and the grasses,
Aglow with summer showers.

"O my mistress dear, have pity
On robin in his cage;
If you'll free me, I will love you
Till I am white with age."

S. H. W.

A Fish Story.

It was vacation. The weather was hot and sultry during the day, but cool and comfortable after sundown. Camp life was glorious. Some new sport was always presenting itself, and for me there was a perfect round of novelties. The night was magnificent. There was no moon, but there was not a cloud and not a breeze. Quiet reigned supreme, save for an occasional noise from the forest; noises which were hard to place and which formed excellent food for the imagination.

My companion, who was an old camper, was collecting the necessary traps preparatory to a midnight fishing excursion. When all was ready we pushed off silently and rowed up the stream, gently plowing the dark, still waters. Then the sport began. I was successful from the start, and pulled in the shining beauties at a rate that surprised my companion. And then my luck changed. For an hour I got never a bite. It was exasperating. I fumed and boiled, all to no purpose, and then I became thoughtful.

I reviewed the sufferings, the dying agonies, of fishes that I had lured from their quiet, peaceful home beneath the rippling wave. I thought, "Supposing some ethereal monster let down among a crowd of gold-hunting men a treasure which concealed a vicious hook. And when the greedy men had seized the prize, the hook tore into their tender flesh, tore open the cells where flowed their life-blood, and then the monster jerked them high in air; up, up, to where the atmosphere was too rare to support human life; and then rudely tore the hook from their quivering flesh and cast them aside to die."

I was blaming my own thoughtless cruelty and the thoughtless cruelty of all the world. Supposing I were a fish! At the thought a feeling of liteness and grace took possession of me. I felt happily contented and "at home." And yes, surely it must be, I was in the water. And now I was gliding here and there among the rocks and shallows. It was delightfully cool and quiet. And now some fish came swimming by, gamboling and playing like a lot of rollicking kittens. I began to play and gambol with them, and surely I was one of them. It was explained: I was a fish! I congratulated myself on the transformation. What a wild, glorious life; free from care and worry, free from all the ups and downs of human life!

But suddenly I became hungry and began to look about for something to eat. As I became more hungry my taste grew less fastidious. I became ready to eat anything digestible. Finally I espied a worm floating in the water. Worms had always been more or less repulsive to me, but I realized my changed condition and realized that I was hungry. I made a dash for the worm. I had him now—but how he hurt! And now I felt myself jerked upward. An iron was entering and tearing my flesh. I was out of the water. I was grasped by the rude hand of my camp companion, the iron was torn from my mouth, and I was carelessly thrown among other writhing inhabitants of the water. I felt that I was suffocating. Oh, how I suffered! I felt ready to burst. I gasped, I struggled, and then all was dark. Then I heard my companion's voice: "Say, Mack, I'm leaving you way behind. I'm having great luck and such beauties, too!"

WALTER W. CLARK.

Worcester, Mass.

Notice.

The editor of the Corner is receiving many letters of inquiry regarding accommodations at the World's Fair. She can not answer all these inquiries without taking too much time, and she takes this method to say that the Santa Maria ought to be reliable, as its proprietor, Mr. Goodwin, is a Liberal. This hotel is close to the Fair grounds. Another hotel kept by a broad-minded man and well recommended is the Louisiana, located at Seventy-first street and Siepp avenue, only two blocks away from the Fair grounds. Everything first-class and moderate prices. Address C. A. Power, agent, for terms. If everything is as advertised, which there is no reason to doubt, visitors will find good accommodations at this commodious hotel.

Correspondence.

WESTMINSTER, CAL., June 19, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Children's Corner. Mamma takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and we all like it very much. We have taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for ten years. We have lived in California for five years. We came here on the account of papa's health. He died two years ago. I am ten years old. I have been going to school. It stopped on May 4th. We live five miles from the Pacific coast. We go there quite often. I spend my day bathing and playing and gathering shells. There are not many Free-thinkers around here. I will close for fear of my letter being too long. I remain your little friend and Freethinker, LILLIE B. GALLUP.

[A good letter for the first. May it not be the last.—Ed. C. C.]

WORCESTER, MASS., June 14, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Some time has passed since my last letter, but I take this opportunity, on the first day of vacation, to write and inclose one of my latest lucubrations.

We have had a number of liberal lectures here this winter and have brought out good audiences. This fall we intend to go into the work in earnest, and have a lecture every Sunday evening.

The Congress and registration schemes are first-class, and should be pushed. The future liberty of the country depends much on the young Liberals, and in union there is strength. We should know each other and exchange ideas. I will correspond with a few of the Cornerites.

Yours for Freethought,

WALTER W. CLARK.

P. S.—My address is 45 Park street.

[Walter is among our best friends and correspondents. It is always a pleasure to hear from him.—Ed. C. C.]

FROM A WEAVER, AND A PROMISING YOUNG MAN.

NEW MARKET, N. H., June 24, 1893.

DEAR FRIEND: I thought after receiving so much kindness from your hands I would write and let you know how I am getting along. I arrived in this place about 3 P. M. the next day after I left your house. There was a big crowd of weavers—twenty-six altogether. There was a half-barrel of beer in the place where I lived. The first pay they got they all put in for it. I was called a "scab" when I said I would not put in for it with them; so I left the house and am now living in a private boarding-house. I earn about $9 or $10 a week on six looms of big sheeting goods; it is as fine as silk. I pay $3 for board. I will get a new suit of clothes this week if nothing happens. I am going to save up for father and sister after that. This is a nice jolly town after you get known to the people and they see you are trying to get along.

When my badge comes I will make my first appearance with the temperance society here, which I joined last week. We expect to parade in Exeter Fourth of July with the college students there.

They found out I knew Lizzie Borden in Fall River, so I had to tell all I knew about her. There is a man out here who has a piece of the rope which hanged Frank Almy. He is going to give me a small piece of it for a relic of that crime. He was saying he was going to have it mounted in silver and gold. I will save a piece of the rope for a relic for you if you want it.

I will have to go through Boston on my way home. I will call in the society's office if you say so. I don't expect to go home until Labor Day, or maybe the week before.

I like this place better than Fall River now. I am in bed almost every night at 9 o'clock or 8:30, up at 4:30 in the morning, and am in the best of health. I have stopped using tobacco and don't smoke.

Excuse me for writing with lead pencil, as it is raining outside very hard and it is a good way to the store for ink. I had some, but not enough to write a letter with.

Hoping to find you in good health, I remain,

Yours truly,

JAMES H. MEEHAN.

ATCHISON, KAN., June 4, 1893.

MISS SUSAN WIXON, Esteemed Friend: Nothing affords me more pleasure than to spend my leisure moments in a chat with you and the readers of our interesting and attractive little Corner in the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. It has been a long time since I have had this blessed opportunity, owing to pressing duties that have devolved upon me in the routine of my newspaper's work.

This is one of the dreariest Sundays I have ever experienced in Kansas. A terrible rain and wind storm visited this section last night, and it has not yet abated. The rain has descended in torrents all day, and the streets look more like rivers than public thoroughfares.

I intended to spend to-day at Sugar lake with a party of friends, but could not go on account of the inclement weather. I am well enough satisfied, however, for it has afforded me an opportunity of chatting with my Corner friends once more. Sugar lake, by the way, is a beautiful little sheet of water opposite Atchison on the Missouri side of the river. It is a great pleasure resort, and a great many people visit the place and indulge in fishing, boat-riding, and picnicking.

I suppose Miss Wixon and a great many of the Cornerites will visit the World's Fair. I am thinking of visiting the Fair before it closes, and if I do I hope to meet a great many of my Freethought friends. Mr. Putnam's letters on the Fair are very interesting. I notice he makes mention of the Kansas exhibit in his last letter.

We have a goodly number of radical Freethinkers in Atchison and vicinity. S. C. Moxcey is one of the number, who is not afraid to speak his honest thoughts. Mr. Moxcey is a gentleman of more than ordinary intelligence, and he is thoroughly posted on all subjects pertaining to religion. He is a Freethinker of the most ultra school, and is willing to help the cause in this city. Mr. Moxcey has an intelligent family, all of whom hold to Liberal views. His son, Thomas A., is a promising young lawyer. W. R. Lloyd, the popular merchant tailor, is an enthusiastic believer in the doctrine of Freethought, and is unwavering in his advocacy of those principles. Capt. J. K. Fisher, S. C. King, the banker; Prof. Louis Stapper, the musician; Hon. Joseph McCully, H. C. Solomon, the lawyer; and other prominent citizens hold to broad, Liberal views. A great many of the young men have also thrown off the shackles of superstition and stepped proudly out into the bright sunlight of universal mental liberty. Conspicuous among these are Frank Oliphant, whose young and active mind is always delving into the depths of philosophical thought; Ernest Griffin, whose reasoning qualities have caused him to reject the religion of myth and miracle, and many other bright young men who stand in our midst as living examples of that divine faith, the religion of humanity. Henry Myers and Henry Bender, living north of town, are both active Freethinkers. They are both old readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Mr. Bender is very aged, being one of the oldest settlers of this section. He says he intends to devote his remaining days to Freethought work. He carries a copy of Watson Heston's Bible Picture Book everywhere he goes. Mr. Myers is one of the prominent farmers of this section, and he is an intelligent, well-read man.

I must conclude my letter, as I have nothing more to write about at present.

With best wishes to Miss Wixon and the friends of the Corner, I remain, Fraternally, GEO. J. REMSBURG.

[Our scientific friend George has always something good to say. We count him a bright jewel in the scientific and Freethought world, and prophesy for him a distinguished career.—Ed. C. C.]

CHOLERA, DIPHTHERIA, Dysentery, Piles, Quinsy, Catarrh. The Antidote for $1. Agents wanted. Dr. G. H. MILLER, 1441 South Twelfth street, Denver, Col. 20228

Fine Hand-Made Violins.

Made strictly on scientific principles. Best in the World for the Money. Fine Wood, Tools, and Trimmings for Violin-Makers. Also Old and New Violins Repaired and Regraduated at reasonable prices. Square dealing. Address 6t29 J. COLLINGWOOD, Avery, Ia.

8%
4t28

GUARANTEED by a leading Trust Company is offered at par. Suitable for large and small investments. Full information furnished by W. E. Lowry, Mills Building, New York.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A Nineteenth Century Novel.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with a little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroine. The narrative is, in the main, a history of a working-girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business-men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrites. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. (3 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshipped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into, 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardner.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged.

As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiotcy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbatic Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason," are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers's Convention, January 23, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath-Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLow, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and exposed the falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Agnostic Annual

—FOR—1893

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:
The Moral Sanction, Leslie Stephen; Reverent Agnosticism, Amos Waters; The Mother Nature, A Poem, Gerald Massey; Dogmatism in Theology, Alfred Moberg; Sermons on the Mount, Samuel Laing; The City of the Dead, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin); On the Duty of Honesty in Our Convictions, C. E. Plumtree; Scientific Religion, R. Bithell; The Blight of Superstition, Charles Watts; Anthropology and Orthodoxy, Edward Clodd; The Disappearance of the Nether World, F. J. Gould; Religious Ideas: Their Origin and Development, Frederick Millar; Signals with Mars, A Poem, G. H. Martin; Materialism and Idealism Harmonized, Lucian Armstrong.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. 40 cents.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, 10 cents.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By J. T. Gordon. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo. 384 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo. 238 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo. 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE. By S. P. Putnam.

This is the strongest and most powerful argument against religion that can be possibly conceived of.

How anyone can dispassionately read it, and still believe religion ever was, is, or can be a blessing, I cannot imagine.

Every Liberal should own, study, and lend the book to all who will read it.

It not only proves its case, but proves it so emphatically, that religion has no leg left to stand upon.

It is strong, poetic, powerful, and passionately in earnest. It is Putnam all over, and is really the best of all the good things he has yet written.

Even its scathing denunciations of the world's greatest enemy (religion) you feel to be almost too mild to do justice to the subject.

He makes religion so hateful we long to crush it into the ground and eliminate it from the race, and this one book would do it could it but be carefully and universally read.

ELMIRA.

THE NOTICE IRONICAL.

Samuel P. Putnam has written a treatise to prove that religion is a curse, a disease, and a lie. "It is woe-working," argues the author. "It is merely like taking an opiate. It weakens, while it cures not the ills of life. It is a desperate resort. It heals not the wound. It sends the poison deeper in. We must confront reality and make the best of it. By courage we can win something of happiness from our dark surroundings. Only, however, by sticking to the truth. If we abandon truth we are lost indeed." All this valuable information is published by the Truth Seeker Company.—New York World.

NO BEGINNING; OR, THE FUNDAMENTAL FALLACY. A Common-sense Exposure of the Error in the Reasoning upon Which is Based the Belief in a Creation or First Cause of Things. By Wm. H. Maple. Chicago: Chas. H. Kerr & Co. Cloth, pp. 166, price $1.

Our readers know that we think the disproving of a god a very important thing. We think, as they are aware, that while a great mass of the people doubt the Christian God and Bible, they still believe in a god of some kind or other, and thus are disposed to let Christian procedures go on, reflecting that the god would better be worshipped under such mistaken forms than under none at all. While Infidels are many, Atheists are few; and only the Atheists, as a general rule, make a good fight against the church. It may be imagined by our readers, then, with what delight we discover in any publication assaults upon the dogma of the existence of God which are forcible and effective. It is with this delight that we examine the book, "No Beginning." This volume discusses the question of a creator with such plainness of wording that even the unlearned can understand; and approaches it from so very many different directions that it is one of the most comprehensive and conclusivest works on the subject that we remember seeing.

Before the author takes hold of his main point, he clears the way by disposing of a number of subordinate matters. All of these he handles very wisely. We can give an idea of them by transcribing the titles of the first four chapters, as follows:

I. Character of the Work—Somewhat Personal—The Faith of the Skeptic—No Unknowable—Being Needs no Apology—Source of Knowledge—Need of Toleration—Other Thoughts.

II. Reason Leads to Truth—Consciousness Not a Truth-determining Faculty—To Know is a Property of Man's Organization—Nature Gives no Reason for Her Actions.

III. Definition of Truth—The Crowned Glory of Man—A Duty to Reason—Commonplace Facts.

IV. The Question to be Discussed—Need of Faith in Man—Faith in Facts is Easy—Monstrous Doctrines—Reason, Alone, Deals with Cause and Effect—Instinct Knows Nothing About the Causes of Things.

Presently the writer comes to his real theme—that there was "No Beginning," and hence no manlike creator to produce one. He says:

"Theologians answer the question, Whence came the universe? by saying that at some very remote, but indefinite time in the past, the substance of all things that are now were spoken into existence—created out of nothing—by the fiat of an eternal and self-existent personal deity." This he denies, and against it enters the following piece of reasoning:

FIRST ARGUMENT.

"First, Something is. This is the first fact. It is more certain than any axiom or demonstration. It is the foundation of all logic and all thought.

"In this absolute certainty 'we live, move, and have our being.'"

"Second, Something was. 'Every particular thing or event has a cause,' is universally admitted to be a truth. It is a primitive and necessary judgment of the mind. An equivalent of this is, present events have causes; and this is, in turn, equivalent to the statement, something was in time past. And hence, if the proposition 'something is' is the first fact, 'something was' is the second. As 'something is' underlies all thought, 'something was' is one of the first products of thought; and it is just as absolutely certain that something was in the past as it is certain that something is now. Therefore,

"SOMETHING IS—SOMETHING WAS."

"Third, There was always something. We have found that something existed in time past. If something was yesterday or a thousand years ago, or a million years ago, that something or event had a cause; because 'every particular thing or event has a cause,' and this judgment must apply to things or events existing at any conceivable time in the past—not being limited to things or events existing at any particular time, but being a universal truth.

"Again, there was always something or else there was a time when nothing existed. But the latter cannot be, for in such a case, as Paley and other natural theologians admit, 'that condition must have continued; the universal blank must have remained.' The mind cannot conceive of something coming from nothing.

"Therefore,

"SOMETHING IS—SOMETHING WAS—THERE WAS ALWAYS SOMETHING."

Or, SOMETHING IS—THERE WAS ALWAYS SOMETHING.

"Fourth, All things in some form or in substance always were. We have seen that we cannot conceive of anything existing without a cause—of something coming from or out of nothing—and that, therefore, there was always some thing or things in existence.

"Now, if there was always of necessity some thing or things, the substance of other and all things always existed; for to admit that any one thing could come from nothing is to surrender the whole argument, and to assert the very opposite of our premises, 'all things have causes.'

"If each particular thing or event has a cause, all particular things and events have causes.

"The foundation of the judgment, every particular event or thing has a cause, is the impossibility of conceiving of something coming from nothing. Now, if some of the things that are, always in essence were, all must have always been, or a part have come from nothing; and this can not be.

"Therefore, logically, we are forced to conclude that all things in some form always existed, and our equation can be extended as follows:

"SOMETHING IS—SOMETHING WAS—SOMETHING ALWAYS WAS—ALL THINGS IN SUBSTANCE ALWAYS WERE."

"Or, SOMETHING IS—ALL THINGS IN SUBSTANCE ALWAYS WERE."

"And from this mathematical statement it becomes clear that it is just as certain that all things in substance always were as it is certain that something now is.

"Conclusion: All things that now are, having always in essence existed, causes always existed, and there cannot have been a 'first cause.'

SECOND ARGUMENT.

"We seek for causes of things only because observation and experience have taught us that particular things have causes, and because of our inability to conceive of something coming from nothing.

"To admit, therefore, that there was a first cause is to admit that one thing existed without a cause, because a first cause must have been uncaused. Clearly, if it was caused it could not be the first cause.

"It is, therefore, absolutely impossible to reason, from the premises, 'things have causes,' to a first cause.

"And as this is the only premise there is on which to base any process of reasoning on the question, it is clear that the doctrine of a first cause cannot be defended by human reason—by any process of ratiocination—and is, therefore, not a rational doctrine.

THIRD ARGUMENT.

"As something cannot come from nothing, and everything has a cause, it is evident that that cause must be a whole and sufficient cause.

"Therefore, the cause cannot be less in potency or energy than the effect. Let us see if it can be greater. It is one of the recent discoveries of science—and conformable to reason—that neither matter nor force can be destroyed or lost. If this is true, it follows that the cause cannot be greater than its effect; for, otherwise, a part of the energy of the cause would have been lost.

"Therefore, a cause being neither greater nor less than its effect must be equal to it, and we have:

"CAUSES=THEIR EFFECTS, AND EFFECTS=THEIR CAUSES."

"Now, let A represent a given effect, and B its cause; we have then A=B; and if C represents the cause of B it must equal B, and we have: A=B=C; and by continuing this process, however far into the past, we find a limitless succession of equivalent causes and effects.

"It is therefore an absolute and necessary conclusion that no effect can be found without a sufficient and equivalent cause.

"It is also an irresistible conclusion that every cause is also an effect, and if so no 'first cause' can exist, because a first cause cannot likewise be an effect."

This author, we said, turns his theme about and views it in a great number of aspects. So he does not rest here, but in his next chapter gives us 'Other and Shorter Mental Processes Leading to the Same Conclusion.' Of these shorter reasonings we will give two. The first is:

"Either it is true that there was always something, or there was a time when nothing existed, and all things have come from nothing. We cannot conceive of the latter, so the former statement must be true; and if there was always anything, there could not have been a first cause of things."

The other of these equivalent reasonings is:

"Something is; and it is only necessary to continue the truth of this proposition indefinitely into the past—look upon it as a general or eternal truth—to make it synonymous with the statement: there was always something. And if there was always something, there never was a first cause."

Not halting here, the author, in his desire to have the reader understand the argument with perfect clearness, recasts it into another form. In his eighth chapter, headed "The Formal Arguments Condensed," he starts over again and says:

"And now, for fear the reader may lose his bearings by not having in mind exactly how the argument stands, let the foregoing reasoning be condensed, as it may be in substance, into the following SYLLOGISM:

"Major premise, 'No uncaused thing or event ever existed;

"Minor premise, 'A First cause, if it ever existed, was an uncaused thing or event;

"Conclusion,

"Therefore, no first cause ever existed. 'Is there any escape from this argument? Let me see. If the premises are admitted to be true, there is, of course, no way of avoiding the conclusion.

"And what rational objection can there be raised to the premises?

"The writer sees none. As to the first premise, this cannot reasonably be disputed from the fact, as has been shown, that it is upon this primary judgment of the intellect that rest all inquiries as to the causes of things.

"It is clear that the mind cannot admit that even one thing can exist without a cause, as this would destroy the reality of the quality of causation and undermine all reasoning on the question.

"As to the second premise, as stated, no one will fail to see the certainty of the statement that a first cause is uncaused; so that there only remains that portion which declares a first cause to be a thing or event.

"Does the reader doubt the truth of this part of the premise? If so, on what ground?

"Will he claim that he believes in a personal intelligence who was self-existent, uncreated, and who, in his own good time, spoke all things (other than Himself) into being; and that he denies that such personality was a 'thing' or 'event' in the sense in which those words are used in the premises?

"The writer insists that this is the only way by which even an attempt can be made to escape the full force of the syllogism. And if this objection is made, the writer repeats the above inquiry: On what grounds?

"Why is not the 'first cause' you have thought to be a reality, a thing?

"As has been stated elsewhere, natural theologians generally admit that the personal 'creator,' that they insist was a first cause, is something. They claim that he is a reality; the most real, in fact, of all things."

The succeeding chapter carries the heading: "The Term 'Beginning' is Generally Used Only as a Matter of Convenience.—Moses Does Not Positively Affirm a Beginning.—Some Queries." In this chapter, one remark is:

"If no particular thing has a beginning so far as we know, except in an imperfect sense—a sense adopted by the mind as a matter of convenience—why should we expect to find, logically, a beginning for the aggregate of things?"

In the next chapter the writer turns from the negative to the positive aspect of things,

From a denier he changes to an affirmer. He sets forth the fundamental doctrines of our modern science on the inmost character of the universe. The chapter heading is: "Eternity of Matter, Force, and Phenomena.—New Heavens and New Earths.—Thought Produced by Matter in Motion." Here the author assails, first, the notion of the average person that rest is the natural condition of the bodies he sees about him, and that their motions, whenever they occur, are exceptional and against the disposition of those bodies, and hence caused by foreign and extra-natural agents. This, explains the writer, is not so. Motion is as natural as rest. It is just as much a truth of philosophy that a particular body of matter when in motion will forever remain in motion unless stopped by some force outside itself, as it is that a body once at rest will always remain so unless put in motion by an extraneous force. The prevalent idea that the natural condition of matter is that of rest doubtless came from the fact that, owing to the attraction of the earth, most bodies on its surface are held permanently in one place; and to a great extent in this local sense the idea is a true one. But it is only true in a local and relative view of things; for, generally speaking, it is as true, that when a body is still, it is because it is held in place, as it is true that when a body is in motion it is because it has been moved. In emphasizing, however, the naturalness of motion, it should be said, that in the above statement of the property of inertia in matter, no regard is had to what is called its chemical action. The particles of matter making up a body are moved by inherent forces—the atoms attracting or repelling each other as conditions change; and so universal is this disposition of atoms to activity, that it is truthfully said that "all matter, so far as we can ascertain, is ever in movement." Most of our solid bodies contract and expand with changes of temperature, and it is a fact of universal experience that temperature is forever varying. It is also a thought worth taking here, that the temperature of a body is itself nothing but the motion of the atoms composing the body, that heat and cold are but words to express the relative activity of matter, that a body is only heated or cooled as its atoms take on or lose motion. With these things in mind, it is seen that the apparent rest of particular bodies does not argue that the great whole of matter ever was or ever will be at rest; for this state of certain parts only exists because of the conditioned character of separate bodies. It therefore becomes clear that there is no reason why the totality of matter should be conceived of as ever being in a state of rest. Thus no God was needed to set it in motion.

But before the book is over there presents itself the pointed objection: The author has been proceeding throughout on the principle that everything has a cause; now, if this is so, the universe, being a thing, had a cause. In other words, the author denies God's having been a first cause, for the reason that there can be no first cause as each thing is caused by a preceding one; yet he sets up the universe as a thing that had no preceding cause; and this is inconsistent. Here, it must be admitted, is what at first seems to be a staggering objection. It has, we imagine, puzzled many a would-be Atheist. Nevertheless, this knot, seemingly so inextricable, is untied, or cut, by Mr. Maple with the utmost satisfactoriness that can be asked. This feat, seemingly impossible, he performs in one of his chapters with dexterity of reasoning that it is a delight to witness. We have not space to describe it here, having already been led by the seductiveness of the subject to an undue length. We will content ourselves with printing the titles of the remaining chapters:

"XI. The Eternity of Succession in Harmony with all other Knowledge—Reach of Theistic Arguments—Further of the Source and Character of Human Knowledge.

"XII. Form and Order also Eternal—An Adequate Cause in Nature for all that Occurs—The great Age of the Earth.

"XIII. The Fundamental Fallacy Underlying the Belief in a Creation or First Cause Pointed Out.

"XIV. Belief in a Cause for the Totality of things Irrational and Unnecessary.

"XV. The Doctrine of Eternal Succession is Mentally Restful and Satisfying.

"XVI. A Self-existent Universe the Fact of all Facts, and the Veritable and only real Deity.

"XVII. The Theological Pyramid—A Monument of Superstition, and how it has been Built on the Fundamental Fallacy Pointed out in this Work.

"XVIII. Conclusion."

Christianity a Fiction.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 8 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
 Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
 Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
 Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
 Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
 Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
 Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
 Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
 Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
 Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
 Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
 Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port., $1.50.
 Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING
 THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.
 WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF
FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
 TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
 1 " The Church Robbing the People.
 2 " Thanksgiving.
 3 " Sabbath Laws.
 4 " Children and the Church.
 5 " Woman and the Church.
 6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.
 7 " Studies in Natural History.
 8 " The Bible and Science.
 9 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.
 10 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
 11 " The Atonement Scheme.
 12 " The Lord and His Works.
 13 " Prayer.
 14 " The Creeds.
 15 " Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
 3 " Missionaries.
 4 " The Lord's Instruments.
 5 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
 6 " The Church and Slavery.
 7 " Priests and Politics.
 8 " Ireland and the Church.
 9 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
 10 " The Uses of the Cross.
 11 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
 12 " Persecutions of the Church.
 13 " Some Allegories.
 14 " Heaven.
 15 " Hell.
 16 " Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

POPE'S AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
 Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
 Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By
 G. W. FOOTB.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
 Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherton, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Litre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Jean Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
 Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING
 A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scriptural Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
 Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE
 Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
 Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
 THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake. 5
 3 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood. 25
 4 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller. 10
 5 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison. 15
 6 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
 7 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin. 10
 8 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin. 50
 9 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait. 25
 10 Essays on Miracles. David Hume. 10
 11 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 12 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 13 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 14 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh. 10
 15 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake. 5
 16 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake. 5
 17 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts. 5
 18 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts. 5
 19 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts. 5
 20 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts. 5
 21 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
 22 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts. 5
 23 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
 24 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake. 5
 25 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts. 5
 26 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 27 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 28 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H. 10
 29 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts. 10
 30 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts. 5
 31 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake. 10
 32 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen." 5
 2 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 3 20 Questions Without Answers. 5
 4 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin. 10
 5 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian. 10
 6 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake. 5
 7 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
 8 A Few Words about the Devil. 5
 9 New Life of Jacob. 5
 10 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake. 10
 11 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake. 10
 12 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H. 10
 13 Lucicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
 14 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 15 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh. 5
 16 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh. 5
 17 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 18 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
 19 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz. 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 80 days. Is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.
 It has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lantern Pinion, 240 beats to minute; No key required to wind and set; weight 4 oz.; exactly like cut. Postpaid for $1.50, 3 for $4.00, 12 for $15.00. by express. Mailing paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CHARM. AGENTS & Storekeepers send for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.
 ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO.,
 65 CORTLAND ST., NEW YORK CITY.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
 THE TRUTH SEEKER
 ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and The Truth Seeker one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
 THE TRUTH SEEKER
 ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and Truth Seeker, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL
 Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	{ Oxidized, 10 ounces per doz., }	each $2.50
" "	{ Oxidized, 14 ounces per doz., }	" 3.00
" "	{ Oxidized, gilt bowl, 10 ounces per doz., }	" 3.00
" "	{ Oxidized, sectional gilt, 10 ounces per doz., }	" 3.50
Orange "	{ Oxidized, plain bowl, " }	2.75
Sugar "	{ " gilt " "	3.25
" "	{ " satin " "	3.00
" "	{ " gilt " "	3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description. Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Ba ges, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer.

(If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfect "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for pricelists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only.

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Power, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 32 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.
 Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

MORE OF THE TENDER MERCY OF JERRY'S JOSS.

Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will cause an alarm of war to be heard in Babah of the Ammonites; and it shall be a desolate heap, and her daughters shall be burned with fire: then shall Israel be heir unto them that were his heirs, saith the Lord.—Jere. xlix, 2.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.
Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OFFER SUNDAYS

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.
WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.
By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price 15 cents

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, 10 cents.

EAGLE BRAND.

THE BEST

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO.
Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.
13718

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price 25 cents.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, 30 cents.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By JOHN R. KELSO, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

News of the Week.

AN Oregon man is suspected of insanity merely because of his "incoherent talk on religion and love."

A YOUNG soldier in California has deserted from the United States army to join the Salvation Army.

REV. FRANCIS CLARK, founder of the Christian Endeavor Society, announces that it now has 1,625,000 members.

THE railroads have decided to run occasional excursion trains to the World's Fair at one fare for the round trip. The tickets will be good ten days.

DURING the reception of the Colombian minister the pope said that America would soon have a patron saint, as Columbus would be beatified shortly.

AT Paterson, N. J., on the 9th, hoodlums entered the B'nai Israel synagog and destroyed property and pummeled the Hebrews, breaking the leg of one of them.

THEOSOPHISTS having claimed Thomas Edison as one of their number, that inventor was asked: "Are you a convert to Theosophy?" "No," said Mr. Edison, "I don't know what it is."

MATRON MORAN of the county almshouse at Snake Hill, N. J., has been formally charged with maltreating Protestant inmates, while using those of her own Catholic faith with every possible consideration.

CITY REGISTER WHITMORE of Boston has notified the Israelite rabbis of that city that by a new state law they are given the same powers in regard to celebrating marriages, if duly licensed to act by a congregation of their faith in that state, that ministers of the gospel have long had.

THE World's Fair still fails to draw many visitors from a distance. The attendance is almost wholly from the neighborhood. The rest of the United States contributes but few visitors, and Europe scarcely any. Unless the railroads aid in increasing the attendance by giving greatly reduced rates, the Fair may fall into financial disaster.

PROF. JOHN CAMPBELL, of the Montreal Presbyterian College, will be tried for heresy. The chairman of the committee on his case says: "He was an honored member of the church, beloved by all; but he had declared his disbelief in the inerrancy of the old scriptures, not of the copies of the scripture, but of the inspired and original text itself."

THE seizure of an Aztec god at Xohil-tepec in Mexico by the Catholic archbishop has stirred up the god's Indian devotees, who threaten to go on the war-path in his behalf. The seizure was illegal, as under the constitution of Mexico all religions are tolerated there, so that the Indians are as free to worship their god as the Catholics are to worship theirs.

A QUESTION has been presented to the Missouri department of education that will create much discussion. School Commissioner Kennedy of Phelps county wrote to Superintendent Wolfe: "Has an institute board the right to refuse to open an institute each morning with prayer and singing? Are their powers arbitrary?" The superintendent replied: "In my opinion this is a matter that should be left to the will of the institute."

THE Christian Endeavorers held a great convention at Montreal, Can., beginning on the 8th. Rev. S. Karmarkar, a delegate from Bombay, India, set forth that Catholicism is but revamped Hindooism. He said: "There is a remarkable correspondence between Romish worship and Hindoo worship. Romanism is but a new label on the old bottles of paganism containing the deadly poison of idolatry." A French-Canadian newspaper, La Presse, came out in the evening with an article which declares that Mr. Karmarkar's speech was a deliberate insult to the French people, and that they regard it as such. Then, one delegate, in open-air preaching in a crowded part of the city, declared that the so-called Virgin Mary was an abandoned woman. Crowds of Catholics took to assembling about the Endeavorers' tent waiting an opportunity to do harm. Protestants accordingly collected to protect them. In the latter crowd were a thousand militiamen in plain clothes. The police reserves had to be called out. Endeavorers were stoned when isolated in unfrequented parts of the city. A riot was finally averted. These are the titles of the tracts Catholics passed around to such of the Endeavorers as would receive them: "What Do Catholics Believe?" "Too Good To Be True," a tract whose opening sentence read, "There is a large class of Protestants who can't believe our religion because it appears to them too good to be true;" "Popery and the Apostles, or the Biter Bit," and "Purgatory."

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 30. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, July 29, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

SOME PROBLEMS IN DEVELOPMENT.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

By WATSON HESTON.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

New Publications.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1892, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Faine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Free-thought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits
Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for
 - His Processes Are Egregiously Slow.
 - They Are Egregiously Wasteful.
 - They Often Serve No Use.
 - They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

- | | |
|--|---|
| The Universal Aspect. | Elimination of Waste Substances, |
| The Earth. | In General. |
| The Chemical Aspect. | By the Lungs. |
| The Sun. | By the Skin. |
| Genesis—The Creation. | By the Kidneys. |
| Genesis—The Garden of Eden. | Digestion and Nutrition. |
| The Deluge. | The Elementary Substances. |
| The Scriptural God—The Creation. | Alcohol and Its Effects on the System. |
| The Creation of God—Abraham. | The Soul—What Is It? |
| Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God. | The Mind. |
| Samuel the Kingmaker. | Sin and Salvation. |
| God Save the King. | The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten. |
| Jehovah Takes a Rest. | Rational Review. |
| The End of National Life. | Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations. |
| The Christian Era. | The Planetary Gods. |
| Organic Life—Vegetable. | Every Man His Own God. |
| Organic Life—Animal. | Tables (Gateways to Knowledge. |
| | (Morals; Whence They Spring. |
| | The Non Credo. |
| | Rules for Human Conduct. |
| | ILLUSTRATIONS. |
| | Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind. |
| | Map of Theological Retrogression. |
| | Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden. |

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF
ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and
the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

Pen Pictures of the World's Fair.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

A Full Description of the Fair, Invaluable as a Guide-Book and still more Invaluable to those who cannot attend. It tells WHAT TO SEE and WHERE TO SEE IT; gives rates of admission to the various attractions of the Fair and cost of living in Chicago, with other useful information to the visitor.

It is, besides being a complete Guide-Book, the best description of the Fair yet given—poetic, beautiful, accurate. It describes the inauguration ceremonies, gives the director-general's address, the efforts to close the Fair Sundays and the triumph of the Sunday-openers; describes the various buildings and what they contain, and is, all in all, the very best picture of the Fair that can be painted with a pen.

ILLUSTRATED.

A MAP OF JACKSON PARK, enabling the visitor to make his way around, and the stay-at-home to see where he went.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE FAIR, enabling one to comprehend at a glance the magnitude of the Exposition, the greatest ever known to the present time.

PICTURES OF ALL THE PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS:

- | | | |
|--------------------------|----------------------------|--------------------------|
| Woman's Building. | Art Palace. | Fisheries Building. |
| Administration Building. | Manufactures and Liberal | Agricultural Building. |
| Electrical Building. | Arts Building. | Transportation Building. |
| Machinery Hall. | Mines and Mining Building. | Horticultural Building. |
| | Forestry Building. | |

A visitor to the Fair says of this book—reading it in THE TRUTH SEEKER—that it is charming and to one who has seen the Fair vastly entertaining.

Single copy, 25 cents. Five copies for $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EVERY Woman Ought to Read It. Every LIBERAL Woman and Man Will Want It.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE.

By Matilda Joslyn Gage.

This is Mrs. Gage's latest and crowning work. It is THE book to show how the church has enslaved woman and kept and keeps her in an inferior position. A glance at its contents will show this:

The first chapter—the Matriarchate—shows that under the old civilizations woman had great freedom, but that the tendency of Christianity from the first was to restrict her liberty. In this chapter Mrs. Gage claims that to the Matriarchate—or Mother-rule—the world is indebted for its first conception of inherent rights.

Chapter II deals with the theological dogmas of original sin and celibacy. Woman, by the church, was not regarded as a human being; marriage was looked upon as vile; wives were sold as slaves; women driven to suicide; the influence of the church was unfavorable to virtue. The celibacy of the clergy produced degrading sensuality, and woman was the victim of these brutes.

Chapter III is on The Canon Law, showing how the church controlled woman by making the legitimacy of marriage depend upon its own control of the ceremony. Ancient civilization gave place to Christian barbarism, the clergy became a distinct body—at once a "holy" and an unholy caste. Learning was prohibited to women, husbands prohibited from leaving them more than one-third of their property; daughters could be disinherited, sons could not. The Reformation effected no change.

Chapter IV—Marquette—is on Feudalism and its degradation of women, the rights of "lords spiritual," the immorality of the heads of the church, baptism of nude women in the early Christian church. It also deals with some of the later-day abuses of females, like our Northwestern pineries, the English debaucheries, governmental crime-makers, etc.

Chapter V—Witchcraft. In the days of this phase of religious insanity Mrs. Gage shows how the possession of even a little learning was sufficient cause to suspect a woman of witchcraft, that to keep a pet was dangerous, so rapid were the clergy not to suffer a witch to live. This persecution for witchcraft was a continuance of the church's policy for obtaining universal dominion over mankind. Women physicians of the Middle Ages were persecuted, and the "Pilgrim Fathers" continued it in America. The first synod convened in America was to try a woman for heresy, and others were stripped and whipped for not agreeing with the clergy.

The chapter on "Wives" shows how the disruption of the Roman empire was unfavorable to the personal and proprietary rights of woman—at the sale of daughters was practiced in England seven hundred years after it was Christianized—that the practice of buying wives was regulated by law—that women were not permitted to read the Bible—that they were not admitted as witnesses—that civil marriage was opposed by the church.

In Chapter VII is shown how polygamy was sustained by the Christian church, that the first synod of the Reformation convened to sanction this institution, that Luther and the other "principal reformers" favored it, as well as the American Board of Foreign Missions. The Mormon theocracy is shown to be similar to that of other Christian sects.

In the last three chapters Mrs. Gage treats of the opposition of the church to the amelioration of woman's sufferings as interference with her "curse," of woman's degradation by the church to laborer unfit for slaves, of woman's "inferiority," as taught by the church to-day, and of how little value Christianity has been and is to civilization.

The work is a burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It is also extremely valuable as history. No woman, it seems to us, can read it and remain a supporter of the religious institution which has crushed her individuality, her mentality, and degraded her person. To the woman's cause it opens an Age of Reason. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do.

In cloth, $2; in half-leather binding, $3.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Bod; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification: The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The

Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 30. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, July 29, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - JULY 29, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Christianity and Geography.

A few weeks ago we declared that the Christian church deserves no credit for the discovery of Columbus. On the contrary, we said, that institution should be blamed, for she taught throughout her course up to his day that the earth was not a globe and a voyage like his could not be made. We gave the scriptural texts on which the church based its misdoctrin on the earth's shape, and narrated the course of that doctrin up to the time of Cosmas Indicopleustes. Here we were forced by a press of other matter to interrupt our relation. But we will now resume it, and continue it up to the struggle made by ecclesiastics to overwhelm Columbus and prevent his voyage.

Cosmas Indicopleustes had, we said, erected upon Bible texts a conception of the universe as a sort of house, with heaven as its upper story and the earth as its ground floor. This conception will upon thinking a moment be found pretty thoroughly different from the modern teaching of science on the concern. Nevertheless, clergymen assert the teaching on morals and all other subjects of the books whence it is drawn—viz. the scriptures and the church fathers—to be of divine preciousness, so they should, it seems to us, bring forth these geographical doctriens also to their hearers, with equal commendation and insistence. Leaving them, however, to such devices as their parsonic minds suggest, we will proceed with our history by chronicling that this conception of the universe as a house naturally led to adjunct notions of things like those which accompany an ordinary human's house.

As in a house we pass from the upper to the lower and from the lower to the upper stories, so in the universe-house various beings, sometimes human and sometimes superhuman, were imagined to do likewise. One such event is that of the wicked who sought to build a tower of Babel by which to reach heaven (Gen. xi, 1-9). This undertaking—which can but compel the most boastful modern to confess his generation surpassed in enterprise by the ancients, even though the World's Fair be taken into consideration—this more than American undertaking, we say, all will remember was quashed by the owner of the house, who descending to the basement floor quickly threw a wet blanket upon the tower-builders by his notable "confusion of tongues." Passages betwixt the upper and lower stories of the great world-house took place, according to legends, during thousands of years. These legends are in part embodied in the Bible, and in part contained outside of it in saints' lives, etc. There is no end to the ascensions to heaven and descents from it, "translations," "assumptions," and "annunciations." Mortals were caught up into heaven and then returned to this sad vale. Angels made wingy trips between heaven and earth. Thunderbolts were hurled down from it. Mighty winds issued from the corners, like drafts from open doors. Voices called down from the upper floor to men on the lower. A sort of trapdoor in the upper floor was sometimes opened to reveal the blessedness of the good. Signs and wonders were hung on to the roof of the lower story to warn the bad. As the heathen gods, we read in Greek and Roman mythology, came down to the lower compartment on every imaginable errand, so Jehovah descended to Eden in the cool of the day, and honored that humble portion of his edifice with a short walk. Then, the class of saints must have given such elevator-boys as served in those days, if indeed anything like our modern apparatuses was used, considerable trouble. They were perpetually descending and ascending. St. Mark coming down into the market-place of Venice, a party of saints frightening back Attila, etc., are specimens of an innumerable class of incidents.

The most unpleasant feature about the plan of this great house of God, and one which not we perhaps, but Christians certainly, must approach with fear and trembling, is that to which we now come. All right that this house has a second and first story, but a cellar, there's the rub. The cellar is hell, the abode of Satan. This carrying out of the conception was natural. And just as there were ascents to and descents from heaven, so there were ascents from and descents to hell. Hell being so near, intermingling of its sooty and in every way plebeian and undesirable residents with ourselves was frequent to an almost intolerable degree. This intercourse furnishes the matter for a huge portion of the medieval literature. Dante, the great Catholic poet, essayed to fix the location of hell with the utmost possible exactness. We find that some forms of this notion as to the whereabouts of hell were barriers to geographical investigation. "Many a bold navigator, who was quite ready to brave pirates and tempests, trembled at the thought of tumbling with his ship into one of the openings into hell which a wide-spread belief placed in the Atlantic at some unknown distance from Europe. This terror of the sailors was one of the main obstacles in the great voyage of Columbus. In an Anglo-Saxon tract, giving science the form of a dialog, occur the following question and answer: 'Why is the sun so red in the evening?' 'Because he looketh down upon hell.'"

One ground of the church's doctrin on the shape of the earth was, we have said, several passages of scripture alluding to its form. There was also another ground, and this was the passages in the same book which were held to disprove the existence of antipodes, human beings on the earth's opposite side. Naturally those who supposed it round imagined it inhabited on the other side, so this notion formed part of the doctrin of its sphericity. But the churchmen declared that no antipodes could exist. St. Augustine advances the weighty reason that "scripture speaks of no such descendants of Adam." Moreover, he urges, God would not allow men to live there, because from that locality they could not see Christ at his second coming descending through the air. Besides this consideration that the antipodean notion would accuse

God of unfitness as stage manager for the greatest show on earth—the preparations for which, however, are consuming such time that some of the audience are not to be blamed for falling to a stamp-stamping of the feet—besides this, St. Augustine proffers as yet more conclusiv this argument: the apostles were commanded to go into all the world, and to preach the gospel to every creature; they did not go to any such part as the antipodes, they did not preach to any creatures there; therefore the antipodes do not exist. The declaration that the apostles did go to the ends of the earth is found, he says, in Ps. xix, 4, and in Paul's epistle to the Romans, and so the rash supporters of the scientific doctrin "giv the lie direct to King David and to St. Paul, and therefore to the Holy Ghost." The fate of all guilty of this piece of impertinence to the Holy Ghost is eternal damnation. So, at least, determined all the church fathers except St. Basil and St. Ambrose, and as the views of these ancient individuals are thought by Christians to be of great consequence in other matters, no doubt they will be gravely regarded in this. In the sixth century Procopius graces the page of ecclesiastical science with this declaration: that there are no men on the other side of the earth, for if there were Christ must have come to save them, and that would have necessitated, as preliminaries to the gallant rescue, a duplicate Eden, Adam, serpent, and deluge. Our old friend Cosmas Indicopleustes proves the antipodes impossible by a passage from St. Luke. St. Isidore of Seville, who flourishes at the end of the second century, is able to advance our knowledge on the matter beyond others, for he not only discovers that no men exist on the other side of the earth, but informs us that none ought to. Under the force of these authorities the scientific inquirers relinquish their conjecture that the earth is round. The theological students and so on who deem these authorities such prodigies of wisdom that they spend years in poring over them, must, we suppose, consider the inquirers quite right in this relinquishment. The unscriptural doctrin disappears for two hundred years. Then Virgil, bishop of Salzburg, is hardy enough to revive it. St. Boniface declares this teaching to amount to nothing less than an assertion that there are men beyond the reach of salvation. He calls on Pope Zachary to suppress it. The pope, speaking as the infallible representative of Christ, makes a response of decided tone. He cites from the books of Job and the Wisdom of Solomon texts against the doctrin of the antipodes. He declares it "perverse, iniquitous, and against Virgil's own soul," and indicates a purpose of driving the offender from his bishopric. Whether Christ, through his vicar, deposed this teller of the truth about the world's shape, we do not know. But the heresy is silenced, and the orthodox notion becomes more popular than ever. It is regarded as essential to salvation. The next famous ones of that grave body, the theologians, to tell us that there are no Chinamen, are Vincent de Beauvois and Nicolas d'Oresme.

Occasionally we find force employed against disputers of the conclusions of the theologians, as, we know from the assurances of present-day Christians, it should be now. Of course, those conclusions on geography were wrong, but the present-day conclusions on other matters are right, so these form quite another case and it is right to use force as to these. This employment of force took the form, in the case of Peter of Abano, of imprisonment and condemnation to execution by the Inquisition. This sentence he escaped by the occurrence of a natural death. He was a famous physician, and had added to his antipodean heresy others that equally flew in the face of scripture to the indecent discomposure of that physiognomy. For suggesting this doctrine, Cecco d'Ascoli, a noted astronomer, was driven from his professorship at Bologna and burnt alive at Florence. The great painter, Orcagna, in one of his works in the Campo Santo at Pisa represented Cecco in the flames of hell. The picture may still be viewed, a warning to pilgrims of their doom if they cast not aside the belief, so prevalent lately that it will be difficult for them to shake it off, that there are men across the oceans.

Thus the church went on teaching and doing. In 1483 Pierre d'Ailly, one of the soundest-headed men of the age, in his creditable scientific essays approached the question in so clear and sensible a tone that the reader expects the correct conclusion; but no, there stands the argument of St. Augustine, there stand the biblical texts, D'Ailly is overawed, and he gives to the world virtually nothing. In the age of Columbus ecclesiastics still insisted on the scriptural conception of the earth's shape. And even after Columbus had succeeded and by his voyage greatly strengthened the scientific doctrine, the church by its supreme authority the pope continued to blunder. Pope Alexander VI. was appealed to as umpire upon the conflicting claims of Portugal and Spain to the countries that they had discovered. In 1493 he issued a bull in which he laid down on the earth's surface a line of demarkation between the possessions of the rivals. This line he drew from north to south a hundred leagues west of the Azore islands. All lands west of it he declared should belong to Spain, all east to Portugal. This, and another similar demarkation by Pope Julius II., were hailed as beneficent exercises of divine wisdom. But soon difficulties arose that lowered the prestige of these decisions, and in fact caused them to be laid aside and neglected altogether. For the line had been run upon the supposition of a flat earth that could not be sailed around, but the Portuguese claimed Brazil and showed that they could reach it by sailing to the east of the line, providing they sailed long enough. The lines laid down by Alexander and Julius may to-day be seen on the maps of that period, items in the long catalog of the ludicrous errors of "inerrancy."

Still the theologians upheld their doctrine in current acceptance and refused to allow its displacement. Gregory Reysch put forth his great cyclopedia, the Margarita Philosophica, in edition after edition, and it everywhere presented the orthodox declarations.

In 1519 science dealt the enemy next to its last blow. Magellan sailed completely round the earth. Against the churchly protests, says Ingersoll, "that brave man set sail. The church told him: 'The earth is flat, my friend; don't go, you may fall off the edge.' Magellan said: 'I have seen the shadow of the earth upon the moon, and I have more confidence in the shadow than I have in the church.' The ship went round. The earth was circumnavigated. Science passed its hand above it and beneath it, and where was the old heaven and where was the hell? Vanished forever!"

Yet it was not on the moment of Magellan's circumnavigation that the old doctrine was "vanished forever." It was two hundred years before pious writers ceased urging it. At the end of that period French astronomers made their measurements of degrees in equatorial and polar regions, and added to their proofs that of the lengthened pendulum. Only when to the general deductions of science there had been added these deft and beautifully exact measurements, and when explorer after explorer had brought home accounts of the antipodes, did the church cease to proclaim the doctrine she had obtained from scripture, and allow free speech to the theory that pagan investigators had started to raise into eminence before overwhelmed by Christianity.

Says Ex-President White of Cornell University, as to the relation of the church to geography: "The dogmas developed in the strict adherence to scripture, and the conceptions held in the church during many centuries, 'always, everywhere, and by all,' were, on the whole, steadily hostile to truth."

An account of the church's opposition to Columbus we shall have the pleasure of laying before our readers next week.

Only Freethinkers Can Properly Oppose Sectists.

A correspondent desires us to notice the American Protectiv Association. This is an anti-Catholic society, patterned after the old Know-nothing organization. It is popularly known as the A. P. A., and its tenets and practices are dubbed A. P. Aism. It has been in existence about four years, and in that time, it is said, has succeeded in defeating Catholic candidates in the municipal elections in several Western cities. The practice has been to affiliate with the Republicans, and various so-called Republican victories in heretofore Democratic strongholds have been due to the introduction of a sectarian element into the contest by the American Protectiv Association. The society is found in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska. In Toledo, Columbus, and Cincinnati the society has made its presence manifestly felt in local elections and in other ways. Saginaw, Mich., is said to be an A. P. A. hotbed. In central Illinois, the southern half of Iowa, the northern half of Missouri, and the eastern half of Kansas and Nebraska the society is also strong. There are avowed A. P. A. journals published in St. Louis, Minneapolis, and Omaha, and two in Michigan, and several other publications sympathize with the purposes of the society. Unlike Know-nothingism, the association is principally made up of foreigners, not of native Americans. An Episcopal clergyman of Omaha describes the Nebraska branch as being composed chiefly of Englishmen, Canadians, Orangemen, Scandinavians, and Germans. Scandinavians and Orangemen are said to form the bulk of the society in other states.

The numerical strength of the A. P. A. is variously estimated. Ex-Congressman Tarnsey is quoted as saying that in Saginaw there is not a merchant who has not felt the effects of the boycott which has been conducted in that town during the past year by the A. P. A. The boycotting naturally is not all on one side, as Catholics do not trade with known members of the society.

A Baptist minister in Cincinnati, who preaches to a crowded church and denounces Roman Catholicism, is quoted as boasting that there are sixty thousand A. P. A.'s in Chicago, ten thousand in Cincinnati, and at least half as many in Columbus. All Catholics who ran for office in Columbus last November were defeated by from four to five thousand votes. The Catholic Columbian, of Columbus, says: "Even justice is to be throttled to serve the base ends of this Association. The revelations in the Boone case, tried in the court of common pleas this county, were startling, but to many the beginning of the end of the only logical outcome of the existing state of affairs. The fact was casually brought out in the course of the trial that the defendant's counsel was a Roman Catholic, and though seven of the jury stood for acquittal and four for assault and battery, the verdict reached was manslaughter. The significance of the verdict is apparent when the allegation was made that the twelfth juror, who held out for manslaughter, is a member of the A. P. A., and, as it is technically phrased, would have 'hung' the jury had not the other members agreed with him."

The creed of this organization declares it unwise and unsafe to appoint, or elect, to civil, political, or military office in this country, men who owe supreme allegiance to any foreign king, potentate, or ecclesiastical power, and who are sworn to obey such power. The members in their ritual declare that they will not countenance the nomination in any caucus or convention of a Roman Catholic for any office in the gift of the American people, and will not vote for or counsel others to vote for any Roman Catholic, but will endeavor at all times to place the political positions of this government in the hands of the Protestants.

We do not like the American Protectiv Association very well. It is Protestant in composition, and Protestants are very nearly as bad as Catholics. They persecuted, in proportion to the length of the time in which they had control of the European states, just as ferociously and numerous. We cannot extend much favor to one religion struggling jealously to oust a rival one. The supplanting of all religions by this-worldliness is the only change that will be of high and lasting benefit.

Protestants can do but little service in bringing Catholics out of their ways of error. The propositions that they advance to Catholics for the latter to put in place of their former tenets are as absurd as the old ones, and the papalists only laugh at their ridiculousness. The genuine sense and solid truth of Freethought are the only things that can be presented to these devotees with successful and valuable results. We wish that these were being presented more expeditiously and thoroughly than they are.

Then, these Protestants are liars. They lie about the Catholics the same as they do about Infidels. It is the nature of a Protestant to lie in his religious operations. The organs of this American Protectiv Association publish palpably bogus Catholic documents. They recently published what purported to be a secret bull or encyclical of Leo XIII., in which the pope relieved Catholics from their allegiance to the United States government and ordered them to begin the extermination of all heretics—that is, Protestants—in September. The True American gravely declared that the copy of the encyclical which it published had been dropped from the pocket of a priest when one of its staff was near at hand. The document is plainly spurious. Catholics may want to exterminate heretics, but they never publish their desire to do it in such a public manner in a country and age like this.

The only persons to convert or oppose Catholics are Freethinkers. The true principles to urge against them are those of Liberalism and science. If it were not for the rise of these, the world would now be a pandemonium and slaughter house of warring Protestants and Catholics as it was three and four hundred years ago. Brawling sects only injure and endanger the social structure. The men here and there throughout the land who possess good sense, tolerance, and scientific knowledge, are the real American protectiv association.

The True Grounds of Right and Wrong.

We said a couple of weeks ago that the church has always obscured the natural causes of our sense of right and wrong. She has, we declared, set up in place of them supernatural causes thereof. This false representation of the church, we averred, has always been harmful. Let us now name the natural grounds of right and wrong which she supplanted. These are: the happiness and the unhappiness of mankind. Thus, whatever makes man happy is right, and whatever makes him unhappy is wrong. In the dawn of this era of reason, Freethinkers are to give each act a new examination by this rule, and see whether the act adds to or takes from man's happiness. In the one case they are to pronounce it right, in the other case they are to pronounce it wrong. They are not to regard the old dicta as to whether the act is right or wrong. For those old dicta are often erring. They are not conformed to the rule of the promotion or retardation of man's happiness. They were shaped in bygone ages in accordance with other rules, such as that of the command of a god, and that of custom and precedent, and so on. These rules are false. They pronounce wrong some acts that make for man's welfare, and pronounce right some that make against it. They must be disregarded in our construction of the new code of ethics for our children. In building this new code every Freethinker may find work to do. He may take a list of crimes, say that on the registers of a penitentiary, and running his eye down it ask in regard to each one, Did this injure or aid the happiness of the race? If he finds that it injured, very well. If he finds that it aided, he is to proclaim the act right and strive to change public opinion upon it. In all of this work of the testing of the rightfulness of actions, a Freethinker will get little help from his neighbors. When he asks one of them why a certain act is right, or wrong, the reply will be, "Because it is against God's will"—or, "is in obedience to God's will." If he asks another, the answer will be, "Because everybody around here has always said so"—or, "has always done so and so." If he asks another he will learn that the thing is right or wrong "Because it is." The emptiness of these replies will show him how ignorant the Christian church has left the people after a dominion of eighteen hundred years, and how great a work there is for him to do.

What Christianity Is.

Mr. and Mrs. David A. Easton, of Pittsfield, Mass., are the first people in this country who, as far as known, ever tried the faith cure on a horse. Mr. Easton was formerly a broker in New York with Easton, Nichols & Co., and was at one time a preacher. Of late he and Mrs. Easton have been much interested in Christian Science and the faith cure. A valuable horse belonging to Mr. Easton while in pasture at his farm on the Middle Lenox road seriously injured the fetlock of its right leg on a barbed wire fence. Dr. Brackin sewed up the wound and applied healing ointments. After this had been done Mrs. Easton said to the man who had charge of the horse: "Fanny doesn't need medicin. All that is necessary is to wash the foot in cold water and pray. She will come out all right." Accordingly, water was applied and Mrs. Easton began to pray. The horse's foot, however, grew worse. Now it is in such a condition that the animal is in a fair way to lose its life. Dr. Brackin, a local physician, says that he could cure the horse. There is considerable excitement over the matter in Pittsfield, and it is thought that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals should interfere. The bone of the horse's foot is exposed, and there is a festering sore. Mrs. Easton is now in Boston, where she is supposed to be still praying for the horse.

Faith cure is founded on one of the plainest of the declarations in the Bible. "Is any sick among you?" says James v, 14, 15, "let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up." If this plain declaration is false, all the rest of the Bible is false. If this can be twisted to mean something else, all the rest of the Bible can be twisted to mean something else.

Some do not understand why Freethinkers fight Christianity so zealously, because they do not reflect what that religion really is. Under the complete reign of Christianity all cases of illness were treated as this one is being treated now. This is what Christianity is—supernaturalism, treatment of everything by appeal for supernatural action. The only reason that all things are not thus treated now is the pervasion of society by the skeptical tone of the Freethinker and the scientist. Should these persons relax their efforts, all things would be treated thus again.

Englishmen have been described as "asses who talk about horses." These Pittsfield persons are asses who pray for horses.

The Preachers Maintain Their Monopoly of Sunday.

Last Saturday Director-general Davis of the World's Fair ordered that it be kept closed on the morrow. This was because the Sunday visitors are so few as to leave no profit when expenses have been paid, and because Sabbatarians are said to be boycotting the Fair on all days on account of the Sunday opening. Accordingly, the gates were tight shut all of last Sunday, the 23d. The grounds were empty. The action was taken in defiance of an injunction of Judge Stein, in the suit of Charles Clingman, stockholder. The authorities who ordered the closing will, it is declared, be arrested for contempt of court. The Secularists, Adventists, and Hebrews of Chicago have severally expressed a desire to aid in the prosecution of the closers.

Thus the Sabbatarians have won the victory over us. In the matter of legal decision we, after a sharp struggle, succeeded in beating them, but by bringing to bear upon the action various other weapons at their command they have won the day. These other weapons are the closure of the national and some state exhibits, the veiling of many individual displays, and the menace of boycott. Add to these the neglect to arrange railroad excursions to the Fair Sunday which arose from the continued uncertainty whether it would be open that day, and we have the explanation of the scantiness of attendance which has at last resulted in total closing. Of the dismal atmosphere which the bigots succeeded in throwing over the Sunday show, a correspondent of a New York paper writes:

"Sunday is not a Fair day. There are people enough, but the whole atmosphere is too much like an English Sabbath to make it enjoyable. It is depressing to see so many shrouded exhibits and closed doors—it gives one a lonely feeling. I made haste last Sunday from the grounds."

Even were there no total closing, we should have to confess that the bigots have succeeded in outraging us, in their having depleted the Sunday attendance that we wished to have. Other exhibitions, such as art museums, etc., against which they have not fought so violently, have a Sunday attendance double that of other days, so of course the World's Fair would have had a Sunday attendance double that of other days had they not combated it. Pecuniary greed in pulpit and religious tyranny in pew have deprived not fewer than millions of an opportunity of improving their heart and mind.

The Episcopal Church.

When ecclesiastical thieves fall out honest people get their dues of correct information about church matters. Rev. Henry A. Adams, formerly rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, New York city, and later of the Church of the Redeemer, of the same place, has joined the Roman Catholic church. In a letter which will be published he gives his reasons for his change of heart. He writes: "Without a parallel in history the parish system of the Protestant Episcopal church stands at this time the most stupendous and ridiculous monstrosity in Christendom. With a rector 'called' by a vestry made up of the rich men of the place—a rector intimidated, harassed, made by his very tenure impotent, the hired mouthpiece of this vestry of rich men, sometimes immoral, often ignorant, usually officious, always in the way—here he is to teach these rich masters of his what they already know and like. He is to conduct services as they direct. He is to tolerate and indorse any abomination which may have been (and usually is) established in the parish. He is to belie himself, his message, God's very work for peace's sake. And they are the 'successful' rectors (poor dumb slaves) who have been able to keep everybody happy, and questions and ideas of a disturbing nature in the dark. Again, in her relations to the poor, in her spirit of equivocating coquetry toward the sects, in her judicial system, in her no policy, in her utter lack of discipline, coherence, esprit du corps, in her vacillation, failure, pretensions, she crushes out of earnest men their faith in her as the divinely planned and ruled."

On the other hand, the Episcopal church is continually saying things equally uncomplimentary about the Catholic. We believe both speakers to be correct.

A Description of the World's Fair.—Illustrated.

We have printed Mr. Putnam's letters from Chicago in a pamphlet called "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair." These letters have been highly commended, and deservedly so, for the descriptions are veritable poems, and all the statements are as accurate as official information can make them. Those who go to the Fair will find the book exceedingly useful, for Mr. Putnam has laid it all out from beginning to end, and the book will save visitors' time. Those who read it will know what to see, and where the sights are. It contains as much information as is possible to crowd into a work of its limit. It is illustrated with a bird's-eye view of the Fair, giving visitors a general idea of the place, a map of the Park, enabling them to find their way around, and with pictures of the principal buildings of the Exposition. Those who do not go to the Fair will in this book see it in all its glory, and certainly will know more about the Exhibition than those who attend without this guide-book, trusting to memory. Those who go to Chicago will receive great benefit from it; those who do not, still greater. The price of the book is 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, has regular Freethought meetings—one every generation. Joseph Barker gave a course of lectures there about forty years ago, B. F. Underwood twenty years ago, and J. E. Remsburg last week. Judge Palmer, a brother of United States Senator Palmer, of Illinois, who presided at Mr. Remsburg's lectures, has attended all these meetings.

We desire to call the attention of readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the benefits of subscribing to the Truth Seeker Monthly Library. The yearly subscription is only $3, and subscribers to the Library receive a paper-bound copy of each book issued in it; or, if they desire the books in cloth binding, subscribers can remit the difference in price between paper and cloth binding, and get the books in the latter shape. So far this year subscribers to the Library have received "Paine Vindicated," by Colonel Ingersoll, price 15 cents; the "Creation of God," by Dr. Hartmann, price 50 cents; the "Resurrection of Jesus," by Don Allen, price 40 cents; "Crimes of Preachers," price 25 cents; the "Handbook of Freethought," by W. S. Bell, price 50 cents; "Religion a Curse," by S. P. Putnam, price 25 cents; "Design Argument Fallacies," price 15 cents; "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," making two dollars and forty-five cents' worth in five months. J. E. Remsburg's "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" will be ready next week, and other books besides are in preparation. One of these, we may mention, is "Progress and Pleasure," by A. M. Lorentz, LL.B., of which further notice will shortly be made. Send $3 and receive at once the books already published, and, as they appear, those which will be published between now and January, '94.

Minor Mentions.

"The power of religion" is its social organism, but its weakness is its war with truth.

If God were a female there are a whole lot of married men who would not dare to be caught in the attitude of prayer.

It is easy for a preacher to lie about an Infidel's death-bed, because he is dead.

David may have been "a man after God's own heart," but he was nevertheless a very dangerous man to society, and it was absolutely unsafe in those days to go away and leave a handsome wife at home alone even in the daytime.

It is unkindness amounting to ridicule for Infidels to inquire how Moses could write an account of his eminently select private burial so long after it took place.

If our dear savior were to travel through Tennessee and steal corn on Sunday he would be promptly arrested and thrown into jail; not for petit larceny, but for the crime of Sabbath-breaking.

We do not care to be "led by the side of the still waters" like a jackass with a string around his neck, nor to "lie down in the green pastures" and sleep like a fat wether. There is always danger that the party who "leadeth" and "maketh" is getting us ready for the block.

As soon as religion can conform itself to science, so as not to boycott and hinder progress, the world will have a "big boom," and a lot of the people who have "gone before" will want to come back.

How the people of the world are advancing; in our savior's time it was only the most intelligent and learned who could grasp his beautiful doctrines of total depravity, hell, infant damnation, and the dividing of families for his sake. Now these are doctrines at the bottom of the tub, and only the most ignorant can get down low enough to accept them as true.

The Bible gives many illustrious examples of how to deceive others, but that of Jacob receiving Esau's blessing from Isaac is one of the slickest impositions which God ever thought of.

Communications.

Why I Do Not Like the God and Religion of My Parents.

It is true my father and mother had a god they worshiped; but he was a Jewish god, manufactured by heathens thousands of years ago, and clothed by John Wesley & Co. in second-hand clothing.

I did not fancy their god. He was, according to all accounts given of him, too cruel and vindictive. He would get angry at the work of his own hands and knock it all out. He would curse nations of people and order their destruction—men, women, and children—and permit his wrath to extend to the dumb brutes. And although he made all people, yet he had a favorite people. He was partial toward his children, yet was not possessed of sufficient intelligence to know one of his favorites unless they were circumcised. And he was so blind that he could not walk in the camp of Israel after night for fear "he might step therein."

He made the figtree to bear fruit in season, then damned it for not bearing fruit out of season.

He was so weak that he wrestled all night with a mortal without being enabled to overcome him, and possessed not power and skill sufficient to overcome a people possessed of chariots of iron.

The United States, with her fleet of ironclads, is safe; she can defy him.

He was mean enough to hand over his faithful servant Job to the devil to be persecuted and tormented, and his children to be destroyed, without fault or sin. And while pretending to be a kind father and a merciful God, he made a hell from which the smoke of torment should ascend forever.

He made and constituted the organs of reason, then damned one to this hell of torment forever for using his reason. He so organized the mind of man that it could not believe a lie or an impossibility, then damned him to this hell of torment for the want of faith.

He was so cruel that, although one of his children should possess ninety and nine virtues, if he lacked the hundredth, it availed him naught; he must be sent to this hell of torment forever.

He would kill and destroy thousands of innocent people for the sins of their ruler, when he himself had appointed that ruler.

He would make that a sin which could not possibly be a sin. He made man subject to a nature, then made it the duty of his life to crucify that nature.

He claimed the meanest cutthroat, robber, and murderer that ever disgraced a throne as one after his own heart.

He was such a botch that he was compelled to become a bastard mortal, and live thirty years in obscurity and toil, and die an ignominious death upon the cross, to patch up his own ill-begotten work.

Then he did it in such a manner that when nearly two thousand years have passed no two people believe it alike, and four hundred million of his creatures never heard of him—and they are blessed if they never do. He was so cruel that he always required the blood of innocence to appease his wrath.

He always visited his punishments upon the people in such a manner that the innocent suffered for the acts of the guilty. He suffered falsehood and corruption to dwell in high places, while the truthful dwelt in poverty and rags. For these and many other reasons I did not fancy the God of my parents.

I did not fancy the religion of my parents, because it required too much valuable time in preaching, singing, shouting, praying, groaning, and the exercise of too much hypocrisy, deceit, fraud, and sycophancy.

It was the worship of a crucified God, and those raised and taught such worship, when they became zealous, were all the time wanting to crucify some one else. They possessed no leniency toward anyone that differed with them. They were taught to believe that God would damn all who differed with them, and as God would damn them hereafter they were but assisting God and doing their Christian duty in anticipating God in his work.

I did not fancy the religion of my parents, because common sense taught me that the whole thing was a lie and a fraud from the beginning, and a curse to the human family; that religion was not necessary to man's happiness; that it was all superstition and a waste of one's valuable time to fool with it.

I could not see that it made people any better. I found about one thousand of God's ministers of his holy gospel in the different penitentiaries of the Union for crimes of various kinds, yet nary infidel.

Of the thousands hanged for crime, I found all confessed upon the gallows to having been raised by pious parents. I could find no infidels upon the gallows and none in the penitentiaries. So I could not see that religion made people any better.

And when I read in God's holy word that the bones of the saints and his holy prophets, who had followed and worshiped him all their days, should, by his orders, be cast upon the ground to remain as dung forever, I could see but little reward for serving such a God. See Jere. viii, 1, 2.

I learn from ancient history that the world was highly civilized when pagan Christianity appeared as Communism and destroyed the civilization of all people where it could—destroyed all libraries, all temples, fine buildings, and works of art, and drove man back to barbarism. Anyone pretending to know otherwise than was taught by the priest must die. There were no courts but ecclesiastic. The rule of the priest was supreme.

The people, instead of dressing in fine linen and dwelling in good houses, were compelled to dress in rags, and dwell in mud hovels, without ventilation, until one pest after another destroyed millions who suffered for the want of sanitary comforts.

And when poor humanity could stand it no longer and sought for freedom, then the persecutions of the church commenced and within a few short years fully fifty millions of people were killed, destroyed, or banished, and their estates confiscated to the church. This religion preached the dirty lie that "woman brought sin in the world, and degraded, persecuted, and enslaved her in consequence until her offspring became degenerate, enfeebled in mind and body, until the superstition taught the people became almost their nature. And now millions of poor deluded, gulled, and superstitious people are traveling through life with this great load heaped upon them, until they are actually afraid to think. They suffer the priest to do their thinking, and they pass through their miserable lives trembling with fear of dropping into a burning hell. Many thousands go deranged. Our asylums are filled with these poor deluded, religious lunatics. Could humanity have had a greater curse heaped upon it?"

I prefer no religion to this. But to be fashionable and say I had a religion, I determined that it should be my duty to make my neighbor happy; and if I got him happy, and was not so myself, then I determined to do penance by washing and putting on clean garments.

I do not fancy the Christian religion, because it bears upon its face neither reason nor common sense, but on the contrary, every evidence of fraud, ignorance, and superstition, and portrays God as malicious, cruel, and vindictive, visiting the sins of the parents upon the children to the third and fourth generation, and portrays God as one dealing in mysterious hocuspocus and legerdemain tricks only understood and to be explained by the priests, self-constituted vicegerents of his will upon earth; and while holding man accountable in faith to things he knows to be false, punishes him as a free agent because he could not possess faith in a thing his every faculty of reason and common sense taught him to be a fraud.

I do not fancy the Christian religion because it comes to us through the hands of the priests, who, experience has taught us to our sorrow, were all cunning knaves, ever ready to lie, cheat, and defraud in the interest of their supposed God.

I do not like the Christian religion, because it belies God, and destroys his attributes of goodness and purity, and portrays him as a monster of evil and cruelty.

But is there a God? If so, where is he? And if one God, may there not be millions of them? and yet so far apart that they are unacquainted with each other's existence.

There is certainly no end to space, and as space has existed always, and time has had plenty of time to make almost anything, if a God rules the sun and system of worlds revolving around it, and as many of these worlds are much larger than this, it is reasonable to suppose that the same causes that peopled this world have also peopled the others, and perhaps with much finer material. If a God rules all these worlds, he did not possess time to fool with the fall and redemption of man in this.

If a God, suppose he should conclude to travel through space some billion miles beyond his system of worlds, might he not find other gods and other worlds much larger than his own? And I think it likely that his majesty has been off upon such a journey for some thousands of years or more. At least, with all the tricks of the theologians, they are unable to locate him. When he returns I hope he will give us an account of his journey.

I do not want it given to the priests nor to his chosen people, but to us plebeians. I am tired of receiving his messages second-hand. Well, it is hard to persuade me that God ever gave any message to man outside of a natural law. And as like causes always produce like effects, I am not positively convinced that there is any God.

The elements of nature—as matter, and electricity as force—I think are about as near to God as one will get during the present priesthood; but as it is fashionable to have a God, please do not have one smaller than my pattern.

Now, I conceive it the duty of every human being to study well to find and know the cause. I do not acknowledge myself responsible to God for any talents I may possess, because all were acquired by my own exertion. God gave me nothing but my nature, and evolution is father to all I possess. I take no man's word for anything. I study well to find and know the cause.

Superstition, priestcraft, and the cunning duplicity of designing man have cursed the world long enough. For thousands of ages man has been gulled and ruled by the crafty tricks of the knowing ones.

Tricksters, superstitious knaves, have taught the worship of snakes, toads, lizards, oxen, goats, bulls, rams, lambs, rocks, rivers, idols of many kinds, fire-worship, sun-worship, and man-worship. And strange, all gods get angry, and nothing will appease their wrath but blood, blood. Some idiots possess a god of brass with horns of steel sitting upon a throne with wrath belching fire, death, and damnation upon all his enemies—just as though a god could have an enemy. And to appease the wrath of their god they must sacrifice some innocent thing. Their god can only smile when smelling the sweet-scented flavor of the blood of innocence.

Oh, what gods to love! They might be feared, but certainly never loved. The Jews had just such a God. The Christians adopted him and pretend to love him, but I think they but fear his hell.

Christos was a Hindoo god worshiped as the son of god by a virgin, Maya, thousands of years before the birth of the pretended Christ, and he was said "to have been crucified between two thieves for pretending to be the son of god and calling many people after him."

Hessus was worshiped in the West as the son of god by a virgin. These two religions embraced the then civilized world.

A certain enterprising individual traveled all over the East and studied all religions of which he could hear. He studied the religion of Christos, or Christina, often called Christana. He became a convert and returned West and established many churches, to whom he wrote many epistles. These churches were known as Christos, or Christanas, often called Christian. This church organizer and great apostle of Christos was called by some Apollo, by some Apollonius, by others Saul, by others Paul, and finally sainted by the Christians and called "St. Paul." This man brought many Christian writings from the East, from which was manufactured the New Testament. A certain set wanted to form a new religion, which should be supported by the state, and hoped to make it universal, and with its aid bind together the Roman empire, then falling to pieces. They took Constantine into their confidence and placed him at the head of the new religion, and he forced it upon mankind with the sword.

They took the writings of the priests of Christos, including those of St. Paul, and changed the names and scenes from India to Judea. They held conferences with the Druid priests of the West and agreed to worship one god, who should be called "Hesus Christos." This Hesus Christos in time, by translation or design, became Jesus Christ. No such person as Jesus Christ ever lived. The thing is all of heathen origin, pure paganism, from the sun-worshippers of the East.

And no greater curse has ever befallen the human family than Christianity, for it stopped short all intellectual advancement. All knowledge, all advancement, must stop with "Christ crucified." If there is a God, why not give him credit for possessing as much intelligence as a mortal? And if a mortal should be such a botch as to have to become a bastard, and worry and toil for thirty years in obscurity, then die an ignominious death upon the cross, to grease the wheels of his machine to make it run, everyone would call him a fool. Now Christianity calls God just such a fool, and then pictures him as possessing all knowledge; and as a merciful God, yet the author of hell, the devil, and eternal torment. From such Gods please excuse me. I want none of them in mine.

I think, beyond all controversy, the Christian religion is founded upon as superstitious and foolish a story as was ever concocted or repeated by anyone pretending to ordinary sense or intelligence. If there is such a thing as blaspheming the deity, this story of the fall and redemption of man gets there.

The early Christians appeared as Communists. They claimed their God as having been "born in a stable, and as having not where to lay his head." Consequently "his followers should not strive to live better than their God." They refused their followers the right to wash the food they ate. They refused all sanitary comforts. They permitted no one to learn the alphabet but the priests.

Le Cassid, Fla. W. B. RADFORD, M.D.
(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Sunday Question.

Is it right to sell ice on Sunday? Is it right for clergymen to draw pay for preaching on Sunday? Is it right for a man to enjoy himself on Sunday? To have some ice-cream or eat a watermelon on the Sun's Day?

Every intelligent person knows, whose opinion is worth knowing, that the New Testament never gave any sanction to a puritanical observance of a Sabbath day. Even if it had done so, it would have no binding effect on the state.

In one of the papers I received to-day the editor thus expressed himself:

When certain of the Pharisees said to the disciples of Jesus the same things that are said to-day to the directors of the World's Fair:

"Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the Sabbath day?"

Jesus answering them said:

"What man shall there be among you that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the Sabbath day, will not lay hold on it and lift it out?"

"How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath day."

"The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath."

"Therefore the son of man is lord also of the Sabbath."

The Christians of the first century abolished the Sabbath and introduced Sunday as a sacred day; and their Sunday was not a day of rest, but a remembrance of Christ's resurrection. The Christians of our time, however, know not how to celebrate the day. Although they believe in the myth of the resurrection, Christ has not risen in their souls.

The name-Christians revive the old pagan notion that the Sunday is to be regarded as a dies ater, an ominous day on which it is not advisable to undertake anything. They make of a man a slave of Sunday; they close places of harmless pleasure and useful information, and in such efforts they find a strong support by men of evil enterprises, who offer to the people more spicy and less innocent amusements. Must Christ come again to repeat the question: "Is it lawful on the Sabbath day to do good or to do evil—to save life or destroy life?"

Is there anyone who doubts that museums, libraries, and the World's Fair furnish recreation which exercises a strong influence for good upon the development of man's mind? They provide a wholesome mental food, educating without the toil of study, and broadening our views. They are not idle pleasures; they are building up and life-saving, and Christ teaches that it is right to heal, to help, and to save on the Sabbath.

Some of the early Christians continued to celebrate the Sabbath after the Jewish fashion, and the Apostle St. Paul suffered them to do so; yet he insisted vigorously upon liberty in such matters. We read in the epistle to the Romans: "One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind. He that regardeth the day regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day to the Lord he doth not regard it." In his letter to the Galatians, however, who piously abstained from the desecration of the Sabbath, the Apostle writes: "Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain."

A wrong conception of the Sabbath is an indication of paganism; wherever paganism prevails the spirit of true Christianity bestows his labors in vain.

We object to a wrong usage of Sunday, as if it were the Sabbath of the Pharisees. We protest against the barbaric regulations belonging to pre-Christian ages, which have been given up by all Christian nations with the sole exception of the English, who in the beginning of the Middle Ages dug them out of the misunderstood religious traditions of a remote past.

We want a Sunday, but not such a Pharisaical Sabbath as is foisted upon the nation by modern Pharisees. We want a day of rest, of recreation, of edification, and not that superstitious far niente, which means a cessation of all wholesome activity. We want a liberal, a religious, a spiritual, and truly Christian Sunday.

The division of time into periods of seven days can be traced to the earlier shepherds and moon-worshippers. And doubtless the Sabbath was borrowed from the heathens and incorporated in the ecclesiastical polity of the Jews. Among them it was observed in various ways, according to the whims or religious prejudice of those in power.

The religious observance of certain days is a policy that has always been sought to be used in an arbitrary manner by ecclesiastics.

The Sabbath was designated in the Old Testament, before it was made subservient to the priesthood by religionists, "a day of joy and delight" (Isa. lviii, 13). The words in Isaiah are translated in our version "by doing thy pleasure." Scholars inform us that the Hebrew words in the passage in reality mean "doing thy work," exactly corresponding to "our affairs," "business."

Now, let it be observed that in all the discourses attributed to Jesus, he nowhere enjoins the observance of the Sabbath. People who claim to be zealous followers of Christ should remember this and not make themselves ridiculous by trying to enforce in his name precepts which he never taught.

Besides, the idea that deity is displeased at what man does on one day more than another is making a wrong use of reason.

Madison, Ga.

A. A. BELL, M.D.

God's Failure at Man-making.

It cannot be that nature's holy God,
With power and wisdom infinite,
Would make his work so poor and bad a job
As to end in dark oblivion, endless night.

Nor would it help this dark and dread relation
If semi-infidelity were true:
If half the race end in annihilation,
Then God, the maker, lost one-half his crew.

And lost them why? Because a little devil,
Made by his own almighty will and hand,
By a revolt became sin's great evangel
To guide the third of heaven's celestial band.

Then down to earth he came, to Eden's bower,
And here inspired a snake to do his will;
And thus seduced by his satanic power
The race in federal loins that moment fell.

The snake at this time on his tail did walk,
But how he did it I could never tell,
For so he stood when he and Eve did talk,
And thus he triumphed when the races fell.

At evening God to Eden's bower came back,
For he'd been gone awhile, the record says—
Perhaps to view his work or feed his flocks,
As other farmers spend their hours and days.

When Adam heard his footsteps in the shade
He hid himself behind an apple tree,
For he had learned of God to be afraid,
For he had sinned—eat of the fruit, you see.

"Adam, O Adam! where are you?" God said.
"I am naked," Adam said, "behind this tree;
To have you see me I was sore afraid,
For I'm a spectacle from head to knee."

"You ate the apple and I've found it out,
Which I forbade you in my grand decree."
And from that moment God began to pout,
And pout he will to all eternity.

'Tis true his son came down to stop the pout,
But only saved a few from Satan's power;
So o'er his failure God will ever pout
Through endless cycles on forevermore.

Poor Adam, he had made an awful fall
Deep down to darkest ignorance from light;
Ere that he did not know himself at all,
And now he finds himself in an awful plight.

Oh, happy day, when Satan did defy,
And Adam taught that God the father lied;
For though he sinned, he knew he would not die,
And on this certain proof he would confide.

Another thing he learned of this old devil,
By eating fruit he learned both good and evil,
And so through earth his progress still plods
In knowledge vast as any of their Gods.

Now here we close this simple, foolish story—
Its origin an Eastern allegory—
A tale at which all science now revolts;
And human reason at its threshold halts,
A tale that libels both the God and devil,
And loads our race with all its dreadful evil.

IRENE LORRAINE COWAN.

Thomas Paine Honored at the World's Fair.

On Monday, the 10th inst., I went down to the Fair in company with B. A. Roloson, a true Free-thinker from Delpho, O. This time I went on a special mission entrusted to me by a valued friend of our cause, whose name I am not at liberty now to divulge. Some pictures of Paine had been loaned to the government, and I went to learn something of their disposition. After a short search in the Government Building, among the exhibit illustrative of the Revolution of America we at last found two pictures of the Author-Hero of that great event in human history. The pictures may be found in the State Department, on the right of the peristyle leading from the central rotunda. Here are two pictures—one large painting and a steel engraving. Both of them, I believe, are by Romney. The large painting bears a card with this inscription: "Thomas Paine, first Secretary of Committee of Foreign Affairs, author of 'Rights of Man,' 'Common Sense,' etc., etc. Loaned by Moncure Daniel Conway." Side by side with this illustrious hero are placed the pictures of Jefferson, Franklin, Morris, and others of foreign birth who gave their services to America in that great and memorable struggle for a nation's liberty. This very action of the Exposition authorities confesses the connection of Thomas Paine with the Revolutionary movement; they have given to him a place of honor, but alas! how few there are yet that know the true value of his labors for America's freedom; how few there are who can realize the vast service he rendered our country. Yet like a monarch he looks down upon us from his place in the gallery, the tender, winning smile calculated to move the heart with reverence and respect for his memory. The pictures so far have attracted considerable attention. Sometimes a bigoted religious fanatic will make some demonstration of disapproval, and again others will gaze upon it with reverence. During the conversation I had with Mr. Hunt, the manager of this department, he told me that he watched the people with considerable interest as they approached this collection. Upon one occasion he assured me that an old gentleman gazed at the picture for a moment, then reading the card that is placed in the frame, he learned who the original of the picture was. He then stepped back a pace, took off his hat, and making a profound bow before the picture, reverently uttered that single word "Paine." 'Tis but a single name, and yet how great has that name become; and it is destined to become greater still. Freethinkers visiting the Fair should not fail to see these pictures; they are easily found, and should you not see them, inquire for them at the little table in the State Department. Remember they are in the Government Building, right underneath the pictures of the secretaries of state.

Inquire for them anyway, and show the officials that sufficient interest is taken in the memory of Paine that you wish to see them while you are here.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.

The Rising Generation Tired of Religion.

An orthodox minister went from one town to another in a Western state lately, both of them supposed to be very orthodox communities. In his sermon in the town to which he went as visitor he said that the church college in the town where he then lived had fifteen hundred students, sons of pious parents, and not one of the students could repeat the Ten Commandments to save his life, and if told to turn to a chapter in Genesis they would just as likely turn to Revelation, as they did not know one end of the Bible from the other. It is the custom of the students of the Missouri State University at Columbia to choose by ballot the person who shall address them at the commencement. One year the faculty was greatly disgusted to find that after the most faithful religious teaching for the past session a majority of the ballots had the name of "Bob Ingersoll" on them. But the faculty as a returning board threw out the votes.

Two ministers are responsible for the statement that only five per cent of the young men in the United States belong to the church. The records of matrimonial agencies are confirmatory of this. The men all want women who do not belong to any church, and many of the women who belong to the orthodox churches are careful to say that they hold broad or liberal views. Darwin would call that an important factor in natural selection.

In a school founded by a pious gentleman for the purpose of instilling religious principles into the students along with secular education, the students seem to a casual observer to be so pious that "butter wouldn't melt in their mouths," but those who know them better say that they are constantly reading and circulating among themselves the works of Ingersoll.

Random Notes.

There is no Christian so perfect that he cannot see some fault in his neighbors.

Can it be possible that anybody will be so happy in the next world that they will not sigh for a change of climate?

Presbyterian babies who die in infancy are now compelled to go to heaven. This radical change in God's modus operandi may signify more than we would suspect at first blush.

Brother Talmage is said to be a great theological gymnast, but withal he has never been able to give the inquiring public a sufficient reason why an ass should be permitted to speak in the presence of the Lord while his master keeps silence.

Colonel Ingersoll Concerning the Chinese.

[In the North American Review for July appear articles for and against the exclusion of the Chinese. The following are extracts from what Colonel Ingersoll says against excluding them. Copies of the Review containing both articles entire, 50 cents.]

